CIO, Auto Union To Sponsor Big Campaign

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 21 — A whirlwind, nation-wide drive to organize the Ford Motor Co., last remaining open shop in the automobile industry, was announced today by Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

A general fund of $100,000 is being established immediately to launch the organizing activity, a statement issued by the two leaders at a UAW executive board meeting here declared.

Directing the campaign will be Michael F. Widman, Jr., CIO assistant director of organization, who will make headquarters in Detroit. Working with him will be Allan S. Haywood, CIO organizational director.

Predicting that he would soon be sitting across the conference table from the billionaire automobile manufacturer, Widman said a group of special organizers will be assigned to the campaign.

Insurance Union Wins Contract In Deep South

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 21. — The first union agreement with an insurance company in the south has been signed between Local 101, United Office & Professional Workers, and the Good Citizens Mutual Benefit Assn. after a one-week strike by the firm's insurance agents.

Commenting on the pact, UOPW Pres. Lewis Merrill, declared that "the courage and determination of these southern agents should serve as a splendid example to all insurance agents and to all those who desire the benefits of union organization.

"Their strike action was a last resort against the company and police intimidation which met their attempts to exert their right to organize for decent conditions."

Since the company is the largest of four firms affected by the walkout, the settlement encouraged agents of the other three companies: Unity Insurance Co., the Douglas Insurance Co. and the Louisiana Insurance Co.

All four firms serve the Negro population and a large number of the strikers are Negroes. They have successfully urged policyholders to halt premium payments until the walkout is settled.

Honolulu, Hawaii, Sept. 21.— Louis Welch, organizer for the CIO Quarry Workers Intl. Union was a speaker on a recent Hawaii Town Hall program broadcast over a local station. His subject was: "Are Labor Unions at Presently Constituted a Benefit to the Country?"

CIO Wire Workers Win New Pact

NEW YORK, Sept. 21. — Fourteen thousand CIO workers—members of the American Communications Assn., have won wartime job protection, guarantees against technological unemployment, and wage boosts from the Postal Telegraph Co. in the renewed contract just signed.

In addition, the CIO contract provides for job preference to workers laid off in the normal turnover, for free uniforms for messengers, paid vacations, overtime pay, and similar union gains. Wage boosts are expected to cost the company $280,000 a year.

Cite Weak Points In NLRB Weirton Order

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. — Exceptions to the proposed order of the National Labor Relations Board against the Weirton Steel Co. were filed today in the name of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, by Lee Pressman, SWOC general counsel.

The SWOC based its exceptions to the order on the ground that only a fraction of the workers discharged for union activity were ordered reinstated with back pay, that the order to cease and desist supporting a company union is defective, and that it fails to rule against possible successors to the company union.

The proposed order, it was explained, only calls for the reinstatement with back pay of some 120 workers, whereas many more were fired for union activity whose charges against the company were dismissed. In addition, the order fails to specify that the company must stop supporting illegal organizations, "without regard to the names by which they hereafter at any time be known," and does not require the company to withhold support from "any successor" to the company dominated organizations named in the original charges.

The original charges were filed by the SWOC in July, 1937, and the proposed order issued by the Labor Relations Board in July, 1940.

Almost Unanimous!

The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers polled 57 votes. The AFL received only one lone vote.

CIO Waiters To Serve CIO Eaters

Muncie, Ind., Sept. 21.—Auto workers in Muncie who eat at the plant restaurant will now be served by CIO members under union contract, an announcement by CIO Regional Director James Robb revealed.

The restaurant workers are members of Local Industrial Union 1017, CIO, which has just signed a closed shop agreement with the Acme Lee Welfare Association, granting seniority rights, paid vacations, arbitration of disputes and time and a half for overtime.

FIRST CONVENTION: Delegates in session at the first biennial convention of the United Paper Novelty & Toy Workers Intl. Union, a CIO affiliate which met in New York last week. They mapped plans for a drive to organize 250,000 paper workers throughout the nation. (See Story Page 3.)

Order Election

Washington, Sept. 21.—The National Labor Relations Board has ordered an election at the Steel Storage File Co., Cleveland, Ohio, to be held in the next 30 days.

Appearing on the ballot will be Local 217 of the United Automobile Workers (CIO), and an AFL federal local.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 20.—Representatives of some 950,000 CIO-organized workers assembled here today for the annual convention of the powerful New York State Industrial Union Council.

Boasting of a 50,000-member increase during the past twelve months, the 800 delegates are expected to remain in session for two days. Convention headquarters are at the Seneca Hotel.

Numerous leaders in labor and government affairs are scheduled to address the convention. Among them are CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray; Allan S. Haywood, who was council president until his appointment as CIO director of organization; Pres. Archie Wright of the independent Dairy Farmers Union; Gov. Herbert Lehman, Sen. James Mead, Lt.-Gov. Charles Poletti, and state industrial commissioner Frieda S. Miller.

Nearly 200 resolutions have been submitted by Local unions for action by the meeting.

Furniture Union Signs Six Pacts

New York, Sept. 21.—Six more firms have been brought under contract by Local 45-B of the United Furniture Workers, Manager Paul Green announced today.

The union is undertaking a general drive in the curtain, drapery and venetian blind industry, where thousands of young workers are employed under the worst sweat shop conditions in New York City.

The firms which have signed up are: Artex-Green Corp.; J. A. Kaplan, Inc.; American Manufacturing Co.; Paragon Venetian Blind Co.; Vic-Mark Corp.; J & L Venetian Blind Manufacturing Co.

Some 200 workers covered by the pacts have won wage increases, the 40-hour week, closed shop, holidays and vacations with pay and establishment of grievance machinery.

Board Certifies Furniture Union

Washington, Sept. 21.—The National Labor Relations Board has certified Local 464 of the CIO United Furniture Workers as sole bargaining agency for employes of the Gettysburg Furniture Co., Gettysburg Panel Co., and Reaser Furniture Co., all of Gettysburg, Pa.

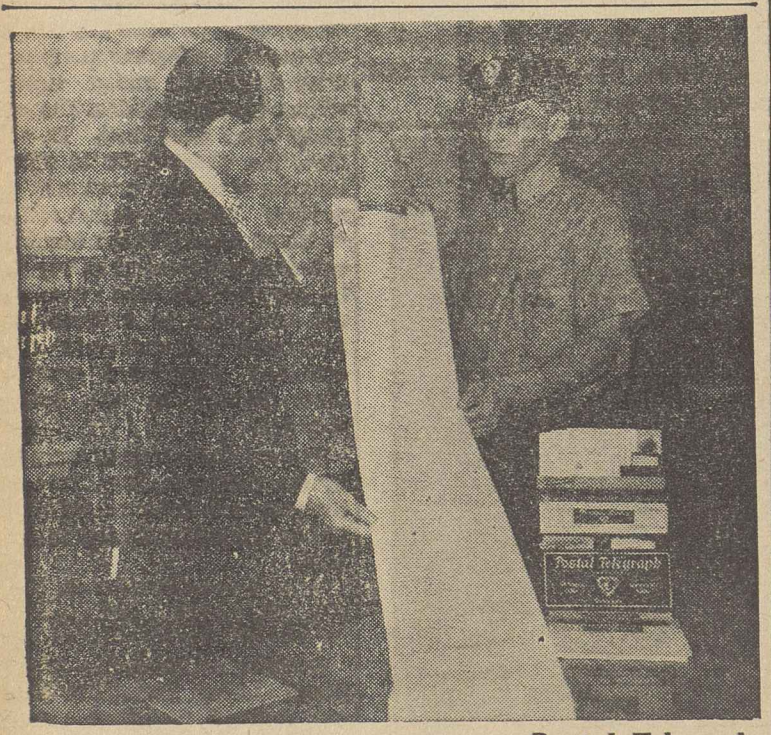
Budget Cut In New York Hit by CIO

New York, Sept. 21.—Criticism of Mayor LaGuardia's "dollar-a-year" capital outlay budget, which will practically halt city construction work, was severely criticized today by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council.



The statement, made public by Council President Joseph Curran, charged that the Mayor had over-ridden the advice of his comptroller that some $22,500,000 be allotted for construction of new city buildings.

AFFECTS HOSPITALS

An example of the effect of the sudden economy drive is the Department of Hospitals, which must abandon plans for the construction of units housing some 3,000 badly-needed beds, the Council said.

"The mayor's action comes as a blow to thousands of construction workers in an industry which has suffered severely in an economic depression and will add to the ranks of the unemployed in this city," the statement added.

"Its effect upon the social welfare needs of the city will be felt for years to come as the citizens of this metropolis face the deterioration and overcrowding of existing health, hospital and educational facilities with no provision for their replacement."

Urge U. S. Probe Mob Attack on Organizer

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 21.—New flare-ups of anti-union violence in this stronghold of the anti-CIO Crump political machine today brought demands for federal and state investigations from the United Rubber Workers.

George Bass, URWA field representative, was the victim of two beatings in a few days, inflicted by thugs and persons whom he later identified as supervisory employes of the Firestone Rubber Co.

The union organizer was accosted by a group of men in a Memphis hotel and ordered to get out of town. He refused.

Three days later Bass and two friends were stopped on a public highway by a group of thugs. His car was overturned and attempts made to set it on fire.

150 IN MOB

A few days afterward, while Bass and some associates were passing out literature at the Firestone gates, a mob of 150 thugs, including the Firestone supervisors, attacked them with clubs and blackjacks. The union men required hospital treatment for the injuries they suffered at the hands of the mob, responsibility for which was pinned on the company management by URWA lawyers.

Meanwhile, at Akron, headquarters of the United Rubber Workers, Sec.-Treas. Frank Grillo charged that anti-labor violence "is a direct blow at the nation's defense program."

Citing the attack on Bass, Grillo charged that "instead of arresting the assailants, the police have harassed the victims, and the mayor of the city has made veiled threats against labor representatives.

LABOR'S RIGHTS

"It seems obvious to me," he continued, "that the national defense program depends largely upon cooperation between labor and management. How are we going to get such cooperation when management denies workers their legal rights, when strong arm men can openly attack labor's represenatives on the public highways with impunity?

"This program of anti-labor violence by certain powerful corporations is nothing more or less than a direct blow at the nation's defense program."

Labor Is Bulwark Of Democracy, Rubber Union Told

By ROBERT CRUDEN

DETROIT, Sept. 21.—Labor is democracy's first line of defense!

That was the message brought to the Fifth Annual Convention of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, by speakers who addressed the opening sessions.

"If there's one force that's going to defend democracy in America it's the CIO," Pres. James B. Carey of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers told the cheering delegates.

"The only way we're going to protect the American way of life is to give everyone a stake in democracy," he said. "We must give a stake in democracy to the 10,000,000 unemployed. The fight of the CIO is a crusade against poverty and misery."

The youthful union head added, "The most patriotic role I can think of today is to be an organizer for a union."

HITS TORY EMPLOYERS

In a stirring attack upon un-American employers, Allan S. Haywood, CIO Organizational Director, said that employers who do not follow the defense commission recommendations that employers obey the Wagner Act "are operating against American interests."

Defending John L. Lewis from press criticism, Haywood said: "Lewis refuses to surrender the principles of labor. That's why he's criticized."

Haywood said the CIO leader "is preparing for another day—when our war economy is ended and our ordinary economy is thrown out of balance—when we'll have 20,000,000 unemployed instead of 10,000,000 unemployed."

The delegates loudly applauded Haywood's assertion that labor unity will come only "when the AFL accepts industrial unionism. As long as they claim jurisdiction over our industries, there will not be peace."

Unanimous endorsement of a third term for Pres. Roosevelt was voted after URWA officers made impassioned pleas for the President's re-election. A similar plea was voiced by Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union, CIO.

Applause marked the passage of a resolution expressing "enthusiastic admiration" for the leadership of John L. Lewis in the CIO.

In a telegram sent to the convention the CIO leader predicted, "There are times coming in this nation when the strength and courage of the labor movement will suffer its severest test, times when your union and the CIO will be the lone bulwark against destruction of your rights."

FRIES SPEAKS

Congressman Frank Fries of Illinois, who also addressed the convention, told the delegates, "There's one fifth column that's really dangerous to America—and that's unemployment."

Lauding the patriotic record of the CIO and American workers, he stated, "We can do more to keep America out of war by building real security for our people than by any other method."

"Let the government protect its people, the people will protect its government," he said.

"You should be an inspiration to other unions," Rev. Fr. Raymond Clancy told the delegates, expressing the hope that "America, which showed the way in political democracy will also show the way in economic democracy."

A resolution endorsing the union's General Executive Board stand in favor of conscription was referred back to committee for "more teeth" to cover genuine conscription of industry and a curb on excess profits in defense work.

Other speakers scheduled to address the convention were Pres. R. J. Thomas, United Automobile Workers, CIO; Vice-Pres. Dorothy Bellanca, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; and Pres. Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Picket Lines Shut Open Shop Mill

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 21—(FP)—Mass picket lines closed the Rochdale, Mass., plant of the Leicester Knitting Mills as the American Federation of Hosiery Workers declared a strike against this branch of the labor-hating Massachusetts Knitting Mills.

The pickets were backed up by 300 members of the AFHW from Northampton, who called a holiday to assist the M.K.M. strikers. Fred Held, veteran AFHW organizer, said that 650 are on strike at Rochdale.

On Aug. 30, M.K.M. closed down its Gloucester mill because the workers had refused to "cooperate" by taking one more wage cut. Many of the 300 employes locked out at Gloucester are helping to picket the Rochdale factory.

Quarry Union Head on State Defense Body

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 21.—John C. Lawson, secretary of the CIO Quarry Workers Intl. Union, has been appointed a member of the state council of defense, formed to cooperate with the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Gov. George Aiken. Lawson was subsequently named sub-chairman in charge of the state defense organization's department of "human resources and skills."

Lawson was recently re-elected secretary-treasurer of the Quarry Workers Union by referendum vote of the membership. He was first elected in May, 1934, and his present term ends Sept. 1, 1942.

CONTRIBUTE

New York, Sept. 21.—Members of the National Maritime Union on 24 ships have contributed over $440 to the Greater New York Fund, distributed to various charitable organizations, the NMU announced.

ELECTED: Josephine Timms, newly-elected secretary-treasurer of the CIO American Communications Assn., is one of the few women holding office in an international union.

Pickets in Wall Street

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—CIO's first Wall Street picketline is in operation, manned by members of the Office and Professional Workers who are fighting discharge of nine members from the firm of Newburger, Loeb and Co., brokers.

The union is also filing Wagner Act charges against the firm, contending that the men were fired for union activity. The firings followed a Labor Board election which the union lost by a margin of three votes. J. S. Bache and Co., another big stock outfit, has just announced a 15 per cent paycut, pointing again to the need Wall St. workers have for union protection.

Jones Asks Unions Aid Mine Safety Campaign

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Speedy action by CIO members can bring the Neely-Keller Mine Inspection Bill to the floor of the House, John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League told the District of Columbia Industrial Union Council this week. About 20 more signatures are needed on House petition No. 35 to force the bill out of committee, he revealed.

Jones scored the anti-labor attitude of Congressmen who have refused to act on the measure, while "the lives of our men are in jeopardy." Since the bill was introduced in the House 14 months ago, 1600 miners have been killed in mine disasters.

"It is coal that makes steel, that makes battleships, that makes munitions," he said.

WOULD CUT DEATHS

The chief causes of mine disasters are dust and gas explosions resulting from insufficient ventilation, he told the CIO council, Proper inspection of the mines would uncover conditions causing explosions.

Under present inspection laws, "the mine inspector, who gets his job from political patronage, is supposed to report bad conditions. Usually he has endorsement from some coal operator, and naturally he is reluctant to post on the pithead of the mine a notice of bad conditions."

The Neely-Keller bill would take mine inspection out of local politics and require the federal government to inspect the mines, he explained. Coal operators have opposed it because they claim it is a "violation of state rights."

NO COST

Actually, the bill will cost the Federal government nothing at all, he said, because the Bureau of Mines, which would be authorized to make the inspections, has enough men on its staff now to do the job.

Jones revealed that in the last week 12 members of the House have withdrawn their names from the petition to force the bill out of committee, at the same time that coal operators were "hot-footing it around Congress."

Those who withdrew their names are: Woodruff, Mich.; Seccombe, Ohio; Bloom, N. Y.; Jensen and Harrington, Iowa; Arenda, Mason, Reed and Summer, Ill.; Sheppard, Calif.; Cannon, Fla.; Mansfield, Texas and Creal of Kentucky. Congressmen Dickstein of New York also withdrew his name, but CIO voters in his district made him put it back.

CIO members are urged to communicate with these Congressmen to have them put their names back on the petition, and also to get additional signers.

$11,000 Benefits For Lumbermen

Win Strike In 6 Days

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 21.—A six-day strike brought victory to the CIO Transport Workers Union in their demands for enforcement of a closed shop contract with the Ohio Valley Bus Co.

Transportation in the city was at a standstill during the walkout, which followed the company's refusal to dismiss employes who failed to join the union in violation of the agreement. The TWU finally won its demands.

Washington.—The Conciliation Service of the U. S. Labor Dept. handled 413 situations involving 165,881 workers during August, Sec. Perkins reported here. Of these, 274 were strikes, threatened strikes, lockouts and other disputes, in 40 states, Alaska and the District of Columbia.

Satevepost to Correct Anti-CIO Slander

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Caught flat-footed in a serious anti-CIO slander, the Saturday Evening Post will print a correction in its weekly advertisements which appear in numerous papers throughout the country.

In the Sept. 11 advertisement the magazine, building up an article by Westbrook Pegler on labor racketeers, charged that Justice Dept. officials have nabbed "a CIO leader. . .on charges of forgery and larceny."

Pegler's article was supposed to tell all. Actually, as close scrutiny of the magazine showed, Pegler made no reference to the CIO whatsoever, though he did mention names of several AFL leaders.

Asked for an explanation, executives of the advertising firm of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne—the Barton stands for Republican Rep. Bruce Barton—which handles the Satevepost account, admitted it was a serious slip of the copy-writer's pencil which escaped detection both in the ad agency and at the office of the magazine.

Protests against the false accusation came from numerous sources. Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director, sent a letter to the officials of the publishing company which warned of possible future action if the retraction were not made.

Lewis, Thomas Set Big Ford Union Drive

BUFFALO, N. Y., Sept. 21.—A drive to unionize the 90,000 employes of the Ford Motor Co., last remaining holdout of the open shop in the nation's big automobile industry, was announced here today by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers of America.

In a joint statement made public here by the UAW leader, it was revealed that the two organizations had appropriated a fund of $100,000 to finance the Ford drive. The announce- ment, released here in connection with the current session of the auto union's executive board, declared:

"An agreement has been reached between the CIO and the UAW-CIO for the joint prosecution of an organizing campaign to assure the employes of the Ford Motor Company the collective bargaining rights to which they are entitled under the laws of the nation.

"Under the agrement, which has been ratified today by the unanimous decision of the executive board of the UAW-CIO, the union has appropriated $50,000 to finance the campaign. The CIO will make available a similar sum which will thus provide an initial fund of $100,000 with which to press the organizing activities.

WIDMAN IN CHARGE

"The CIO has offered to assign Michael Widman, its Assistant Director of Organization, to assume direction of the Ford organizing campaign. The board of the UAW-CIO has gladly accepted this offer and has agreed that Mr. Widman, in the interests of an effective, centralized campaign, is to have exclusive direction under the supervision of the presidents of the CIO and the UAW-CIO.

"Establishment of collective bargaining between the Ford workers and the Ford Motor Company will be an important contribution to orderly industrial relations. It will provide the Ford workers with a vehicle for adjustment of their grievances: it will remove the influence of the Ford Motor Company as a threat to the peaceful labor relations and decent standards which now cover 400,000 other automobile workers; and it will insure the uninterrupted production of the defense materials with which the Ford Motor Company may be entrusted.

"For the Ford workers, establishment of collective bargaining will mean recognition for the first time of their constitutional rights as American citizens. The Ford Motor Company today denies them the right of free speech. It proscribes their right to assemble in peace without the presence of spies and stool-pigeons. It threatens with loss of employment any man who joins a union.

"In Dearborn, Michigan, where the largest Ford plant is located, the mayor is a Ford creature, the chief of police was chosen by the Ford Company from the ranks of its notorious service department, and a city ordinance, in violation of the Bill of Rights and of recent Supreme Court decisions, prohibited the distribution of union literature to Ford workers. Under these circumstances the 100,000 Ford workers are compelled to labor for wages which average ten cents an hour less than the wage which the UAW-CIO has won for General Motors and Chrysler workers.

STARTS AT ONCE

"The CIO and the UAW-CIO are determined to spare neither man-power nor funds to terminate this situation. We are determined to restore to the Ford workers their rights as Americans. The campaign to organize the employes of the Ford Motor Company will begin at once."

DIRECTOR: Michael Widman, Jr., CIO assistant director of organization, who has been appointed to lead the big campaign to unionize Ford.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Comment on the launching of the Ford organizing drive was made here today by Allan S. Haywood, national organizing director of the CIO and Michael F. Widman, asst. director, who will lead the campaign at the motor company.

Said Haywood: "The Ford drive is a major and immediate objective of the CIO. The organizing activities will be prosecuted to the maximum and will be sustained until recognition of the union is accomplished."

Widman declared: "We are launching the CIO organizing campaign at the Ford Motor Co. with the knowledge that the automobile industry and its thousands of employes cannot improve their wages and working conditions while part union, part unorganized. We launch this drive with every expectation that there will be no disturbances, no stoppages, no interruptions of any kind in the working schedule of the Ford employes through agents-provacateurs.

"We will be on the job performing this task of organizing within the framework of the law and we expect the Ford Motor Co. will take no action that will provoke disturbances that will be detrimental to the interests of the employes, the company and the public.

"The CIO and the automobile workers look forward to the day when Ford, like all other automobile producers, will work out its problems in the rational atmosphere of the collective bargaining conference room."

Plaything Union Maps Organizing Drive

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 21.—The first, biennial constitutional convention of International Union Playthings and Novelty Workers of America, closed here Sunday morning, September 15 with the reelection by acclamation of Anthony H. Esposito to the presidency and Alexander Ravitch to the post of Secertary-Treasurer. Also elected by acclamation were eleven vice-presidents who together with the International officers will compose the General Executive Board of thirteen.

This convention, including in its ranks for the first time a large contingent of delegates from paper workers' local unions throughout the country, centered its main attention on the organization tasks which faced the International Union. With great enthusiasm the convention endorsed a detailed report of its Organization Committee outlining an intensive national drive in the paper and novelty industry.

CHANGE NAME

In order to reflect the amalgamation with the paper workers the name of the International Union was changed to United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers International Union.

The convention opened on Sept. 13 in the Ball Room of the Hotel McAlpin, New York, under the temporary chairmanship of CIO Regional Director Peter Moselle. After the invocation by Father Monohan, and a welcoming address by Commissioner of Licenses Paul Moss, representing Mayor LaGuardia of New York, Moselle introduced President Anthony Esposito.

The International President declared the convention officially open and launched into an address on the problems of the International Union and of American labor in general. He closed his address with a stirring appeal to the delegates to apply themselves earnestly to the tasks of organizing the unorganizing in the industry and building a powerful organization to defend labor's rights and conditions.

HAIL CIO AID

A high point of enthusiasm in the convention was reached when the secretary read a telegram of greeting from CIO President John L. Lewis. The convention adopted a resolution thanking President Lewis for his message and expressing its deep gratitude for the assistance and solidarity demonstrated by the CIO and its officers.

Among those who addressed the convention were: CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood; President Emil Rieve of the Textil Workers Union; Michael Widman, assistant CIO Director of Organization Elinore Herrick, New York Regional Director of the National Labor Relations Board; Dr. Paul Abelson, Impartial Chairman for the New York industry; Gustave Strebel, President of the New York State CIO Industrial Union Council and William Carney, CIO Regional Director in New Jersey.

WHO'S DOING THE WORK?

Last Stronghold

The Ford Motor Company is the last big stronghold of anti-labor reaction in the automobile industry.

It refuses to bargain collectively. It denies its employes their rights as American citizens to free speech and assemblage, and to join a union without fear for their jobs. It pays its workers wages which average ten cents an hour less than the wages which the CIO has won for General Motors and Chrysler employes.

The Ford Motor Company sticks out like a sore thumb in an industry which has accepted collective bargaining, and in a country to which democracy is more than a word.

But now the CIO and the United Automobile Workers are preparing to win for the Ford workers the rights which have been denied them.

The CIO is putting its full weight behind the auto workers' union in the organizing campaign to be launched at once. It is providing money, crack organizers and the enthusiasm of a movement that has already made bigger and tougher corporations than Ford's toe the union line.

All the Ford workers ask is their democratic rights to organize and bargain collectively for the betterment of their conditions. And Pres. John L. Lewis has joined with UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas in announcing that the CIO means to see that they get them—and soon.

A CIO Story

The story of the United Rubber Workers of America, which has just celebrated its fifth anniversary at its Detroit convention, is in many ways the story of the CIO.

Started as an attempt to organize in the AFL, this union suffered from nearly every one of the many sins of omission and commission of which the AFL craft leaders have been guilty.

Craft raids, dictatorship, sellouts and betrayals —and in general a denial of any effective assistance to build the kind of organization the workers needed, marked the AFL's role in the rubber industry.

It was to the Akron rubber workers that John L. Lewis first brought the flaming message of industrial organization and the CIO, that was later to stir millions in other mass-production industries.

It was in Akron that the CIO met its first real test, in the victorious Goodyear strike early in 1936. Here too was first seen the encouraging spectacle of thousands upon thousands of workers signing up to build the kind of industrial union the CIO was formed to promote.

Since then the rubber workers have been through nearly every experience the CIO has encountered. They have learned now to overcome company unions and labor spies, how to win strikes and elections, how to defeat craft raids, how to practice effective and responsible collective bargaining, how to survive through unemployment and depression, and how to build a permanent and successful industrial union in an industry that was never organized before.

The results reported to the Detroit convention speak for themselves. The URW today has 91 contracts covering 75,000 workers, and locals in 81 cities, with some 60,000 members. It has reduced working hours and raised wages year by year to a level at least $269 higher than before the union was formed.

Speedup has been checked in union contracts and working conditions improved in countless other ways. The union has won paid vacations for the workers throughout the entire organized sector of the industry.

The United Rubber Workers has also "made the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights really effective in the rubber shops of the country," the union points out. "Prior to the union the worker, to all intents and purposes, rang out his American citizenship when he rang in his time."

The URW has grown from and with the CIO. What it has achieved is a fair sample of what the CIO has also achieved in most of the other mass-production industries as well. It is a great contribution to labor and to democracy.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

HERE are some tips for any CIO daddy, when Junior climbs on your knee and asks you to tell him about the CIO.

Don't refer him to the encyclopedia for date of formation, names of founders, participating unions, etc., unless you are so unfatherly as to want to get rid of him.

No, draw him close and tell him a true story about the CIO, and an exciting one. There are dozens of them. Here's a sample:

Once upon a time a lot of the men who make rubber used to go to union meetings wearing hoods over their heads, so that nobody could recognize who anyone else was.

They were scared because every time they had tried to form a union before, there were spies among them who told the boss and had them fired from their jobs.

At another time they used to meet in private homes, no more than six in any one group.

Every time they tried to organize, their union was broken up by spies, by stupid or corrupt AFL leaders, by strikebreakers, or by clubbing and violence.

At one time the rubber workers pretended they were just forming a social club, when they were really trying again to start a union. They called it the Ameliorate Club. ("The what?" Junior will probably say at this point. But don't let that put you off. Just continue talking in a dignified manner and say you don't know why they picked a name like that either).

This club was broken up by fights started by company spies, like nearly every other attempt to organize.

Two Visitors

"Why didn't William Green do something—Teacher said he used to be a labor leader," Junior may ask.

Now that's a good question, son. As a matter of fact, Green and his AFL did do a lot of things, but they were nearly always the wrong things.

The first time Green came to Akron, where all this happened, was in 1913, right after a strike of rubber workers. The strikers had been clubbed and brutally driven back to work. So Green, who was a state senator, sent in to investigate, denounced the strike and washed his hands of the whole affair.

Around that time another labor man, of a different kind, came to Akron for a short visit. He never forgot the lessons which all the brave attempts of the rubber workers to organize taught him. Years later he returned to Akron to give the rubber workers the help they needed to form a real union.

That man, son, was John L. Lewis.

The Crafties

"But how about the AFL, daddy? That was supposed to help workers organize, wasn't it?"

Well, the rubber workers were always asking the AFL to help them. Once when the AFL building craft unions were doing the very opposite of helping them, the rubber workers found out that the AFL craft leaders had made an agreement with the employers to prevent the rubber workers from organizing, in return for some employers' favors for their own little unions.

"Why did you call the AFL leaders 'crafty', daddy?"

I didn't, son. But let it pass. I was talking about craft unions, which means unions which keep workers separate instead of uniting them.

The rubber workers wanted to be all together in one strong union. But the AFL leaders wouldn't let them organize that way.

When they did form a union of their own, Bill Green and the other AFL leaders were always fussing around telling them, "Don't do this! Don't do that!"

Green didn't want them to have the leaders they wanted, and the craft unions were always trying to keep them from organizing all the workers — saying that this group or that "belonged" to them.

Came The CIO

Things were going pretty badly and the workers were getting disgusted, when John L. Lewis came back to Akron in January 1936.

He told them that the CIO had just been started—a new labor movement that believed they should have the kind of union they wanted, an industrial union. He encouraged them to organize and offered them all the help they might need.

After that, everything was different. The CIO backed the rubber workers to the limit. They won the big Goodyear strike, and the union grew bigger and stronger every day — until now it has won union conditions for nearly 75,000 workers, has raised yearly wages by $249, and has made life easier and happier for the workers in many ways.

How the CIO United Rubber Workers did all these things in the past five years, will furnish material for a dozen more exciting true stories about the CIO and what it means.

You will find all of the facts and dozens of pictures to illustrate them in one of the finest and most significant volumes yet published about a CIO union. It is entitled "Five Years—The Story of the United Rubber Workers of America," and may be obtained for 25c from 503 United Building, Akron, Ohio.

The Draft Act— What It Means

The Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill has been passed by Congress and signed by Pres. Roosevelt. What are its provisions—what does it mean to the people of America? The CIO NEWS presents the first installment of an analysis of the bill, prepared by Lee Pressman, general counsel, CIO. The next installment will be printed in the next isue of THE CIO NEWS.

By LEE PRESSMAN
General Counsel, CIO

DURATION OF ACT

The Act goes into effect immediately and will continue in force until May 15, 1945, unless extended by Congress.

REGISTRATION AND LIABILITY FOR SERVICE

All male citizens and aliens between the ages of 21 and 36 must register at their local designated places on October 16. All such persons who must register, with the exception of aliens who have not declared their intention to become citizens, are liable for induction into the military or naval forces. Selection of men shall be made by lot. Quotas will be given for each locality on the basis of the total available for service in such locality.

No man may be inducted for training until adequate provision shall have been made for shelter, sanitary facilities, water supplies, heating and lighting arrangements, medical care and hospital accommodations determined by the Secretary of War or Secretary of Navy to be essential to public and personal health. Furthermore, except in time of war, there shall not be in active training in the land forces at any one time more than 900,000 men.

In addition, the President has the authority to induct into military service under this Act no greater number of men than the Congress shall hereafter make specific appropriation for from time to time. This means that the actual number of men who will be in the military service each year will depend upon the annual appropriation for the same which can be done only through an Act of Congress.

PERIOD OF TRAINING

Each man inducted for service shall serve for 12 consecutive months. Congress, however, may declare that the national interest is imperiled, in which event the 12 month period may be extended by the President at such time as may be necessary in the interest of national defense.

After the 12 month period of service, each man is to be transferred to a reserve corps where he shall remain until he reaches the age of 45. During such period he shall be subject to such additional training as may be required by any subsequent statute.

However, any man who completes his 12 months training period and who thereafter serves in the regular Army or in the active National Guard for two years, shall, in time of peace, be relieved from any liability to serve in the reserve corps.

COMPENSATION

The base pay for men who are inducted shall be $21.00 per month for the first four months, and $30.00 a month the remaining period.

EXEMPTIONS AND DEFERMENTS

Actual exemptions are limited to present members of the regular Army and Navy and other special divisions of the government, the Vice-President of the United States, the Governors of the several States, members of Congress and of the State Legislatures, and State and Federal Judges. Also, there are exempted regular or duly ordained ministers of religion and students who are preparing for the ministry.

Exemptions are also available to those men who have served for at least three years in the regular army or a combination of one year in the active Guard and two years in the regular army; who has served in the National Guard for six consecutive years; and any man who has been on an ineligible list in the officers reserve corps for at least six consecutive years.

Under rules and regulations to be established by the President deferments from training and service will be established for men whose employment in industry, agriculture or other occupations or employment, or whose activity in other endeavors is found to be necessary for the maintenance of national health, safety or interest.

In addition, such rules and regulations will provide for deferment in training service of those who have dependents and those found to be physically, mentally or morally deficient or defective. It is specifically provided that no deferment can be made in the case of any individual except upon the basis of the status of the individual and no deferment shall be made by occupation groups or groups of individuals in any plant or institution.

Students in their last year at universities may have their training deferred until July 1, 1941.

Special provision is made for those who refuse to serve for reason of religious training or belief. Special investigations will be made by the Department of Justice of all persons claiming exemption for this reason. These cases will be subject, however to final decision by local Appeal Boards administering the Act.

No person liable for service shall be permitted or allowed to furnish a substitute and no substitute may be received or inducted into the military forces.

Fight Drive Against CIO Longshore Union

Washington, Sept. 21.—Statements of AFL Longshore officials that the Natl. Labor Relations Board has agreed to reopen certification of the CIO Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union as west-coast bargaining agency brought a sharp query from Harry Bridges, ILWU president, and a protest against AFL intimidation of CIO dock workers in Tacoma, Wash., where a small AFL dock union is in control.

According to Bridges' wire, Harry Lundeberg, AFL Maritime official, boasted to AFL members in Tacoma that the Board had agreed to a rehearing on the certification question. Bridges' wire "respectfully and officially" urged that the Board notify the ILWU if the rehearing was scheduled.

DEFENSE ISSUE

At the same time, a news column syndicated out of Washington carried a story to the effect that the Defense Advisory Commission had made a similar promise to the AFL that a committment to reopen the CIO certification had been secured from the Labor Board.

According to the column, Joe Ryan, ILA president, was personally assured that the certification would be reopened, whereupon he transmitted the information to the Tacoma local, ordering its members back to work on that basis.

In Washington, it was pointed out that such a procedure, if carried out, would allow splinter groups in any industry to disrupt peaceful collective bargaining relations by constantly demanding rehearings on certification orders, enforcing their demands where necessary with disruptive strikes.

Coastwise certification of the CIO Longshore union was given by the Board some two years ago, after it was established that a long history of collective bargaining in the industry showed it to be logical and desirable, and after the ILWU had won overwhelming majorities in all ports except Tacoma and one or two others, where the AFL held small groups.

UPHELD BY HIGH COURT

The U. S. Supreme Court has refused to upset this certification, which has resulted in a much higher degree of industrial peace than would otherwise have been possible. The longshore strikes of 1934 and 1936 were caused by the attempted refusal of the shipowners, organized themselves on a coastwise basis, to recognize that the workers had the same rights.

If such regional or industry-wide certifications are to be subject to reopening at the demand of any craft group, no matter how small, no industry would be safe from similar guerilla raids, it was explained. Similar disruptive tactics could be used in coal mining, where the United Mine Workers has brought stability and peace to a troubled industry, in automobiles, clothing, textiles or any other where an industrial union has secured recognition throughout an industry.

Similar plans to destroy industry-wide collective bargaining were fought by the CIO in its successful resistance to attempts to pass crippling amendments to the Wagner Act.

CIO Wire Union Elects

New York, Sept. 21.—The American Communications Association, CIO, announced today the results of its 1940 elections. The elections were conducted through secret referendum ballot and were participated in by members of the union employed in the telegraph, radio, cable and marine-radio fields. Among the new officials of the union is Josephine Timms, one of the few women ever to be chosen for top leadership of an American union. Mrs. Timms was elected Secretary-Treasuerr.

Mervyn Rathborne, incumbent president, ran unopposed and will continue to head the CIO communications workers. Re-elected with Rathborne were Joseph P. Selly, one of the two vice-presidents of the Union's Telegraph Department, Michael Mignon, vice-president of the Radio and Cables Department and Leonard Ohl, vice-president of the Broadcast Department.

CIO Federal Workers Meet; Map Drive For All U.S. Employes

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—Delegates from 122 locals, representing employes in every major U. S. Government department, met here this week for the first convention of the United Federal Workers, CIO, to take stock, record gains under the CIO, formulate policy for the coming year, and to map plans for the organization of close to a million unorganized Federal workers throughout the country.

Dominant note of the convention was one of satisfaction with gains achieved in three years of work in a difficult field and determination to extend organization to bring CIO standards to the the workers in the myriad occupations embraced in Federal employment.

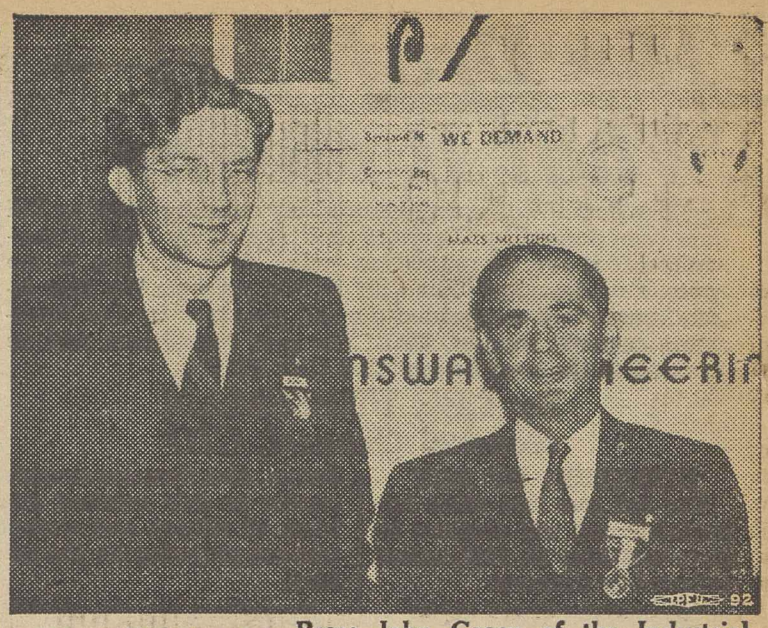
The delegates, who came from locals in almost every state and the District of Columbia, cheered greetings from CIO President John L. Lewis and gave a rising ovation to CIO Assistant National Director Michael F. Widman, who told them that the working men and women of America "are looking to the CIO for the protection that labor wants and needs in these times of crisis."

Widman's speech, delivered at the final convention session, traced the efforts of industrial union minded labor leaders to persuade AFL craft leaders to organize the unorganized—efforts, he said, that were futile until the CIO was formed, but have since borne fruit in the four million men and women organized into the unions of the CIO.

Widman warned against the use of war hysteria as a mask for cutting down labor's gains. "We have people in this country who say, in the course of a war hysteria, that labor should accept longer hours and lower wages. We say that this is not the way to defend America. We say that labor is ready and willing to help in defense of American democratic institutions — and that labor represents the real Americanism of today."

Problems of the 1,000,000 U. S. Government workers are those of workers everywhere, the convention declared in voting unanimous acceptance of the officers' report. Contrary to a widespread impression, Federal employes are not simply recipients of Federal bounty, secure in well-paid jobs, or beneficiaries of uniformly good working conditions. Federal workers, as shown by the 210 delegates present, are like workers anywhere else—with grievances to be adjusted, conditions to be improved, basic American rights still to be recognized.

High among these grievances listed was "Compulsory QSL"—(Quarters, Subsistence and Laundry), a species of kickback under which Federal workers in the Veterans Administration are forced to pay large sums for board, lodging and laundry, whether they can use them or not. Navy Yard delegations, reporting from Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Pensacola, Fla., called attention to attempts to deny CIO workers their rights to distribute literature and to wear CIO buttons.



Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Washington CIO Council, welcomed the delegates in a fighting speech in which he urged them to call on their Congressmen to pay attention to the problems of American workers first and to worry about the European war second.

"An ugly doctrine is being preached today," Katz said, "and that is that labor should stand still . . . that we should be satisfied with the status quo. None of these people have yet had the temerity to preach to employers that they should stop making profits. The only way the leaders of organized labor can be true to the authority with which they have been invested by the rank and file of their organization is to go forward. Any other course would not only be disloyal to their organization but against the public interest and against real national defense."

Highlights of convention actions included resolutions for the organized—passed by a rising, cheering vote—for the five day week for government workers, against attempts to deport Harry Bridges, for collective bargaining for Federal employes, against budget slashes at the expense of vital social agencies, and in praise of CIO expenditure of time and money in organizing Federal workers.

In addition, the convention adopted a resolution praising THE CIO NEWS and urging all locals and members to subscribe.

Final action adopted a provisional constitution continuing the present officers of the union as appointed by the CIO. Jacob Baker, president, chaired the convention, seconded by Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 21.—Re-election of Pres. John Green and Secretary-Treasurer Philip H. Van Gelder to their seventh successive term of office highlighted the closing session of the convention of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers just concluded here. The election was by unanimous rising vote.

Earlier, the convention received greetings from CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, who, after expressing regret that he was unable to attend in person, wired:

"In this period of national defense your union has a profound responsibility to protect the rights of workers in the shipbuilding industry. The CIO is behind your efforts to bring organization into the field, and we will implement in every possible way the work of your organization."

The convention went on record opposing the then pending conscription bill, urging a draft of capital and government confiscation of recalcitrant corporations, demanding an adequate housing program, a ban on government contracts to violators of the Wagner Act, and the abolition of the polltax that disfranchises millions of Negro and white workers and farmers in eight southern states.

The convention endorsed Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt for a third term, rejecting a minority report of the resolutions committee that urged that endorsement be referred to the General Executive Board.

Featured speakers at the convention included Michael F. Widman, assistant national organization director of the CIO, Wm. Carney, CIO regional director for New Jersey, and Charles Ervin of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The union's model contract was brought up to date by the insertion of two war protective clauses, providing for guarantee of seniority rights to workers drafted into the armed forces and for negotiations on wage increases in the event of a rapid rise in living costs due to war.

Lewis Voices CIO Opposition to New State Army Bill

Washington, Sept. 21.—Labor's objections to a Senate bill which would allow states to raise and maintain armed forces in addition to the National Guard and the regular Army were voiced by CIO President John L. Lewis in a letter sent today to all members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

The bill, S.4175, would allow the states to set up armed forces while the Natl. Guard is on active army duty, and would direct the U. S. War Dept. to furnish arms and supplies from Federal stores.

"The bill, in effect, would permit the establishment in any state of military forces during the special period therein specified without any statutory restrictions as to the purposes for which such military forces are to be used," Lewis' letter said. "In addition, these state military forces could be established without any further legislative control by the state or Federal governments. . . .

"This may result in very serious abuses. For this reason I wish to record the firm opposition of the CIO to S.4175 in its present form."

President Lewis' letter suggested an amendment which would permit the states to re-establish the Natl. Guard to its normal strength before its men were called into national service, as ordered in the Natl. Guard bill recently passed by Congress and signed by the President of the U. S.

SWOC Files Vacation Suit Vs. Republic

Washington, Sept. 21 — Suit to compel the Republic Steel Corp., center of the Little Steel strike of 1937, to provide paid vacations to all reinstated employes was begun here today by Lee Pressman, general counsel for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and for the CIO.

According to the SWOC suit, Republic's claim that employes ordered reinstated by the Labor Board have no right to the vacations enjoyed by other workers has "absolutely no substance." They are covered by the terms of the vacation plan, the SWOC contends, since the reinstatement order of the Board declared that they were illegally discharged for union activity, and that therefore they were on the payroll record of the corporation during the time they were discriminated against.

The SWOC suit was filed in the Third Circuit of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, where it was taken under advisement today.

AFL CRIME NEWS:

Scalise Convicted, Faces Long Term; Bioff Released

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—George Scalise, one-time white slaver who gained the presidency of the AFL's Building Service Employes Union and the protection of William Green, today faced the prospect of spending his next few years in prison.

After 15 hours of deliberation, a New York jury found the slick-haired Scalise guilty on five counts of stealing union funds. Several thousand dollars were drained out of the union's treasury by its president, through phony expense accounts and bills for non-existent organizers.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, the Building Service Employes bookkeeper came out of hiding to reveal that additional funds not involved in the case here had been looted from the treasury by Scalise.

The bookkeeper told Chicago officials that the amount might run to $105,000, and was manipulated through checks made out to names taken from persons listed in the telephone books. Union officials cashed the checks and placed the money in vaults for use by Scalise.

SERVED 4½ YEARS

Though Scalise's shady past was well known—he served 4½ years in Atalnta federal penitentiary for Mann act violations—Pres. Green of the AFL consistently refused to take action against the racketeering union official and even furnished a testimonial on his character to Attorney-General Jackson.

Union Official In Death Plot

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Surrender of Kenneth Ashley, bookkeeper for the AFL Building Service Employes Union, was expected to bust wide open the pipe line between Chicago gangsters and many of the city's AFL unions.

Matthew Taylor, head of the Operators' and Starters' local—an affiliate of Scalise's Building Service Employes — testified to police just before his death last month, that he had used $30,000 in union funds to buy off a planned assassination attempt against him.

Most of the money, Taylor told police at that time, went to one Thomas Burke, first vice-president of the international union and a pal of Scalise.

Ashley is believed to know all about the payments, as well as about transfers of cash between Scalise and Chicago thugs.

Bioff Free After 6-Month Sentence

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Willie Bioff, czar of the AFL stage hands union in southern California, was released from state prison yesterday.

The union boss, a pal of AFL big-wigs, has served a six-month sentence imposed on him in 1922 for pandering.

5 Utility Workers Get $11000

Pittsburgh, Sept. 21. — Five members of the CIO's Utility Workers Organizing Committee fired for union activity by the Duquesne Light Co. here, are getting $11,000 in back pay.

Under an agreement worked out with the National Labor Relations Board, four of the men will be reinstated to their old jobs while the fifth will be given a letter of recommendation by the company.

The dismissals, which occurred early in 1938, followed the local's first success in organizing the highest skilled employes, including a top linesman. Three officials of the union, Pres. Daniel Hall, Sec. Ralph LeDonne, and Treas. Harold Simpson were quickly ousted from the payroll.

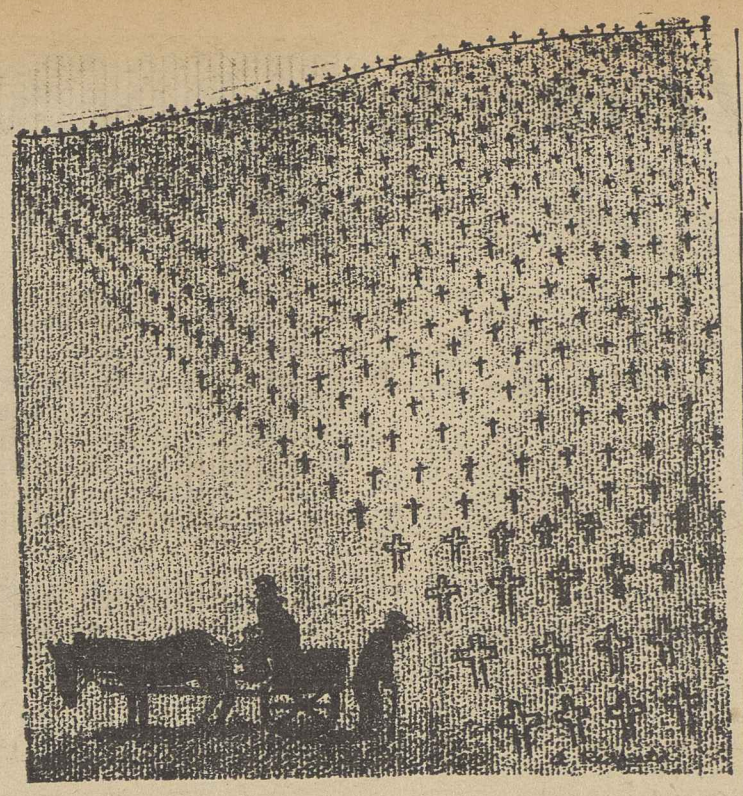
The stipulation provides for the rehiring of Hall, LeDonne, Toner and Archilles, with Simpson getting the letter of recommendation.

CIO Unions Humming In South

Washington, Sept. 21.—Reports coming into the national office of the CIO show that southern organizers are not letting the grass grow under their feet.

Regional Director Ray Thomason reports a contract between the Ramsey Package Corp, of Suffolk, Va., and United Veneer and Box Workers Local Industrial Union 1052, CIO, which provides for arbitration of grievances, strict seniority, and other gains.

From Cumberland, in Harlan County, Kentucky, comes word that the Benham Laundry and Cleaning Company has signed a closed shop agreement with Local Industrial Union No. 983, which carries a check-off provision and includes all workers employed at the plant.



'Blank Check' Hit by CIO In New York

New York, Sept. 21 — CIO labor here, represented by the New York CIO Industrial Union Council, will not give any "political party or personage a blank check," according to a unanimous resolution passed at a regular Council meeting.

The resolution, prepared for presentation at the convention of the N. Y. State Council meeting in Rochester, listed several points of labor's demands on government and declared the Council to be united in support of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

"We pledge ourselves to unitedly and unstintingly support the leadership of American labor's greatest champion, John L. Lewis," the resolution said.

"Experience has shown that labor can rely on no one but itself to further its interests or protect its gains," it added. "Unemployment relief, WPA, the Wagner Act, Wage and Hour Legislation, the Social Security law, have all directly resulted from ceaseless campaigns by organized labor. Wherever labor has relaxed its independent political vigilance and placed its trust in politicians, the enemies of labor, redoubling their unending attack, have succeeded in erasing part of labor's gains."

How Green Was My Valley

A grand book, "How Green Was My Valley," by Richard Llewellyn, depicts the life of a miner's family in a South Wales valley some fifty years or more ago. The struggle of men and women to live in this mining town, the strong yet kindly characters, not without human weaknesses, are seen through the eyes of Huw Morgan, the central figure of the story.

The book is written in the tradition and atmosphere of the British miner, rich with its overlayer of Celtic Welsh idealism.

GIVES BACKGROUND

To read this book is to know the type of British workers who opened the great coal areas in the United States and established here the pattern of unionism in the earliest days of the coal industry. It is thus to know the men who in mutual faith and loyalty to great union principles laid the foundation of the United Mine Workers of America. It was these immigrant miners and their sons who gave it purpose and leadership.

"How Green Was My Valley" should be required reading for mine workers today who wish to know something of the lives of their progenitors, their efforts and sacrifice, and the spirit of men who would be free. It is not only a good story of the early miner but a novel of rare beauty.

Not the "Germinal" of Zola, but the "How Green Was My Valley" of Llewellyn is the true background in which the United Mine Workers of America had its roots.

Ask Unions' Help In Clothing Union Unfair List Drive

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Redoubled consumer support for its campaign against the few remaining non-union firms in the men's clothing industry was asked of all workers today by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union.

A circular letter signed by Richard Rohman, head of the union's Retail-Consumer Dept., pointed out that the Amalgamated "is engaged in an educational campaign whose objective is to persuade retailers in your community to remove from their shelves, racks and counters men's and boys' clothing of non-union or sweatshop manufacture, made under un-American wage and working conditions."

A "chiseling five per cent" of the employers, the ACW pointed out, are "undermining conditions built up, after years of toil and sacrifice, by thousands of clothing workers.

"Our principal campaign at present is being directed against the products" made by:

J. Schoeneman, Inc.
L. Greif & Bro.
Curlee Manufacturing Co.
Merit Clothing Co.
Raleigh Clothes.
Sam Finkelstein.
Monarch Wash Suit Co.
Calvin Clothes.
Arkay Clothing Co.
Acme Co. (also known as the Naragansett Clothing Co. and I. Setlow.)

The ACW appeal urged "cooperation in this campaign. We ask you to make forceful representation to retailers in your community, who depend for patronage and good will upon our friends, to offer for sale only such clothing as is made under union conditions.

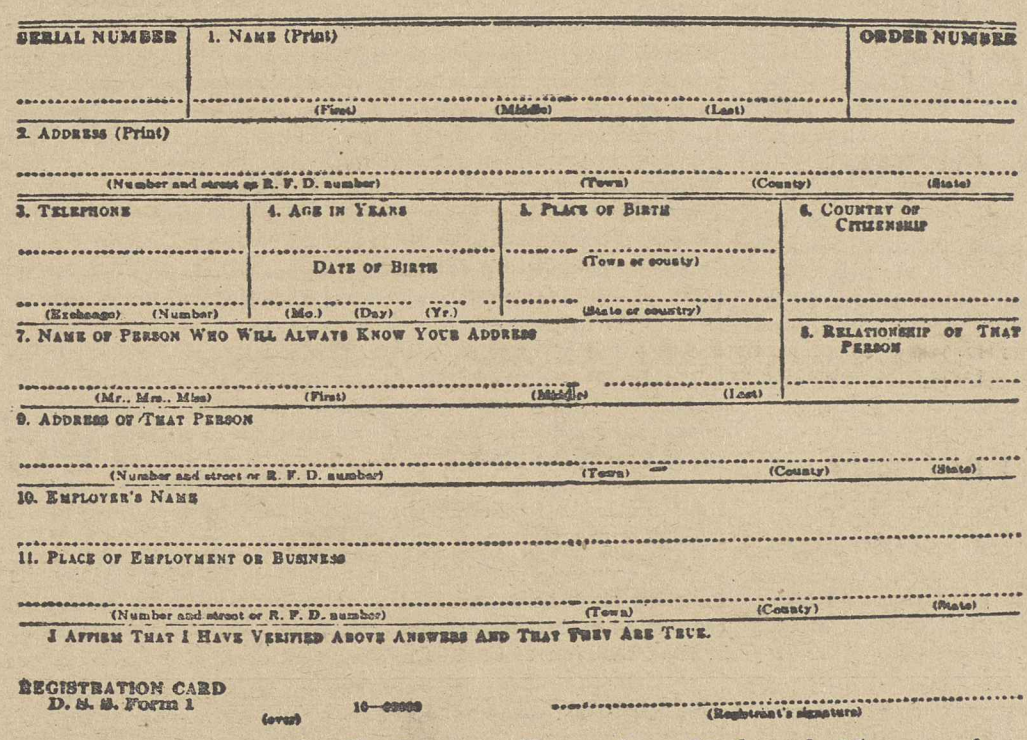
"Will you, therefore, contact the stores in your community and impress them with the opposition of millions of organized workers, as well as outstanding consumers' groups, to the purchase and sale of non-union or sweatshop clothing. Should any retailer make inquiry of you, we shall be glad to supply him with a directory of manufacturers making union clothing in every rice range."

The letter concluded with a request that unionists report their successes in the consumer campaign to the Amalgamated's Retailer-Consumer Dept., 15 Union Square, New York City.

Protect Jobs Of Drafted Unionists

New York, Sept. 21. — The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America yesterday took steps to safeguard the jobs and the union membership of those of its 260,000 members who may be called into military service as national guardsmen or drafted under the provisions of the Selective Service Law.

The union's General Executive Board, according to Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer, voted that, upon conclusion of their military service, union members shall be reinstated at their former jobs without loss of any rights and privileges, provided that they apply to the union for reinstatement within 30 days after their discharge from service.



Members called for military service, the board also voted, shall be exonerated from the payment of all union dues and assessments during the period of their service. All local unions and joint boards of the Amalgamated were urged to inform immediately employers under contract with the union of the general executive board's decision.

Civil Rights Upheld

Washington, Sept. 21 — Civil liberties in the nation's capital were upheld when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the U. S. District Court here gave a verdict restraining local and Capitol police from interfering with the right to distribute leaflets, hold meetings, and demonstrate before Congress.

The case arose out of police violence in breaking up a meeting of prayer against the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill held two weeks ago on the Capitol steps, when hundreds of peaceful demonstrators were forcibly driven away, their leaflets seized and anti-conscription banners and badges destroyed.

Suit was brought by Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties in the name of the organization and of a number of individuals concerned. The verdict was compared to the case against Mayor Hague of Jersey City, whose anti-democratic tactics were successfully fought up to the Supreme Court by the CIO.

Farmers, Jobless Get Benefits Under Food Stamp Plan

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—More widespread use of the Federal Food Stamp Plan is giving a lift both to farmers' income and to the buying power of some two million jobless, the Consumers Counsel Division of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration reported today.

During July, the U. S. agency points out, surplus food valued at $3,514,000 was purchased with the blue stamps given free to purchasers of the orange food stamps. The orange stamps may be used to purchase any commodity in a grocery store; the blue are for buying those surplus foodstuffs designated by the Secretary of Agriculture.

"Blue stamps exchanged over the counter in July bought 1,710,000 pounds of butter," the Consumers Counsel pointed out, "2,194,000 dozen eggs, 8½ million pounds of pork products, and 18½ million pounds of cereal products. They also accounted for 1¼ million pounds of prunes and raisins in July, and about 8½ million pounds of vegetables."

As of August 1, some 132 marketing areas in 47 states have come under food stamp plan operations, and more are constantly being added to the list.

Canadian Labor Congress Elects Leaders, Plans Drive

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 21.—A seven-man executive board will head the newly-established Canadian Congress of Labor, comprising CIO and All-Canadian Congress of Labor affiliates. The convention which merged the two groups also decided to form an executive council composed of one representative from every affiliate.

A. R. Mosher, for 13 years president of the ACCL, was elected president of the new organization. Pat Conroy, leader of District 18 of the United Mine Workers was elected vice-president and Rev. Norman Dowd, member of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, was elected secretary.

The four members of the executive board are: C. H. Millard, CIO organizer in Ontario; Silby Barrett, international board member of the United Mine Workers; M. M. MacLean, secretary of the C. B. R. E. and Sol Spivak, business agent of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Delegates decided to hold their 1941 convention in Hamilton, Ontario's steel centre.

During a four-day session, the delegates adopted a new constitution, and over 50 resolutions dealing with economic and political issues in the country.

Delegates to the convention heard Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, urge that labor seek the greatest possible degree of representation in the government.

"Great Britain called on labor to fill the breach when others had failed," he pointed out. "It was not labor that demoralized France but those more concerned with profits than with the welfare of the people."

Claiming that present war-time taxation was too great a burden on the workers, the meeting decided to seek a greater exemption of taxes on wages. The delegates agreed to seek an increase in exemption on single men from $600 to $1,200 a year and married men from $1,200 to $1,500 yearly earnings.

After heated debate over provisions of the Defense of Canada Regulations, brought on by a resolution demanding release of all unionists interned by the government, the meeting demanded amendment of these war-time laws to provide safeguards for the basic democratic rights of free speech, association and other civil liberties.

The convention asked that the government provide for all unionists arrested under the regulations a full trial and that they be given an opportunity to defend themselves in court.

Other resolutions adopted protested efforts to eliminate or curtail the right to strike, denounced appointment of anti-labor men to war board posts and demanded that amendments be made to the recently enacted unemployment insurance bill providing for inclusion of all workers, removal of all provisions detrimental to labor and greater benefits to the unemployed.

The government was asked to "requisition all Ford Motor Company plants in Canada for use to the best advantage in manufacturing war materials at cost to the nation in order that Ford workers can take full advantage of the democratic labor conditions existing in other plants."

For the political field the delegates agreed to support "any prograssive nominee for public office who has demonstrated by word and action his or her opposition to any and all measures that are not in the best interests of the Canadian people."

Delegates denounced war profiteering and "dollar patriotism" and demanded that the government conscript wealth as well as men for the nation's war effort.

Polls Scheduled At GM Research, Consumers Power

Detroit, Sept. 21.—Another General Motors election, this time at the Research Laboratories Division in Detroit, has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board.

Appearing on the ballot will be the CIO United Automobile Workers, the independent Mechanics Educational Society of America and no union.

In an earlier election, held at the time of the nationwide GM poll last April, the MESA was the only union on the ballot at the research division. It missed certification at that time when 97 workers voted against it, only 95 for.

In making application for the new election, the UAW presented as evidence the membership cards of 174 of the 194 employes. Its request that the MESA be barred from the ballot because of a lack of substantial interest in the proceedings, was turned down by the NLRB.

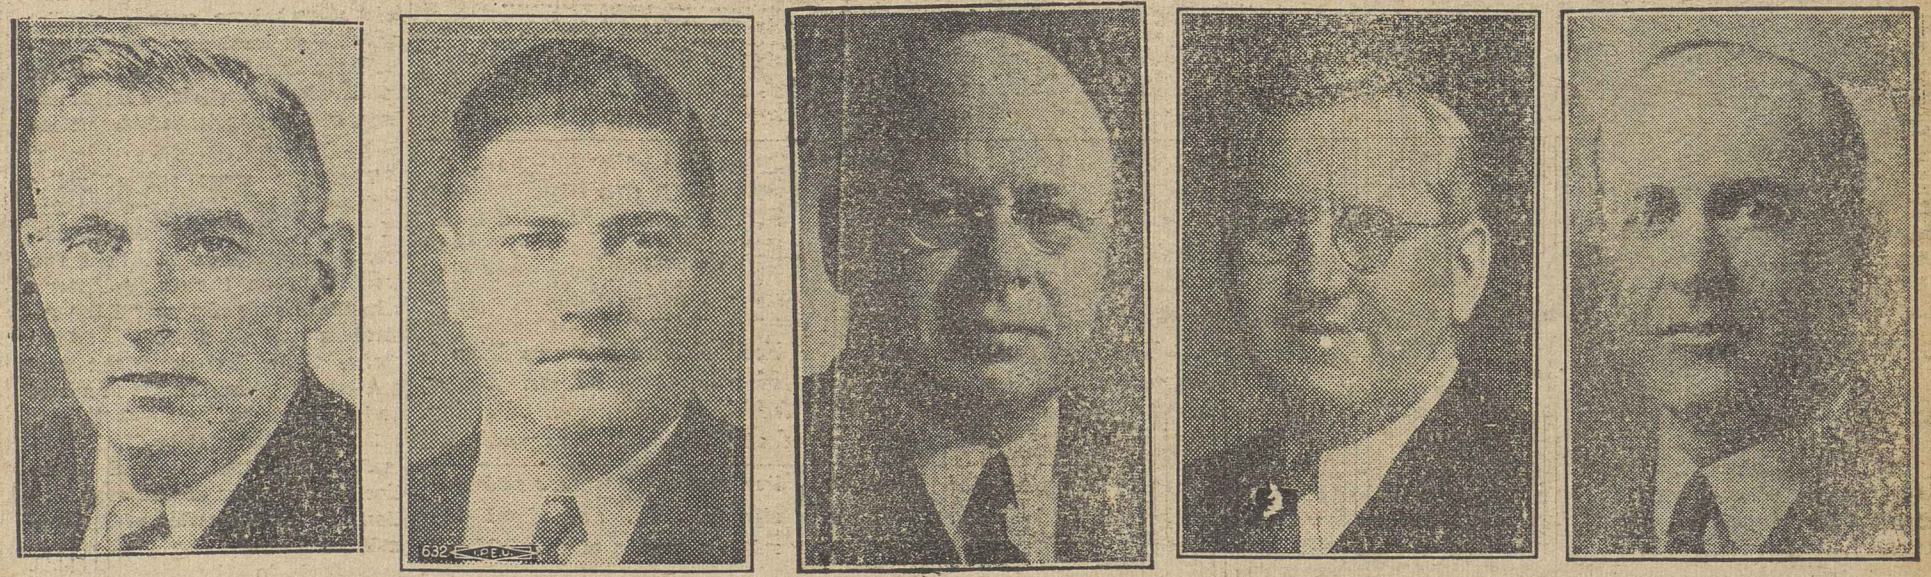
Detroit, Sept. 21.—The CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee today was putting homestretch preparations on its drive for victory in the coming National Labor Relations Board election at the big Consumers Power Co. of Michigan.

The firm is a subsidiary of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, whose former chief executive, Wendell Willkie, is Republican candidate for President.

The UWOC led the field in an election August 13-16, but failed to get a majority. At that time the CIO affiliate received 1,302 votes to 1,020 for the AFL electrical workers and 368 for neither. In the runoff, only the two unions will appear on the ballot.

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers released evidence to show that in 1938 Consumers Power paid out $500 for 500 subscriptions to a fake labor paper which attacked honest unions and New Deal social legislation.

Statement Outlines Purpose of Congress



TORONTO, Sept. 21. — Below is printed the declaration of purpose of the newly-established Canadian Congress of Labor, comprising unions of the CIO and the former All-Canadian Congress of Labor affiliates:

The purposes of the Congress shall be to promote the interests of its affiliates and generally to advance the economic and social welfare of the workers of Canada.

It shall seek to accomplish this in the economic field by developing the widest and the most elective organization of the workers, establishing wherever necessary, Organizing Committees for this purpose, and assisting existing unions to organize the unorganized workers in their respective industries. It shall, at all times, promote the principle of organization within an industry. It shall, co-operating with its affiliates, establish special funds and furnish other assistance for the purpose of carrying out the organizing objectives of the Congress.

In the legislative field the Congress shall promote the enactment of suitable legislative measures, Municipal, Provincial or Federal, in furtherance of the purposes of the Congress and of the interests of its affiliates. It shall exert and concentrate its influence in the promotion of its legislative programme, or in opposition to any legislation contrary thereto. It shall make appropriate studies of legislation, and of associated matters, bearing upon the purpose and objects of the Congress. It shall take all suitable steps to inform its affiliates and their membership, and also legislators and the public, with regard to its legislative programme.

The economic and legislative policies to be advanced by the Congress shall be determined in accordance with the industrial, economic and legislative conditions from time to time prevailing in the Dominion of Canada.

CIO Convention in Atlantic City

A GRIM REMINDER: Victims of the Bartley, W. But there's still time—write or wire your Congressman, demand he sign the petition to bring the Neely-Keller bill to the floor of the House for immediate consideration.

It's A Topsy-Turvy World, Sighs Rep. Clare Hoffman

BUCHANAN, Mich., Sept. 28.—Day by day, in every way the CIO United Automobile Workers are making life more complicated for Michigan's labor-hating gift to Congress, Republican Rep. Clare Hoffman.

When he gets back home from his current endeavors in Washington, Hoffman will discover that the Clark Equipment Co., located here, has gone and done it—signed a contract with the UAW.

The company, an important auto-parts manufacturer, apparently paid more heed to the organization of its employes than to Hoffman's anti-CIO diatribes.

Signing of the contract followed a UAW Labor Board election victory in June. The pact provides a 40-hour week, 5c wage increase, time and a half for overtime and vacations with pay.

Powder Workers Leave AFL, Swing to CIO

SAN LEANDRO, Calif., Sept. 28.—Five years in the AFL was more than enough for workers at the Trojan Powder Co. here, particularly when they compared conditions in their own plant with those in the Atlas Powder Co., organized and under contract with the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

About a month ago a Trojan Co. worker read about the CIO contract at Atlas, wrote to the CIO union asking for a speaker, got an immediate answer and a visit from a Mine, Mill and Smelter representative.

The workers turned out in a body for the first mass meeting, voted to exclude two AFL agents who suddenly showed up after a five year absence, and applied for a CIO charter. The company has been asked to negotiate a contract — something the AFL never got around to in its five years in the plant.

Win Jersey Insurance Vote

Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 28—Workers at the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. here have chosen the CIO Office and Professional Workers as bargaining agency, giving the union its third straight Labor Board victory in three years of organizing effort.

First election won was in Boston in 1938, the second in New York. Sydney Locker, N. J. organizer for the union, demanded that the company sit down and bargain in good faith. "The Hancock Co. has been stalling long enough," he said.

"Now, let them sit down and bargain in good faith. As far as New Jersey is concerned, we demand immediate recognition . . .

U. S. Backs Shoe Union's Fight Against Bata

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28 — A year-long fight by the United Shoe Workers to force the deportation of nearly 100 aliens imported into this country by the Nazi-dominated Bata Shoe Co. ended in success today.

Atty.-Gen. Robert H. Jackson, acting on complaint filed by the shoe union, ruled that the company had misrepresented its intentions when it asked for permission to bring the workers to the United States. Instead of being the only available experts who could teach Bata methods to American employes of the company's Belcamp, Md., plant, the aliens were merely occupying jobs that would otherwise have gone to local workers.

The company, whose central headquarters are located in German-occupied Czechoslovakia, works in close cooperation with Hitler's Nazi government, shoe union officials have charged. The aliens brought here were not refugees but persons whose departure from the German-occupied territory had been arranged by Bata and the German Gestapo.

260 Clergymen Join Fight on Smith Bill

AMHERST, Mass., Sept. 28.—Already soundly spanked by several hundred leading educators, supporters of Smith bill amendments to the Wagner Act were given another verbal lacing today, this time by some 260 clergymen.

The statement, issued here by the Committee for the Defense of the National Labor Relations Act, declared in part:

"The Labor Relations Act has substantially increased the effectiveness of our democracy by safeguarding those who earlier were the frequent victims of industrial autocracy. The present bill is the climax of attempts to emasculate the Act and should be defeated."

Among the leading signers of the declaration were Rev. J. A. Myers of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; the Rt. Rev. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Council and Rabbi Edward Israel of the Council of Jewish Rabbis; Rev. William P. Hatch of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, Cambridge, Mass.; Rev. A. J. Beck, editor, "The Michigan Catholic;" Rev. John C. Bennett, Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif.; Rabbi Julian B. Feibelman of Temple Sinai, New Orleans; Rev. Frederick Reissig, of Emanuel Lutheran Church, Rochester, N. Y.; Rev. Willard Uphaus, New Haven, Conn.; and Rev. R. H. Nicols of Union Theological Seminary, New York.

The letter, with its many signatures, was forwarded by Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah, head of the Senate Labor Committee, by Prof. Colston E. Warne of Amherst College, acting for the Wagner Act defense group.

Specific objection was made to those parts of the Smith bill which would split the Labor Board into two groups, make craft unit elections a requirement, "irrespective of how artificial or fictitious they might be," and increase the courts' influence over NLRB matters.

A SHOCK TO BANKERS: There's nothing novel about this picket line except its location—plump in the middle of Wall Street, heart of the nation's financial capital. The strike was called at the brokerage office of Newburger, Loeb & Co. when the firm fired nine unionists after the CIO United Office & Professional Workers lost a Labor Board election by a scant margin.

CIO Seamen Sweep Poll

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28. — In a major stride towards consolidation of its position on the Atlantic coast, the National Maritime Union today polled a heavy majority of votes cast in a Labor Board election on some 15 ships of the Merchants & Miners Transportation Co.

Only union on the ballot, the NMU won 414 of the 572 votes cast.

4,000 Strike At Bethlehem Shipyard

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—Angered by the persistent refusal of the booming Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. to bargain collectively, 4,000 employes of the Sparrows Point yard went out on strike Sept. 25.

A picket line was immediately placed around the plant by Local 33 of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Union leaders said that during the past three months their efforts to negotiate with the company, a highly profitable subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Co., have been futile, and that it has frequently violated the Wagner Act.

ASKS U. S. ACT

In view of that fact, Sec.-Treas. Philip Van Gelder of the international union demanded the government order Bethlehem either to bargain collectively in compliance with the law or forfeit its lucrative government orders.

The union is demanding a wage scale comparable to that existing in other major shipyards, ranging from 62½c an hour for laborers to $1 for top grade mechanics.

Other demands concern double time for Sundays and time and a half for Saturdays; establishment of grievance machinery, seniority rights and equal division of work; weekly payment of wages and a 5% bonus for work on the night shift.

PROFITS SOARING

In a statement which bitterly criticized the company's policies, Sec.-Treas. Philip Van Gelder of the international union accused the company of receiving contracts worth a billion dollars while paying substandard wages.

"Every shipyard in the country except Sparrows Point, pays double time for Sunday work," Van Gelder declared.

"Every yard in the country, except Sparrows Point, pays its employes every week. Every other yard pays a bonus for night shift work.

"The mechanics' rate at Sparrows Point is 75c, without exception the lowest in the United States as far as our industry is concerned.

"On the other hand, Bethlehem's current rate of profits is 300% or 400% higher than a year ago, and with over one billion dollars worth of contracts on hand — mostly government contracts — Bethlehem's financial position is exceptionally rosy."

FAT CONTRACTS

Van Gelder then called attention to a point which CIO Pres. John L. Lewis and Vice-Pres. Philip Murray have frequently protested — the fact that Bethlehem, like many other open shop firms, receives fat government contracts while violating federal labor laws.

"Bethlehem's continued refusal to bargain in good faith with legitimate unions is a national scandal," Van Gelder charged, "in view of its prominent place at the sweet-flowing trough of government contracts. Since the National Labor Relations Board was set up in 1935, Bethlehem, though found guilty of violating the Wagner Act many times, has yet to obey one single order of the Board."

Arkansas Council Hits Poll Tax

Paris, Ark., Sept. 28.—Abolition of the poll tax and extension of unemployment compensation were demanded here as the Arkansas Industrial Union Council ended its third annual convention.

While denouncing the poll tax because it restricts voting rights in those states where it is effective, the council urged all members to pay the tax and "be prepared to vote at all elections in the interests of organized labor."

ELECT KENDRICK

Elected president of the council was James Kendrick, of Fort Smith. Rev. E. W. Simpkins was chosen vice-president and A. L. Struble was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Principal speaker at the parley was David Fowler, CIO regional director and district president of the miners' union, who denounced fifth columnists and subversive activities. The same theme was taken by James Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the Oklahoma CIO council, another convention speaker.

J. D. Hackward, council board member, lashed "deplorable" conditions in the state's lumber industry, while Rev. Simpkins spoke on "Converting the Men of My Pastorate to Be Union Men."

Electrical Union Backed CIO Policies

By LYLE DOWLING

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Release this week of the official texts of resolutions enacted by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, CIO, at its recent national convention in Cleveland, emphasizes how firmly this large and vigorous union stands behind the policies of John L. Lewis, president of the CIO.

"Whereas, John L. Lewis has been following a policy of having politicians responsible to labor, instead of labor responsible to politicians," says one resolution, adopted unanimously by convention delegates, "therefore be it resolved that the Sixth Convention of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America heartily endorse the policies advanced by John L. Lewis, and be it further resolved that our International Union commend and encourage Mr. Lewis to continue to give his able leadership to the CIO, and continue his activities which have served the best interests of the American working people."

POLITICAL STAND

Another example of the union's confidence in the Lewis policies was the final action on the matter of presidential endorsements. After several hours' debate, the convention passed — with but one dissenting vote—a resolution authorizing its general officers, in consultation with Pres. Lewis and Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, to represent the interests of the UER & MWA relative to the endorsement for a third term.

FOR THIRD PARTY

Many other resolutions, unanimously passed, embodied policies enunciated by the leader of the CIO, often with direct reference to President Lewis.

"A powerful contribution to the welfare of the American people could be made through the creation of a new party, as suggested by John L. Lewis, embracing workers, farmers, youth, pensioners, the Negro people and the unemployed," said a "Third Party" resolution, which directed that "our delegates to the coming convention of the CIO request this convention to endorse such a political instrumentality."

The CIO's Legislative Program was unanimously indorsed, with the further instruction that "in the Congressional elections we lend our active support and effort only to those candidates who commit themselves to unquestioned and sincere championship of the principles set forth in this CIO Legislative Program."

CIO CERTIFIED

Washington, Sept. 28. — The Natl. Labor Relations Board has certified Local 1225 of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers as sole bargaining agency for workers at the J. Sklar Mfg. Co. of Long Island City, N. Y. Certification followed a CIO election victory in a recent election.

To Quiz Candidates

New York, Sept. 28 — Eight million young people, who will make their first trip to the polls this November, want to know how candidates for public office stand on such questions as war involvement, civil liberties, labor legislation, the American Youth Act, etc., according to a letter sent by the American Youth Congress to some 1500 candidates of all parties.

The letter, signed by Executive Secretary Joseph Cadden, is divided in two parts, the first dealing with arms sales and loans and credits to warring nations, and the candidate's record on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, the second with the Wagner Act, the American Youth Act and similar youth programs, Federal aid to education, old age pensions, collective bargaining, and other civil rights issues.

File New Charges At Ford

Detroit, Sept. 28 — In firing eleven union members, the Lincoln Motors Division of the Ford Motor Co. violated the Wagner Act, it was charged today by the CIO United Automobile Workers.

In a complaint filed with regional offices of the National Labor Relations Board, Norman Smith, UAW international representative and Maurice Sugar, UAW attorney, said the men were dismissed because of their union membership and activities.

The union has enrolled a considerable number of members at the Lincoln plant, Smith said, and he accused the Ford Motor Co. of seeking to intimidate others from joining by the alleged discrimination against UAW members.

CIO Strike Changes Bethlehem

Lackawanna, N. Y., Sept. 28 — (FP)—The Bethlehem Steel Corp. has been settling grievances regularly with a delegation of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee since the recent one-day strike of 4,000 workers.

The walkout won reinstatement of two sub-foremen who were demoted when they refused to drop out of the union.

"Responsible officials were never in to answer telephone calls and simply failed to answer telegrams —until the men walked out and threatened a complete halt on Bethlehem's profitable defense orders," declared Nathan Cowan, SWOC district director.

Since the strike the drive at the local Bethlehem plant has gained momentum, and two additional organizers have been placed on the job. The SWOC is seeking wage increases, seniority and standard union conditions.

California CIO Meets Oct. 4

San Francisco, Sept. 28.—California's State CIO Industrial Union Council will hold its third annual convention in San Diego, October 4, 5 and 6, Pres. Phil Connelly and Sec.-Treas. Louis Goldblatt announced today.

"The achievements of the Council during the two years of its existence have stemmed from the work done by our conventions," the officers' anouncement declared.

"Mapping of our future program will call for all the experience and foresight we can muster. The year to come may well be the most crucial in labor's history."

Satevepost Retracts Slander

Washington, Sept. 28.—Acting on numerous protests from the CIO and affiliated organizations, the Saturday Evening Post's weekly advertisement appearing in several metropolitan papers, corrected its slander against the CIO.

The correction, appearing in a box inserted in the ad, read as follows:

"The Saturday Evening Post advertisement headed 'What Does an American Look Like?' appearing in this newspaper Wednesday, September 11, referred to an article about Westbrook Pegler entitled 'He's Against,' by Jack Alexander.

"In part the advertisement stated 'watch a columnist whip away at a CIO leader until justice officials nab him on charges of forgery and larceny.' The labor leader so described was not a member of the CIO and we are glad publicly to correct this error."

Previously the error had been described as a slip of the pencil by a copywriter in the advertising office of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne. The mistake was described by the newspaper PM as "the biggest advertising blunder of the month."

Lewis Asks Bill Protect Strikers

Washington, Sept. 28 — Amendment to a pending national statute in order that labor's rights may be protected was urged today by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

In letters addressed to Sen. Sherman Minton of Indiana and Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah, Lewis asked that they sponsor amendments to S. 4297 and H. R. 10465, bills concerning the "punishment of a wilful injury or destruction of national defense materials, premises or utilities," so that they could not be applied to striking workers.

"We do not question the need for this measure," the CIO president wrote, "but we believe that its broad language could be applied to strikes which result in any injury or damage to property during the course of a strike, and the severe penalties of the law applied to all the strikers.

OFFERS AMENDMENT

"We are certain that such a construction is not intended by you, and in order to prevent such a misinterpretation of this law, I would suggest that a specific provision be added to the bill safeguarding the right to strike. This can be done by inserting a new section at the end of the bill, as follows:

" 'Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to interfere with or impede or diminish in any way the right to strike'."

Order Poll At Campbell Soup

Washington, Sept. 28.—The National Labor Relations Board has announced an election will be held within 30 days at the Campbell Soup Co. plant in Chicago.

Production, maintenance, service, cafeteria and wareheouse employes will vote whether or not they wish to be represented by Local 194, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Chicago Finally Accepts CIO Version of Massacre

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—After three long years Chicago city officials have admitted that the 1937 Memorial Day massacre took place at a peaceful demonstration.

When CIO Little Steel strikers paraded toward the Republic Steel plant in the South Chicago prairie land, they carried American flags, sang songs and were led by women and children.

Labor leaders and decent-minded citizens who testified to that in 1937 were branded as "reds, agitators, and subversive disrupters" attempting to smear poor Tom Girdler.

Today, Chicago city attorneys admit those witnesses were 100 per cent right; deny — as once they falsely charged — that the crowd was armed and preparing for trouble.

The reason: A $10,000 damage suit filed against the city by an unemployed janitor who was permanently disabled by the police attack as he watched the 1937 picketing demonstration.

Under Illinois statutes, the city is responsible for damages only if the police were quelling a "riotous mob."

So now the city's trying to forget there ever was a massacre, and trying to play down the assault on a peaceful crowd suddenly stampeded by machine guns, tear gas and clubs.

But they can't live down the memory of ten dead men.

CIO to Convene In Atlantic City On Nov. 18

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The third annual convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will open on Monday, Nov. 18, in Atlantic City, N. J., Pres. John L. Lewis announced today.

Convention headquarters will be located in the Hotel Chelsea, located on the city's famous boardwalk. It was in Atlantic City in 1935 that the formation of the CIO was planned by a group of industrial union leaders following the failure of the AFL convention to adopt plans for the effective organization of the nation's millions of unorganized industrial workers.

The 1940 convention is expected to show the unions of the CIO at peak strength. The 12 months since the 1939 convention called for organization of five million workers in five years have witnessed major gains and consolidation of existing forces by practically every affiliate of the CIO.

A meeting of the CIO executive board will be held on Friday, November 15, in Atlantic City.

FARTHEST NORTH

Fairbanks, Alaska—One of the "farthest north" elections ever ordered by the NLRB will be held here soon to determine whether the several hundred employes of the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Co. want to be represented by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, by the AFL or by an independent.

N, Y. Council Parley Ruled Illegal

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 28.—The New York Industrial Union Council gathering at Rochester was declared by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis not to be a legal convention, following the protest of many CIO unions whose delegates were barred from the convention floor.

The ruling of Pres. Lewis was conveyed to the officers and members of the Council's executive board in a letter from Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, who observed the proceedings on behalf of the National CIO.

Haywood noted that "almost 100 duly qualified delegates against whom no constitutional objections had been raised" and whose unions were in good standing with the Council and the national CIO, "were arbitrarily and illegally excluded from admission to the convention floor."

He noted further that Council Pres. Gustave Strebel had refused to honor a petition by a majority of the members of the executive board for a special meeting to arrange for orderly convention procedure.

BOARD TO HEAR CASE

The gathering held at the Hotel Seneca, therefore, Haywood said, "can in no way be considered a legal convention of CIO unions in the State of New York." He stated that the entire matter would be submitted to the executive board of he CIO.

Following protests at the barring of 99 delegates and other irregularities in procedure, about 250 delegates walked out of the illegal convention, and joined the 99 barred delegates at an unofficial meeting in the Hotel Milner, which was addressed by Director Allan Haywood.

Remaining in the Hotel Seneca gathering were 292 delegates, 277 of whom were from the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Textile Workers Union and the United Retail and Wholesale Employes. The 343 delegates who withdrew represented 24 national and international unions and organizing committees and 13 local indus-

Shoe Union Wins Fight Against Bata

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Frantic lobbying efforts by reactionary Sen. Millard Tydings of Maryland ended in failure today as Atty.-Gen. Robert H. Jackson refused to extend the visitors' permits of 59 alien employes of the Nazi-dominated Bata Shoe Co. plant at Belcamp, Md.

The decision marked a major victory for the CIO United Shoe Workers, which for the past several months has argued that Bata's aliens, brought to this country from Czechoslovakia with the connivance of the Hitler government, were robbing American workers of their jobs.

The shoe union pointed out through its Research Director, Leo Goodman, that the company has frequently violated the wage-hour law, deceived immigration officials, and acted in the economic interests of the German government.

The Dept. of Justice statement said its investigation had disclosed that "78 workers admitted as 'instructors' for the Bata Shoe Co. plant at Belcamp under a blanket permit dated June 7, 1939, were for the most part not engaged in the work for which they were admitted, that in requesting such blanket permits the Bata Shoe Co. misrepresented the character of the work to be performed by the alien employes and the methods of manufacture at the Belcamp plant; and that their employment rather than of a temporary nature as specified in the application for admission, was actually permanent."

CREDITS SHOE UNION

The Dept. of Justice statement also acknowledged that principal complaints against the Bata outfit had come from the CIO affiliate.

Upon hearing of the Attorney General's action in refusing to extend the permits of the Bata Shoe Company employes and executives, James J. Mitchell, general secretary-treasurer of the CIO Shoe Workers Union said:

"The United Shoe Workers have continued to point out the dangers that this company's policies have been and are to the American shoe industry for over a year and a half. We are glad that the Department of Justice, after a thorough check, has confirmed our contentions and taken steps which will prevent this company from throwing the American shoe industry into chaos, as they have done in every country in which they have been established.

"Shoe manufacturers, as well as shoe workers, throughout the country can now feel more confident that the industry and labor standards which they have developed will not be suddenly wiped out by the chiseling low-wage competition of this firm.

"The United Shoe Workers for over a year have contended that this firm which operates for the benefit of the Nazi economy aids the continuation of Hitler's war. We congratulate the Attorney-General and hope that his action today will bring an end to the anti-social policies of this company throughout the Western Hemisphere."

The law firm in which Sen. Tydings—one of the most bitterly anti-labor members of the Senate—has an active interest, has acted as counsel for the German-dominated firm, and the Senator is known to have made several attempts to pull strings for the company in Washington government offices.

In accusing the Bata Co. of misrepresentation, the Attorney-General backed up the accusations of the United Shoe Workers.

MISREPRESENTATION

When it sought the permit for the aliens, the statement declared, "the company represented the work to be done as of so unique a character that American workers could not act as instructors but must first themselves be instructed by aliens.

"The investigation disclosed, however, that with one possible exception, the manufacturing methods of the company were not unique and required little or no special training of employes.

"It was further ascertained that the work done by a ma-

MEXICAN BROADCAST HELPS:

Aircraft Workers Win Poll At Ryan Co.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 28.—A union broadcast from "south of the border, down Mexico way," helped bring victory today to the CIO in an NLRB poll at the important Ryan Aeronautical Co.

Barred from the air by a local radio station, the United Automobile Workers bought last-minute time at a station just across the border in Tia Juana, Mexico.

FIGHT CENSORSHIP

The censorship exercised by local radio stations had previously forced UAW speakers to use Station KFOX at Long Beach, near Los Angeles, where CIO broadcasts are given every night by the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council. Finally the union arranged for time on a San Diego station, about a hundred miles from here.

Five minutes before the broadcast, the management welshed on its contract.

Union leaders, jubilant over the election results, immediately began to draft a contract for the company that built Charles A. Lindbergh's plane, the Spirit of St. Louis. A few weeks ago the UAW won the election at the Vultee aircraft plant in the Los Angeles area.

On Guard for Labor

There is serious danger that labor's rights may be trampled upon and civil liberties endangered by much of the legislation now being rushed through Congress in connection with the national defense program.

The Minton anti-sabotage bill, for instance, is so broadly worded that it could be used against legitimate strikes, as CIO President John L. Lewis points out in a recent letter to Senator Minton and Representative Murdock.

"We do not question the need for this measure," he says, "but we believe that its broad language could be applied to strikes which result in any injury or damage to property during the course of a strike and the severe penalties of the law applied to all the strikers."

The CIO therefore calls for a specific provision in the bill to safeguard the right to strike. This, Lewis says, "will prevent this bill from being used as an instrument to oppress workers, while at the same time affording every protection to national defense production, against criminal acts."

At the same time Lewis has advised the Senate and House military affairs committees that the CIO is opposed to the so-called home-guard bill, (S. 4715 and HR 10495), which would permit a state to organize military forces other than the National Guard while any part of the Guard of that state is in active service, or during a national emergency.

This bill would permit a state to establish military forces without any statutory restrictions as to the purposes for which they may be used, and without the lgeislative controls to which the National Guard is subject. Instead of it, Lewis suggests that the states be simply authorized to re-establish their National Guard units to replace the men called to federal service.

There are a number of other bills dangerous to labor and civil liberties now before Congress. The CIO is on guard, however, to protect essential American liberties.

Defense vs Hunger

Miss Harriet Elliott, Consumer Commissioner on the National Defense Advisory Commission, hit the nail on the head when she pointed out recently that true national defense calls for the wiping out of undernourishment and malnutrition.

"Forty-five million of us are living below the safety line right now," she said, "because we are not getting the kinds and amounts of food necessary for strength and health. Hungry, undernourished people do not make for strong defense.

"We have the lands, machines and hands it takes to produce and move and market all the food we need to assure everyone an adequate and safe diet.

"Let's make America strong by making Americans stronger."

That is exactly what the CIO has been saying for some time. Internal security and morale are essential to proper defense. Calling attention to the fact that two-thirds of all American families have average annual incomes of less than $1,500, and four million receive less than $312 a year, John L. Lewis said in a recent speech:

"These are the holes in our national defense. In the hearts of these people are the vulnerable spots of our fortress."

A University of California research study, quoted in the current CIO "Economic Outlook," estimates that an American wage earner's family of five should receive $2,184.25 a year to live at a minimum standard of "health and decency." Compare this with the actual income of American workers' families, most of whom receive far less than $1,500 a year.

To maintain a bare existence at current prices, a relief family of five should receive at least $104 a month, the same study estimates. Yet actual relief paid varies from $4.82 a month in Arkansas to a high of $36.45 in New York City, averaging $24.87 for the entire United States.

It is facts like these that lead the CIO, in its concern for national defense, to demand that immediate consideration be given to filling in the holes of unemployment, starvation wages and economic insecurity that are "the vulnerable spots of our fortress."

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ONE recent and very patriotic American anniversary was almost completely overlooked by professional patriots. It was remembered and honored by many working people.

The Bill of Rights, ratified exactly 151 years ago, is seldom mentioned by the people who talk most about Americanism and practice it least. But you can hardly pick up any issue of a CIO paper without finding some reference to it.

Why is this? It is because the first ten amendments to the Constitution, which are known as the Bill of Rights, describe the kind of freedom which the plain people of America fought for many years ago, and which the labor movement is still fighting for today in many cases.

The professional or phony patriots, on the other hand, the flag-wavers of reaction, treat Americanism as an abstraction—or rather, make of it a bully's club to beat down the very rights and freedom for which it should stand.

Real Freedom

Many people in this and other countries have fought and died for freedom. But they did not fight and die for an abstraction. Freedom to them meant to be free from certain definite oppressions of which they were most conscious.

Freedom to the caveman, for instance, meant to be free from the attacks of wild beasts or his stronger fellows, protection from the elements and freedom from hunger.

The Bill of Rights describes in precise terms the kind of freedom sought by most of the American people 151 years ago, from tyrannies that had been imposed upon them by the British government; and whose imposition they also feared from a wealthy and powerful American minority that might seek to use governmental powers for similar ends.

That this Bill of Rights is still acclaimed by the American common people as a charter of their liberties, is a tribute both to its far-sighted draftsmanship and to the fact that the freedoms described have acquired new content and meaning in relation to the tyrannies of the new industrial civilization that has since grown up.

Ford Drive

In their recent announcement of the CIO campaign to organize Ford workers, John L. Lewis and the union president, R. J. Thomas, dwelt not only on wages and working conditions but also on violations of the Bill of Rights.

They stated that the Ford Motor Co. has denied its employes the right of free speech, and the "right to assemble in peace without the presence of spies and stool pigeons." Freedom of press has also been violated, they noted, in the prohibition to distribute union literature to Ford workers.

From all of this we can piece together a very definite and concrete picture of what freedom means to millions of American working people today.

It means in the first place a freedom which is too often overlooked by high-falutin' liberals—freedom from low wages, intolerable speed-up, layoffs and insecurity.

To obtain this basic economic freedom, every thinking worker knows that he must be free in another way—free to organize with his fellows for the betterment of conditions.

Freedom to organize involves freedom of speech, press and assemblage. For the right to join a union is almost meaningless, if it is not protected by the right to speak and meet together without fear of stoolpigeons and loss of one's job, and by the right to distribute union literature.

Practical Defenders

So the Bill of Rights means a lot to American working people, more perhaps than to any other group. The freedoms it describes are practical matters to them, linked up with their freedom to earn a decent living under reasonable conditions.

There are many so-called liberals who have treated freedom as an abstraction, detached from the workaday realities of American life. They have wondered why practical labor people have not become excited about their fine-spun theories.

Today the Bill of Rights is threatened by war hysteria, and by the forces of reaction which promote it for their selfish ends. And we find some of these erstwhile liberals acting like the dog which dropped the bone in its jaws in an effort to snatch the bone's reflection in a pond.

Claiming to follow their abstraction, they have actually joined forces with those who are seeking to destroy the realities of freedom in the United States.

Meanwhile it is the practical labor people, like John L. Lewis and the CIO, who are today leading the fight in defense of the Bill of Rights, of civil liberties and of true Americanism.

Working people are no more immune than any other people to the propaganda of intolerance and hysteria that is so prevalent today. But if they lend themselves to it, they are uncaging wild beasts which will destroy their liberties first of all.

The Draft Act—What It Means

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

(The Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill has been passed by Congress and signed by Pres. Roosevelt. What are its provisions—what does it mean to the people of America? The CIO NEWS presents the second of two installments of an analysis of the bill. The first article discussed registration and liability for service; period of training; compensation; exemptions and deferments.)

RIGHT TO REEMPLOYMENT

All persons who are inducted into the military forces are to receive a statement upon their discharge indicating a satisfactory completion of their period of training.

In the case of persons who have to leave their jobs when they are inducted into the military forces they will be entitled to reemployment to their old jobs if they can meet the following conditions:

(a) they must receive the certificate of satisfactory completion of their service; (b) they must still be qualified to perform the duties of such position; (c) they must make application for reemployment within 40 days after they are relieved from their training; and (d) the circumstances of the employer must not have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable to reemploy the individual involved.

It is difficult to prophesy as to how the Court may interpret the term "impossible or unreasonable" as far as the employer is concerned. On its face it seems unlikely that this term will afford any reasonable protection independent of the protection that a worker may receive from his union to obtain reemployment after he has left the military service.

In the case of government employes, where the person can show that he has met the above conditions, he will be restored to his former position or to a position of like seniority, status and pay. In the case of employes of states or other political subdivisions, Congress declares it to be its sense that such person should be restored to their former positions or to positions of like seniority, status and pay.

All workers in private industry who are restored to their former employment are to be restored to their seniority and shall be entitled to participate in insurance or other benefits offered by the employer pursuant to established rules of practice relating to employes on furlough or leave of absence in effect with the employer at the time that the individual was inducted into the military service.

Furthermore, such persons may not be discharged from their position without cause within one year after such registration.

Any person who, after leaving the service, is not reemployed or is denied other benefits in violation of any of the provisions of the Act, may file a petition with a Federal Court. The Federal District Attorneys are authorized to act as attorneys on behalf of the petitioners in these cases. The Court, if it rules in favor of the employe, may order the employer to comply with the provisions of the Act and in addition compensate the workers for any loss of wages or benefits suffered by reason of the employer's unlawful action.

Of course these proceedings will be subject to appeals by the employer to the higher courts which would, of course, result in the delays which accompany any judicial proceeding.

The Director of Selective Service, who is appointed under the act by the President, is directed to establish a personnel division which is to render aid in the replacement in their former positions or in securing new positions for the members who have completed their military service.

Congress expresses its policy that wherever a vacancy is caused in the employment rolls by reason of induction into the military service of an employe, such vacancy shall not be filled by any person who is a member of the Communist Party or the German-American Bund.

VOTING RIGHTS

Any person inducted into the military force shall be permitted to vote in person or by absentee ballot if under the laws of the state of which he is a resident he is entitled to vote by absentee ballot in the election. However, no person is to receive a leave of absence for longer than one day in order to permit him to vote in person. Therefore, unless State laws permit voting by absentee ballot, the men in the military service are not, under the Act, specifically protected in their right to vote.

INDUSTRY

The President is empowered, through the head of the War or Navy Departments, to place orders and demand priorities with industrial establishments for any national defense material. In the event any such industrial establishment refuses to give such orders, the requested priority or to accept the order for a reasonable price, as determined by the Secretary of War or the Secretary of Navy, the President, through the aid of the War and Navy Departments, is authorized to take immediate possession of the plant in order to manufacture the material required. The company is to be paid a fair and just rental for the use of the plant and the material. In addition, the corporation and the individuals involved shall be guilty of a felony which may be punished by imprisonment for not more than 3 years or a fine not exceeding $50,000.

Where the government takes over any plant in accordance with this procedure, it is specifically provided that existing state or federal laws concerning the health, safety, security and employment standards of the employes in the plant shall not be affected. A question may well arise as to whether the employes will also be entitled to their rights under the State or National Labor Relations Act as employes of a private concern or whether they will be considered to be employes of the Federal Government.

ADMINISTRATION

A Director of Selective Service is to be appointed by the President to carry out the provisions of the Act. Civilian Local Boards, including Appeal Boards, are to be established through recommendations by the respective Governors to the President who shall appoint the individuals. The local board shall consist of three or more members. All members of a local and appeal board shall be civilians. The local boards have full jurisdiction over all questions or claims with respect to eligibility, exemptions, or deferment from training and service, under the Act.

PENALTIES

Penalties may be imposed for violations of the Act after conviction in the federal courts for not more than five years or a a fine of not more than $10,000. Persons who have actually been inducted for training and service shall be subject to court martial. All other persons subject to the Act, but who have not yet been inducted, shall be subject to the civil courts.

Violations under the Act include the following:

(1) Any person charged under the Act with the duty of carrying out any of its provisions or the rules or regulations who shall knowingly fail or neglect to perform such duty.

(2) Any person charged with such duty or exercising any authority under the Act, rules or regulations, who shall knowingly make or be a party to the making of any false, improper, or incorrect registration, classification, physical or mental examination, deferment or induction.

(3) Any person who shall knowingly make or be a party to making of any false statement or certification as to the fitness or unfitness or liability or non-liability of himself or any other person for service under the Act.

(4) Any person who otherwise evades registration or service in the military service or any of the requirements of the Act.

(5) Any person who knowingly counsels, aids or abets another to evade registration or service, or any of the requirements of the Act.

(6) Anyone who in any manner shall knowingly fail or neglect to perform any duty required of him under the execution of the Act.

(7) Any person or persons who shall knowingly hinder or interfere in any way by force or violence with the administration of the Act or conspire to do so.

CIVIL RELIEF

A 1918 statute, called the "Soldiers and Sailors Relief Act", is made applicable to persons inducted into the service under the Conscription Act. This 1918 statute, called the "Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act" has to do with postponement of civil obligations of persons inducted into service. However, a bill is now pending in Congress which revises this legislation and any discussion on this issue will have to await the passage of this new legislation.

However, there is one specific provision that is contained in the Conscription Act which will in all likelihood be carried over into the new legislation which should be referred to. Under this provision the parties to an installment contract would be authorized to arrange, through mutual consent, for the seller to regain possession of his property in the event the purchaser cannot make his installment payments because he is in military service. However, it should be clear that such an arrangement requires the consent of the purchaser who can, if he desires, refuse to give such consent.

TEXT OF LETTER

The text of the letter of Director Haywood, outlining the reasons for the ruling that the Hotel Seneca gather was an illegal convention, follows in full:

Representing President John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I have been observing closely the proceedingings of the Convention of your Council.

As you are aware, serious dispute has arisen as to who are the duly accredited delegates to your Convention. In addition to being concerned that delegates duly qualified under your Constitution be seated, I have made every possible effort to bring about an amicable accord so that the Convention might proceed according to the Constitution and the laws governing the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

SOUGHT AGREEMENT

My first effort was to have an agreement that all delegates as to whom no possible objection on any point of law or the constitution of the State Council could be raised, should be seated as duly qualified, and that all questions relating to all other delegates as to whom objection was or could be made, should be submitted to those already seated. Unfortunately, this agreement to which no one could possibly object on grounds of law or justice, has been rejected.

Likewise, my earnest efforts to have this major dispute as to the qualification of delegates submitted for prompt decision by impartial officers of the National CIO, was likewise rejected.

Following the rejection of these earnest proposals the Convention was opened today under police guard unprecedented at a labor convention. In addition, almost one hundred duly qualified delegates against whom no constitutional objections had been raised, and whose unions I am officially advised by the Secretary-Treasurer of the Council are in good standing with the Council and the National CIO, were arbitrarily and illegally excluded from admission to the convention floor. Likewise, International Representatives of unions affiliated to the CIO were excluded from the convention hall.

I am officially advised by the Sec.-Treas. of the State Council that before the convention was officially organized, a majority of the members of the Executive Board, acting in accordance with the provisions of Section 4, Article V of the Constitution of the State Council, reading as follows: "The Board shall meet at least quarterly unless called together by the president or upon petition by a majority of the members of the Board," petitioned the president of the Council, Gustave A. Strebel, that a special meeting of the Executive Board be assembled for the purpose of taking necessary steps as officers of the organization, to devise ways and means so that the convention could proceed in an orderly manner. This petition was officially presented to the president by the Secretary-Treasurer. The president refused to honor this petition.

LEWIS HEARD FACTS

After receiving a protest from twelve International and National presidents in attendance at the Convention, all these facts were presented by me to President John L. Lewis who thereupon advised me that the Convention was illegal and that I convey this to you.

In accordance with these instructions I am hereby advising you that the gathering held at the Hotel Seneca in Rochester today, can in no way be considered a legal convention of CIO unions in the State of New York. The entire matter will in due course be submitted to the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations for its determination and action, of which meeting you will receive due notice.

Fraternally yours,
ALLAN S. HAYWOOD,
Director of Organization.

CLOSED SHOP PACT

Baltimore, Sept. 28 — Renewal of a closed shop contract this week brought an average 7 per cent wage increase to 15 members of the United Furniture Workers Union at the Majestic Furniture Mfg. Co., Inc., Louis Gilbert, organizer, said today.

ANNOUNCE POLL

Washington—An NLRB election will be held within the next few weeks to see whether employes of the Connor Lumber & Land Co. wish to be represented by Local 125, Intl. Woodworkers of America.

THWARTS THUGS: A brickbat through the back window landed beside him; a bullet passed through the car two inches from his chest; three bullets tore holes in the windshield and four more struck the rear of the machine—but Joe Widman of the CIO Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers is still alive. What's more, he's still on strike at the Republic Creosoting Co. in Indianapolis.

Scab's Fire Fails to Halt CIO Strike

Indianapolis, Sept. 28 (FP) — For seventeen years Joe Wildman worked at the Republic Creosoting Co. Early in August he struck with other members of the gas, coke and chemical workers—District 50 of the United Mine Workers—for an increase in the $14.70 weekly wage.

He didn't believe it when Charles H. Fell, District 50 representative, characterized the strike as the "most vicious of 1940," even after four fellow pickets had been run down by company officials in automobiles.

He believes it now.

19 SCABS ATTACK

He was driving around the 88-acre plant informing scattered pickets that chow was ready in the mess tent when a group of 19 scabs near the fence opened a barrage of brickbats and bullets.

His shot-torn automobile plunged into the ditch. Wildman tumbled out and hid behind it until the barrage ended with the arrival of fellow strikers.

A brickbat through the back glass landed in the seat beside him. A bullet passed through the car two inches from his chest. Three bullets tore holes in the windshield and four more struck the rear of the machine.

It all happened while the company was pressing an injunction suit against picketing.

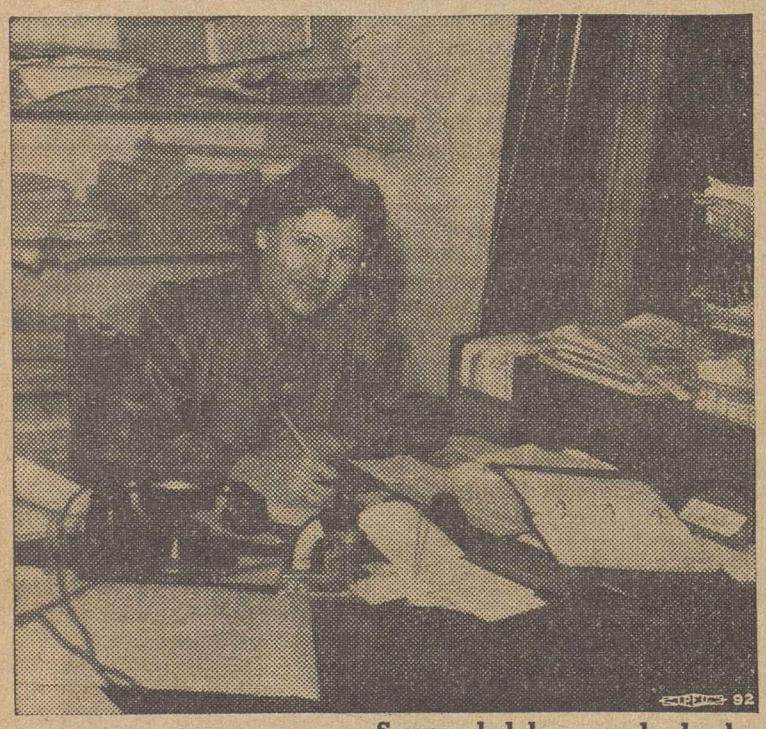
jority of the alien instructors was actually competitive in character and that there was nothing in the production methods of the company that made it impossible or impracticable for American workers to perform the work after a very short period of instruction."



LINKED TO NAZIS

The Bata Shoe Co., an American corporation, is controlled by Jan Bata of Czechoslovakia, who made millions by producing low-cost shoes in a strictly-regimented factory community at Zlin, in Czechoslovakia. After Hitler's occupation of the central European republic, Bata soon came to terms with the Nazis, and his activities have closely followed the needs of Germany's economy and politics.

Though posing as a refugee from Hitler, Bata is believed to be instrumental in procuring foreign exchange for the Nazis, supplying millions of army shoes to the German military machine and purchasing large quantities of hides and leather for German industrialists.

CERTIFY SHOE WORKERS

Washington — CIO's United Shoe Workers has been certified as sole bargaining agency at the Irving Shoe Co. in Chicago, following a Labor Board election victory in which the AFL was defeated 69 to 19.

KEEPING BUSY: Surrounded by records, books and papers, Mrs. Anne Gibson is pretty well occupied as office manager of Newspaper Guild strike headquarters at Monroe, La. The Guild has been on strike against the News-Star and the Morning World since April for reinstatement of Sec. Harold Breard and the signing of a contract. When Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., offered a scholarship to the strikers, they voted to send Mrs. Gibson to attend the six-weeks' course.

Rep. Geyer Charges Tories Stall on Poll Tax Bill

Lewiston, Me.—A 400-280 Labor Board election victory for the Textile Workers Union at the Androscoggin Mills here paved the way for certification of the TWU as sole bargaining agency.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Rep. Lee Geyer of California today pointed his finger at what looked like deliberate stalling tactics on the part of opponents of his anti-poll tax bill.

In a letter to Rep. Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Judiciary Sub-committee which held hearings on the bill, Geyer expressed "amazement" that no order has yet been given for printing of the transcript of the hearings. The hearings ended last May 17.

Walter, who has sponsored a notorious measure to tie up the work of government administrative agencies in a morass of red tape, once placed the printing order, then "had a change of heart," Geyer declared.

TWO ALIBIS FLOP

Walter was revealed as having given two explanations for the failure to print the material. The first, that he believed the bill unconstitutional, was derided by Rep. Geyer as "not entering the picture."

The second excuse was that the hearings weren't "completed" since nobody testified against the bill.

"At each of the six hearings," Walter was reminded by Geyer, "you asked whether or not anyone cared to appear in opposition to the bill and that no one was there in that capacity. As you know, many bills have gone through Committee unopposed, with the hearings printed for distribution."

WOULD SPREAD FRANCHISE

Geyer's bill, by eliminating the poll tax as a qualification for voting in many southern states, would permit additional hundreds of thousands to exercise their voting rights.

"It is important," Rep. Geyer declared, "that all Congressmen learn the testimony of the many witnesses who appeared in support of the measure. The hearings contain a wealth of information about poll taxes—statistical data on the number of citizens denied access to the ballot, constitutionality of anti-poll tax bill, history of poll tax statutes in the various states, evidences of corruption bred by this un-American tax and other significant aspects of the question.

"The printed report is essential for Congressmen seeking an intelligent decision as to whether they will sign the anti-poll tax discharge petition now lying on the Speaker's desk."

The Labor Reader

FIVE AND DIME

By C. W. FOWLER

Barbara Hutton Mdivani Haugwitz Reventlow, ex-princess, ex-countess and now just an American citizen trying to get along, has about $10,000,000 a year to spend, a house in England, a house at Newport, a house in New York, a yacht, enough pearls to sink a ship and probably few worries about economic security.

She has these fine things because her forbears were in on the ground floor when Frank W. Woolworth got the five and dime store idea back in the 80's. She has them also because the thousands of girls and men that work in the five and dimes are underpaid, overworked, subject to a thousand tyrannies and deprivations that no people should have to take in any country.

Here are some Woolworth wages, quoted from "Consider the Woolworth Worker," latest pamphlet of the League of Women Shoppers: "In 1938, Johnny Rodriquez made $962. Richard Smith made $832. Jommy Lopez made $676. These men . . . were lucky enough not to lose any time from work . . . In 1938, 55 salesgirls received $44,616, or $811.20 each, at $15.60 a week, provided they lost no time from work. The same year 55 executives receiving over $20,000, together received $1,583,032."

How They Live

Countess Reventlow, or Princess Mdivani, or Miss Hutton, gets along on her share of the Woolworth profits—which average $450 a year on 63,000 workers. Miss Alice R., a Woolworth worker, doesn't do so well.

Alice quit school for Woolworth's when she was 17, because there were five in the family and her father was unemployed. Out of her $15.60 a week, she holds out $1.50 for lunches, 60 cents for carfare, an occasional dollar for a movie or a magazine, every third year $15 for a winter coat. She lives in a fourth floor cold-water walkup, rent $35, shared by father, mother, a sister, a small brother and herself. Her boy friend makes $18 a week, and the real reason they can't get married is that her family has to have her help or go under completely.

That's how Alice R. Lives. The ex-Princess Mdivani, etc., is only one of scores that get their cut from the 22 per cent profits Woolworth's has marked up, from the 60,000 Miss Alice R's

How They Work

Here's a sample of Woolworth's conditions, quoted from a worker: "In 1932 we were cut from 20 to 18 cents an hour—no reason given. We were laid off two weeks every summer—no reason given.

"There was no such thing as handling grievances. We just swallowed them and grumbled to each other . . . If you bent down to get some merchandise behind your counter one of the floormen would bang the glass part with a thimble he wore just for that . . . We were taken advantage of time and time again; salaries were cut, we worked overtime without pay every Saturday night and during the Christmas rush."

The union came to Woolworth's in 1937, when Local 1250, Department Store Employes Union, CIO, entered a field previously held unorganized. A contract was won in New York, with a 30-cent minimum, 48-hour week, vacations. The contract was repeatedly violated by the company. When it expired, strikes occurred before the company agreed to extend it six months to mediate disputes. Finally it went to the courts, where it was upheld. A union claim for $100,000 back wages is still in the legal mill.

As another girl told the League of Women Shoppers: "We can squawk about things now. Before we'd never open our mouths. The union has won that great thing for us. The bosses get union coming out of their ears now . . . We feel more secure . . ."

78% for CIO

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 28.—More than 78 per cent of the workers at the Drummond Packing Co. here voted CIO in a Labor Board election. The results showed: for Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, 95 votes; for the AFL, 29; neither, 1. Votes cast totalled 125 out of 129 eligible.

Curran, Watson Nominated

New York, Sept. 28.—Two officials of CIO International unions were nominated for Congress by the American Labor Party in last week's primary voting here.

Nominated in the 15th District, which runs along Manhattan's West Side waterfront, was Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union.

In the 17th District, whose Congressional seat is now occupied by advertising man Bruce Barton, the ALP nomination went to Morris Watson, a vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild.

AFL CRIME NEWS:

Hoosegow Beckons Two Racketeers

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28 — Two more AFL officials have been convicted of racketeering and are headed for five years in the hoosegow.

John Nick, former international first vice-president of the federation's Intl. Alliance of Theatrical, Stage Employes and Motion Picture Employes, and his assistant, Clyde Weston, a local business agent, received the sentences—and $5,000 fines—in federal district court here.

The pair were convicted on 11 counts. Five concerned a 1937 conspiracy to extort $6,500 from theater owners under threat of exorbitant wage demands. In 1936, the owners charged, they had been forced to pay the two men $10,000 under the same threat.

Lumber Union Wins Area Pact

SEATTLE, Sept. 28.—Twenty thousand lumber workers, members of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America, will work under a standard agreement negotiated with 69 logging and sawmill operators, it was announced at union headquarters here.

Thirty-three IWA locals were represented in the negotiations, which began July 10 and were concluded in Tacoma. In addition to union recognition, seniority, etc., the agreement provides for a five per cent wage increase to take effect until Dec. 31, after which union and employer representatives will meet again to consider further adjustments.

It also sets up a joint committee to deal with disputes that might lead to strikes or lockouts. The agreement runs to April, 1941, after which it may be renewed on an annual basis for five years, subject to 60 days termination notice.

END STRIKE: Huntington, W. Va., members of the Transport Workers of America vote to end their strike, which halted bus transit operations around the city. The union won substantial gains.

Fight Move Against CIO Newspaper

Portland, Ore., Sept. 28 — The Portland CIO Council has instructed its officers here to take all necessary action to counteract an American Legion inspired drive against the Labor Newdealer, state CIO weekly paper.

The Legion's call for suppression of the paper was made on initiative of Wm. D. (Big Boy) Browne, of the Portland police "red squad", who was declared by Dean James M. Landis of Harvard University to have taken a bribe during the campaign against Harry Bridges, CIO California leader.

Expect 3,000 To Join CIO Steel Union

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 28.—An overwhelming majority of the nearly 3,000 members of the Algoma Steel Workers Union were expected to vote this week for affiliation with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The merger proposal was approved unanimously at the last membership meeting according to C. H. Millard, sub-regional director of SWOC.

The vote will be determined by a referendum. Count of ballots will be held at a mass meeting which will be attended by Millard and Philip Clowes, special SWOC representative.

Furniture Union Gets Pay Raise

Chicopee Falls, Mass., Sept. 28.—Paid vacations and wage increases for men in the lower income brackets were among the major improvements won by Local 137 of the United Furniture Workers today in a renewal agreement with the Sherman Upholstery Company.

The vacation clause provides one week with pay for each of the 40 workers covered by the contract, and the wage increases tend toward equalization of scales at the plant.

The agreement also provides for a union shop, time and a half for overtime airtight seniority guarantees and no-strike, no-lockout arbitration machinery.

Signers for the union were Shop Chairman Tony Buonoconti, Local President Paul Olson and New England Representative William L. Gilbert.

The local is still awaiting word from the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation on its demand for wage increases from the Berkshire Upholstery Company.

Murray Throws Girdler Lawyer for 10-Yard Loss

CHICAGO, Sept. 28.—If Republic Steel lawyers could produce Tom Girdler of Republic Steel at a conference with CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray and other union leaders, the company would be spared all sorts of trouble and bother.

That was the suggestion made by Murray to Atty. Le Fever, representing the non-union steel firm, at a recent NLRB hearing in this city.

Printed below is a section of the transcript. Asking the questions was Mr. Le Fever. The answers were supplied by Mr. Murray. The brief dialogue illustrates who stands for peaceful industrial relations in the steel industry, and who wants to block any such move for harmony. Judge it for yourself!

Q—What would be your convenience as to the matter of producing any of this material that you have expressed a willingness to produce?

A—I have always been expeditious in the carrying out of such matters. If you can produce Tom Girdler for me about as quickly as I can produce these records, we will end this hearing.

Q—I am not a big boss, though.

TRYING TO MEET TOM

A—Unfortunately, you see, you are just a sort of a messenger boy, and I have a realization of that. I have been trying to meet Tom for four years and somehow or other Tom isn't willing, you see. As his special representative in this situation, anxious to find out a lot about why we didn't meet, and speaking authoritatively as a representative of my union, I am asking you now, will you be good enough to produce Tom for me someplace, sometime?

A—I have answered that in this way. I am not in a position of authority with respect to Republic Steel Corporation as you are with respect to Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

A—Well, as I said, I think again you are just a mere messenger boy. That's all right. I just wanted to know that insofar as my organization is concerned, officially, see, we could obliterate this record and discontinue the employment of attorneys if you would render a service to the community and the nation by whispering in Tom's ear at some convenient moment that Phil Murray is willing to sit across the table from him and talk to him about this thing.

Q—Did you make that known to him before May 26, 1937?.

A—I have made it known publicly ever since we first started organizing.

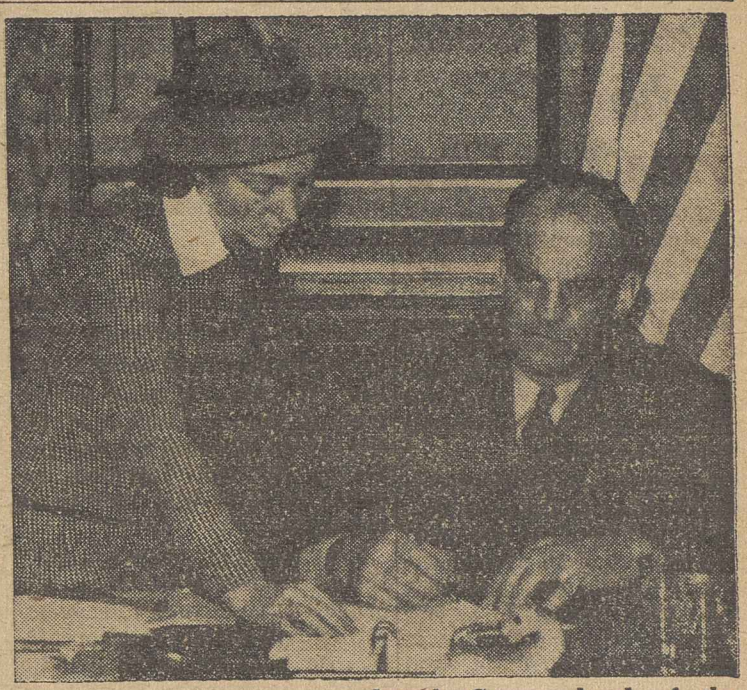
Q—I say, did you ever communicate that to Mr. Girdler prior to May 28—

A—Tom said he didn't want to communicate with me. He said something about selling apples before he would meet me. I can't recall the exact language, but when I started organizing Tom's properties, he used the public platform to denounce us rather soundly, and said he would never meet us. That is a matter of public record, and I think you can produce that for the record if you care to.

NO BITTERNESS

There is no bitterness in my heart about these situations. I will meet Tom any time you fellows care to produce him, and you won't have to sit around here wasting your time trying to clutter up a record with a lot of nonsensical material, when it is easy to get around to a meeting, see, a meeting of minds. That is how these problems are usually solved.

I don't regard you as an enemy. I think you are a friendly enemy. You might be disposed to get around and to do this thing that I am suggesting. I think it would be a good thing for the community, a good thing for the nation, if big men—I don't consider myself a big man—if big men like Tom Girdler would look down once in a while and come around to a place where he would meet us and talk to us about those things. I am willing to meet him.



MR. LE FEVER: Will you read the last question to the witness, please? (Thereupon, the question referred to was read by the reporter as follows: "Question: What would be your convenience as to the matter of producing any of this material that you have expressed a willingness to produce?")

MR. DORFMAN: The witness has answered that question.

MR. LE FEVER: I ask that the answer be stricken as not responsive to the question.

MR. SMITH: I oppose the motion.

TRIAL EXAMINER ERICKSON: Let it stand.

SIGNS APPEAL: Joseph Curran, head of the Natl. Rubber Union Re-elects Officers, Plans Drive

By ROBERT CRUDEN

DETROIT, Sept. 28.—An intensive organizing drive among the nation's 80,000 unorganized rubber workers was planned by the United Rubber Workers, CIO, as it finished its fifth annual convention here.

The drive will be made possible, said Pres. S. H. Dalrymple, as a result of the delegates voting an additional five cents per capita to the International each month. This will give the URWA at least $24,000 more each year for organizing purposes.

President Dalrymple was re-elected as were Vice-President Thomas F. Burns and General Secretary-Treasurer Frank Grillo.

Elected to the General Executive Board were L. S. Buckmaster, Akron; Walter Welsch, Newark, O.; Wm. Abel, Indianapolis, Ind.; Glenn Gann, Detroit, Mich.; Clarence Martin, Trenton, N. J.; Joseph Feineisen, Akron,; H. H. Wilson, Los Angeles, Calif., and Harold House, Eau Claire, Wis.

In its closing sessions the convention voted to bar Communists, Nazis and Fascists from membership.

During the convention Vice-President Burns announced his appointment as assistant to Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman and President Dalrymple announced his appointment to a government board to investigate application of the Wage-Hour Law at Porto Rico.

CONDEMN GOODYEAR

Labor policies of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., received bitter condemnation from the convention. The company, which has earned the reputation of being the Henry Ford of rubber, has bitterly fought every effort at organization by its workers. Its latest move is open defiance of an NLRB order to reinstate discharged union workers at its Gadsden, Ala., plant and to stop its anti-labor activities.

A resolution passed unanimously by the delegates listed Goodyear as the "No. 1 concern" of the URWA for the coming year and warned that unless Goodyear changes its tactics "every effort will be made to discourage the use of Goodyear products by all governmental agencies, individuals and organizations."

Connecticut CIO Parley Oct .26

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 28 — A number of prominent speakers are scheduled to address the annual convention of the Connecticut Industrial Union Council, which meets here Oct. 26 & 27.

Among them will be Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Walter Smethurst, director of the CIO's aviation organizing campaign; CIO Sec. James B. Carey; CIO Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson and Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union.

NLRB REPORTS:

Firm Evicted Unionist, Blamed Kids!

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The Great Western Mushroom Co. of Adams County, Colo., today was ordered by the Labor Board to halt a flim-flam arrangement aimed at barring strikes of employes living in company-owned houses. The decision caustically referred to the company's practice of hiding behind children's skirts to conceal its anti-union policies.

The order directed the firm to reinstate Dan Vigil, a member of the CIO United Mushroom Workers Local Union 300, and to give him back pay. It also told the company to offer reinstatement and immediate occupancy of their former living quarters together with a sum of money equal to the rental paid for other quarters during the period of discrimination to Telesfor and Elmer Vigil.

NEW TRICK

The NLRB uncovered a new variety of strike-prevention strategy in the mushroom corporation's bag of tricks. Charles Savery, head of the company, told the Board that in return for rent-free homes, the employes were required to agree that they would not strike.

"The record disclosed, however," the NLRB reported, "that the employe-tenants were already receiving free rentals as compensation for wage reductions first instituted in 1939." Free rent, it decided, wasn't the issue; instead, the workers were compelled to give up their right to strike for "the mere privilege of continuing to live in the houses." That, the NLRB ruled, is interference with organizing rights and a violation of the Act.

DISCRIMINATION

The lot of a CIO member at the mushroom plantation was not a happy one, the Board decision amply demonstrated. Thus, CIO members were never given the small loans which the company frequently made to non-union workers.

The decision made mince meat out of the company's argument that the Vigil family was ousted from its home "on account of the nuisance that the children have become."

That was a move which failed to hide the company's anti-union attitude from the NLRB. As the report put it, the company has resorted to the "peccadilloes of two mischievous children, aged 9 and 10, to disguise its real motive in the eviction.

After witnesses testified the Vigil kids' behavior was no different from that of the other children in the neighborhood," the Board decided that the family was evicted because of the activities of Elmer and Dan Vigil in a Labor Board proceeding.

DEMOTED

Dan Vigil was fired, the Board report continued, because among other things he had boasted after a demotion in 1938 that the NLRB would get his old job back. The transfer, as well as the final dismissal a year later was a result of union activities.

Wheeler Gets Probe of Arms Tie-Ups

Washington, Sept. 28—Congressional study of tieups between defense industries in this country and abroad, with emphasis on German - U. S. big business connections, appeared closer this week as the resolution proposed by Sen. Wheeler of Montana received approval from the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The committee's report recommended passage of the resolution, citing the history of the first world war in support of its recommendation. Such international connections then resulted in serious interference with the U. S. war effort, it was pointed out, and similar interferences exist today.

MENTIONS DEAL

The report mentioned "an American optical company" with a 50 per cent share of the U. S. military market that had a deal with "a leading German corporation" to divide world sales and to fix prices and terms of sale. It also mentioned a series of patent pools and agreements between German and U. S. metal firms for the control of beryllium, an important element in airplane building.

Referring to an estimated American investment of two billion dollars in Germany, the report said: "This enormous investment may already have been utilized in some degree to blackmail American interests whose German plants are endangered. To the extent that reports, secret processes, formulas and personnel are exchanged between German and American plants, there may arise the danger of disclosing to a foreign power matters which defense considerations make it unwise to reveal."

SOLIDARITY: Unity of workers from Mexico and from the U. S. dramatically shown by the CIO float entered in Chicago's celebration of the 130th anniversary of Mexico's independence. Celebration was arranged by members of the Steel and Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committees. PWOC member Joseph Pena of Armour and Co. represents the CIO, while fellow-member Felix Martinez, also of Armour's, holds the banner of the Mexican Confederation of Labor (CTM).

Los Angeles CIO Asks Defeat Of Anti-Labor Official

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 28.—Major election task of the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council will be the defeat of labor-hating District Attorney Buron Fitts, the Council announced today.

"It is important to know that in the last two years Buron Fitts has brought over 1059 felony charges against members of trade unions," the statemeent declared.

"He has not succeeeded in making a single one stick!

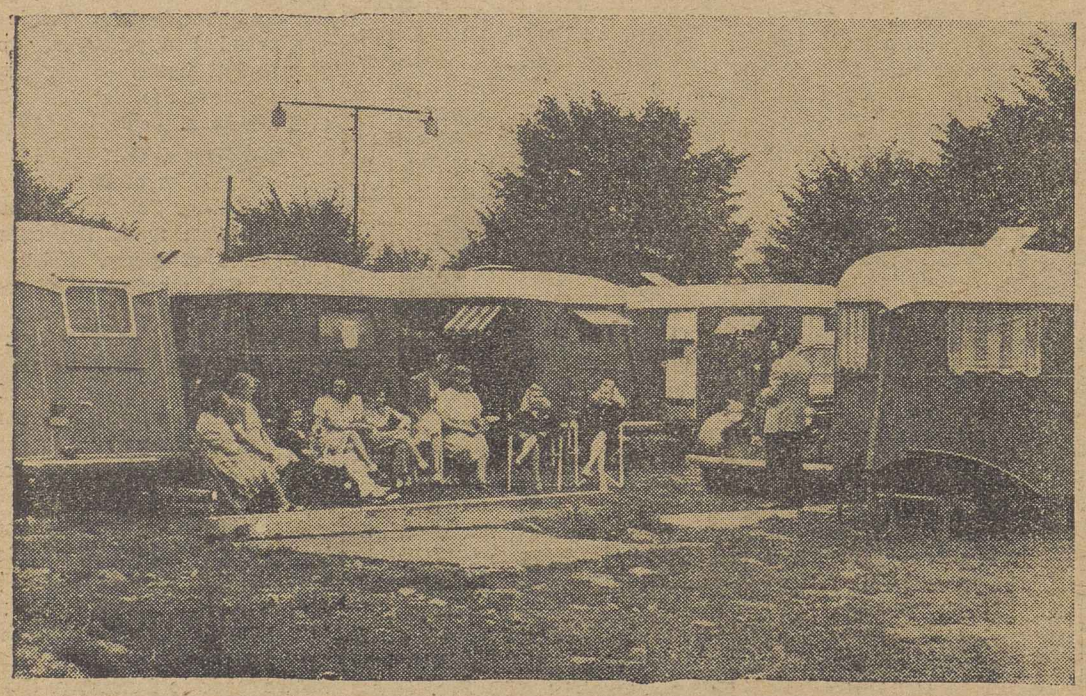
"Fighting and exposing these frame-ups has cost the unions about $75,000 and has cost the taxpayers of Los Angeles County over $250,000."

NEW FRAME-UP

Tied up with the Fitts campaign is the sudden and highly-publicized arrest of Britt Webster, longshoremen's union member, on a frame-up charge that he was responsible for the death of an anti-labor thug five years ago.

The thug was killed in San Pedro during the 1935 tanker strike when he attempted to invade the home of some union men.

"Two years later," the CIO Council recalls, "Smallman and Jeffress were suddenly arrested in connection with the death of Riley. Before the case came to trial the prosecution moved to dismiss the case for lack of evidence.



"Now, suddenly .. .. .. Brother Webster is arrested, held incommunicado, a violation of the law, for 72 hours, and then booked on a charge of first degree murder to the accompaniment of violent headlines announcing the discovery of a 'mass Communist murder ring.'

"An examination of the evidence submitted by Buron Fitts to date against Brother Webster shows the professional stool-pigeon, John Leech, who has been adequately described by Dean Landis of the Harvard Law School as a 'pathological liar,' as the star witness of the case."

A Webster defense committee, organized by Local 1-13 of the Intl. Warehousemen's & Longshoremen's Union, has been established at 424 South Palos Verdes Street, San Pedro, Calif., and it is asking for funds to help continue the fight.

NAME LEATHER UNION

Wilcox, Pa.—The Intl. Fur & Leather Workers has been named sole bargaining agency at the Elk Tanning Co. here. The union won a recent NLRB election by 92-69.

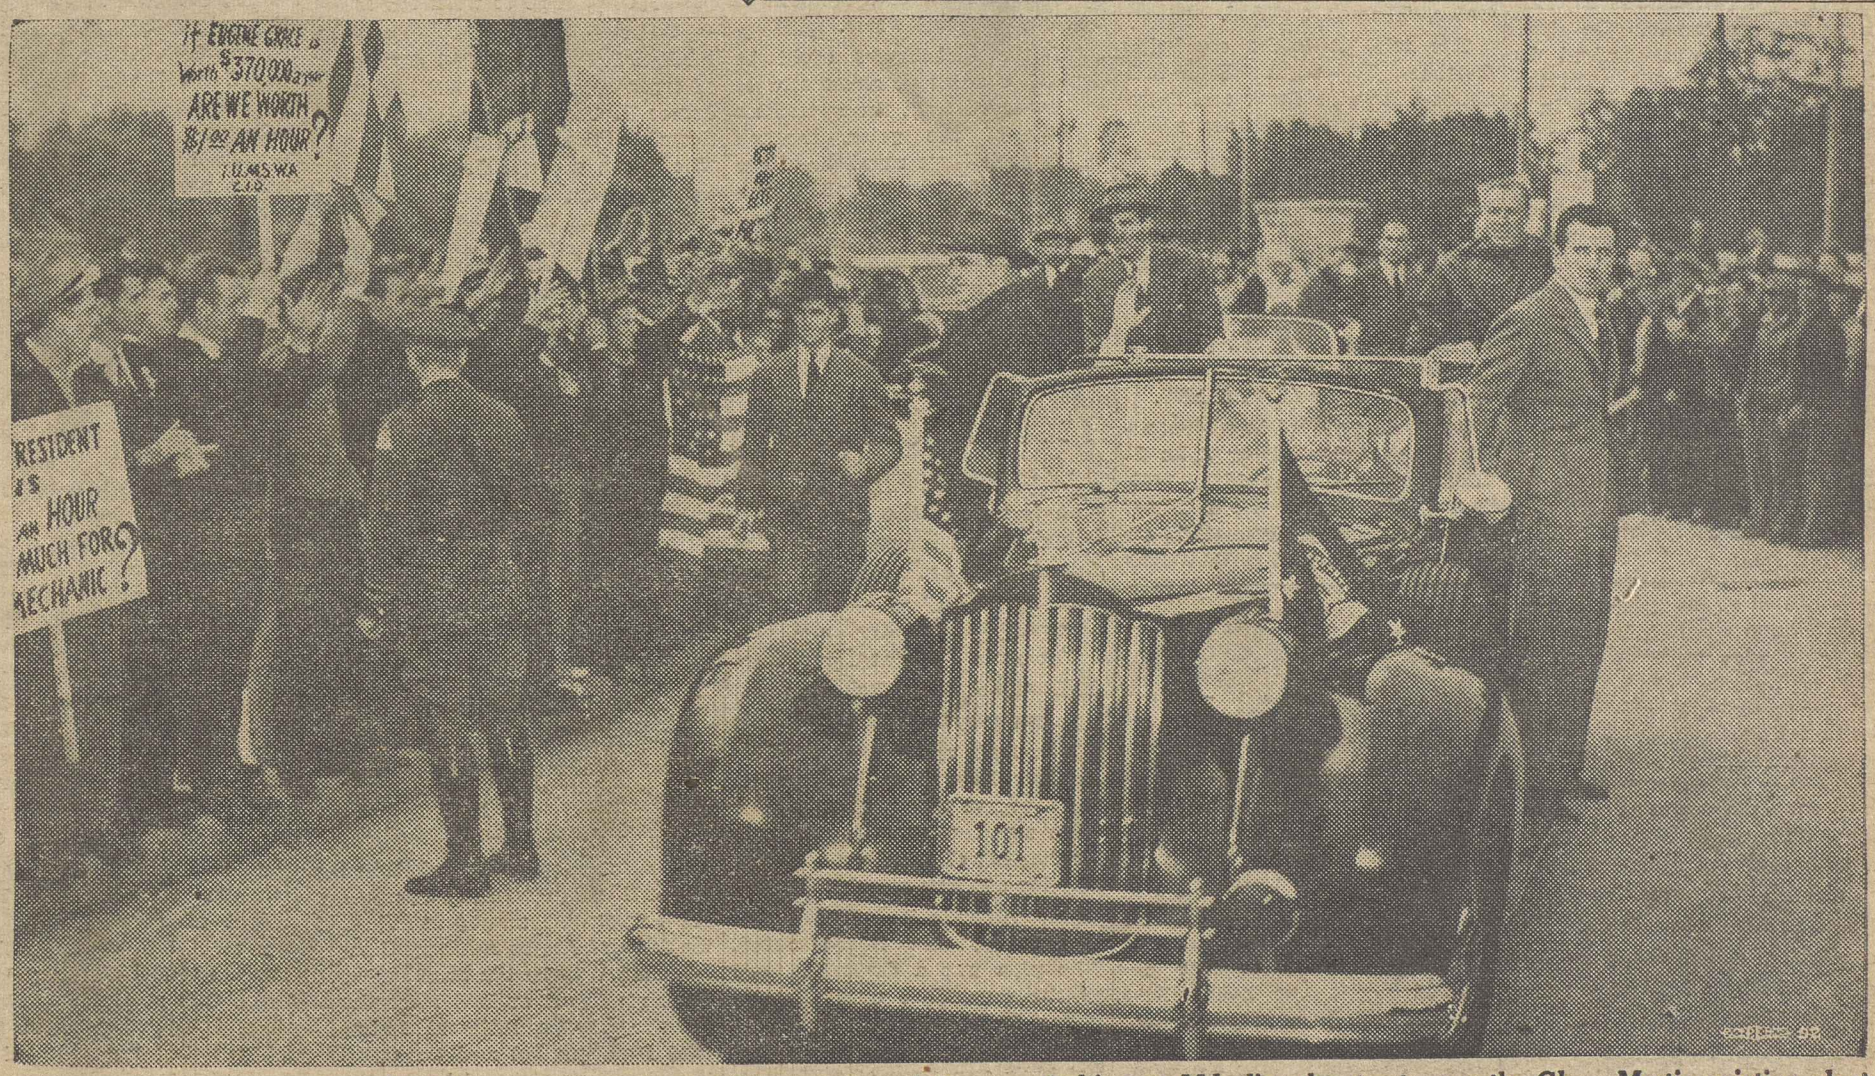
CIO Demands U. S. Close Loopholes In Buying Policy

24-HOUR PICKET LINE: Night and day, pickets of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers are picketing the Baltimore plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. Four thousand men walked out when the big open shop outfit locked out 900 welders, refused to discuss wage rates with the union.

Strike Hits Wage Slash

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 5.—Workers of Rufus Wilson Inc., hosiery mills at Burlington, N. C., struck in protest against an attempted wage cut at the call of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Union officials said that the plant, employing 163 workers, was completely shut down.

Lewis, Murray List 3 Major Steps Needed



(See Stories Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Events moved fast this week in the CIO's three-year campaign to bar government contracts to corporate violators of federal labor legislation.

An initial result of the drive which has been pushed by Pres. John L. Lewis and other industrial union leaders was the announcement by the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission of a general policy barring U. S. purchasing orders to law-flouters.

In Pittsburgh, where they were attending a special conference of Steel Workers Organizing Committee officials, Lewis and SWOC Chairman Philip Murray demanded immediate extension and formal application of the policy, so far outlined by the government only in general terms.

They insisted that the President issue an Executive Order on the subject, as they have demanded in the past; or that observance of the federal laws be made an absolute condition in U. S. contracts, that it be made retroactive to national defense contracts recently let out, and that it apply to all U. S. buying, rather than to merely the Army and Navy Departments.

MEMO TO FDR: Striking workers at the Bethlehem Shipyard Co. near Baltimore, Md., line the streets near the Glenn Martin aviation plant to inform President Roosevelt about their strike. The President was inspecting defense activities in the Maryland city. Who's bigger — Uncle Sam or Bethlehem? the signs inquired.

CIO Ford Drive Starts; Widman Predicts Success

DETROIT, Oct. 5.—Predicting certification of the CIO as majority union at Ford "before many months are past," Michael S. Widman arrived in this city to launch the joint auto union-CIO organizing campaign against the industry's sole remaining open shopper.

Initial plans for the campaign were formulated last month and announced at a meeting of the United Automobile Workers' executive board. The statement, signed by CIO President John L. Lewis and by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, revealed that $100,000 had already been appropriated for the drive and announced the appointment of Widman, who is CIO assistant director of organization, to direct the union efforts.

Discussing plans for the drive, which will get under way at once, Widman declared that the program includes a staff of 40 organizers, nightly radio broadcasts, a weekly Ford workers newspaper, a concerted legal campaign to win nullification of the Dearborn anti-handbill ordinance, and a nation-wide campaign to acquaint the public and car purchasers in particular, of the circumstances under which Ford cars are made."

Widman declared that Ford service department employes, foremen and other executives vainly attempted to compel attendance of Ford employes at the Willkie rally in Wyandotte on Monday.

"The Ford drive will not concern itself with politics." Widman said; "however, failure of Ford's efforts to compel attendance at the Willkie rally is one further indication that the reign of fear which has prevailed at the Rouge plant is at an end."

STRONG FOR CIO

"I have conferred today with President R. J. Thomas, of the UAW-CIO, and Richard T. Leonard, the union's regional director in Dearborn and the West Side. They inform me that membership among Ford workers is at the highest point in years. Some divisions of the Ford system are already overwhelmingly CIO.

"The Ford drive will proceed in an orderly and peaceful manner, under the guarantees of the Wagner Act. We do not contemplate strikes or cessation of operations. The sentiment for the CIO is so strong among the Ford workers that, before many more months are past, we will be in a position to win legal certification as their bargaining spokesman.

"I have been authorized by John L. Lewis to state that the entire resources of the CIO, both funds and man-power, will be at the disposal of the drive.

WILL AID DEFENSE

"Unionization of the Ford workers by the CIO will be a substantial contribution to the quick completion of the national defense program. By establishing the economic rights and civil liberties of the Ford workers, we will be insuring swift completion of any defense orders with which the Ford company may be entrusted. That is the only safe basis on which the government can give and Ford can accept any defense orders."

Ford's Record

Figures Blast High-Pay Myth

DETROIT, Oct. 5 — The Ford high-wage myth got another dent when union members employed at the Lincoln plant of the Ford Motor Co. in Detroit gave information to the Ford Organizing Committee of the United Auto Workers, CIO, on wage rates at the plant.

On that basis the union made the following comparisons:

Minimum Wage Per Hour	Chrysler	Briggs	Ford
Arc and gas welders	$1.13	$1.10	$.75
Metal Finishers	1.13	1.10	.75
Spot welders	.98	.....	.75
Water sanders	1.13	1.10	.90
Paint touchup	1.08	1.10	.75
Paint sprayers	1.13	1.10	.85
Dingmen and metal repair	1.38	.....	.95
Doorhangers	1.11	1.10	.75

In many cases the Ford-Lincoln maximum in these classifications is below the minimum at the Chrysler and Briggs plants in Detroit, where the UAW-CIO has contracts.

Bare Ford Attack On Labor Civil Rights

By EDWARD LEVINSON

DEARBORN, Mich., Oct. 5.—The amendment to the traffic ordinance, under which UAW-CIO is forbidden to pass out leaflets at Ford gates during change of shifts, was enacted by Dearborn City Council on the request of the Ford Motor Company.

This came to light here October 2 during the trial of R. J. Thomas, UAW President, on a charge of having violated the ordinance. Thomas, together with other officers, UAW-CIO, defied the law because they consider it unconstitutional.

The Ford request for restrictions on CIO leaflet distribution, and revelations that the Ford gate areas, listed in the ordinance as "congested" areas are less congested than many other Dearborn points not covered by the law were the highlights of the hearing.

Distribution by the UAW on May 22 went off without obstruction of pedestrian or vehicular traffic, Thomas testified.

The trial is to be concluded October 12 when UAW-CIO Counsel Maurice Sugar and Dearborn city attorneys will argue constitutionality. If Justice Lila Nuenfeld should uphold the law the conviction will be appealed without delay.

The secretary of the Dearborn Public Safety Commission testified that the traffic law amendment, classing the Ford gates as "congested" areas, was adopted by the city council Dec. 6, 1937.

Sugar then placed in evidence a letter written to Mayor John L. Carey, on November 19th, 1937. The letter, signed "Ford Motor Company, Harry Bennett," assailed the idea of the UAW-CIO handing out leaflets at the Ford gates. Bennett, who heads the Ford Service Department, an aggregation of mercenary strong-arm men who have been repeatedly involved in violence against unionists, pleaded that the circulation of CIO leaflets at the Ford gates might "incite" the Ford Service Men.

"The danger of this is greatly increased by permitting the distributors to approach our main gates, where the CIO organizers and Ford employes in close proximity always causes a moment of tension," Bennett wrote.

"If the distributors could be limited to adjacent street corners and removed from the immediate vicinity of the gates, through which such large numbers of our men pass, the chances of an outbreak would be greatly minimized."

NEW YORK, Oct. 5. — Employes of the Ford Instrument Co., most important manufacturer of bombsights for the Navy Dept., today had won wage increases approaching $160,000 a year and the closed shop.

Granting of these gains, together with a number of other improvements in working conditions, ended the possibility of a strike by a local of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Under the new pay scale, workers receiving less than 85 cents an hour get a 5 cents raise, while those earning more than that figure will receive a 10-cent increase. Minimum hiring rates were also boosted a dime an hour. Nine holidays with pay are provided.

All employes who may be drafted for the army will retain their seniority and be returned to their jobs when their military service is completed.

Oil Union Elects New President, Plans Big Drive

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 5. — O. A. Knight was elected president of the Oil Workers Intl. Union at that organization's 11th annual convention held here recently.

A. R. Kinstley and Sam Beers were elected vice-presidents, while E. C. Conarty was re-elected secretary-treasurer, the only union official to retain his position. The union also elected a new executive board.

Ex-President John L. Coulter, who did not run for re-election, was appointed to the union's organizational staff in an advisory capacity.

A resolution passed by the convention called for complete organization of all workers in the oil industry in conjunction with the CIO's national organizing campaign.

Other resolutions urged the re-election of President Roosevelt, demanded that Congress abolish the poll tax in the southern states, and condemned the Allen bill for deportation of Harry Bridges, California CIO director.

CHANGE CONSTITUTION

A considerable portion of the delegates' time was concerned with extensive changes in the international constitution. As finally adopted, the constitution provides increased powers for the executive council, which was given more direct supervision over the activities of the administrative officers. Plans were made for election of officers by union referendum in the future, and for an increase to $1 a member per month in the per capita paid by the locals to the international office.

Next convention of the union will be held at Baton Rouge, La., on the third Monday of September, 1941.

Oil Campaign Gets CIO Support

Washington, Oct. 5 — With an enthusiastic send-off from CIO President John L. Lewis and Allan Haywood, director of organization, officers of the Oil Workers International Union launched plans for an intensive organizing drive, whose first point of concentration will be in Texas.

It will be a coordinated drive with both the National Maritime Union and the Oil Workers participating. The NMU already has agreements covering some of the oil tankers which enter Texas ports. It will cooperate closely with the Oil Workers in spreading organization among the oil companies' maritime employes while the Oil Workers concentrate on the refinery, pipe line and oil field workers.

O. A. Knight, president, A. R. Kinstley and Sam Beers, vice presidents, are the newly elected international officers of the Oil Workers International Union who visited Lews and Haywood to make plans for the drive.

They were assured of the full backing of the CIO, which is assigning five organizers to aid in the campaign.

Officers of the Oil Workers also met with NMU executives in New York to set up a joint committee for the conduct of a coordinated campaign. Frederick M. Myers of the NMU and Kinstley of the Oil Workers were appointed a temporary committee to work out arrangements.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, and UE President James B. Carey assisted local officers in the final negotiations. The firm, a subsidiary of the Sperry Corp., is engaged almost exclusively in the manufacture of armaments.

Colorado CIO Council Ends Parley

Pueblo, Colo., Oct. 5.—Delegates to the annual convention of the Colorado CIO State Industrial Union Council which met here September 20-21 re-elected President Frank Tefferly and Secretary-Treasurer Frank N. Price and passed a number of constructive resolutions dealing with important organizational and legislative questions.

Much publicity was given in Western papers to the tabling, by a vote of more than two to one, of a resolution endorsing Pres. Roosevelt for re-election.

OPPOSE NLRA CHANGES

The convention went on record against any amendments to the National Labor Relations Act and asked for the reappointment of Labor Board Chairman Warren Madden. Resolutions were also passed urging extension of the Wage-Hour Act, improvements in the Social Security Act, and demanding that firms obtaining government contracts be forced to comply with the NLRA.

The sessions were opened by Hugh Mathews, organizer for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in Pueblo.

Speakers include Ray Maki, president of the Wyoming CIO Council; A. M. Peterson, president of the Utah CIO Council; James Morgan, CIO regional director in Utah and Wyoming; John Sherwood, secretary-treasurer of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers and Mrs. Helen Stockman, delegate from the United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

Kill Fake Union At Steel Mill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Armco's employe representation plan has gone the way of all company unions these days. It was declared illegal last week by the National Labor Relations Board and ordered to stop serving as collective bargaining agency for any of the employes of the American Rolling Mill Company of Zanesville, Ohio.

Set up in 1933 at the initiative of Armco as a device to evade the National Labor Relations Act, the company admitted to the NLRB that under the plan all elections have been held on its premises and that it had paid for office supplies, stenographic help for conduct of meetings and dinners for employe representatives.

"Altogether in its initiation and sponsorship," the Board stated, "the plan was a device imposed by the respondent upon the employes for the ostensible purpose of collective bargaining, and was not their own form of self-organization.

"In structure and function the plan was devised and calculated to afford the employes nothing but the semblance of collective bargaining through representatives not of their own unrestricted choosing."

The company union abolished by the Board grew out of a project of "cooperative management" in the form of Armco Advisory Committees set up by the company in 1933, revamped in 1933 after the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act and the opening of an organizing drive by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, then affiliated with the AFL.

WHO'S CWAZY NOW?

Prof. Bill Green Lilts A Lesson In Illogic

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 — Take a lesson in logic, as taught by Professor Bill Green of the American Federation of Labor—

"Green explained today," says the New York Times, "that one touchstone for Representatives seeking re-election will be the vote on the Smith Amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

"Anyone who voted against the amendments will go down in the AFL list as a nominee to be defeated."

But—

The AFL opposes Senate passage of these same Smith Amendments as voted by the House!

But if you voted against this danger to labor, says Professor Green, you ought to be defeated; and if you voted for this menace to labor, of which we don't approve, you ought to be re-elected.

Answer Speed-up By Strike

Columbia, S. C., Oct. 5.—In protest against an increase in the work load, workers in some departments at three plants of the Pacific Mills walked out spontaneously, forcing the company to shut down, the three mills and also the yarn mill which makes the thread for weaving operations in the mills.

The stretchout that precipitated the walkout was put into effect several weeks ago. After trying the new job loads, some of the workers said they were too heavy and walked off the job.

The plants affected are the Olympia, Granby, Richmond and Capital City thread mill. The Textile Workers Union of America declared that no strike had been called, and advised their members to file application for unemployment compensation. About 100 of the 2200 employes of the four Pacific Mills walked out.

9,000 Strike, Win Wage Increases

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 5.—Some 9,000 CIO-organized employes of the Celanese Corp. of America today ended their walkout of more than a week and returned to work under a new contract giving them a $765,000 annual pay boost.

The contract was signed several days ago, but the walkout continued when the firm fired two employes after a dispute with company guards during the course of the contract negotiations. Employes demanded reinstatement of the two men.

Uphold Right To Sue Winchell

New York, Oct. 5.—(FP)—Overruling the contention of lawyers for Walter Winchell and the Hearst-owned New York Mirror that a union cannot sue for libel because of its fluctuating membership, Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck upheld the right of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union to bring a libel suit against Winchell and the paper.

The suit was filed after Winchell wrote an item in his column that members of the union carry mercury and emery dust for sabotage purposes.

4,000 Picket Bethlehem Shipyard

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—Picketing of the huge Bethlehem Sparrows Point shipyard here went on a 24-hour basis this week as 4,000 striking members of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers determined to wrest badly-needed wage increases and union recognition from the powerful open-shop corporation.

All seven entrances to the plant were patrolled by the strikers. Strike leaders derided efforts of the Bethlehem propaganda mill to convince the public that the strikers' ranks were being broken by scabs.

President John Green and Secretary-Treasurer Philip Van Gelder have been helping to direct the big walkout, together with Powers Hapgood, veteran CIO organizer.

STEEL MEN HELP

Members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at the Sparrows Point steel plant, which is not on strike, are lending picket line assistance to the shipyard workers, according to Brandon Sexton, SWOC organizer.

Dissatisfied with coverage of the strike in the local daily press, the union was making plans for radio reports on their activities.

CIO Demands U. S. Enforce 'Fair-Buying' Policy At Once

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 4.—CIO leaders attending the special sessions of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee here described the new U. S. policy on government contracts as an initial result of their three-year campaign, and made immediate plans to secure completely effective enforcement of that policy.

The CIO, led by Pres. John L. Lewis, has demanded an Executive Order from the President which would bar all government purchasing contracts from firms which violate federal labor laws.

This week the National Defense Advisory Commission, through Sidney Hillman, announced a policy along these general lines, but with many points concerning its application still remaining to be clarified. One step in this direction came in the form of an "informal" opinion from Atty.-Gen. Robert Jackson ruling that firms which violate the Wagner Act should be considered unfair from the time when a Natl. Labor Relations Board decision is rendered against them.

At the SWOC meeting here, Pres. Lewis and SWOC Chairman Philip Murray asserted that the CIO unions' campaign had brought the government's action. Both, however, listed three demands which must be met before the new policy can in any way be considered effective:

1. The government must make observance of the labor laws an absolute condition for corporations to get the federal buying orders.

The CIO insists that the new policy must be more than a mere "guide" for the government purchasing agencies; it must be an absolute barrier to keep U. S. orders away from unfair firms.

2. The policy must apply to all government buying, rather than to just the Army and Navy Department procurement divisions.

3. It must apply to all government contracts, whether future or past.

$$ FOR BETHLEHEM

Since the Defense Commission first laid down its general purchasing policy late in August concerning labor law observance by manufacturers of materials for government use, the Bethlehem Steel Corp.—one of the worst violators of labor statutes—has received no less than $625,000,000 in U. S. orders.

At a press conference here, Pres. Lewis asserted it to be a matter of prime importance that the President issue an Executive Order covering these principles, or that the various government agencies formally include in all contracts the labor law observance clauses.

Pointing out that the question is of concern to "the public confidence," Lewis said Bethlehem has been particularly "flagrant" in its lack of concern about federal legislation. It would be a "paradox," he added, if some concerns were forced to obey these laws in fulfilling the contracts while others were permitted to ignore them. To cover this situation, he urged that the fair-labor clauses be made retroactive and inserted in recently-awarded contracts.

Foundry Workers Get Pay Raise

Minneapolis, Oct. 5 — (FP) — Wage increases of 2½ to 4c an hour and vacations with pay were won by 350 employes of 9 Minneapolis foundries in a nine-week strike. The walkout was led by locals of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

The foundries had held out in a bloc. They were generally assumed to be supported by the local anti-labor Citizens Alliance.

Steel Union Denounces Bethlehem

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

Pittsburgh, Oct. 5.—Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, charged that Bethlehem Steel Corporation is using a recent order issued under the Walsh Healey Act providing for minimum wage rates on Government contracts, as a "scheme of wage-cutting instead of wage raising."

"I make the charge that Bethlehem Steel is resorting to trickery to evade the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on the matter of paying just wages," he declared.

'SAME PATTERN'

Speaking at a conference of approximately 100 SWOC officials from all over the nation, Mr. Murray charged that the "same pattern" used by Bethlehem in the World War—and condemned by the National War Labor Board and Federal Courts—again governs that corporation's conduct in the present emergency.

He cited six parallel instances of World War days and of the present time which acounts for the "unrest then and today."

"How long these conditions will be permitted to continue is what we are here to determine," Mr. Murray said. "What steps we shall take in this serious situation will be developed during the course of this conference. But we do know that we intend to do everything possible to protect the employes of this corporation."

Construction Union Sweeps First Big Poll

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Workers of nine paving companies in the Nation's capital with contracts covering 90 per cent of the highway construction in the District of Columbia voted nearly three to one to be represented by the CIO's United Construction Workers Organizing Committee in an NLRB election held here.

The Labor Board poll, which is regarded as a major victory for the CIO construction union in Washington, followed several weeks of organizing marked by a series of enthusiastic rallies. On the eve of the election, Chairman A. D. Lewis was given an ovation after a speech in which he told of gains made by the union throughout the country.

IN ONE UNIT

The vote was 471 to 185 in favor of UCWOC Local 30, with 23 ballots challenged. The AFL withdrew from the contest some days before the election when it became evident there was no sentiment for craft unions. Employes of all nine firms voted as a unit and will be covered by one UCWOC contract.

With more than 1,000 workers in the highway construction industry in Washington, the election victory will make Local 30 one of the nation's most substantial UCWOC locals.

The firms whose workers took part in the election are: Corson & Gruman, Wilmoth Paving Co., McGuire & Rolfe, Donaldson Paving Co., W. F. Brenizer, E. B. Donaldson & Brother, C. S. Faller, Brenizer Trucking Co., and Union Paving Co.

STOP, THIEF

War Profits

When it is a matter of conscripting human beings and disciplining labor, Congress can act swiftly and sweepingly. After all, it is only dealing with human rights and with the lives and daily welfare of millions of plain Americans.

But when it approaches the sacred portals of property rights and the profits of the powerful few, ah then the wise men of Capitol Hill falter and fret. Moderation and caution become the watchword. Plain John Smith can be pushed around a bit, but not such majestic entities as Coca Cola Co. and Bethlehem Steel.

The so-called excess profits tax legislation just passed does not raise any appreciable amount of money for defense. It will realize only two or three hundred million, according to reliable estimates. It does not prevent excessive profits being made by war profiteers.

Under the law, companies which have been making huge profits in the past four years will be allowed to continue them on war business without additional taxation except on profits above this level. Meanwhile new and small businesses, which have not done so well, will be discriminated against.

"The small amount of revenue produced by the legislation will be paid by corporations least able to pay," Senator LaFollette pointed out, "while those which will reap fantastic profits will escape or be taxed very little."

Swarms of big business tax lobbyists conducted a regular "Be-Kind-to-Profiteers" Week on Capitol Hill to produce the present tax bill. Add to it the allowance of a five-year amortization of new defense plants and the removal of the previous 8 per cent profit limitation in the Vinson-Trammell bill, and you will see that Congress was kind indeed.

Meanwhile the CIO still thinks that war profiteering should be checked; that taxation should fall most heavily on those who can most afford to pay; and that while there is so much talk of "sacrifices" for national defense, big business should do its share.

CompanyUnionPolitics

The deceptions of company unionism had to be exposed and overcome before a genuine labor movement could gain strength in America's great industries.

Among these deceptions was the propaganda that all blessings flowed to the workers from benevolent and paternal corporations who rejoiced in raising wages and improving conditions out of the goodness of their hearts.

The workers came to realize from experience that the better organized they were, the more "benevolent" were their employers in these regards; and that there was a direct relation between the improvements they secured and the pressure they themselves exerted.

But in politics there is still too much company union thinking in labor ranks. The delusion is still widespread that benevolent politicians shower blessings on labor out of the goodness of their hearts.

Actually, experience will show that such blessings as labor has obtained were secured from the politicians by labor's organized strength; and that politicians are benevolent to labor in proportion to the pressure that labor can exert upon them and to their dependence on labor support.

When all of labor advances beyond the servile company-union way of thinking—when it realizes that politicians are the beneficiaries of labor rather than its benefactors, and acts accordingly—it will be surprised to see how much more benevolent politicians can become.

It is ironical that Bethlehem, birthplace of the Prince of Peace, should be the name chosen by a steel corporation which rejects the ways of industrial peace through collective bargaining, and is today the leading instigator of industrial warfare.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE Bethlehem Steel Corp. has grown too big for its britches.

There is a certain loutish type of youth who gets delusions of grandeur. He starts out by bullying some of the small fry of the neighborhood, as a rule.

That makes him feel very big and strong, and he pushes further afield. He becomes a big-shot, in his own estimation, and an insufferable pain in the neck, in everyone else's. He has "grown too big for his britches," people say.

Fortunately, this awkward period seldom lasts very long. When our young big-shot has trodden on enough people's corns, they will gang up to put him in his place; or he may make the mistake of tangling with a slightly bigger shot, with a somewhat harder fist.

Finally, if his activities become too anti-social, he runs afoul of something bigger still, the law. And when the cop's hand descends on his shoulder, the youthful big-shot usually shrivels to his natural size.

But the Bethlehem Steel Corp. is so big, in its own estimation, that it thinks it can bully a hundred thousand employes, break every law in sight, disrupt defense and tell the United States to go to hell.

Spared Rod, Spoilt Child

Over-indulgent or negligent parents are often to blame for cases like the above. A timely visit to the woodshed can sometimes avert an untimely visit to jail later on.

But the Bethlehem Steel Corp. has been allowed to bully and exploit its workers, to deny them their union rights, and to break the Walsh-Healey and Wagner laws, without so much as a slap on the wrist.

It has sat down on the job of defense production, refusing to risk a cent until guaranteed huge profits and government-financed plant expansion.

But instead of disciplining and reforming this arrogant law-breaking corporation, an over-indulgent Uncle Sam has unconditionally dumped in its lap a billion dollars worth of its choicest defense contracts.

Small wonder then that Bethlehem's arrogance has become increasingly insufferable. It has resulted in a spreading revolt among Bethlehem employes, and the general demand is growing that the administration crack down on this company in the interests of law observance, of national defense, of labor's rights and of plain ordinary fairness and decency.

Many Grievances

Four thousand Bethlehem shipyard workers have gone on strike at Sparrow's Point, Md. Their grievances are similar to those which have caused or are threatening strikes of Bethlehem steel workers at Lackawanna, N. Y., Johnstown and Bethlehem, Pa., and Alameda, Calif.

Chairman Philip Murray of the CIO steel union, has warned National Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman that unless steps are taken to make Bethlehem conform to the policies of labor law observance laid down in various Commission statements, "stoppages of work are bound to occur with increasing frequency in plants and mills of this company."

Instead of the flat minimum of 62½ cents an hour required by the Walsh-Healey law and paid by other steel companies, Bethlehem pays a minimum as low as 41 cents. It assumes to make up the difference by a mysterious bonus and incentive system, under which a worker never knows how much he is earning, and which is used to rawhide and speed up the workers and to eliminate all who cannot keep up a killing production pace.

Skilled labor is also paid at a far lower basic rate than in other shipyard or steel plants.

The CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers has functioned as the workers' representative at Bethlehem's Fore River, Boston and Sparrow's Point yards. Yet the company has refused to engage in any genuine collective bargaining, and has gone through only the most perfunctory motions.

Similarly Bethlehem has refused to obey numerous Labor Board orders requiring it to cease its many anti-union policies at its steel plants.

Preaching and Practice

On Aug. 31 the National Defense Advisory Commission adopted a statement of policy to the effect that defense contract work should comply with the Labor Relations Act and other labor laws. On Sept. 6, the Commission reinforced this statement with certain principles along the same lines, which were shortly after approved by the President and forwarded to Congress.

Yet on Sept. 9, Bethlehem, the most notorious violator of these principles, was awarded additional defense contracts for destroyers, cruisers and aircraft carriers to an amount of $625,000,000.

"Does Bethlehem dictate to the United States? Or will the U. S. dictate to Bethlehem?" read a shipyard striker's placard waved before President Roosevelt on his recent visit to Baltimore.

The employes of Bethlehem, the whole CIO and millions of other Americans as well, who are concerned with Bethlehem's lawless disruption of national defense, want an answer to that question and want it soon.

LABOR AND THE LAW

Labor Representation On Draft Boards

By LEE PRESSMAN,
CIO General Counsel

The CIO has vigorously contended that in the administration of our government there be adequate representation for labor. This policy assumes particular importance in the operation of the Conscription Law.

Under the regulations which have been issued for the administration of this statute, special provision has been made for labor representation. It is important that the affiliated organizations of the CIO be fully informed of the specific bodies on which labor is entitled to representation and their functions.

The Local Boards

Local boards are being established in communities throughout the country to determine the eligibility, exemption or deferment of those who will have to register. These local boards will consist of three or more members. A local board will cover an area having a population of about 30,000 with at least one separate board in each county.

Boards of appeals are to be established with each having jurisdiction over no more than 70,000 registrants. The boards of appeals will consist of five members. The Regulations issued by the President specifically provide that the five shall be chosen as follows: One from labor, one from industry, one physician, one lawyer, and, where applicable, one from agriculture.

The members of the local boards and boards of appeals are to be appointed by the President upon the recommendation of the Governor of each State. The personnel of these boards must be male citizens of the United States who are not members of the land or naval forces. They must also be at least 36 years of age.

The local boards will have the initial task of classifying each person who registers. The classification will determine whether the person is immediately available for induction into the service or whether he is to be placed in one of the deferred categories for any one of the reasons specified in the law. The board of appeal will have jurisdiction to review any decision concerning the qualification of a registrant by any local board and to affirm, modify or reverse the decision. The decision of the board of appeals will be final unless modified or reversed by the President.

Job Classification

One of the most important problems that will arise in connection with the administration of the law will involve consideration of the type of work being performed by the individual registrant to determine whether in the national interest such person should be retained in his private job or be inducted into the armed forces for training.

To facilitate this problem an officer of the Army or Navy will be assigned to each State for the purpose of furnishing information to the local boards and boards of appeals as to the vital occupations from the standpoint of national defense. This officer will be known as the State Advisor. Assisting him will be one or more representatives of labor and an equal number of representatives of industry, and, where applicable, one or more representatives of agriculture to be designated for each board of appeals area. These advisory representatives are to be chosen by the Governor of each State.

Three Key Spots

In other words, there are three important places where labor is entitled to and should insist upon representation: (a) the Local Boards; (b) the Boards of Appeals; and (c) the Advisory Representatives to the Army Advisor in each State relating to the problem of occupational classification.

The CIO organizations in each state, through the State Councils and International Unions, should communicate with the Governors of the several States to obtain proper representation on these administrative bodies for the CIO. Where it is felt that the CIO has not received such adequate representation, the matter should be brought to the attention of the National Office of the CIO. It should be borne in mind that the appointments to these boards are the appointments of the President and that the Governors of the several States merely make recommendations to the President.

Labor, in demanding representation in the administration of the Draft Law, is not seeking any special treatment or favors. The enemies of labor may seek to utilize the Draft Law in order to discriminate against members of labor unions, destroy existing labor standards in industry, or restrict the civil rights of the people. Labor representation upon the administrative bodies will protect the workers against such misuse of the Draft Law. In addition, labor representatves will be more keenly sensitive to the hardships which are inherent in the situation and could aid in the adoption of measures which would tend to avoid the imposition upon the people of unnecessary burdens.

The confidence of the workers is essential to a fair and effective administration of the Conscription Act. This can be accomplished through adequate labor representation.

Churchmen To Hear Lewis Oct. 14

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 5 —CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will address a meeting of delegates assembled here on October 14 for the general convention of the nation's Episcopal Church.

The gathering at which Lewis will appear is sponsored by the Church League for Industrial Democracy, which holds a series of meetings and discussion groups in connection with the conventions of the church.

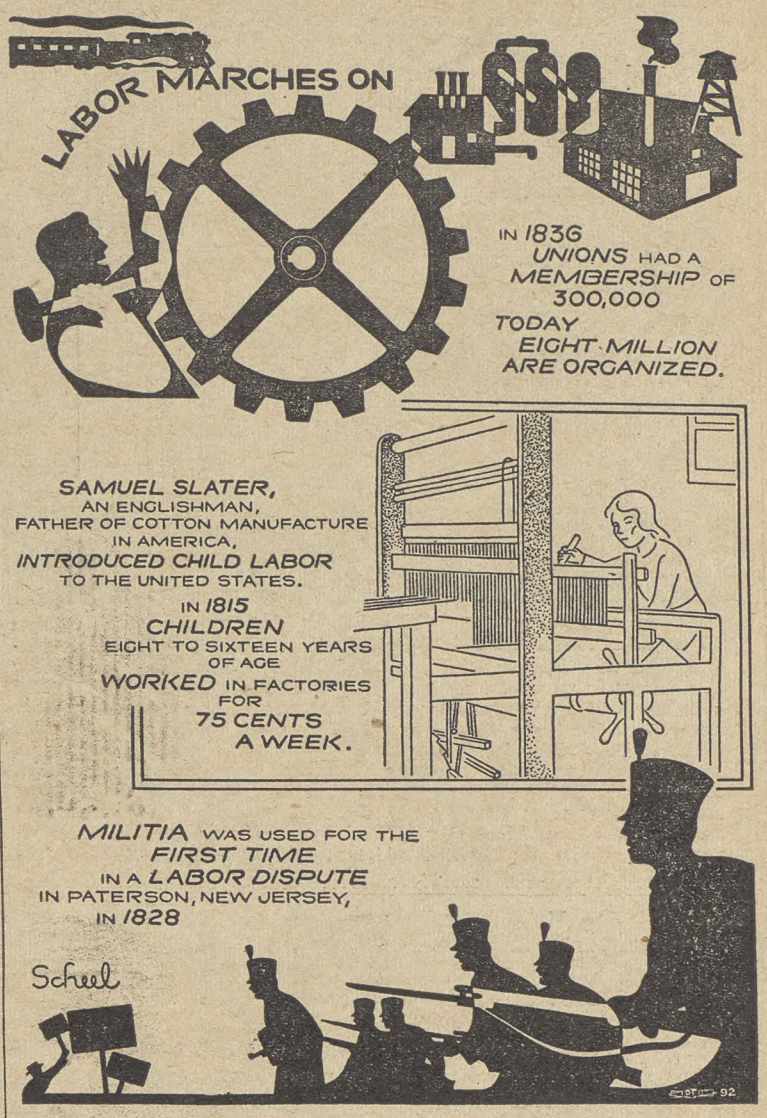
His address will be heard at 12:30 P. M. at the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium. The CIO leader is expected to discuss the relationship of labor and public policy.

Ask Draft Boards Seat Unionists

New York, Oct. 5 — (FP) —Full labor representation on all draft boards and conscription of all industries which refuse to fill government orders essential to national defense were demanded by the executive council of the Textil Workers Union, CIO, in a resolution adopted at its meeting here.

The parley was attended by Sidney Hillman, labor member of the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission and chairman of the TWU's executive council.

Rap Draft Appointees In Michigan



Detroit, Oct. 5 — Announcement of draft board appointments by Michigan's aged Republican Gov. Dickinson brought quick protests from labor groups throughout the state.

Major complaint was against the naming of one I. T. Becker to sit on a draft board. Becker has been figured as a herder of strikebreakers in Michigan labor disputes.

The appointee is linked with the so-called American Labor League, a company union outfit, and was instrumental in getting American Legion members to serve as scabs and strikebreakers.

In a wire to Pres. Roosevelt, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers pointed out that "the vast majority of those to be drafted for military training and service will come from labor. Under these circumstances, the exclusion of labor men from the draft boards is unjust and most unfortunate."

Strike Rights Threatened By New Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — Quick action by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana today had at least temporarily averted passage of a bill directly threatening labor's right to strike.

The bill is S. 4297, ostensibly aimed at punishing individuals guilty of wilful injury of destruction of national defense ma-terials, premises or materials. As these terms are defined in the bill, they would extend to every single industrial transportation or public utility enterprise in the country.

LEWIS SENT PROTEST

In a letter sent last week to Senator Minton of Indiana, CIO President John L. Lewis pointed to potential dangers to striking workers in the bill, and asked for an amendment specifically protecting labor's rights during strike situations.

The bill, minus that amendment, passed the Senate via the quick unanimous consent route this week, and seemed headed for a White House signature when Senator Wheeler sought and obtained reconsideration of the measure.

Senator Minton then inserted the amendment suggested by Pres. Lewis, and the bill now awaits further action in the Senate.

FEARS JUSTIFIED

That labor's fear about the statute is justified was confirmed during the debate on the bill.

Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, Republican, charged that "the act of striking itself, under some conditions, might result in the destruction of very valuable war material of the United States. . ."

The Ohio Senator suggested that if "a gun were in process of manufacture, and the effect of striking at a particular moment. . .might result in the destruction of the gun, because the proper time for cooling would not be afforded," such a strike should be considered a violation of the law.

HEAVY SENTENCES

Should the bill pass without the Minton amendment, strikers would be subject to possible five year prison sentences and $10,000 fines.

With the bill covering all phases of national defense work, almost any anti-union employer could find at least one piece of material allegedly "damaged" because of a strike.

The bill, therefore, would become a prize instrument in the hands of industrial tories anxious to "keep labor in its place," regardless how slight the damage to property might be.

In addition, under the Federal conspiracy act, two or more persons who are proven to have conspired to cause such an injury would be penalized under the conspiracy statutes.

CIO leaders called for all affiliated unions to write and wire their Senators at once demanding inclusion of the Minton labor protection amendment in S.4297.

CIO REPLIES TO KNUDSEN:

'Outlook' Denies Shortage Of Skilled Workers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5. — The CIO Economic Outlook, in its September issue released today, disputes recent statements of National Defense Advisory Commissioner William S. Knudsen that the nation faces a "tight squeeze on skilled labor."

"There have been yet adduced no facts which would justify such a presumption," the Outlook declares.

"The Outlook still believes that, with normal affective training programs operated cooperatively by labor, industry and government, all industrial needs can be met. This view is confirmed by reports from those concerned with the National Defense Training Division, who say that industrial managers report almost unanimously that they can with proper effort secure adequate labor supply for all projected needs."

The Outlook found no substantial reason to revise its estimate of last June that "no more than 2½ million additional workers will be employed in industry as a result of national defense expenditures."

"The conscription of 900,000 men and the calling of 100,000 National Guardsmen will withdraw that number from jobs or from the list of the unemployed," the Economic Outlook added.

"There will be provided, therefore, 'employment', in large part military, for some 3½ million additional workers."

JOBLESS FIGURE

Unemployment during the month of July, the Economic Outlook estimated, stood at 10,033,000, a decline of 1.4% from June.

"A large part of the reduction in unemployment was due to the fact that approximately 42,000 men joined the Army and Navy in this period," the publication pointed out. "The August figure will probably show only a slight decrease in unemployment. It is usual for unemployment to drop about 100,000 between July and August."

Speculating on future employment trends developing out of the national defense activity, the CIO publication expressed doubt that government spending will approach the $600,000,000 monthly figure estimated by the Treasury Department.

"This position," it said, "is based upon the fact that the big contracts for airplanes and airplane motors, machine guns and other ordnance must await considerable and extensive plant expansion before the contracts can be filled. . . Other large contracts, as for example those to the automobile companies for motors, machine guns and so on, would be subject to the same kind of delay. This is particularly true of aircraft companies which have extensive backlogs of orders."

PRODUCTIVITY RISING

The publication also called attention to the fact that most government estimates on increased employment from national defense "have not taken into account the rapid increase of productivity per worker which will take place under an expanding program . . .

"The United Rubber Workers Union has just calculated some of the results of technological changes in the various divisions of the rubber industry.

"In the tire and tube factories the value added by manufacturing per worker has increased 30% between 1937 and 1939, and the total value of the product per worker has increased 18% in the two years, while the wages paid per worker has increased only 8% in the same period. The number of tires per worker increased 25%. Labor costs per unit of output decreased 13½%."

The Economic Outlook noted that prices have been rising steadily in the past 2½ months. Wholesale meat, livestock and poultry prices have risen 10% during that period, and "with the prospect of large orders for the building of temporary buildings to house the conscript army, the price of lumber has risen nearly 9% in the last six weeks."

The Outlook quoted figures prepared by the Heller Committee for Research in Social Economics at the University of California, which showed "minimum health and decency" standards could be maintained for a family of five only at an annual income of $2,184.25.

"Actually," the Economic Outlook observed, "86% of our entire population had average incomes of less than the minimum budget for a wage owner's family estimated by the Heller Committee as necessary for 'health and decency'."

Murray, Green Ask U. S. Action

government officials here last week and demanded government action against the company, which flouts the Wagner Act while it feeds on U. S. purchasing contracts.

A delegation led by Pres. John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers visited Admiral Emory S. Land of the U. S. Maritime Commission and Sidney Hillman of the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission.

PROFITEERS' SITDOWN

"We feel it's about high time the government stepped into this issue," Green asserted. "Business has gone on a sitdown strike for super-profits, and the chief sitdowner is Bethlehem Steel Co.

"We want to know whether Pres. Roosevelt and the Defense Commission are bigger than Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel. Grace made a nice nest egg in the last war, and he's doing all right in this one."

MURRAY REVEALS PLANS

The shipyard union leader made his challenge during the course of a press conference in which Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee announced the SWOC meeting at Pittsburgh Oct. 3-4 to "study every single, solitary phase of the Bethlehem Steel situation."

Murray said the SWOC, the shipyard union and the CIO as a whole stand pat on their demand for a White House Executive Order barring all government contracts to corporate violators of federal labor laws.

"The situation at the shipyards at Bethlehem's Sparrow Point shipyards is but one of a series of similar threats transpiring at the properties of this corporation over a period of months.

MANY GRIEVANCES

"Grievances of the shipyard workers have caused the present strike, occasioned first by the corporation's refusal to carry out the orders of the Walsh-Healey board of the Labor Dept., and later of the U. S. Supreme Court, in establishing a 62½c minimum in the steel industry.

"Secondly, it was caused by the obvious unwillingness of Bethlehem Steel Co. to negotiate with the officers and other duly accredited representatives of the shipyard union.

"Similar situations have arised at the Lackawanna properties, the Cambria plant at Johnstown and also at Bethlehem, Pa."

Steel Union Flays Bethlehem

Lewis of the CIO, pledged to the steel union that action decided upon by the SWOC in the Bethlehem situation would receive the "full influence of the CIO" in an attempt to "procure a proper adjustment of the controversy which affects so many workers, and the national defense program."

Mr. Lewis sat in on the sessions and congratulated the SWOC representatives for the tremendous job accomplished in transforming open shop citadels of the steel industry into thriving union territories.

"The organization of the workers in the steel industry, the establishment of the right to organize and bargain collectively, has been one of the greatest organizing jobs ever done in the history of the modern labor movement," he said.

"Without the success of the union in the steel industry in 1936 and 1937, the CIO, as it exists today, would not have been possible."

LEADERS PRESENT

Present at the conference were Van A. Bittner, SWOC director in Chicago; Clinton S. Golden, SWOC director in Pittsburgh; David J. McDonald, SWOC secretary-treasurer; William Mitch, SWOC director in Birmingham; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, and Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel.

While the purpose of the meeting was to check up on the union campaign in the entire steel industry, Mr. Murray said the most serious problem confronting it is the Bethlehem situation.

The SWOC leader said:

"We can draw but one conclusion about the situation in Bethlehem mills and shipyards today. If this Government permits this corporation to get away with it again, then Bethlehem's insistence of remaining above the law and stronger than the Government must be admitted by this very Government itself."

CIO Cannery Union Moves

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—Headquarters of the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers have been moved to the Engineering Building, 205 W. Wacker Drive, Chicago, Ill.

Indiana Unions Back Strikers, Hit Finks' Violence

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 5. — Joint efforts to win an 8-week strike at the Republic Creosoting Co. were planned by representatives of some 47,000 CIO members who assembled at a mass meeting here.

The session was followed by a midnight automobile parade around the barricaded 88 acres, which brought company searchlights into play, sweeping back and forth over the long lines of automobiles.

A demand was to be served upon Gov. Clifford M. Townsend that he close the plant by executive action in order to halt repeated acts of violence against the pickets. Law violations include running pickets down with automobiles, showering them with bricks and almost nightly barrages of bullets.

Decision upon an injunction suit brought by the company against the local of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, was expected shortly.

Deputy sheriffs dragged two scabs from the plant during the auto demonstration, charging them with drawing deadly weapons. Pickets complained that 20 scabs, waving knives and revolvers, charged through the gates from a bus which swung to a sudden stop.

Dairy Union Gets Pact

Evansville, Ind.—The cream of the crop, in this case a collective bargaining agreement, is the recent contract signed between United Dairy Workers Local 333, and the Standard Dairy in Evansville, Indiana.

Management guarantees high minimum wages for the various classifications of employment, agrees to the closed shop and check-off, one week's vacation with pay, arbitration of disputes, and other conditions of work. The union put its John Hancock on the dotted line to approve disciplinary action against any of its members who are found guilty of drunkenness, dishonesty or incompetence, and "agrees at all times to further the interests of its employer."

Another clause in the agreement says union members shall not be required to deliver goods in case of lockout or strike of any union.

CORRECTION. The Saturday Evening Post advertisement headed "What Does an American Look Like?" appearing in this newspaper Wednesday, September 11, referred to an article about Westbrook Pegler entitled "He's Against," by Jack Alexander.

In part the advertisement stated "watch a columnist whip away at a CIO leader until justice officials nab him on charges of forgery and larceny." The labor leader so described was not a member of the CIO, and we are glad publicly to correct this error.

APOLOGY: Saturday Evening Post advertising copy writers slipped up last month, made accusations against a CIO leader and had to admit they were incorrect. This is the first time on recent record that the weekly magazine has made an apology to a labor union, despite numerous inaccuracies that have appeared in its columns.

CIO Upheld In Republic Wage Case

Philadelphia, Oct. 5 — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee won another battle in its long fight to gain justice for workers in the 1937 Republic Steel Co. when the U. S. circuit court here ruled that reinstated workers must be given their 1940 vacations on the basis of their complete employment, including the period in which they were illegally dismissed by the company.

The corporation's lawyers had argued that the years of dismissal should not be considered in computing the length of vacation in accordance with the company's sliding vacation scale.

Court Halts Tory Fight On Union Shop

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Attempts made by a small group of anti-union elements to embarrass the Transport Workers Union and get the "union shop" clause in the contract with the Board of Transportation declared illegal failed this week when Supreme Court Justice Aron Steuer dismissed the case.

The action was started in the name of Edward Maguire, station agent on the IRT division of the New York City Transit System, who resigned from the CIO transport union and then claimed that the Board of Transportation refused to tell him whether or not he would be fired under the clause in the contract requiring all employes to belong to the union. Justice Steuer was asked to make a declaratory judgment in the case.

In dismissing the suit, the Justice found that the facts presented failed to warrant a declaratory judgment.

Dairymen Ask Help Of Unions

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 5. — (FP) — Facing a strike in New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont, the Dairy Farmers Union (unaffiliated) is appealing to labor unions for moral support in the current struggle against the milk trust.

In 1930, with the help of unions and organized consumers, the farmers won a nine day strike. Since then the union has grown in membership and influence. The DFU is not asking now for financial help from labor unions, but it is urging that they put pressure on public officials and others to see that the farmers get a fair break if a strike is called.

In bespeaking the support of organizer labor, the DFU called attention to anti-labor propaganda which has been methodically spread among farmers by the milk trust and its stooges.

The union cited an article in a recent issue of American Agriculturalist, a Frank E. Gannett publication, and full page ads of the Dairymen's League and the Metropolitan Milk Producers Bargaining Agency, both of which have fought the dealers' fight in trying to keep farmers from unionizing.

Attack on NLRB Takes New Tack

Washington, Oct. 5.—Unable after months of effort to show the National Labor Relations Board as inefficient or lacking capability, Tory foes of the Wagner Act this week turned to open red-baiting.

Drafted to lead the new barrage against the NLRB was Ralph Emerson, former legislative agent for the National Maritime Union who was expelled from that organization when he was shown to be associated with a labor spy group which was headed by Jerome King, former secretary of the NMU.

300 Delegates Meet At Lumber Parley

ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 5. — More than 300 delegates representing a membership greatly increased during the past year are expected to attend the fourth annual convention of the International Woodworkers of America which opens here Monday.

International Secretary-Treasurer B. J. McCarty, praised the local unions for their promptness in handling the preliminary work leading up to the convention.

Convention headquarters at the Weir Theater will be open tomorrow, McCarty said, to be of assistance to arriving delegates, fraternal representatives and visitors. A public mass meeting will be held one of the evenings during the three days the convention meets and a dance will be given the night of October 9.

Labor Board Report Again Nails Girdler

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 5.—Another unpleasant memory of the 1937 Little Steel strike came back today to haunt Tom Girdler as a National Labor Relations Board trial examiner blamed the Republic Steel Corp. for the walkout at its local plant and advised the reinstatement of 369 workers with back pay.

"The record in the present proceeding leaves no doubt that the respondent" was to blame for the strike, the report said. hearings in this city.

"It is sufficient to note that not only was the strike called for the plants generally, but many of the unfair labor practices which have been reviewed here, such as for example employer-dominated labor organizations and distribution of anti-union literature, were common to other plants of the respondent; and indeed were a part of a centrally directed campaign of opposition to the organization drive of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee throughout the respondent's plants."

BLAME COMPANY

Reviewing a series of attacks on union men by company police, the report found Republic "responsible for these assaults."

Even if the company "did not specifically direct its police to commit assaults upon union organizers, it is conceded that the respondent, in giving such instructions to policemen, gave them complete license to commit assaults and that the assaults were considered by the policemen to be in their line of duty. . . ."

Youth Group, Magazine Announce Contest

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—A nationwide camera contest open to young men and women under 26 has been announced by the American Youth Congress. The contest, called "Youth in Focus" is being conducted in cooperation with Friday Magazine.

Pictures submitted will be judged by Margaret Bourke-White, internationally famous photographer; Rockwell Kent, president of the United American Artists, Local 60 of the CIO's United Office & Professional Workers; Joris Ivens, president of the Association of Documentary Film Producers; Roy Stryker, Farm Security Administration; Daniel Gillmor, publisher of Friday Magazine, and Garson Kanin, producer-director of RKO pictures.

PICTURES OF YOUNGSTERS

Technical ability will be incidental in judging the pictures, the "Youth in Focus" announcement states. Contestants should seek to "capture young people doing interesting things in interesting ways." Pictures are wanted of "youngsters on pogo sticks as well as on parade, looking for trouble as well as jobs, playing hookey as well as politics."

Prizes will total more than $1,500 with a top prize of $500 in cash, and Friday will publish a full page of pictures in each issue.

Details and entry blanks can be obtained from Youth In Focus, 1775 Broadway, New York City. An entry fee of ten cents for the first picture and five cents for each succeeding print will be charged to meet the expense of the contest.

AFL CRIME NEWS:

Ex-Highway Robber Gets Job With AFL

Providence, R. I., Oct. 5 — Providence police have arrested Simon 'Big Firpo' Abramson and two other organizers for the AFL jewelry workers union following complaints by local hotel owners that the trio skipped out owing sizable bills.

Investigation showed that Abramson had served a 2½ year term in the Oklahoma state penitentiary for highway robbery and had been arrested in New York on charges of felonious assault.

When the men first came to this city, Joseph Mayor, state CIO director declared, "they approached me for jobs, but I refused to have anything to do with them." The trio then hooked up with the AFL.

Canadian Steel Workers Vote CIO, 20-1

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 5.—By a 20 to 1 majority, members of the Algoma Steel Workers Union in Sault Ste. Marie voted this week to join the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Previously affiliated to the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, the union numbers over 2,000 members.

SWOC regional officers here described the actions as one of the most important events in SWOC history in Canada. They indicated that very shortly the new SWOC local will count 3,600 members.

The Algoma Steel Workers union is composed of workers employed by the Algoma Steel Corporation, one of western Ontario's largest steel producers. The vote will also give impetus to workers in two fabricating plants located in Sault and it is expected that they will join shortly. They are now organized in separate locals.

Gauging the enthusiasm of the workers for SWOC is the fact that over 500 applications for membership were received during the period that the vote was being conducted.

The vote count, which revealed the overwhelming majority for SWOC, was made at a special meeting which was attended by C. H. Millard and Philip Clowes, SWOC officers.

Canadian Union Drive Planned

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 5—Comprising the executive board and one representative elected by each affiliate, the executive council of the Canadian Congress of Labor will meet at the end of this month to discuss ways and means of putting the decisions of the convention which established the congress, into life.

This is the executive council's first meeting since the convention last month formed the central labor body comprising CIO and All-Canadian Congress of Labor unions.

PLAN CAMPAIGN

It is expected that the council will appoint an organizational director to supervise organizing drives under the congress banner throughout the nation's basic industries. Unlike its AFL contemporary, the Trades and Labor Congress, the CCL believes industrial unionism is the only method by which Canadian wage earners can be organized.

It also departs from the AFL practice of merely interesting itself in legislative activity and leaving organization to the workers themselves. The new Congress will undertake a campaign directed centrally so that thousands of hitherto unorganized workers can enter its ranks.

AIRCRAFT CAMPAIGN: Organizers Ed Howard and Carl Copeland bring the message of CIO aircraft unionism, higher wages and job security, to employes of the Fairchild Aircraft Co. at Hagerstown, Md. Similar scene was re-enacted this week at the big Glenn Martin plant near Baltimore.

Hire-and-Fire, Low Pay Aircraft Firms Retard Defense, Says UAW

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5. — Chiseling airplane manufacturers who pay low wages cause high job turnover and inefficiency and thus retard the national defense program, United Auto Workers Union officials charged as they stepped up a drive to organize the Glenn L. Martin Co. plant at Middle River and the Fairchild Aircraft Co. in Hagerstown. Results are encouraging.

Wages at Martin, employing 13,000 workers, average 50 cents an hour, workers say, although the company maintains that is the minimum, while the 900 employes of Fairchild get from 35 to 50 cents, with a few receiving a little extra, UAW officials Lawrence Smith and Carl Copeland and CIO-UAW Organizer Ed Howard said. Organized aircraft plants pay 70 to 75 cents an hour average.

The UAW officials said foremen browbeat workers, seniority and regularity of advancement are lacking and job security is unheard of in the plants, particularly Martin, where workers say an average of 200 employes quit every week. The Company declined to confirm this figure, but officials said they "hardly thought it that high."

Martin workers said the Company has completed no planes since May 19 because of high turnover and a haphazard work schedule. The Company said it has completed "some planes," but declined to name the number.

Urging workers to join the UAW-CIO, organizers told them, "You are building airplanes for national defense. Build a union for your own defense."

CIO ENTRY: Best float and prettiest girl are the claims laid by Local 115 of the Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee for this entry in a civic parade at Charles City, Ia. The girl is Dorothy Behling, and her dad's a union member at the Oliver tractor plant.

Tory 'Study' Hits Labor's Gains

Washington, D. C., Oct. 5.—Destruction of all labor's gains and its right to bargain collectively was the advice of Brookings Institution in a study prepared for the War Department on how to curb rising prices in war time.

To prevent a repetition of the terrific jump in the cost of living which we experienced in the last war, Brookings recommends the Federal government be empowered to cancel wage increases in collective bargaining agreements, suspension of compulsory payment of time and a half for overtime, and slashes in unemployment benefits to "force re-employment."

"All restrictions on production and hours, such as those administered by the Agricultural Adjustment Act and under the Walsh-Healey Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 should be suspended for the duration of the war," the report said.

"If labor is to make any economic contribution to the cost of war," Brookings concludes, "the cost of living must rise more than the wage rates."

CIO circles were unanimous in their disagreement with the Brookings recommendations, which have been disputed by material in the Economic Outlook, monthly survey published by the CIO Unemployment Division, and by government statements.

New York, Oct. 5 — United Photo Employes, Local 415, CIO, will carry the ball for the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the World's Fair Labor Tournament on October 13th.

The photo workers won the Trade Union Athletic Association softball championship, and thereby the right to represent labor in the World's Fair shindig.

They beat Local 16, United Office and Professional Workers, in a tense game ending 3 to 1, to wind up with a percentage of 1.000 for the seven games in the labor circuit.

CIO Wins In Virginia

West Norfolk, Va., Oct. 5—District 50, United Mine Workers, has won sole bargaining rights at the Virginia Smelting Co. here, Ray Thomason, CIO regional director, announced today.

In a recent NLRB election District 50 polled 61 votes, while 47 were cast for no union. Negotiations looking towards a union contract will follow immediately upon formal Labor Board certification, Thomason declared.

Newark CIO Reverses Position

Newark, N. J., Oct. 5 — By a 26-17 vote, the Greater Newark CIO Industrial Union Council today had rescinded a previous endorsement of Pres. Roosevelt, Vice-Presidential candidate Henry Wallace and Charles Edison, Democratic nominee for governor of New Jersey.

Most of the opposition to the Roosevelt third-term endorsement was based on recent Administration policies concerning conscription and the war issue. A number of delegates attacked recent legislative activities which they said endangered labor's rights.

Steel Union Parley Plans Action Against Bethlehem

ILLEGAL: Three years after the Ford Motor Co.'s "service squad" administered this piece of education to CIO auto union organizers, the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals found it illegal. The order, upholding a Labor Board decision against Ford, was hailed by union leaders as a spur to the current organizing campaign against the powerful open shopper. (SEE STORY PAGE SIX)

U. S. Backs Down On Stern Policy For Law Violators

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 — Several hundred CIO steel union representatives were to meet at Bethlehem, Pa., today to consider further action against the labor law violation policies of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., now waxing fat on a continuous flow of multi-million dollar orders from the United States government.

Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee is still awaiting reply to a letter asking Bethlehem for a collective bargaining conference, a procedure scorned for five decades by the nation's second largest steel company.

At a SWOC national special conference in Pittsburgh last week Murray appointed Van A. Bittner, veteran coal, steel and packinghouse union official, to direct the fast-moving "mop-up" organization drive at Bethlehem.

Murray and CIO Pres. John L. Lewis blasted the policy of the U. S. government which permits one agency to dole out huge federal buying contracts to corporations which ignore the government's labor legislation.

A policy supposedly aimed at correcting this situation was thrown for a loss in Washington this week. High government officials, including the Secretaries of War and Navy, proclaimed their intention to hand out contracts as they have done in the past, with labor law observance receiving only minor consideration.

Spokesmen for the reactionary majority on the Smith Committee "investigating" the National Labor Relations Board were pleased by the testimony, and apparently convinced that Wagner Act violators would continue to be allotted government contracts.

To Probe Foreign Ties of Industry

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 — The Senate today had passed a resolution authorizing its Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate business tie-ups of American corporations with German and other foreign firms.

The measure was sponsored by Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who said that the investigation would get going around January 1.

Interferences or obstructions that would hinder this country's national defense will be a prime objective in the committee's investigation.

FIVE ANGLES

Included in the probe will be studies of:

1. Ownership of stock or other control in American corporations by foreign persons, firms or governments.
2. Pooling arrangements affecting national defense between American and foreign firms.
3. International sales of materials usable in "war industries, or war activities or preparations."
4. Financial arrangements with respect to profits, taxes and other matters.
5. Restraint of trade affecting national defense by domestic or foreign groups.

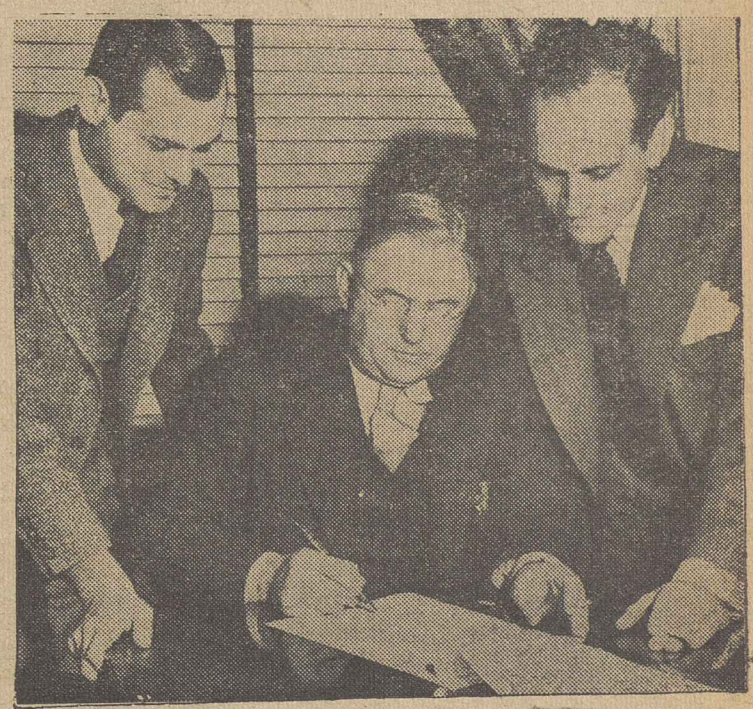
PM Signs With Guild

New York, Oct. 12.—PM, New York's four-month-old liberal tabloid daily, has signed its first contract with the American Newspaper Guild.

The agreement, covering 225 employes of the editorial and commercial departments, provides one of the highest wage schedules in the industry. Rewrite and copy desk men are to receive a minimum of $70 a week under the contract, with other employes receiving corresponding scales.

The pact also provides for the union shop and the five-day, 40-hour week. The agreement was signed by Publisher Ralph Ingersoll and by Nat Einhorn, executive secretary of the New York Newspaper Guild.

Win Strike At Jersey Felt Plant



Newark, N. J., Oct. 12.—A two months' strike at the two plants of the American Hair & Felt Co. here was settled last week with the signing of a contract with Local 163, United Furniture Workers.

Terms of the agreement include a six per cent wage increase setting a higher wage rate than at any of the company's other four plants, and full protection of seniority rights. Rights of employes called for military service are also protected by a clause calling for their re-employment upon their discharge and maintenance of their seniority status.

In another clause the firm agrees to grant a leave of absence to any employe elected as union business agent for a period not exceeding the term of the contract.

TO OPEN HEARINGS

Klamath Falls, Oreg.—Hearings on charges of unfair labor practices filed against the Lamm Lumber Co. will commence Oct. 31, the National Labor Relations Board announced today.

INSURANCE PACT: First CIO contract with a major insurance company was signed this week. Picture shows CIO Organization Director Allan S. Sue Four Meat Packers For $5,200,000 Back Pay

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Civil damage suits under the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act have been filed against four big meat packing companies by the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

Charging violation of wage-hour overtime provisions, the suits seek to recover some $5,200,000 for workers employed by Wilson & Co., Swift & Co., Armour & Co., and G. H. Hammond Co., the latter a subsidiary of Swift.

Under the wage-hour law, employes may bring civil suit against violators for double the amount of wages due them. The union, according to its counsel, estimates that the workers were deprived of about $2,600,000 rightfully due them in wages.

The firms claimed exemption from the law for 14 weeks of employes engaged in "killing and slaughtering" of live stock. The PWOC charges that the exemptions apply only to worker on the killing floors, rather than to all employes of the departments.

Petitions for injunctions which would prohibit the companies from further violation of the law have already been filed by the Wage-Hour Administration. Hearings on these cases are scheduled for next month.

Ohio CIO Convention Oct. 18

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 12.—Several hundred delegates from CIO unions throughout the state are expected to be in Akron Oct. 18-20 for the annual convention of Ohio's influential Industrial Union Council.

With John Owens, council president and head of District 6 of the United Mine Workers, presiding, the sessions will be held at the Mayflower Hotel.

A number of important CIO officials are scheduled to address the convention. They include CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray, Sherman Dalrymple, R. J. Thomas and Emil Rieve, CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood and Leo Krzycki, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Council Secretary-Treasurer Ted Silvey has arranged a full program of events to entertain the delegates, including labor union song recordings and labor movies. Women's auxiliary leaders will hold a special meeting just before the convention gets under way.

CO-OP OIL WELL

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 12.—The first co-op oil well in the world is now in operation in Rooks county, Kansas, and three more are being drilled, the Cooperative League announced this week.

John Hancock Life Signs Pact

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 — The CIO has gained its first union contract with a major insurance company.

Officials of the United Office & Professional Workers and Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, put their signatures to an agreement with the John Hancock Life Co., a billion dollar firm, covering more than 1,000 industrial insurance agents in the firm's 25 offices throughout the New York metropolitan area.

AGREED TO BARGAIN

Unlike the Metropolitan, which has refused to comply with a Labor Board ruling to bargain with Industrial Insurance Agents Local 30 UOPWA, the Hancock Company agreed to negotiate with the union when it was certified by the State Labor Relations Board following Local 30's victory in an election held May 2, in the company's offices in New York, and Westchester, Nassau and Suffolk County, Haywood said.

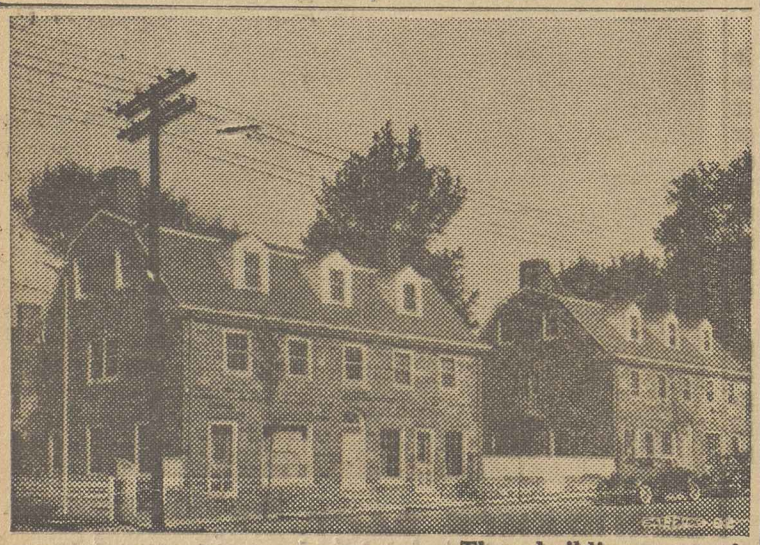
The agreement with the John Hancock Company provides union members with safeguards against unwarranted dismissals and provides orderly settlement of any disputes; terminations through discussion between the company and the union. The major grievance among agents of the major companies has been the lack of job security and one of the most popular slogans of the Union in its organizing drive has been: "We sell security; we want security."

VACATIONS

The company recognizes the Union as sole collective bargaining agency. The agreement also grants two weeks' vacation after one year's employment. Machinery is set up for discussion and settlement of grievances of union members relating to working conditions.

United Office and Professional Workers locals in Boston, Mass., and Hoboken, N. J., have also been successful in Labor Board elections, the former by 324 to 235 votes in a Massachusetts Labor Relations Board poll, and the latter in the first NLRB election in insurance by 21 to 15.

The New York State Board has ordered an election covering the Hancock offices in Buffalo and Niagara Falls. Petitions for elections are pending in other areas and the successful conclusion of this agreement is expected to give impetus to the activities of Local Unions in cities where the UOPWA have organized employes of John Hancock and other companies, including Philadelphia, Detroit, Trenton, N. J., and New Orleans.



"This agreement is another demonstration of the applicability of trade union organization and collective bargaining in the insurance field," declared Pres. Lewis Merrill of the UOPWA. "It is the fruit of four years of organizing effort on the part of employes of major insurance companies."

KNOCKOUT BLOW

Haywood predicted that the pact "should give a knockout blow to resistance to collective bargaining by Metropolitan Life and other insurance companies.

"It is a great step forward. We are planning to press organization in the other firms through the UOPWA."

Besides Haywood and Merrill, the union was represented in the negotiations by Leon Berney, general insurance organizer for Local 30; William Frankfurt, Joan Militian, Fred Smolen, John Steckel and Henry Wald.

CIO-CONSTRUCTED: These buildings, part of the $77,000 Teaneck, N. J. Housing Development, were built by members of Local 76, United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, of Lodi, N. J. There were 10 subcontractors on the job, covering all phases of the building industry.

Frame-Up Blows Up; 'Bomb' Was Firecracker!

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 12—(FP)—The much-advertised "dynamite-throwing" case against striker Floyd Taylor blew up in the face of the embarrassed attorneys for the scab-operated Nebel Hosiery Mill here when the charge was thrown out of court with a severe slap on the wrist for the company.

Taylor was arrested under an ancient "dynamite" statute, but it developed he had only thrown a Fourth of July firecracker to the roof of the building. Some 30 other cases against members of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, also went the same route because of defective warrants.

The AFHW struck the mill more than six months ago in protest against a 20 per cent wage reduction.

Court Decision Nicks Girdler For $350,000

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 12.—Tory-minded newspaper readers, who thought that Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. gained a victory over the CIO in a Philadelphia federal court decision last week, had better stop grinning.

That was the suggestion made by Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee today as he pointed out that the court order will "cost Republic Steel a minimum of $350,000 for the three-year period in vacation pay."

The decision was based on an attempt by the Republic Steel Corp. to avoid payment of vacation wages to workers reinstated in accordance with a Supreme Court-endorsed Labor Board order.

VACATION WAGES

Contrary to the general impression created by newspaper stories out of Philadelphia, Murray noted, the court decision "specifically orders vacation pay for the years 1938, 1939 and 1940."

Records show, he continued, that some 4,000 of the 1937 strikers were reinstated by Republic in 1938; some 5,800 in 1939 and over 6,500 this year.

The court ruling provides that the rehired employes "are entitled to the benefits of Republic's vacation plan for the year in which they are reinstated and all subsequent years," the SWOC chairman declared.

"This Court order will cost Republic a minimum of $350,000 for the three-year period . . . this is certainly a distinct victory for the SWOC."

Store Employes Vote CIO by 3-2

New York, Oct. 12. — Employes of Stern Bros., large New York department store, today had voted overwhelmingly for the CIO Department Store Workers Organizing Committee in a state labor board election.

Some 283 votes were cast for the committee, affiliated with the United Retail & Wholesale Employes of America, while 166 voted against union representation.

The URWEA now holds contracts covering Hearn's, Bloomingdale's, Saks 34th Street, Gimbel's, Norton and certain departments of Macy's.

Rubber Union Drive Zips in Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 12.—Chartering of a United Rubber Workers local at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. plant "sounds the keynote for an intensive organizational drive in Memphis and in the South."

That was the prediction made here today by URW Sec'y-Treas. Frank Grillo, who spoke at the installation ceremony.

The local was organized in spite of threats and violence by company thugs which broke out when URW Organizer George R. Bass first started to unionize the plant. The reign of terror subsided after a nation-wide protest over three successive assaults on Bass by Firestone thugs.

The protests, started by the rubber union and by the Workers Defense League, were directed particularly against the local Democratic machine, which is strongly entrenched in this city under Boss Edward Crump.

THREE INDICTED

As a result of the most serious attack on Bass, which occurred Aug. 29 while he was distributing leaflets in front of the Firestone plant, three men have been indicted on charges of assault to murder. They are Joe Woodall, Oliver O'Guinn and Mark B. King. They were released in $500 bail each.

Workers are now allowed to pass out leaflets unmolested even inside the plant, provided it is not on company time.

Firestone workers in the unorganized Memphis plant are receiving wages 50 per cent lower than those in the Firestone plant at Akron, according to URW officials, where the workers are protected by a union contract.

Win Textile Pact After Long Struggle

Camden, N. J., Oct. 12 — Three years' struggle by the workers of Eavenson & Levering were crowned with success last week when a six-day strike ended with the conclusion of an agreement providing wage increases for 350 workers, a preferential union shop and paid vacations announced by Sol Stetin, manager of the South Jersey Joint Board, Textile Workers Union, CIO.

Under the terms of the contract newly hired workers are required to join the union, and in cases of lay-offs, promotions and re-hiring, preference is to be given to union members. During the strike 40 AFL teamsters and warehousemen refused to work until a settlement was reached.

This is the first contract to be signed in one of three plants in which election victories have been won. Negotiations are now under way for agreements with the Croft Co. and the Millville Mfg. Co. employing about 1,200 workers.

Die Casters Get Area Pact In New York

New York, Oct. 12. — A blanket contract covering four firms in the New York area was announced this week by the National Association of Die Casting Workers.

The agreement, the first blanket pact to be negotiated by the union in the eastern area, was signed with Local 1 by the Advance Pressure Casting Co.; Mt. Vernon Die Casting Corp.; Scandia Tool & Die Co., and the Sterling Die Casting Co.

The contract which runs for two years, calls for the hiring of men through the union, and requires that all workers not belonging to the NADCW shall make application for membership within one month.

Other terms provide for paid vacations, a composite seniority list of the four firms covered, wage adjustments if the cost of living index rises, and return of jobs to men who are conscripted.

FIGHT POLL TAX

Monroe, La. — The Monroe Newspaper Guild Auxiliary has joined in the nationwide campaign for the removal of all poll tax requirements for voting in national elections. The Auxiliary has also been giving valuable aid to the Guild here in its strike against the News-Star and Morning World.

Steel Union Maps Bethlehem Plans; BittnerLeadsDrive

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 12.—Naming Bethlehem Steel Corp. as the "Number One" enemy of organized labor in America, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee has called Van A. Bittner to take charge of a "mop up" drive to organize the 115,000 employes of that company.

While he is also director of the SWOC in the Midwest region, he is president of the United Mine Workers in District 17, and heads the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, Bittner will throw his full energy into the drive on notorious anti-union Bethlehem..

CALL CONFERENCE

Appointment of Bittner to lead the Bethlehem drive indicates the tremendous importance placed on organization of that company by SWOC leaders. He will formally open the new campaign at a conference of Bethlehem local union leaders and SWOC officials to be held Sunday (Oct. 13) in Bethlehem, Pa.

Over 500 men from Bethlehem mills will gather to map the strategy of the drive. They will come from Johnstown, Pottstown, Steelton, Coatesville, Williamsport, Lebanon and Rankin, Pa., Lackawanna, N. Y., and Sparrows Point, Md.

Announcement of Bittner's appointment was made by SWOC Chairman Philip Murray at a nation-wide conference of steel union officials held here recently. While the purpose of the meeting was to discuss the general SWOC picture, Bethlehem Steel was the chief subject of discussion.

Tremendous headway has been made in the last few weeks by the steel union at the giant mills of Bethlehem, following a victory of the SWOC in winning a ruling from the U. S. Government that Bethlehem must boost wage rates to the union level if it expected further government contracts.

MANY WALKOUTS

Attempts by Bethlehem to thwart the order resulted in spontaneous walkouts at mills in Lackawanna, Sparrows Point, Johnstown, and Alameda, Cal., at various times in the last several weeks.

At the Pittsburgh conference reports were given on the SWOC position at the various plants, and the demand of local union leaders for genuine collective bargaining. Chairman Murray called upon Bethlehem to meet with officers of the steel union to "discuss the establishment of orderly industrial relations" in the company's mills.

Purpose of the conference, Murray said, would be to "assure the recognition by the Bethlehem Steel Corp. of the rights of their employes to organize and bargain collectively" and "stabilize industrial relations."

His "suggestion" to Bethlehem Steel was contained in a letter sent to President Eugene G. Grace, authorized by the SWOC staff conference. (See Other Story This Page.)

CIO Sweeps First Poll In Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 12.—By a unanimous vote, the CIO won the first NLRB election ever held in this city, when 21 employes of the Pillsbury Flour Mills voted for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers as bargaining agency.

In a whirlwind campaign conducted by the union during the past six weeks, employes in some 15 food and cotton processing plants have been signed up by UCAPAWA Locals 4 and 19.

Furniture Local Wins 6-WeekStrike

New York, Oct. 12.—A two-year contract with the Royal Wood Products Mfg. Co., Inc., of Brooklyn, manufacturers of radio cabinets was signed this week by Local 76-B, United Furniture Workers, after negotiations lasting six weeks.

Previously the employes had stopped work for 16 weeks, refusing to cross a picket line placed in front of the shop by the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers in protest against a lockout of the workers of the Air King Radio Co. which uses the cabinets of the Royal Wood shop.

The settlement between the union and the firm includes a closed union shop, weekly wage increases of $2 to $2.50 and other union conditions.

PROTECTED

Albany, N. Y.—(FP)—Drugstore soda fountain workers are covered by the state minimum wage law affecting women and minors employed in restaurants, the State Labor Department has ruled.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—From the Smith Committee's witness stand a galaxy of high-priced government talent this week assured the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and other violators of the Wagner Act that they need have no fear of losing juicy U. S. national defense purchasing orders.

When they had finished their verbal blitzkrieg, the much-publicized "policy" of withholding government contracts from labor law violators was in a shambles.

Appearing before the Smith Committee were Atty.-Gen. Robert Jackson; Sec'y of the Navy Knox; Asst. Sec. of War Patterson; Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson of the Bureau of Ships; and Natl. Defense Advisory Commissioner Sidney Hillman.

By the time they finished speaking, the government's buying policy was right back where it was previous to October 1, when Defense Commissioner Hillman first announced the new "policy."

MAJOR POINTS

Summarized, the testimony boiled down to these facts:

1. The War and Navy Departments have no intention of making labor law observance an absolute condition for corporations seeking government contracts.

2. They will consider labor law observance merely as one of a number of factors, most important of which is speed.

3. The National Defense Advisory Commission may suggest labor procedure to the Departments but has no power to enforce it.

4. Secretary Knox and Asst. Sec. Patterson testified that Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman at no time suggested to either the War or Navy Departments that they make labor law observance a "must" for government contractors.

The testimony before the committee was seconded the same evening in New York City by William S. Knudsen, considered the most influential of the Defense Commission members.

JACKSON'S OPINION

At the Smith Committee hearing, Attorney-General Jackson was questioned about the "informal opinion" he sent to Hillman Oct. 2 that a firm is guilty of Wagner Act violation as soon as the National Labor Relations Board has so found it, and that other government agencies should respect the NLRB's ruling unless it is later overruled by a federal circuit court.

Asks Bethlehem to Negotiate

Ask Bethlehem To Meet Union

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 11.—The Bethlehem Steel Corp. today had made no public reply to a request from Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for a conference "for the purpose of discussing the establishment of orderly industrial relations based upon compliance by the company with the laws of the country."

Murray's letter, a four-page document addressed to Eugene Grace, recalled Bethlehem's refusal to comply with a Labor Board order; its long opposition to the Walsh-Healey Act and its subsequent wage-cutting policy; and its refusal to meet with SWOC grievance committees.

"The Bethlehem Steel Corp. now has over a billion dollars of government contracts," Murray wrote. "In addition, we assume that you are supplying materials to other firms which have government contracts.

DEFENSE FACTOR

"In other words, the Bethlehem Steel Corp. is one of the most important factors in the effective fulfillment of the program of national defense.

"The SWOC, representing the steel workers of the nation, is cognizant of its responsibilities in connection with the program of national defense. We believe that we have demonstrated to the nation that through collective bargaining contracts with the SWOC, the important steel companies of the nation have stabilized their industrial relations and have thereby assured continuity of work for the fulfillment of the needs of our national defense.

"The refusal on the part of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. to recognize the right of its employes to organize and bargain collectively has created a definite risk for the country.

STOPPAGES

"In this connection, I merely wish to cite the fact that as the result of the unlawful policies of your cooperation you have had stoppages of work in recent months at several of your steel plants, and at the present time

40-Hour Week In Effect Oct. 24

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Starting October 24, the 40-hour week becomes tops in American interstate industry.

On that day, the second anniversary of the date on which the Fair Labor Standards Act went into effect, employers must pay time and a half for all work over 40 hours in a given workweek period.

During the first year of the law's operations, the maximum was 44 hours. Last October it dropped to 42. It will now remain stationary at 40 hours.

"It is our opinion that the 40-hour week will apply for the first time to the first full work week beginning on or after midnight, October 23," Col. Philip Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator, declared today.

WAGE RATE UNCHANGED

The present statutory minimum wage of 30 cents an hour remains unchanged. There will be no further increase in the general minimum pay level until Oct. 24, 1945—seventh anniversary of the Wage-Hour Act—when it will jump to 40 cents an hour.

In 10 industries, however, special committees established under the Act have set up minimum pay rates ranging from 32½ cents to 40 cents hourly. These industries are: hosiery, textile, millinery, shoe, knitted underwear, woolen, knitted outerwear, apparel, leather, and pulp and primary paper.

Condemn Policies Of Goodyear

Los Angeles, Oct. 12.—Labor policies of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company were "bitterly condemned" in a resolution passed by Local 131, United Rubber Workers, here.

Stating that the company had refused to bargain in good faith although negotiations have been in progress since the local was certified as bargaining agency for the employes in April, 1937, the resolution asked that a strike vote be postponed, in view of the possibility of forcing the company to negotiate through one of the government agencies.

End Walkout At Baltimore Shipyard

Baltimore, Oct. 12.—CIO workers at the Bethlehem Sparrows Point shipyard called off their two-week strike.

Sec. Philip Van Gelder of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers explained the action by declaring that the government's announced policy of barring contracts to unfair firms would be used "as a weapon for enforcing collective bargaining in the Sparrows Point and other Bethlehem plants without the necessity of strike action."

Edward Denhardt, chairman of the local strike committee, said that "continuation of the strike would serve no further useful purpose and would merely hamper the national defense program." The union, however, "will continue to organize and press for our demands along other lines."

'SCAT'!

Why Not Obey?

In demanding that government contracts be granted only to corporations which obey the Wagner Act and other labor laws, the CIO is not seeking to "blacklist" anyone nor proposing any interference with national defense production.

Laws passed by Congress are supposed to be obeyed. The law-abiding citizen who does not like a law has a right to appeal against the law's application to himself, and a right to work for the law's repeal. But so long as the law is in effect he is supposed to obey its orders first, and then appeal or work for repeal afterwards.

Most American employers are law-abiding citizens. They have obeyed the Wagner Act and compiled with Labor Board orders, and have profited in better labor relations as a result.

But some few have tried to buck the law and have refused to obey Labor Board orders. The CIO has repeatedly demanded a stricter enforcement of the law, so that these law-breaking corporations may not continue to trample on labor's rights and to engage in unfair competition with fair employers.

There is no reason why any of these corporations should not obtain defense contracts or other government business, if they will take the simple and obvious course of placing themselves in compliance with the law.

The issue has been deliberately confused by selfish and reactionary interests in press and politics. They have written and spoken as if law observance were out of the question—and that therefore to make it a condition of defense work will prevent such work from being done.

The CIO insists, on the contrary, that defense production will proceed more speedily, more efficiently and more uninterruptedly, when carried out in compliance with the labor laws.

If the government will refuse to be blackmailed by law-breaking anti-labor corporations; if it will firmly insist on contracts being executed in a lawful manner, none of these corporations will dare to refuse defense business. They will all take the simpler course of obeying the law.

Labor Milestone

The agreement just signed between the CIO United Office & Professional Workers and the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., covering more than a thousand agents in the company's New York offices, is an important milepost in American labor history.

It represents a solid basis for further union progress in a white-collar field that was once considered unorganizable. The other giant insurance companies will sooner or later have to fall in line with the union march, for the CIO has demonstrated once more that "it can be done."

On The Job

At the present time they are on the job to see that the workers' interests are properly guarded under the conscription law.

In many union agreements clauses are now being inserted to insure that drafted workers get their jobs back, that compensation is made for reduction of earnings while in the army, that their insurance is kept up, and that they are fairly treated in other respects.

At the same time the CIO is demanding that there be adequate labor representation in the administration of the draft law, so that the workers' rights may be protected and they may not suffer from any unfair discriminations.

The more trying and uncertain the times, the greater the workers' need for the protection of modern and alert industrial unions.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

HERE'S a problem story. No cash prize is offered for a solution. But if you can solve it, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you are smarter than several carloads of editors, Congressmen and administration bigshots, who can't figure out what to do about Wagner Act violators. Reading time: three minutes. Solving time: one split second. Now start.

Mr. Dough Raymee had business at the local police station. He wanted to sell them a consignment of firearms and clubs. In his hurry to get there before a competitor, he disregarded traffic signals, sideswiped several other drivers and finally parked his car in the only open space before the police station—with the front end by a fireplug and the rear end obstructing the entrance to a driveway.

Mr. U. N. Eye, a victim of this reckless driving, came along in his car at this time and, wanting to turn down the driveway, asked Mr. Raynee to move.

Mr. Raymee replied: "I don't recognize you. I'm not going to move my car. And anyhow I'm too busy with important business. See my lawyer."

Mr. Eye thereupon went into the police station and asked the cops to enforce the law on Mr. Raymee. He pointed out that the position of Mr. Raymee's car was in flagrant violation of the law, that it was holding up traffic, and even endangering the safety of the police station, if a fire should occur.

The police told Mr. Eye they would take the matter under advisement. They would consult the mayor, the city fathers and learned counsel to see if Mr. Raymee could be required to move his car, without infringing his rights or adversely affecting the coming elections. Meanwhile they too had important business, and they proceeded to go over the contracts for firearms with Mr. Raymee.

Now Mr. Eye was a patient man ordinarily, but he kind-of blew up at this point. What business had the police to be giving contracts to a man who was breaking the law, he wanted to know.

The police took this question under advisement too. And finally one of them, after consultation with the various authorities, announced that in his opinion further business should not be given to Mr. Raymee until he had moved his car, as required by law.

At this, Mr. Raymee in his turn blew up. He called up the Chamber of Commerce, the city fathers, the local press, and a tornado of protest was created. If Mr. Raymee was thus "blacklisted," they all proclaimed, it would prevent the police from defending themselves and the city with proper arms. It would violate Mr. Raymee's right of appeal and would undermine our institutions.

The press, and some of the politicians, conceded that law observance was all right in some ways, but not when it involved a law against parking before fireplugs and obstructing traffic. They argued that people like Mr. Raymee didn't like this law and considered the traffic cops biased, unfair and even rude in the way they sometimes tried to enforce it. They feared too that Mr. Raymee might lose interest in selling firearms to the police, if made to move his car.

The case created a regular furore. A committee of the city fathers even hauled the cops before them and demanded to know by what right they were "blacklisting" Mr. Raymee.

The cops rather sheepishly explained that they had not done this; that they had already signed some of his contracts; and that all one of them had said was that, as an abstract principle, Mr. Raymee must be considered in violation of the law when his car was thus parked, unless and until he could obtain a ruling to the contrary from the courts.

So here we are right up to our necks in the middle of the PROBLEM: How can the police get their firearms, traffic congestion be relieved, Mr. Eye be permitted to proceed up the driveway on his legitimate business, and all the other embarrassments be removed, without violating anyone's rights or rocking our institutions?

SOLUTION: Your split second is up, and if you haven't guessed it, here it is: Mr. Raymee might just be required to move his car, in accordance with the traffic regulations.

Now this solution may seem elementary to you. But this makes you smarter than half the press of a continent, which has been going into editorial agonies about a very similar problem, relating to violators of the Wagner Act getting government contracts.

The idea "that defense contractors should obey labor laws," as Congressman Smith put it, has "deeply disturbed members of Congress," has "brought consternation to the ranks of industrial executives" and has thrown dozens of editors into conniption fits.

This piece is written from the center of a stack of editorials, which describe the idea as "alarming" "appalling," "alien to the most elemental concepts of fair play," "breaking down faith in democracy," and creating anything from "a storm of disapproval" to a "serious breakdown of the defense program."

What these anti-labor editors seek to conceal is the simple solution which the CIO, even as U. N. Eye, advances: namely that the contractors be made to obey the law, just as other Americans are required to do.

U. S. Spokesmen Upset Plan for 'Fair Buying' On Government Orders

he told the committee that "it was not the intention to pass on any question of policy as to the awarding of contracts or the withholding of contracts for violation of the Labor Relations Act. That isn't a question of law. It wasn't asked of me, and I haven't passed on it."

Later in his testimony, Jackson added:

"There is nothing whatever in my opinion, or in any opinion which I have rendered or been asked to render, which restricts the complete freedom of the Board, the Defense Commission, the War Department or the Navy Department, to formulate any such direction . . ."

PATTERSON'S STAND

Asst. Sec. of War Patterson, the day's first witness, was asked about his conferences with Hillman, and whether "there was any suggestion made, or was the question raised by Mr. Hillman, concerning violators of the three statutes (Wagner Act, Walsh-Healey Act, Wage-Hour Act) . . . and that they should be precluded from receiving contracts?"

"Not that I recall," Paterson replied.

The War Department executive expressed the opinion that on contracts let through competitive bidding, price was the only factor considered, while on negotiated contracts many other factors are studied.

ONLY SPEED MATTERS

"The only thing that matters to us is national defense," he added. "That means speed of delivery".

"We don't make, and we have not to date made the matter of prospective contractors' disputes with the Labor Board the determining element in the award of the contract.

"If the matter came to our attention, it would only be one of the factors to be taken into account."

Patterson said he did not view the Labor Board records of prospective contractors "as determining at all. I mean determining, of course, not on the merits of the controversy but in the awards of the contracts."

His testimony came as a surprise, for Hillman told his October 1 press conference that no War or Navy Dept. contracts would henceforth go to any firm violating the Wagner Act. He was explicit in his statement that the new "policy" would be strictly enforced.

Sec. of the Navy Knox said his policy coincided completely with that of the War Department.

KNOX DENIES POLICY

Committee Counsel Edmund Toland then asked Knox the following question:

"In any of the discussions that you may have had with Mr. Hillman, has the question ever been raised with him or suggested that contracts should not be awarded by the Navy Dept. to companies charged or found by the Board to have violated the Wagner Act?"

"No," Knox replied.

Hillman, who said he was on leave from his position as president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was the last of the four witnesses to take the stand.

The Defense Commissioner said he had never requested, nor had intended to request from the Attorney-General "a ruling to the effect that any company in violation of the National Labor Relations Act, as a result of a decision of the Board (the NLRB) should not receive any contract."

ADVICE ON LAW

Hillman said he was interested merely in getting Jackson's ruling on the law rather than in obtaining advice on policy.

Toland asked Hillman whether he agreed with Jackson's testimony that in the Defense Commission policy, as relayed to Congress by Pres. Roosevelt on Sept. 13, there is nothing that "prohibits the War and Navy Departments from entering into any contract with any person that may have been held in violation of the National Labor Relations Act?"

"I have to agree with whatever they think is their opinion," Hillman replied, "because they have the power to award contracts.

"If I should disagree with them and they don't take my opinion, all I could do is try to persuade them."

Hillman said his request that Jackson furnish an opinion on the status of Wagner Act violators was done without the knowledge of other Defense Commissioners, with whom he is working in the "finest cooperation."

KNUDSEN'S VIEWS

Knudsen's views on the problem of government contracts were outlined with few ifs, ands or buts when he delivered a speech to the Army Ordnance Assn. in New York Oct. 8.

Taking sharp issue with Jackson's informal opinion that a Labor Board order against a Wagner Act violator should be recognized by other government agencies, the Defense Commissioner said:

". . .it was implied, or at least to many people it appeared to imply, that if you were in violation of the National Labor Relations Act before the courts said you were, you were out of luck as far as working for the government was concerned, and I think that's going too far."

"Certainly," he added, "the Defense Commission has no authority and does not want to undertake the job of enforcing the labor laws. . .I have no opposition to collective bargaining or to committees as long as they restrict their activities to their prescribed field, but I don't want to go beyond this."

SIDE GLANCES

Appointed a member of a Washington, D. C. local draft board was one Edmund M. Toland.

Toland is counsel for the Smith Committee attacking the Labor Board, has represented numerous anti-union firms accused of Wagner Act violations, and has served as counsel for at least two labor spy agencies.

STATEMENT OF THE OWNERSHIP, MANAGEMENT, CIRCULATION, ETC., REQUIRED BY THE ACTS OF CONGRESS OF AUGUST 24, 1912, AND MARCH 3, 1933

Rubbing It In!

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Actions spoke equally loud with words as government executives beat a hasty retreat from their announced policy of withholding government contracts from labor law violators.

A day after the officials admitted that their policy was a phony, Sec. of Navy Frank Knox released a list of companies "authorized to construct at government expense" certain equipment for their factories. Though title to the construction remains in government hands, the companies reap the benefits. On that list were:

Bethlehem Steel Co., San Francisco	$10,013,000
Bethlehem Steel Co., Los Angeles	2,756,000
Bethlehem Steel Co., Quincy, Mass.	13,427,500
Bethlehem Steel Co., Staten Island, N. Y.	2,706,000
Bethlehem Steel Co.	23,607,700

$1,500 BACK PAY

New Orleans, La., Oct. 12. — A check for $1,500 in payment for wages lost by several employes discriminated against by the American Paint Works here was turned over to District 50, chemical division of the United Mine Workers, in a settlement of the dispute.

The case has been in litigation for two years. The firm also signed a satisfactory contract with the District 50 New Orleans local.

Bethlehem Invited To Meet Union

the shipyard workers at the Sparrows Point shipyards of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. are engaged in a strike.

"In the interest of national defense, I am calling upon you and your company to meet with the officers of the SWOC to discuss the establishment of orderly industrial relations and thereby assure the recognition by the Bethlehem Steel Corp. of the rights of their employes to organize and to bargain collectively, and the continuity of work in your plants and stabilized industrial relations."

CITES FIRM'S POLICIES

Reviewing Bethlehem's feudal attitude towards labor, Murray recalled that when the Supreme Court upheld the U. S. Public Contracts Board order that steel firms seeking government contracts must pay a minimum hourly wage of 62½c.

Court Finds Bethlehem Guilty

Boston, Oct. 12. — The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. must obey a National Labor Relations Board order and bargain with the CIO Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, the federal circuit court of appeals ruled here this week.

The decision covered the Fore River yards at Quincy, Mass., and the Boston plant, both owned and operated by the highly-profitable subsidiary of Bethlehem Steel Co. It was handed down on the very day that the Navy Dept. announced it was allotting funds to construct equipment at Fore River to be used by the company.

The company violated the Wagner Act by refusing to bargain with its employes' representatives, the court declared.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Railroad Industry

• Speed, safety, and economy—all are achieving new meaning since the introduction of streamlined stainless steel trains.

Stainless steel—with its inherent advantages of high strength-weight ratio and corrosion resistance—makes possible the transfer of valuable pounds from dead load to pay load—saves pounds of paint by eliminating the need for surface coatings of any kind—and permits the construction of full streamlined articulated trains of less weight and less horsepower, but which operate at greater speed and surprising efficiencies.

Utilization of the unique combination of properties inherent in stainless steel marks an important step in the progress of railway engineering and design.

U. S. Court Upholds Labor Board Blast At Ford Policies

CINCINNATI, Oct. 12.—The Ford Motor Co. lost a major battle today in its three-year fight to ignore the National Labor Relations Act.

The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld in all major aspects a Labor Board decision ordering the company to reinstate 22 United Automobile Workers members to their jobs at the huge River Rouge plant in Dearborn, and to cease anti-labor practices which violate the Wagner Act.

NLRB contentions that the Ford Co. was directly responsible for the bloody attack on UAW organizers at Dearborn on May 26, 1937, were also upheld.

BEAT ORGANIZERS

On that day Ford service men beat up Richard Frankensteen and Walter Reuther, both of whom are now UAW executive board members; knocked down and kicked members of the union's women's auxiliary; attacked and chased away reporters and photographers, some of whose films and notes were stolen.

"Even assuming that the respondent had reasonable grounds to believe that the ostensible purpose of the organizers to distribute union literature was but a blind to conceal an attempt to stage a sit-down strike, the assault upon them was not necessary for the safeguarding of the respondent's (Ford's) property," the court decision said.

NAME SUPERVISORS

The judges upheld Labor Board findings that the assailants on the overpass leading to the Ford entrance "included two foremen of the River Rouge plant and a member of the service department, and that other service department employes took more or less prominent parts at other points."

One section of the NLRB order, calling on Ford to cease distribution of "Ford Facts" and other pieces of outspokenly anti-union literature, was turned down by the court. While the court ruled that such a prohibition was "an invasion of the liberties guaranteed to all citizens," the Board showed that the literature distribution was a fundamental part of the company's general anti-labor campaign.

'Decision Spurs Drive', Says Widman

Detroit, Oct. 12. — The circuit court decision against the Ford Motor Co. is a major victory for labor, Michael Widman, Jr., CIO Ford Organizing Committee director, said today, and "will serve greatly to stimulate the campaign to organize the Ford workers."

Asserting that both unionism and democracy will benefit by the court ruling, Widman declared:

"The Ford Motor Co. has been found guilty in an American court of un-American practices and has been ordered to 'cease and desist.'

FULL STEAM AHEAD

"The Ford workers themselves will interpret the decision as a signal for full steam ahead in the organization of their union under the banner of the CIO.

"In placing on the company the responsibility for the assaults on our people at the Ford plant in 1937, the decision vindicates the union as a peaceful, law-abiding organization, and at the same time diminishes still further the effectiveness of the Ford Service Department, an effectiveness that has already fallen to a very low ebb."

LABOR FACTS By Scheel

Seven Get $500

New Orleans, La., Oct. 12. — Seven workers of the Crescent Cigar & Tobacco Co. here were reinstated with $500 back pay and a closed shop contract providing a $6 weekly wage increase was signed, in the settlement of a case against the firm, the CIO Council announced this week.

Says CIO Will Push Fight On Contracts

New York, Oct. 12 — The CIO intends to continue its campaign to win recognition from the federal government that U. S. contracts should not be awarded to labor law violators, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, today, told the New York State Conference on Social Work.

"Under pressure from the reactionary Smith Committee and with the American press howling away, representatives of the War and Navy Departments and the National Defense Commission were compelled to retract their policy and state that they would not deny government contracts to those corporations that violated the National Labor Relations Act," Pressman declared.

FAIR AND OBVIOUS

Forcing government contractors to obey the law, he added, would seem "not only fair but too obvious for comment."

Nevertheless, "a storm broke loose in the American press. Denying government contracts to law violators became the equivalent of betraying national defense.

"When corporations in the aviation industry refused to accept government contracts until they were assured handsome benefits, that was being patriotic. But denying violators of labor laws the opportunity of getting government contracts until they complied with those laws, is being unpatriotic."

DRIFT TO WAR

Pressman paid tribute to the "prophet-like clarity" of warnings by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis in the autumn of 1939 that "the danger for the American people would be the attempt of American politicians and statesmen to divert the attention of the American people from the failure to solve economic problems at home and to engage in foreign wars."

The CIO will continue its campaign to protect the basic freedom of American workers, he declared, "in spite of attempts by the enemies of labor to divert the attention of the nation from our important democratic problems."

"With the introduction of conscription into American life, it becomes of the utmost importance that we more than ever be careful that the basic liberties and democratic institutions of America not be infringed upon.

"There must be a fair and impartial administration of the Draft Law to protect those basic rights. Labor must be adequately represented on local boards and boards of appeal. This is essential in order that the confidence of labor be maintained."

Congress Swings Axe On NLRB

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Congress swung the axe on the National Labor Relations Board today, cutting in half the Board's appropriation for printing and wiping out its technical research division.

The cuts were contained in the supplemental appropriations bill, which now goes to the President for signature.

Whereas the board had formerly been allotted $300,000 to cover its big printing job, the bill provided only $123.000 for that item. At the same time, it directed that $27,000 formerly used to pay professional salaries in the technical research division be used for printing.

The drive to eliminate the technical research division had the support of the Smith Committee bloc of NLRB haters in the lower House. The bill as passed not only wipes out the jobs of the division's present personnel but also casts doubt on the power of the Board to use any of its employes to carry out the research tasks formerly handled by the division.

Largest single item on the Technical Research Division work list has been the allottment of some $5,000,000 in back wages to reinstated Republic Steel Corp. employes. Who will carry on this job has not yet been determined.

Rap Delay On Civil Service Bill

Washington, Oct. 12.—The tabling of the Ramspeck Civil Service Bill by the joint House and Senate Conferees until after elections was designated as "playing politics with the merit system" by the United Federal Workers of America, CIO affiliate.

"Despite the excellent work of Congressmen Ramspeck and Senator Mead and other Congressmen and Senators," stated Jacob Baker, UFWA President, "the situation which resulted in tabling the Ramspeck bill until after elections is as political as election day itself.

"It is our hope that the Ramspeck bill will be favorably acted upon after November 4; but we must bring to the attention not only of Federal workers but of the public, that its chances for passing have seriously lessened by yesterday's acts. It is our intention to make this danger known not only to all the Congressmen and Senators but to all advocates of Civil Service and the merit system."

"Further," Baker stated, "we raise for the consideration of those Congressmen who were successful in blocking the bill the question of whether it is fair to remove Federal workers from all political activity through the Hatch Act, and at the same time for Congress itself to play politics with the Federal workers."

Madden Will Study Labor In Canada

Washington, Oct. 12.—A survey of labor relations in the Dominion of Canada will be conducted by J. Warren Madden, former head of the National Labor Relations Board, it was revealed here by Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins.

Madden's term on the NLRB expired August 27. Since that date no appointment to fill the vacancy has been made by Pres. Roosevelt, though numerous labor groups have praised Madden's record on the Board and requested that he be named to another five-year term.

Radio Men Warned Of 'Dynamite' in Bill

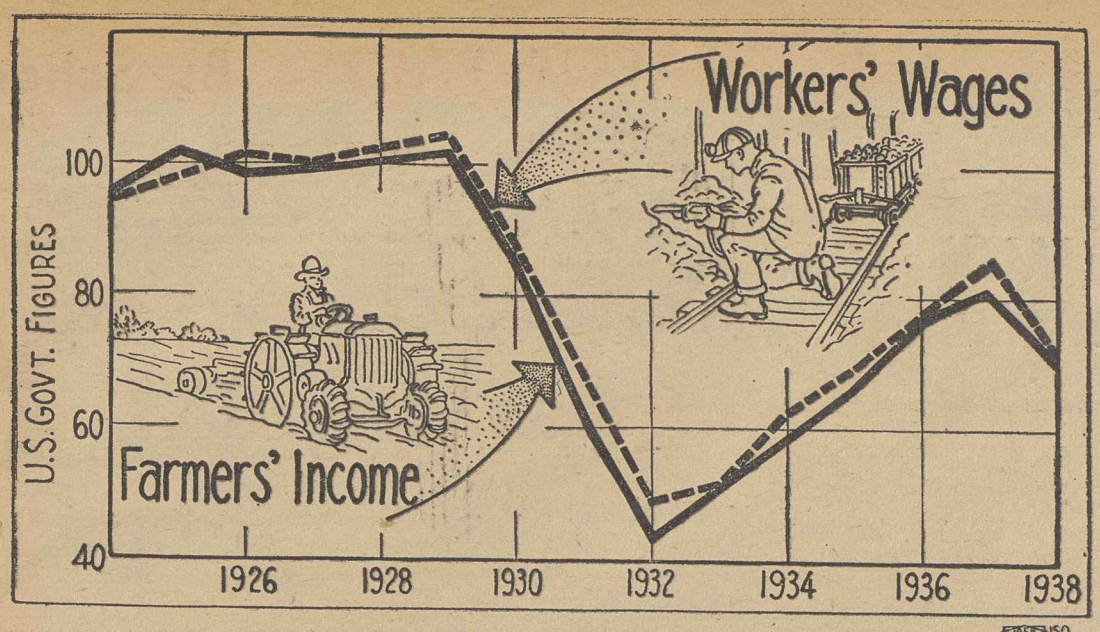
WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 — A bill packed with dynamite that threatens to go off in the faces of marine radio operators with disastrous effects on the gains they have through the union is now pending in Congress, according to the American Communication Association, CIO.

Introduced in September by Representative E. V. Izac, Democrat from San Diego, Calif., the bill, H. R. 10446, is ostensibly aimed at members of the German American Bund, the Communist Party or "any organization subject to foreign control."

SERIES OF ATTACKS

A statement isued by the ACA, however, points out that "the measure is part and parcel of a whole series of legislative proposals aimed at smashing the living standards of the American people through an assault on their unions engineered under cover of ferreting out subversive elements."

The real intent of the bill is given away, the union declares, in the section which provides that "upon proof sufficient to satisfy the Commission," the license of any operator belonging to an organization "subject to foreign control" may be suspended.



The ACA denounces the bill as "one of the most vicious attempts to single out a group of American workers and to deprive them not only of their civil liberties but their very means of earning a living." At the same time, the union states, "it is a tribute to the record achieved by marine radio operators, who through their union, the ACA, have won better wages and improved working conditions."

The bill has been referred to the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. No hearings have been set as yet, but the committee has asked for reports from various government agencies.

The ACA urges protests against the bill and demands that open hearings be held on it be sent in at once to the House Committee.

STOPPED BY COURT

CIO Woodworkers Meet, Speed Union Campaign

By KEN PETTUS

ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 12 — Approximately 300 delegates attended the fourth annual convention of the Int'l Woodworkers of America in this famous lumber city this week. The theme and main task of the conclave as enunciated in the joint report of the organization's four international officers declared that "our major problem here in this convention, as in the last, is to organize the unorganized."

The CIO woodworkers at the present time are in the midst of what is generally conceded to be the greatest organization drive ever conducted in the lumber industry.

The IWA convention opened under the handicap of having its president, Harold J. Pritchett, absent. Pritchett, a Canadian, has been forced to remain at his home in Vancouver, B. C., since the expiration of his last U. S. visitor's permit last July.

The IWA president had previously been admitted to this country under three-months' permits issued several times by the Immigration Department, but upon his latest attempt to enter the United States, a visitor's visa was denied him by the U. S. State Department.

HONOR PRITCHETT

In opening remarks to the delegates, IWA Vice-Pres. O. M. Orton, voiced regret at Pritchett's absence and praised the CIO woodworkers' leader as one who "pioneered, helped build and fought for the IWA." Pritchett has been at the helm of the IWA since its inception over three years ago.

By a unanimous vote, the delegates wired greetings to Pritchett in Vancouver, pledging "full support of the convention in his efforts to return to the United States that he may more effectively carry out his duties as president of the IWA."

The joint message of the IWA international officials, including Worth Lowery, also a vice-president, and Bertel J. McCarty, secretary-treasurer, as well as Pritchett and Orton, posed the fulfilling of the goal of every member of the IWA getting a member as the prime responsibility of the organization's rapidly increasing membership.

If this objective is attained, the report declared, "we can all then rest assured our organizational drive will be successful far beyond our expectations, our International Union will grow in great numbers, our financial position will be further improved, we will have met our responsibilities to the CIO, and we will have accepted the challenge of President John L. Lewis for ten million members within the confines of the CIO within the next five years."

The delegates were informed that 29 new IWA local unions have been chartered since the organization's 1939 convention and that over 6,000 new members joined its ranks. The latter figure was apart from the strides made by the CIO in the lumber industry since the wildfire organizing drive, backed by a special six-month organizing assessment, got underway last August.

BETTER RELATIONS

An improvement in contractual relations with employers was reported to the delegates. The IWA recently negotiated a contract covering 20,000 workers in the logging and sawmill operations in the fir belt of the State of Washington which embodied four and five per cent wage increases.

Earlier this summer another section of the IWA, the plywood district council, gained similar wage increases and eliminated the practice of piece-work from the plywood industry.

CIO Softball Teams Meets At N. Y. Fair

New York, Oct. 12. — The first interstate labor softball tournament to take place at the World's Fair will be staged tomorrow by the Trade Union Athletic Association. Champion CIO trade union teams from four states will compete in the tournament for the trophy and medals to be awarded the winning team.

The tourney starts at noon, when the United Photographic Employes, CIO Local 415 will meet the Trade Union Athletic Association champs of New Jersey, a CIO all-star team. At 1:30 P. M. the championship team of Baltimore, United Brick & Clay Workers, will play against the Ansonia Brass Workers, champ labor team from Connecticut.

At 3 P. M. the finals will come off to determine the trade union champion. Bus loads of trade union sport enthusiasts from Maryland, Connecticut, New Jersey and New York will be at the World's Fair to cheer their unions.

CIO Wins Walkout At N.Y. Warehouse

New York, Oct. 12.—Nine weeks of strike today brought substantial benefits to employes of Levy Bros.

A contract signed by Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Employes, brought the 40-hour week, a 7½ per cent wage boost, the closed shop, dismissal of scabs and the reinstatement of all strikers.

Must Fight for Rights, Californians Told

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 12 — The third annual convention of the California CIO Council closed here with more than 300 delegates in harmonious agreement on the entire CIO program advocated by John L. Lewis.

Keynote of the 1941 CIO program was sounded by California CIO Director Harry Bridges, who told the Convention that stronger and broadened organization into industrial unions is the main job in the effort to raise the working and living conditions of American wage earners.

This more powerful union base, Bridges said, is the structure on which alone can be founded the effective political and legislative activities which can guarantee to all workers security in their economic gains, continued freedom in exercise of traditional American civil liberties, and avoidance of involvement in foreign wars.

Bridges received a tremendous ovation from the convention.

HEAR MISS LEWIS

One session of the convention was addressed by Kathryn Lewis, who brought warm greetings from the President of the CIO. Miss Lewis warned the delegates that "anyone who is around Washington these days knows that certain things have to be fought for — and fought for hard. People in Washington are not thinking of the things the American people want, but of wars and rumors of wars to come."

Sole convention controversy was on a proposal brought in by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, Los Angeles local, to unqualifiedly endorse President Roosevelt for a third term. In lengthy discussion marked by its tolerance and spirit of CIO solidarity, a minority committee report for the endorsement was defeated by a three-to-one vote. Both before and after the balloting Morris Zussman, leader of the pro-Roosevelt forces, declared: "We were in the CIO yesterday. We are in the CIO today. We will be in the CIO tomorrow."

The large three-to-one majority of the delegates were convinced of the desertion by Roosevelt of his own New Deal, as indicated in acceptance by the Convention of the majority committee report. The report quoted chapter and verse in a long series of backdowns from enforcement of New Deal legislation such as the Walsh-Healey Act, Wagner Hour Act and Wages and Hours Law. Repeal of the Burke-Wadsworth Conscription bill was declared the prime point in the fight to restore and defend American civil liberties.

NO ENDORSEMENT

The adopted resolution declared that until the Administration took action to correct these abuses, and others, such as the persecution of Harry Bridges, "We do not endorse or support for the office of President of the United States either party or person."

"Assurances must be forthcoming," agreed the Convention, "that the various measures, legislative and administrative procedure passed and set up under the program of national defense will not be utilized to take away or weaken any of our union gains and privileges as they exist at the present time."

The Convention re-elected by acclamation State CIO Council President Philip Connelly of the Los Angeles Newspaper Guild, and secretary-treasurer Louis Goldblatt of the San Francisco International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

Big Oregon Local Deserts AFL Fakers, Joins CIO

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 12.—By an overwhelming majority employes of the Doernbecher Manufacturing Co., largest plant in the State of Oregon, today had voted to affiliate with the CIO.

The vote to swing their AFL local into the ranks of the CIO United Furniture Workers was 765-17. More than 1,100 workers belong to the local.

The decision marked the climax of the local's resistance to the labor fakery practiced by AFL officials in this area. Jammed like sardines into Norse Hall here, the Doernbecher employes took a rising vote amidst a roar of applause that shook the building.

HEAR MUSTER

"I pledge you this much—we will do everything in our power to help you better your conditions.

"I didn't come here to waste your time. I came here to tell you why you should join the United Furniture Workers of America. That's putting it straight.

"The United Furniture Workers became an international because in the AFL it was impossible to organize industrially.

CAN'T STAND STILL

"Labor unions cannot stand still. Either they go forward or they go back," Muster declared, promising that the CIO union would continue its progress towards improvement of wages and working conditions in the industry.

The men were welcomed into the ranks of the CIO by Pres. J. B. McAllister of the Portland Industrial Union Council and by Alex F. Hartung of the Intl. Woodworkers of America.

Organized as a local of the AFL painters union for some three years, the men had been given no assistance by the federation or its paid organizers.

Rap Mayor On Draft Selections

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 12. — Failure of Jasper McLevy, mayor of this heavily organized industrial city, to include a single CIO representative among the 18 recommended for positions on local draft boards, brought immediate protests from unions here.

A delegation which visited the mayor found him unwilling to change his recommendations to include a CIO representation. McLevy was then informed by Alex Cashin, official of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, that he had been instructed by the Bridgeport Brass Union to tell the mayor that McLevy could not expect the support of the brass workers in coming elections. McLevy is running for governor.

Later in the week a retired coal dealer who had been recommended for a draft position declined the job, and Joseph Julianelle, business agent of the big CIO electrical local at General Electric was appointed in his place.

The unions, however, maintain they deserve more than one position out of 18 and are continuing their fight.

Missouri CIO Elects Garst President

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 12 — CIO national officials Van A. Bittner and Michael Widman were the main speakers at the convention of the Missouri CIO State Council convention held here September 28-29.

Bittner is a district president of the United Mine Workers and chairman of the CIO's Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee and Widman is CIO assistant director of organization.

Officers elected to head the Missouri Council are: Delmond Garst, United Automobile Workers, president; Dave Watkins, United Mine Workers, vice-president; and James T. Nash, Construction Workers, secretary-treasurer.

Delegates adopted a legislative program for the coming meeting of the Missouri legislature, amended the State Council's constitution to bar Nazis, Fascists and Communists, passed a resolution expressing confidence in the national CIO officers, and pledged loyalty to the government in the [illegible] crisis.

Expose Coast Labor Haters

Lumber Drive In South

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 12. — Plans for extensive organizing drives throughout the lumber camps of the deep South were announced today by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America as its fourth annual convention got under way.

Following a conference of IWA national officers, Adolph Germer, special director of organization, and William Riley, southern executive board member, it was revealed that a new organizer will get to work immediatey in the Alabama timber area.

Meanwhile, organizing activity zoomed in the Pacific Northwest. In the Willamette valley of Oregon the IWA has installed four local unions during the past three weeks.

Shoe Union Victor At Red Cross Plant

Cincinnati, Oct. 12. — By a 7-5 majority the CIO United Shoe Workers won a Labor Board election victory at the United Shoe Corp. plant in Norwood, near here. More than 1,100 workers are employed at the factory, which makes Red Cross shoes.

The election victory followed a lengthy organizing campaign. USWA officials predicted that the union success in the election would have a beneficial influence over some 10,000 other shoe workers, mostly unorganized, in the Ohio River Valley.

Texas Governor Walks Past Pickets Into Hot Water

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 12.—The governor of Texas, known as "Pass-the-Biscuits" O'Daniel, ought to have his nickname changed to "Pass-the-Pickets."

That was the opinion of Lone Star State union leaders after O'Daniel ignored a picket line at Houston Club in the local Chamber of Commerce Building.

Maurice Dineen, CIO regional director, said that CIO and AFL unions throughout the state have been asked to deluge the Governor with protests.

The five buildings involved in the four-month strike are owned by Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Urge FDR Appoint Laborite to Position On Maritime Board

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 — In the interests of national defense the National Maritime Union has asked President Roosevelt to fill the present vacancy on the Maritime Commission with a representative of marine labor.

Two vacancies on the five-man commission occurred this fall when Edward C. Moran, Jr., resigned and Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley's term expired. Commander Howard L. Vicery, U. S. Navy was appointed several weeks ago to succeed Moran.

A letter to the President signed by NMU President Joseph Curran declared that "at present only high naval officers and shipowner sympathizers occupy places on the Commission.

That is an unhealthy situation. It is the kind of situation which led to the Merchant Marine Scandal of 1935 exposed by Supreme Court Justice (then Senator) Hugo Black."

The President was reminded in the letter that one of the reasons for setting up the Maritime Commission was to rid the industry of the shipowner controlled Shipping Board.

"These are critical times," the letter continues. "Guarding the nation's civil liberties, labor's gains and the people's rights is just as vital a part of the national defense as protecting the profits of the shipowners.

"Employers invariably take advantage of war hysteria to launch new attacks on employe organizations. Shipowners are no exception. It is all the more important, therefore, that labor be represented on a body such as the Maritime Commission."

Appeal Anti-Trust Decision

New York, Oct. 12. — Judges in the New York federal circuit court today were studying arguments by counsel for the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers and the CIO appealing a Sherman anti-trust case decision handed down in a lower court some months ago.

Under the earlier decision Pres. Ben Gold and 10 officials of the union were convicted and sentenced to terms running up to one year and fines ranging to $2,500.

DATES FROM 1933

The case dates from an indictment first handed down in 1933, which was allowed to remain on the shelf for six and a half years. The trial lasted from Feb. 20 to April 19 of this year.

At that time the fur union pointed out that "in the 50 years existence of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, no officer of an industrial trust or monopoly was ever sentenced to prison, even when violations were admitted."

CIO attorneys, submitting briefs as "friends of the court," maintained that the question in the case is "whether union activity in the form of a refusal to work upon materials produced under non-union conditions by part of an integrated industry, for the purpose of organizing the entire industry, is a restraint of trade subjecting the union officers and members to the criminal penalties of the federal anti-trust laws."

Quoting from the Supreme Court in the nationally famous Apex case decision and from admissions of the Department of Justice, the CIO asserted that the Sherman Act could not be applied to the action of the Fur Workers.

RAIN OR SHINE: Striking employes of the Ontario Manufacturing Co. at Muncie, Ind., don't let a little rain keep them away from the picket lines they've been maintaining since mid-August. Members of CIO United Cutlery Workers Local 354, they walked out when the firm refused to bargain over questions of union shop, increased wages and vacations with pay.

Labor Board Gets Report On Set-Up In Los Angeles

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. — A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner's report today held four Los Angeles employer associations equally guilty with corporations in violating the Wagner Act.

The quartet of bitterly anti-union outfits, which came under LaFollette Committee scrutiny during its hearings in Los Angeles last year were grouped with four tent and awning companies in a sharp-spoken recommendation for an NLRB "cease and desist" order.

The recommendation, if accepted by the Board, may form an important precedent governing the conduct of other associations which have pressed anti-union struggles in recent years.

The four companies, all located in Los Angeles, are the Sun-Ten-Luebbert Co.; Downie Bros., Inc.; Mellus Bros. & Co., and United Tent & Awning, Ltd. They were ordered to stop interfering with their employes' union rights, stop supporting a company union, and stop "contributing to or receiving support of the four employer associations."

Named by the Board as dominating the firms' labor policies were the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn., Southern Californians, Inc., The Neutral Thousands, and Employes' Advisory Service. They, the Board made clear, were the villains of the piece, building up anti-labor sentiment, spending large amounts to promote the open shop and generally seeking to prohibit bona fide collective bargaining.

The associations, the NLRB noted, used all sorts of publicity to push its illegal campaign.

BARTON'S FIRM BUSY

Radio programs condemning "the forces of organized labor" were prepared by the advertising firm of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborne, the Board report asserted. Bruce Barton, boss of the ad agency, is at present a Republican Congressman from New York and is running for Senator on the G. O. P. ticket.

Analyzing the functions of the four employer groups, the NLRB found that the granddaddy of the quartet was the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn., formed in 1891, supposedly to "aid and promote business" — but by 1936 devoted to the principle "that Los Angeles industry must be conducted on an open or non-union shop basis, and that the recognized unions of national scope must not be allowed a voice in the relations of Los Angeles employers with their employes."

The Neutral Thousands (TNT) was incorporated about the same time, allegedly "to give expression to the sentiments of housewives and women of this community." Membership involved no dues — Southern Californians, Inc., paid the bills — and no duties.

PHONEY MEMBER LIST

All four of the organizations named in the NLRB report plied their anti-union war on a dozen fronts. Bulletins, pamphlets, radio programs were used, but the 100,000 membership claim of TNT was strictly "phoney," according to the Board.

"Mailing lists of club members, school teachers, church workers, etc., were obtained from an 'addressing agency' and transferred intact to the TNT membership roll," the report asserted.

Sixteen unfair labor practices were chalked up to the four groups in the trial examiner's recommendation. He urged that they be prohibited from urging union members not to pay dues; furnishing unionists with resignation blanks; forming secret societies to break strikes; organizing back-to-work movements; disseminating propaganda which would interfere with the rights of workers; and advising employes to form associations which prohibit their members from signing contracts with labor unions.

CottonPickers Strike In California

Madera, Calif., Oct. 12.—CIO cotton pickers here have gone out on a strike which may spread through the big "farm-factories" of the San Joaquin Valley.

The workers, whose miserable living conditions were described in John Steinbeck's famous "Grapes of Wrath," are protesting the wage rate of 85c a hundred pounds set by the local cotton plantation owners, all of whom are affiliated with the notorious Associated Farmers outfit.

The strikers are seeking a $1 scale. The United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers are leading the walkout. A similar strike last year was featured by bitter anti-labor violence on the part of the Associated Farmers.

Hosiery Union Wins Bay State Strikes

Boston, Oct. 12.—(FP)—A two-week strike of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, against the Massachusetts Knitting Mills at Rochdale, Mass., was settled with the signing of a contract providing for reopening of all three M.K.M. plants. Two of them had been closed down in what the union termed a lockout.

Pres. Alex McKeown of the AFHW negotiated the agreement, that provides for union recognition, job security, a preferential shop and arbitration of all disputes. The strike was called when the company attempted to institute a wage cut on Sept. 17.

CIO Unions Winning Wage Increases Throughout Nation

IN THE DOUGH: Two members of the United Shoe Workers take inventory after receiving back wages from the Muskin Shoe Co. in Baltimore. They were ordered reinstated by a National Labor Relations Board decision.

Auxiliary Councils For New York

New York, Oct. 19.—Organization of regional councils in New York State is under way, the State CIO Auxiliary Council has announced. A comprehensive Fall program is being undertaken by the Council in New York City with new auxiliaries in formation in the State, County & Municipal Workers, United Shoe Workers and the Furriers' Union.

The State Council has affiliated with the Trade Union Athletic Association and is offering a gym and swimming program to member auxiliaries. Classes on trade union and problems and history, with emphasis on the part women play in the building of strong unions begin this month. Children's classes are also in process of formation.

For further information about the Council and the assistance it can give in forming auxiliaries, write to Mary Santo, president, New York State CIO Auxiliary Council, 1133 Broadway, New York City.

NLRB ORDER

Washington, Oct. 19.—The Jensen Radio Manufacturing Co., Chicago, has been ordered by the NLRB to stop discouraging membership in the CIO's United Electrical, Radio & Machine and to throw its company union overboard.

Order Election At Vermont Quarry

Barre, Vt., Oct. 19.—On petition of the Quarry Workers International Union, an election covering employes of the Rock of Ages Corporation's plants at Northfield, Montpelier and Graniteville has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board.

The poll which will be held October 29, is the first to be conducted in the Barre belt.

About 50 men will be eligible to vote in the election. They will vote on whether or not they wish to have the Quarry Workers Union represent them as collective bargaining agency. The Corporation has had a contract with the QWU covering quarry employes since 1935.

Million Dollar Raises Gained In Connecticut

(See Stories On Inside Pages)

WASHINGTIN, Oct. 19 — Scores of thousand of CIO members are receiving wage increases and improved working conditions as the result of a series of recent negotiations with employers in mass production industries throughout the country.

Largest single "CIO dividend" was netted in Connecticut's famed "Brass Valley," where the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers gained a million dollar increase from big metal fabricating corporations, and looked forward to another similar wage boost from other firms in the area.

Working conditions were improved and a better vacation plan won by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the RCA-Victor plant in Camden, N. J.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee gained what it termed a "model contract" with the Ferro Machine & Foundry Co. in Cleveland.

PICKET LINE SERENADE: Even the cops smiled when they received this accordion-and-voice serenade from pickets at the Midland Steel Products Co. in Cleveland. A strike by 1,200 members of the United Automobile Workers brought a wage increase.

Million Dollar Boost Won In New England

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Oct. 19. — Million dollar annual wage increases for several thousand CIO workers throughout Connecticut's booming "Brass Valley" were won today by the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Union negotiations with the area's manufacturers, enjoying one of the most profitable seasons in the industry's history, brought $400,000 wage gains for the 3,500 production employes of the Bridgeport Brass. Co.

Soon afterward union officials announced that negotiations with the American Brass Company, which employs 9,000 workers in Waterbury, Ansonia and Torrington, had lifted wages 4c an hour to the highest level yet won in the brass industry.

FURTHER PARLEYS

The American Brass adjustment, worked out a parley attended by state, labor and management officials, goes into effect Nov. 3, will be followed by negotiations for a general wage increase Dec. 1 based on the firm's ability to pay in terms of its earnings during the past year.

Biggest single increase was gained by 100 workers at the A. H. Wells & Co., who received a flat 10% pay boost retroactive to August 27. Thus employes will receive a $24 lump sum payment in addition to regular wage increases.

EXPECT MORE

Since all the Brass Valley companies follow each other closely in wage trends, union officials held it almost certain that the union-negotiated gains at these plants will bring comparable results for some 12,000 workers in the plants of Scovill, Chase Brass, Oakville Pin and other companies. This will mean a total wage jump of $2,000,000.

Leading the negotiations were International Representative John J. Driscoll, Regional Director Alex Cashin and Intl. Research Director Ben Riskin. All the new agreements brought substantial improvements in working conditions.

Cleveland Strike Lifts Pay Rates

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 19.—Improved wages and working conditions were won by workers at the Midland Steel plant here following a strike which completely shut down operations, Local 486, United Automobile Workers, announced this weeek.

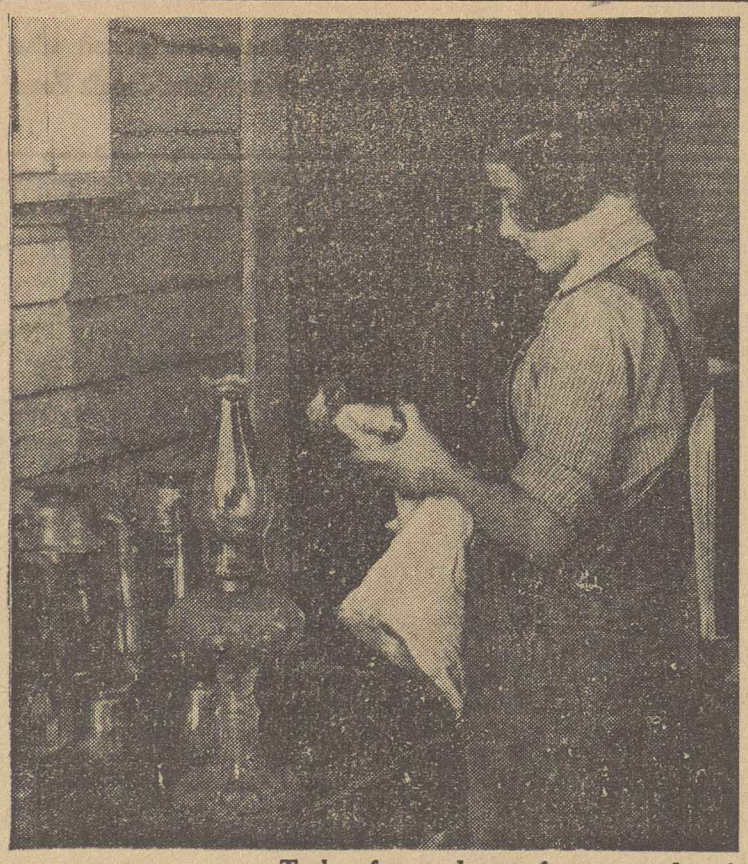
Paul E. Miley, Cleveland UAW regional director, said that a contract granting improvements was ratified practically unanimously by the membership.

Terms include three to ten cent hourly pay increases; vacations, and a modified union shop clause which provides that if members fail to pay their union dues they will be dropped to the bottom of the seniority list. Almost all of the emploes are union members.

200 Get $20,000 In New Contract

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 19.—Local 137 of the United Furniture Workers announced this week that it has won pay increases totaling $20,000 a year for its members at the Berkshire Upholstery plant. The award was made by the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration which had been called in to settle the wage dispute following a six-day strike in August.

Some 200 union employes will benefit by the pay boost which will be retroactive to August 19, the day the strike was settled. The increases total about $5,000 more a year than the management offered before the strike.



The wage question was left in the hands of the arbitration board after the union had won a 40-hour week with time and a half for overtime, a liberal vacation clause, a union shop and other benefits under a signed agreement.

Workers in the lower income brackets will get a greater share of the pay increases than those receiving higher wages.

New Mine Opens Under Union Pact

Reserve, N. S., Oct. 19—A new mine just opened on the Gardiner Seam in the Gardiner Mines district near Reserve will be operated under a contract with the United Mine Workers of America.

A schedule of wage rates negotiated with the Dominion Coal Company, operators of the new colliery, was approved by members of Reserve UMW Local at a meeting attended by District President D. W. Morrison and Secretary-Treasurer A. A. McKay.

Ask Canada Take Over Coal Mines

Glace Bay, N. S., Oct. 19.—Nationalization of Canadian industries is being asked by CIO workers in Nova Scotia where conditions in coal mines and steel plants have been a constant source of dissatisfaction.

Taking over of industry by the Canadian government was demanded by District 26 United Mine Workers of America at its recent convention.

PRESENTS DEMAND

This has been followed by action on the part of International Board Member and CIO Director for Canada Silby Barrett, who has just presented a demand that the government take possession of properties held by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company and its subsidiaries.

The demand was presented in a telegram sent from his Glace Bay headquarters to Labor Minister N. A. McLarty and Minister of Munitions and Supplies C. D. Howe.

Another telegram was dispatched to A. R. Mosher, President of the Canadian Congress of Labor, urging that he use his office to induce the government to take steps to relieve unsatisfactory conditions prevailing among employes of the companies involved.

800 LONG IDLE

In his telegram to the government ministers Mr. Barrett said 800 men were idle in the Eastern Car Plant at Trenton, N. S., and that the company was on a "sit-down strike."

Nothing had been done to relieve semi-starvation there, he pointed out adding that negotiations had dragged out since last March with the plant by the steelworkers but no settlement on a wage dispute had been reached.

Mr. Barrett further pointed out that coal mines of the Acadia Coal Company, a Scotia subsidiary, were paying 71 cents per day less than the minimum schedule rate in the district and would not increase the rate. Sydney Mines collieries were paying 31 cents per day less than the schedule rate and had also refused increases to the men.

Pact Improves Standards For 9,000 At RCA

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 17.—RCA, largest radio manufacturing concern in the world, has renewed with improvements, a contract with the CIO's United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers covering some 9,000 employes at its big plant here.

The new agreement negotiated by Local 103 was approved unanimously by the membership at a meeting which packed union headquarters to the doors.

Some of the main points of the agreement are:

Job classification lists to be submitted to the union for negotiation.

VACATION PAY

Vacation pay of two per cent of a year's pay for employes with one year's service and four per cent for those with five years. About 6,000 of the employes come in the five year class.

Shop stewards are to be notified in advance of the company's intention to lay off an employe for poor work. Company agrees to give every new employe a copy of the union contract and a letter stating that RCA and the union have enjoyed four year's harmonious bargaining relationship and that the company hopes this relationship will continue.

Nova Scotia Miners Win 75c Raise

Joggins, N. S., Oct. 19.—An increase of 75 cents a day in the basic rate for employes of the Standard Coal Company has just been secured by the United Mine Workers of America.

The basic rate was increased from $4.25 to $5. District 26 International Board Member Silby Barrett participated in the wage negotiations which resulted in the increase.

HIT DRAFT APPOINTEES

Washington, Oct. 19.—Protests against the failure to include a single representative of organized labor among the 120 Draft Board members for the various areas of the city were made this week by the Washington CIO Industrial Union Council.

Hail New CIO Gains In Jersey

Newark, N. J., Oct. 19.—New Jersey CIO unions are following the national trend in Labor Board election victories, William J. Carney, CIO regional director, announced today.

Announcing substantial majorities for the electrical workers at Plainfield and for the rubber workers at Trenton, Carney described them as "victories for the progressive forces of trade unionism and an endorsement of the militant policies of John L. Lewis and the CIO.

The Plainfield election involved employes of the Walker-Turner Co. They chose Local 436 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers by a margin of 144-19.

5-4 MARGIN

At Trenton the United Rubber Workers received 544 votes at the Thermoid Co., to only 405 for the so-called Federated Independent Union.

"The victory in the Walker-Turner plant is just what we expected from the UERMW," Carney declared, "and is another link in the chain being forged by this union to build a more powerful and progressive labor movement.

"The victory of the rubber workers in Trenton is particularly gratifying as it comes after a long hard fight and will undoubtedly prove a go-ahead signal for an intensive organizing campaign in the central New Jersey area."

Clothing Union Strikes Sweatshop Working Under Army Contract

LINDEN, N. J., Oct. 19.—Members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers today were continuing their picket lines around the Allied Clothing Co. in this city. The firm, branded by ACW Sec. Joseph Potofsky as a "sweatshop" is filling sizeable government orders for army clothes.

The firm apparently received its orders before Natl. Defense Advisory Commissioner Sidney Hillman, president of the ACWA, announced that U. S. purchases of clothing would not be made from substandard shops.

The ACW, in a statement issued in New York, made clear that the strike was against a series of wage cuts, "and not in an attempt to impede production for the national defense."

'SUBSTANDARD'

Potofsky, ranking officer of the union since Hillman took a leave of absence to fill the labor position on the Defense Commission, said the strike, which involves 250 workers, was called in the usual way when a firm attempts to operate "under sweatshop or substandard conditions."

Prior to the strike, he went on, the firm had not made any government work, and the walkout had been directed against the company in connection with its civilian production.

"The strike against the Allied Clothing Co. was called two weeks ago following a series of wage cuts and the firm's refusal to deal with the Amalgamated," Potofsky pointed out.

"Contrary to reports, there was no union contract in the plant at the time the Allied workers asked the Amalgamated to represent them and to seek restoration of their wage scales."

A contract with the AFL's United Garment Workers had previously expired, and there was no jurisdictional dispute in the situation, the ACW statement pointed out.

100,000 STARS OF BETHLEHEM: Representatives of 100,000 employes of the Bethlehem Steel Co., which continues to wallow in government orders while violating the Wagner Act, met last week to push plans for their drive against the company. They heard Van A. Bittner, leader of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee's Bethlehem drive, predict speedy success.

Seek CIO Voice On Draft Boards

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. — Refusal of state and local authorities in several areas to give representation to labor on draft boards is drawing sharp opposition from CIO unions and councils and is being protested in the national CIO office here.

Messages coming into CIO headquarters show that CIO bodies are aware of the dangers of discrimination in this practice and are urging that their organization be represented along with business and employer groups that have been given more than sufficient places on the local boards.

The United Automobile Workers and the Aluminum Workers of America are among the international unions lodging forceful protests against exclusion of labor members from the draft boards.

The New York City CIO Council, in an announcement to all affiliates and to the press, has demanded that at least 50 per cent of the local draft boards be made up of farmer and labor representatives. In Milwaukee, the powerful Local 248 of the Auto Workers pointed out that "the CIO could expect little justice from our reactionary Republican officials" in demanding a "truly democratic setup" on the draft boards.

In Michigan, the CIO made a similar complaint against the blank refusal of state authorities to recommend a single labor representative to the scores of local boards there. Similar protests were expressed in Cleveland, Minneapolis and other midwestern centers.

Minnesota's 137 draft boards do not have "a single leader or representative of the CIO," the state CIO Council pointed out in a resolution released to state newspapers.

In Washington, D. C., the complete absence of labor representatives on the various boards led the CIO Council to believe that it could have "no confidence" in the protection of labor's rights under such boards and to set up a protective commitee of its own to safeguard the rights of CIO members.

Iowa's Packinghouse Workers and the Iowa CIO joined in the protest through PWOC Local 1 at Ottumwa and through Ben Henry, regional director.

Defeat Fight On Picketing

Toronto, Ont., Oct. 19 — Members of local 115, United Packinghouse Workers Union (CIO) who are on strike, won a victory this week when an injunction against picketing was dissolved.

The PWOC members struck when their employer signed an agreement with an AFL union which was set up with his connivance.

With the appointment this week of C. H. Millard as PWOC representative for Canada, activities of that organization will now be centralized. The appointment was made by Van A. Bittner, PWOC chairman in the United States.

Engineers Rap Wage-Hour Ruling

New York, Oct. 19.—The ruling exempting hundreds of thousands of employes from the overtime provisions of the Wage-Hour Law was branded discriminatory and unjustified by the executive officers of Chapter 31, CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians in a statement sent to Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour Administrator, calling upon him to rescind the ruling.

"This ruling," says the statement, "acts only in the interest of employers who are already adequately protected and benefited in their profits in national defense—their normal profits, their excess profits, and now the super-profit on overtime work."

SUMMER HEARINGS

The executive officers of the Chapter pointed to the hearings held in Washington this summer on re-definition of exempt categories and said:

"No employer or employers' organization has shown that the Law as now administered has worked any undue hardships on them, or that it is unfair and defeats the purpose of the Act—to establish fair labor standards.

"No employer or employers' organization has presented any valid reason with proof of why some categories of their employes should be exempted from the benefits of the Wage-Hour Act."

Steel Unionists Push Drive On Bethlehem

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Oct. 19.—With organization work being speeded up in all mills of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the black record of that Corporation in the World War and the present national emergency has been laid with the National Defense Commission.

An 18-page petition, exposing a record of law violations perhaps unsurpassed in American industry, was sent to each member of the Defense Commission; and made the subject matter at the meeting of the Labor Advisory Committee of that group last Friday (Oct. 18).

Van A. Bittner, new director of the Bethlehem drive, and Clinton S. Golden, Steel Workers Organizing Committee, regional director in the east, presented the petition, signed by Chairman Philip Murray, to Sidney Hillman, labor advisor to the Defense Council. Others on the Defense Committee received mailed copies.

This action was decided upon at a conference of some 600 delegates from all plants of Bethlehem, in this city — the citadel of the Corporation — on Sunday, Oct. 13.

Murray recited the history of Bethlehem's refusal to obey the National Labor Act, how it is resorting to a subtle scheme to offset the order of the Walsh-Healey Board on minimum wage rates in steel; and read a letter from J. M. Larkin, Bethlehem vice-president, refusing to meet with Mr. Murray to work out the situation.

Seamen Show Big Wage Gains On Lake Tankers

New York, Oct. 19.—"Membership in the Natl. Maritime Union has put cold cash in the pay envelopes of the seamen sailing on the Great Lakes, and for all seamen sailing on NMU contract ships," the CIO affiliate declared in a statement addressed to employes of the Esso and Socony-Vacuum oil tanker fleets.

Citing wage scales on the Great Lakes, the statement—which was signed by national officers of the union—pointed out that between 1936 and 1940 wage scales on the Great Lakes tankers had risen between $28 and $60 a month.

Steward-cooks now receive $185 monthly, a $60 increase, while pumpmen, wheelmen, watchmen, deckhands and oilers have gained between $33 and $45 a month.

What can be won on the Lakes can be won on the fleets of the big oil companies, the NMU message states.

"We ask every seaman on Esso and Socony ships to study these facts carefully, and to ask themselves would these gains have been possible except through an honest rank and file union like the NMU with the full support and backing of its 50,000 members."

Two More Victories In Memphis

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 19.—Two more Labor Board victories were chalked up in this open shop town by Locals 4 and 19, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers when polls were won at the Dixie Pickery and the Indiana Flour Co.

The two locals now have signed up majorities in more than 16 plants in the cotton and food fields. Negotiations are in progress where elections have been won and applications for elections are pending in the other plants.

PecanShellers Sign Pacts In Texas

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 19.—Pecan Shellers Local 172 has negotiated a closed shop renewed contract with the Southern Pecan Shelling Co., here, with added provisions for re-hearings on discharges and morning and afternoon rest periods.

Around 1000 workers will be back on their jobs in the plant soon, following a shutdown for installation of new machinery and other improvements in the shop.

Formerly a sweatshop industry using hand methods where hours were long and wages ranged from $2 to $5 a week, three years of union organization has raised wages more than 300 per cent and made the company change to production methods.

"HERE'S YOUR HAT, MISTER"

Unionism Pays

"What will you get out of a union that you can't get without one?" is one of those old anti-union questions that you hardly ever hear any more.

The reason is that, since the advent of the CIO, too many workers in too many industries can give a long list of answers from their own experience.

The first answer can be given in terms of dollars and cents, as witness this latest example, among thousands, from Connecticut:

The CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union has been conducting an intensive organizing drive for some time in the brass industry of the Connecticut Valley. Every organizing success has been quickly reflected in improved wages and conditions for the workers.

Negotiations with the Bridgeport Brass Co., A. H. Wells & Co., and the American Brass Co., it is now announced, will result in $1,000,000 more a year going into the pay envelopes of 12,500 workers than they got before. These wage increases represent in the case of one company a 2,000% return on the workers' investment in union dues.

Other Valley companies are expected to follow the wage trend brought about by the union in these three companies, bringing another million dollars to 12,000 more workers.

Unionism pays dividends to workers in dollars and cents, as well as in better conditions and greater security.

Stacked Against Labor

Millions of the young men who have just registered for the draft are industrial workers and union men.

They are many more times more numerous than the bankers, lawyers and businessmen who also registered.

Yet local draft boards have been set up in many parts of the country composed entirely of business and professional people, and without a single labor representative on them.

All of the people who registered are Americans, with a right to expect equal treatment before the law and democratic procedure.

Yet class distinctions have been made in the selection of the boards which will decide who will be drafted or exempted in many cases.

Small wonder that CIO unions throughout the country are protesting this gross discrimination against American working people.

They protest both on general principles and for some very practical reasons. Just as a man has a right to be tried by a "jury of his peers," so he should be able to count on there being some at least of his "peers" on local draft boards, who have shared his life and know his problems.

In the last war, draft boards controlled by local chamber of commerce elements frequently discriminated against union men, and in some cases deliberately used the draft to break up union organization.

Unless adequate representation is given to labor on the local draft boards, as well as on the appeal boards, there is serious danger that they may again be used for anti-union purposes.

Study the composition of the draft boards in your locality, and if they are stacked against labor, register your protest with Federal Director of Selective Service Clarence Dykstra.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

DEAR DAD: Having registered for the draft today, just as you did 23 years ago, I feel like writing to you just as one generation to another.

We of the draft age have been preached to, saluted, scolded, congratulated, condoled, advised and kidded so much recently by people in your generation that I feel like hitting back.

What has got me really sore is a patronizing editorial I've just read in a big daily paper. It's supposed to be a letter to my generation from someone of your generation who remembers draft registration day in 1917.

He says he isn't "complacent" about our standing on the brink of war like they did then, or about his generation having created the present mess and then passed the draft law, while ours "takes the rap."

But smugness oozes out of every paragraph, and this editor even says that "some of us are a bit envious of you." He seems to think that history has just got to repeat itself all over again.

Well, I for one don't feel that way. I feel that if our generation can't learn from some of the mistakes that your generation made, it's just too bad.

This smug editor fellow who claims to speak for your generation says, "We'd like to have you believe you're going into the army for your own sake: so that you can continue to get the news in your newspapers, instead of lies; so that you can listen to whatever station you like on the radio. . .; so that the police can't raid your house without a warrant or arrest you for expressing your own opinions; so that your neighbors. . .won't be set to spy on you. . .

"We won't let anybody get fat on your sacrifice," he adds, and he finally quotes Lincoln about our being "dedicated to the great task remaining before us. . .that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom."

Now don't get me wrong, Dad. I think those are fine sentiments and I agree with them. But I think your generation was fooled with a lot of fine phrases from people who did not mean them. Our generation is a little more practical, I hope, and will go after the reality of some of these things, not the shadow.

In the first place, about people "getting fat on our sacrifice," your generation sure made a lot of people fat on your sacrifice! The last war, I'm told, made 12,000 new millionaires.

Now people like that editor, despite his fine phrases, are trying to make this happen all over again. In another editorial he approved fattening corporations like Bethlehem Steel with defense contracts, no matter how they break the law and trample on labor's rights. And I didn't see him making any flaming protests against the so-called excess-profits tax law, which practically protects war profiteering.

As for the stuff about continuing to get the news in newspapers, instead of lies, where does he get that "continue"? In my town, the papers print more lies than news about my union and the CIO.

About listening to the radio, that too would ring better if only the other day they hadn't refused the San Francisco CIO the right to continue its daily radio program.

And when it comes to raids and spying and the rest, Edgar Hoover's FBI seems to be doing quite a job of it right here—and some employers like Ford could even teach Hitler a thing or two.

Don't think I'm a cynic about these things, Dad. It's just the other way around. I'm proud to be an American and I'm ready to fight for the things America means to me. I think that patriotism starts at home, and that we ought to take this "new birth of freedom" idea more seriously right here and now.

A lot of people of our generation are CIO union men and women. We want to be sure that some of the things that happened in the last war don't happen again.

We don't want to see the profiteer and chiseling employer pampered and rewarded for breaking labor laws, while labor is cracked down on to the point that wages are cut by rising living costs while war profits soar.

We don't want our civil liberties destroyed from within at the very time we are asked to defend them from outside enemies.

We don't want to see an open shop drive like the one that followed the last war, smashing unions and forcing down wages.

Our idea of a "new birth of freedom" is an expansion of collective bargaining and industrial democracy—prevention of war profiteering—a cracking down on corporations that break labor laws—protection of civil rights and democratic liberties—and a raising of American living standards.

We look on the CIO as the most patriotic American institution there is because it stands for these things. Let's hope our generation can do better than yours, for after all you didn't have the CIO!

YOUR REGISTERED SON.

Push Drive Against Bethlehem

Hall, in the shadow of the huge Bethlehem plant, the delegates pledged to "build a strong union in Bethlehem mills." This, they agreed, was the real answer to making that Corporation "a good citizen."

SHOWDOWN FIGHT

On the basis of law violations, Murray said the issue would be fought to a showdown in Washington and in the Bethlehem plants if Washington should fail.

Bittner, moving into headquarters here as field marshal, told the delegates that the job of organizing was up to the men in the mills; and they shouted back their pledges that they would do the job.

From each of the dozen or more districts in which Bethlehem mills are located, spokesmen for each group told of the splendid progress already made in the drive. Delegates cheered the report from Johnstown, Pa., where a strike in the blooming mill had been settled a few days previously with complete victory for the union.

That the men of Bethlehem want the union was demonstrated at a mass meeting Sunday evening. Hundreds of workmen could not even get into the hall which was jammed with union men and their wives—all from the home mill of the Corporation.

Ask Pay Raise At Canada Auto Plant

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 19—United Automobile Workers Union members here will take action this week on demands presented to Canadian Chrysler Corporation for the same wage scale and contract as is in force in the company's American plants, George Burt, Canadian UAW director, announced.

The Windsor scale is 10 to 20 cents less than in Detroit Chrysler plants. The demands were approved by a large membership meeting last week.

Seek Pay Raise At Steel Mill

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 19—The conciliation board which rejected claims of 3,000 Algoma Steel Co. employes, members of SWOC, for a general wage increase, will reconvene.

"The department of labor agreed at a conference that since all pertinent information was not before the board previously it should sit again," said C. H. Millard, SWOC sub-regional director.

Algoama employes recently voted to join SWOC and its officers are now handling the new conciliation efforts.

75c Increase

Joggins, N. S., Oct. 19. — Coal miners employed by the Standard Coal Co. here have been given an increase of 75 cents per day in their basic rate of pay. The rate was increased from $4.25 to $5 following consultations between mine operators and U.M.W. board member Silby Barrett.

Asks Arbitration Board Re-Convene In Steel Dispute

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 19.—A demand that the conciliation board be reconvened to settle a dispute arising out of its recent report on Nova Scotia Steel Co. employes was made to Hon. N. L. McLarty, federal minister of labor, in a wire sent by officers of Lodge 1064 SWOC this week.

The wire stated that "if union members decided to take further action owing to the delay the executive would not be held responsible."

The union claims that 7½ per cent increase offered by the company last March should be retroactive to that date rather than when the board presented its report in July.

Silby Barrett, Canadian SWOC director, sent a wire to McLarty asking that the federal government take over the plant under its war-time powers.

Charter New Leather Union Local

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 19. — Nearly 200 workers employed by Robson Leather Co. have been organized and application made for a charter from the International Fur Workers Union, CIO, Joseph Starr, the union's Canadian representative declared.

Wages at the plant are considered low for the skill necessary, union officials said. The union will seek negotiations for wage raises shortly.

CIO Wins Poll In Alaska Despite Tory Propaganda

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Oct. 19.—The CIO rolled to victory in the "farthest north" Labor Board election, held here, at the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers piled up an unexpectedly heavy majority among local metal miners.

The Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers polled 314 votes, to only 22 for the AFL and 84 for the phony Brotherhood of Alaska Miners. The CIO affiliate thus received twice the number of votes cast for its two opponents.

The election victory was all the more encouraging because of the intense anti-union propaganda campaign launched by powerful Alaskan mine and smelter interests. While radio and newspaper facilities were barred to the union, the employers used every red-baiting device in their extensive repertoire to slander the union organization.

Local housewives, for instance, must have been at least mildly astonished to find their "shopping news" for the week consisting solely of one long article headlined "Employes Victims of Hoax."

What this had to do with "shopping" was not clear.

Now, with the issue of representation settled after years of dispute, the CIO local is prepared to negotiate for the long overdue contract.

Bethlehem's 'Daylight Robbery' Before Court

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. — Echoes of the last war resounded throughout the U. S. Supreme Court's building here as the justices granted the government a review of its "daylight robbery" case against the Bethlehem Steel Co.

The petition asked review of two suits. One was brought by the government in April, 1925, to recover profits already paid to Bethlehem. The other was brought by Bethlehem in January, 1926, to force payment of $7,500,000 not yet paid by the government. Lower courts had ruled in favor of the corporation.

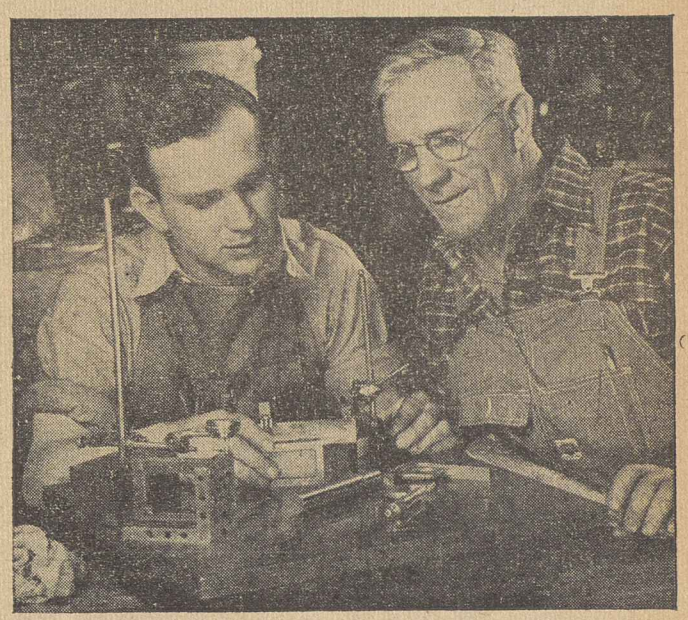
While ruling against the government, U. S. Federal Judge Dickinson had nevertheless called Bethlehem's transaction "daylight robbery."

The company's attitude, he continued, reminded him of Rob Roy, "who admitted that he was a robber but proudly proclaimed he was no thief."

CITE GREED

The U. S. Circuit Court, while still ruling against the government, described Bethlehem's attitude as one of "Commercial greed" which took "advantage of the nation's necessities to secure inordinate profits.

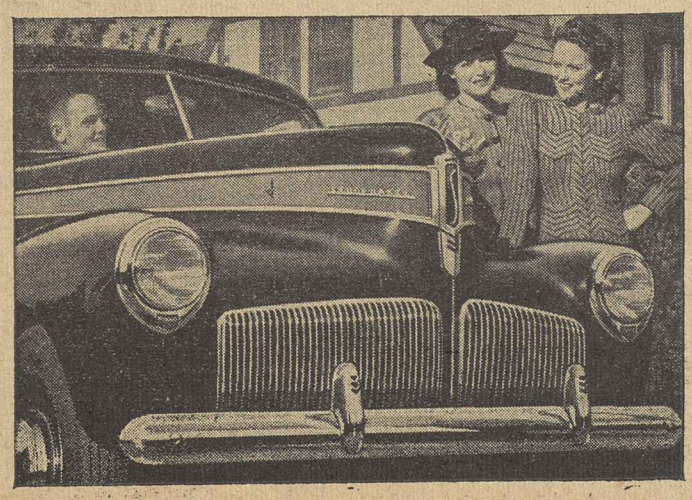
Bethlehem submitted inflated cost estimates with the result that it would receive over $25,000,000 profit for doing work which cost about $93,000,000 without running any risk of loss, the court was told by U. S. attorneys.



"The government cannot agree that the law sanctions, as obtained in good conscience, profits amounting to more than 27 per cent of the cost of constructing vessels under the contracts when those profits were secured without the slightest risk of loss . . . and were coerced by the threat of withholding an essential service from the government in wartime," the brief asserted.

SIDE GLANCES

Arthur Riley, who conducted a late-night "hearts and flowers" recording broadcast on a Washington, D. C., radio station before getting a position with the Smith Committee investigating the Labor Board, has a new job.



He's been appointed to the Labor Conciliation Division of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

"Father and son" teams are numerous in the vast, modernly equipped Studebaker plants. Working for Studebaker is a tradition in South Bend's 25,000 families. Pictured is Frank Ahlgrim with his son, Otto.

Find Corporation Power In Few Hands

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—A government statistical report today revealed the firm financial hold of "America's 60 Families" on the nation's 200 largest corporations.

1. Thirteen families own stock valued at 2.7 billion dollars in 23 leading corporations.
2. Total holdings of the duPont family in the 200 corporations amount to $565,000,000, giving it "practically undisputable control" of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., which "in turn owns by far the largest block of General Motors Corp."
3. The Mellons enjoy majority control of Gulf Oil and Koppers United Co., and "quite secure" control of the Aluminum Company of America.
4. The Rockefellers, though holding "relatively small minorities of between 10% and 20%" of voting stock, nevertheless retain "effective working control" of Socony Vacuum Oil Co., The Ohio Oil Co., and the Standard Oil Companies of New Jersey, Indiana and California.

8 BILLION ASSETS

Together the three family groups have share-holdings valued at $1,400,000,000, and directly or indirectly they control over 15 of the 200 largest companies. The 15 companies thus controlled by the top three families of the nation's industrial royalty have assets valued at more than eight billion dollars.

In close to 140 of the 200 blue ribbon corporations, a "small group of dominant security holders"—whether one or more families or other corporations—maintain the control and set the policies.

The report, entitled "The Distribution of Ownership in the 200 largest Non-Financial Corporations" was prepared by the SEC for the Temporary National Economic Committee, which has been conducting a long study of American industry.

BLOWS UP OLD MYTHS

Laid low by the figures is the old yarn that the big companies are owned and controlled by an army of small stockholders.

In the 200 companies, the study found there are some 8,500,000 shareholdings—that is, blocs of stock owned by one person or foundation. Almost half this number of shareholdings were valued at less than $500.

"On the other hand," the report declares, "there were 415,000 shareholdings with a value of over $10,000 each which accounted for about 70% of the value of the total stock outstanding in the 200 corporations."

Half the stockowners own only 3% of the value of the 200 big companies, while 5% of the stockholders own 70% of the companies' value.

'WIDOWS & ORPHANS'

Another hoary story, frequently sprung on union negotiating committees, involves the large number of families totally dependent on dividends. This, too, was investigated by the government research men.

They found that the "great bulk of the eight to nine million domestic stockholders own only small amounts of stock and the dividends they receive represent but a minor proportion of their total income."

About half the stockholders receive less than $100 a year in dividends, it was found, while the group which "depends economically to a large extent" upon stock dividends "is very small and probably . . . not much more than 500,000". Most of this dependent group of half a million presumably are in the upper income brackets.

Ten thousand people — far less than 1% of the population — own one-fourth of all the nation's corporate stock, the report found, while "seventy-five thousand persons own fully one-half" of the stock.

CO-OP MEETING

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The relation of consumer cooperatives to labor and other social movements will be discussed at the 12th biennial Congress of the Cooperative League which opened here this week. Representatives of more than a million members of co-ops affiliated with the League attended the Congress.

Defeat Wage Cut At Cork Plant

Millville, N. J., Oct. 19—Threatened wage cuts and displacement of veteran workers at the local plant of the Armstrong Cork Co. were forestalled here by a victorious six-day strike conducted by the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramics and Silica Sand Workers.

Led by Samuel Macri, CIO field representative, and Edward Kanatzer, organizer for the union, the 900 men gained a contract which guarantees maintenance of wage rates and job security.

THE UPPER CRUST

This table shows the value of stock in leading American corporations owned by 13 families. Figures were compiled by the Securities and Exchanges Commission.

Family	Total	Corporations in which main holdings are
Ford	$624,975,000	Ford Motor Co.
Rockeller	396,583,000	Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), (Ind.), and of Calif.; Socony Vacuum Oil Co. Inc.
Mellon	390,943,000	Gulf Oil Corp.; Aluminum Company of America; Koppers United Co.
McCormick	111,102,000	International Harvester Co.
Hartford	105,702,000	Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of America
Harkness	104,891,000	Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), (Ind.), and of Calif.; Socony Vacuum Oil Co.
Duke	89,459,000	Duke Power Co.; Aluminum Company of America; Ligget & Myers Tobacco
Pew	75,628,000	Sun Oil Co.
Pitcairn	65,576,000	Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.
Clark	57,215,000	Singer Mfg. Co.
Reynolds	54,766,000	R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.
Kress	50,044,000	S. H. Kress & Co.
TOTAL	$2,700,574,000

* The duPonts have a commanding voice in the affairs of General Motors Corp. through ownership of the largest bloc of stock in that corporation. The GM stock is owned not by the duPont family directly but by E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Protest Ban On Frisco's CIO Radio Program

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 19. — The CIO radio program which for more than two years has broadcast labor news and comment to hundreds of thousands of homes in northern California, has ben arbitrarily banned from the air. The only reason given for this action by Station KYA was that the program is controversial and conflicts with the code of the National Association of Broadcasters.

When CIO representatives pointed out that the NAB is a private group with no authority to dictate what may be broadcast, the station insisted it would abide by NAB rules.

BIG FOLLOWING

The CIO Reporter program is estimated here to have the largest listening audience of any local program in the state. Fan mail frequently exceeded one thousand letters a day. Educators, clergymen and even prominent businessmen have given it the highest praise. Frequently the station itself praised the scripts and the way the program was conducted.

The San Francisco CIO Industrial Union Council which sponsors the program was advised by the agency handling the contract that the prospect of obtaining time on any other station was absolutely zero.

HEAVY CENSORSHIP

A statement issued by the Council declared that the station has always exercised censorship over the program, and that just before it was thrown off the air, this had been made so stringent that names of all persons or companies were lined out.

Previously the CIO program was forbidden to mention the powerful Pacific Gas & Electric Company or to refer to it in any way. For some time the program had been aiding the organization of the workers of this company and had also been supporting a local campaign for public ownership of utilities.

The company silenced this by purchasing an hour's time each night during which they broadcast classical music. From then on the station refused to permit the CIO Reporter to mention them.

The San Francisco CIO Council is bringing every possible protest against the ban. The Council points out that a similar situation banning CIO labor programs prevails generally throughout the country, and asks the cooperation of all CIO groups in protesting to the Federal Communications Commission at Washington, D. C.

Cleveland Steel Union Gets 'Model Pact'

CLEVELAND, Oct. 19.—An agreement covering the 950 employes of the Ferro Machine and Foundry Company, and which, according to William F. Donovan, District Director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, is one of the best agreements ever negotiated in his District, has just been signed between the company and the SWOC and Local Union 1666.

The agreement provides:

1—The union shop, and all employes must join the union within 30 days, and any new employes that are hired must join the union within the same period of time.

2—The check-off.

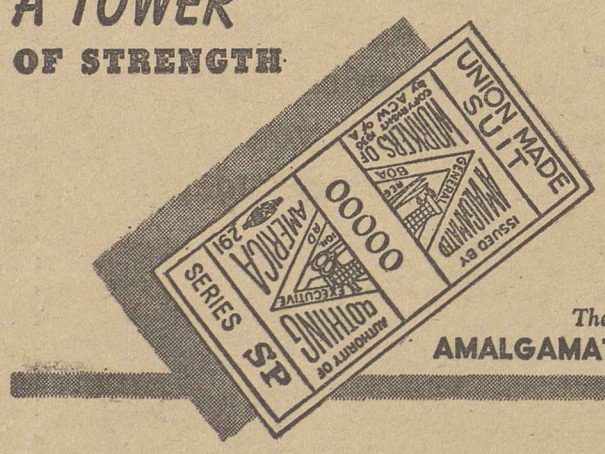
3—Seniority rights are based on continuous service with the company, computed in years, months and days, providing that the employe is able to perform the work in a reasonably efficient manner.

4—In case an employe reports for work and there is no work for him, he shall be given at least two hours pay.

5—Employes are to be compensated for all time lost because of break-downs, or for any other reason beyond the workers' control, in excess of a quarter of an hour, and shall be paid at the regular base rate for the job.

6—All the jobs in the plant are to be reclassified.

7—Seniority rights of employes who are called to the service of the country shall be protected, and any man so called shall be restored to his job within sixty days after his return, provided he requests employment and is physically fit to perform the work.



During negotiations the company agreed to a union shop if it could be shown by secret ballot that a majority of the workers wanted the union shop. A vote was therefore taken, and an overwhelming majority voted (742 to 143) in favor of the union shop.

Oregon CIO Body Seeks Purge Of Police Labor Foes

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 19.—The Portland CIO Industrial Union Council filed a petition today with the city council seeking dismissal of the police department's nationally famous strikebreaking detail, the outfit that spent years trying to frame Harry Bridges.

The CIO council demanded that Mayor Joseph K. Carson, Jr., file charges against five members of the anti-labor detail, and require them to appear at a public hearing to answer the charges.

Named in the charges were Captain of Detectives John J. Keegan, Lieutenant William D. (Big Boy) Browne, and Officers Walter B. Odale, Paul Mumpower and Merriel R. Bacon.

The charges were:

1. That all the men named spent city funds illegally on long trips to San Francisco in the attempt to frame Bridges.

2. That Keegan and Browne have "libelled and slandered reputable citizens" by "falsely accusing these citizens of alleged subversive activities."

3. That Keegan and Browne "interfered with the academic freedom of law-abiding persons without their jurisdiction" at Oregon State College and the University of Oregon.

4. That Keegan and Browne "interfered with the free assemblage of groups who were engaged in their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and assemblage."

SLANDERED CANDIDATES

5. That Keegan and Browne "interfered in public elections by libeling and slandering certain candidates for public office."

6. That Keegan and Browne have "caused a national scandal that has cast reflection on the good name of our community" by their anti-labor, anti-democratic actions.

7. That Browne, on Sept. 7, 1940, libeled and slandered The Labor Newdealer, Oregon's CIO newspaper, by characterizing it "as one engaged in the dissemination of so-called subversive activities." This has reference to the fact that Browne got the state American Legion convention to demand suppression of the CIO paper.

8. That Keegan and Browne, "as police officers of the city of Portland" and "under protection of their employment as such," have conducted "and are now conducting a labor spy system and, in conjunction with certain anti-labor forces, have caused law-abiding union workers to lose their employment."

SUPPLY DOCUMENTS

The council's charges were accompanied by documentary proof of their truth, including portions of the transcript of the Bridges hearing, in which the anti-labor policemen were forced to admit—among other things — having accepted money from private individuals.

Included also was the decision in the Bridges case, which declared Keegan "swears falsely," and which devoted 14 pages of small type to the Portland police department.

The anti-labor activities of the strikebreaking detail have included strikebreaking in many cases; beating of strikers; tapping of a union leader's hotel room; and employment of labor spies.

Hal Marchant, the spy in the Sailors' Union of the Pacific who engineered the Modesto, Calif., frameup of nine members of maritime unions in 1935, was put in the employ of Standard Oil by the Portland outfit.

On one occasion, Browne secured the freedom of three men who had confessed an attempt to murder a CIO member.

REP. CONNERY

Rap Weak Wage Law Policies

Washington, Oct. 19.—Present policies of the U. S. Wage-Hour Administration are paving the way for widespread violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, it was charged on the floor of the House this week by Rep. Lawrence Connery of Massachusetts.

Connery, who has labor's endorsement for re-election, accused Wage-Hour Administrator Philip Fleming of "speed-up" methods which build up an imposing paper record of closed cases, but which actually mean that workers are receiving little protection from the law.

He introduced newspaper clippings into the Congressional Record to show that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the United Shoe Workers, both CIO affiliates, have unsuccessfully protested against Fleming's policies.

"The drive to exempt hundreds of thousands of workers who need the protection 'to make America strong by making Americans stronger', those in the lowest wage levels, is giving momentum every day," the Congressman asserted.

EXEMPTING THOUSANDS

"Almost daily the Wage and Hour Division issues a release exempting additional thousands from one or another provision of the act. The business world is very much concerned. The present competitive advantage of the unscrupulous employers over the virtuous employers will show with telling effect upon the ledgers and business statements which will be compiled in a few weeks now that the business year approaches its end."

In Fleming's first year as Administrator, the Bay State Congressman declared, the "number of complaints obviously requiring inspection has increased from 12,000 to approximately 36,000.

RETURNED FUNDS

"Yet in spite of this tremendous increase of unfinished business, Col. Fleming, instead of increasing his staff adequately to handle this increased volume of business, returned to the Treasury on last July 1, the unexpended sum of $387,000 after almost a full year as Administrator of the Wage-Hour Division."

Fleming has followed a double policy of either exempting from the Act companies against which complaints have been filed, or of closing a case "without regard to a proper evaluation of the facts in the given case," Connery added.

California Council Backs CIO Policies, Pushes Aircraft Drive

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Oct. 19.—Complete accord with the policies of John L. Lewis was voiced by the more than 300 delegates attending the third annual convention of California CIO, which adjourned after a three-day session.

In adopting the report of its organization committee, it voted unanimously to make organization of the aircraft industry its major campaign during 1941. Committeemen reported that California aircraft plants, with backlogs of billions, chiefly for military planes, offer a potential membership of 100,000 men. The committee also urged close attention to organization of men in the employ of public utilities, a group of 60,000 in California.

Elected as president and secretary-treasurer of the state council were Philip M. Connelly, Los Angeles, and Louis Goldbladt, San Francisco, who have held their respective offices since organization of the council at Los Angeles two years ago.

BRIDGES INSTALLS

Harry Bridges, California CIO regional director, installed the new officers, commenting that in re-electing Connelly and Goldbladt, the convention had retained the services of two men particularly well fitted for their work.

"I know of more states where CIO has moved forward in a more progressive way than in California," he said, adding that almost every union has more members than a year ago, and that definite advances had been made in every basic industry He predicted that "with the solidarity and unity we have shown, nothing can stop us."

Court Hits Chiselling Employer

Washington, Oct. 19.—Orders of the U. S. Government putting the Lane Cotton Mills of New Orleans on an ineligible list for three years as a result of persistent violations of the Walsh-Healey Act were upheld in a decision of the District Federal Court here.

The decision, handed down by Federal Judge Jennings Bailey, held that the Government has the same freedom of choice in dealing or refusing to deal with firms as an individual or a private corporation has.

The Government order came through the Walsh-Healey Division of the Labor Dept., which administers the Walsh-Healey Act requiring government contractors to pay standard wages. The court decision was seen here as further support for the CIO contention that all violators of U. S. laws should be denied government contracts.

Gerber Baby Food Workers Vote CIO

Fremont, Mich., Oct. 19.—Workers at the Gerber Baby Foods Co., largest baby food canning plant in the country, registered a smashing victory in a Labor Board election when more than 60 per cent of the workers voted for Local 30, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Only steady year around workers were allowed to vote. The firm employs more than 300.

Southern Workers Turning To CIO

By LUCY R. MASON

CIO Public Relations Representative in the South

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 19.—Southern workers are turning more and more toward the CIO, as I discover every time I make a field trip. A recent swing that took me to Nashville, and Memphis, Tenn., New Orleans, and Mobile and Montgomery, Alabama, brought fresh evidence of this.

In Memphis workers were crowding the union hall every day asking help in organizing. On the evening I spoke to a local of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee at the invitation of Will Watts, field representative, there were five union meetings held before the hour for my talk — three being held in different corners of the same hall—while two groups met on the street outside for lack of room inside.

George Bass of the United Rubber Workers was continuing his work at the Firestone plant with great energy, notwithstanding the three separate attacks that were made on him in the past few months. Brother Himmaugh was rolling up locals for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

In New Orleans the CIO is now in the best position it has ever been. The waterfront unions are continuing to grow and strengthen their position, while the workers in many of the city's industries are responding to the leadership of Regional Director Fred Pieper and the representative of CIO unions that are coordinating their activities with his.

Public sentiment toward the CIO has vastly improved in New Orleans, as new contracts are signed and old ones renewed and CIO unions show their responsibility and strength.

While most of the union strength in Mobile is found in the waterfront unions, CIO activity is spreading to other industries and the future holds promise for general CIO growth. James Drury, representative of the National Maritime Union, has been in Mobile for about four years, has won the respect of the newspaper men and representative citizens as he has gone about the job of building his own union.

Returning to Atlanta after two weeks' absence, it was equally encouraging to find new locals popping up almost overnight. Labor Board elections being won and contracts negotiated.

The South is turning CIO faster and faster.

Upholstery Shops Sign Contracts

New York City, Oct. 19.—A number of wholesale and retail shops in the upholstery industry have signed contracts with Local 76, United Furniture Workers, Morris Pizer, secretary-treasurer of the local announced today.

Agreements in the wholesale trade providing a 35-hour week, $1.15 hourly minimum pay, time and a half for overtime, closed shop and other improved working conditions were signed by the Shelton Chair Co.; Somerset; Carlisle; Empire Shop; Joan Art Co.; and Meyer, Gunther, Martini.

NEW SHOPS

New retail shops reported to have settled with the union are: Hotel & Bedding Corp.; Capital Decorators; Wiseman & Co.; Bauman & Co.; Empire State Upholstery Co.; Leona Decorators and E. Green Co. About 200 organized workers are employed in the two departments.

The union is conducting strikes against three employers who refused to renew agreements which expired Sept. 1. The struck shops are Modern Age; Bristol Upholstery and Alba DeLuxe. The Modern Age shop has applied to the courts for an injunction. Elias Lieberman, the union's attorney, is fighting the granting of the injunction.

Ford's Criticism Of Union Upheld

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8 (UP).—

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE: The value of a fat advertising appropriation in having the news tailor-made is something the Ford Motor Co. knows now if it never knew it before. Here are headlines showing how six New York newspapers handled the recent federal court order which upheld all major portions of the Labor Board's scathing denunciation of the anti-union auto manufacturer. All six seized upon the one small point which the company won. But the streamer headline in the Detroit News—which ought to know—indicates that one paper at least wasn't fooled.

Strike Threatens Camden Shipyard

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 18.—Unless the New York Shipbuilding Corp. immediately accepts arbitration of its employes wages demands, the firm will be faced with a strike.

That was the notice served upon the company by Local 1, CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, which represents the shipyard's 10,000 employes here.

The union's main demand is for a 10c hourly wage increase. The company is enjoying a boom due to large government contracts.

Natl. Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman, after studying the situation a few days ago, proposed that if no settlement were reached Oct. 17, the entire dispute should be submitted to an arbitrator appointed by the commission.

"We are only seeking to obtain for ourselves the parity of wages enjoyed in navy yards and in other shipbuilding plants.

"For too long we have been underpaid and now we believe that some adjustment upward should be made by the company."

Shipping Halted On West Coast

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Shipping on the West Coast was at a standstill this week as the Shipowners Assn. of the Pacific stubbornly resisted demands of maritime unions.

The CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Assn. declared a strike this week. Previously members of the unaffiliated firemen, oilers, watertenders and wipers association had walked out.

Leaders of the CIO Marine Beneficial Assn. said their members had been locked out, as did officials of the AFL's seamen union.

Full support for the strikers has been voted by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, representing 11 unions which have a membership of 45,000.

On request of the U. S. Navy, the firemen and oilers' union agreed to work the S. S. El Capitan of the Consolidated Olympic Line, which is carrying materials to be used in mine laying.

CIO Building Union on Job At Packard

Detroit, Oct. 19.—One of the most important national defense jobs in the country is being worked on here by members of the CIO's United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

Members of the UCWOC are razing sections of the Packard Motor Co. plant to make way for an up-to-the-minute airplane engine factory. This plant will turn out thousands of airplane motors for the U. S. and British air forces under terms of a government contract.

UCWOC Organizer James Boyne revealed that the UCWOC has organized two brickyards in the city and the entire working force of a cement block manufacturing company.

Much of the UCWOC work in this area consists of industrial maintenance inside factories. Union contractors are doing considerable painting, plumbing, carpentry and electrical work. At the present time Local 98 in Detroit has 22 closed shop agreements.

The Upper Crust

"Where's the itty-bitty war Papa promised Mama when we were keeping company?"

300 In CIO Strike At Armstrong Cork

PENSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 19.—Three hundred employes of the Armstrong Cork plant here have been out on strike since Sept. 13 in one of the first CIO walkouts in the State of Florida.

Members of Local 12122, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, the strikers are fighting company violation of its union contract and chiseling on workers' pay.

The strike, 100 per cent successful, has prevented a single carload of material from leaving the plant, and has gained widespread support from workers and small businessmen in the city.

Although the company has tried to accuse the employes of holding up defense housing work, it has made no effort to ease the alleged shortage of building material by coming to a reasonable settlement. President of the firm is H. W. Prentice, head of the tory Natl. Association of Manufacturers.

REDUCED PAY RATE

In addition chiseling on wages due the men, the company has reduced rates without consulting the union, ignored seniority provisions of the contract, permitted abuse of workers by their foremen and used spies to bring about the discharge of union members, District 50 officials declared.

The local appealed to all workers to remember their strike when purchasing building materials, such as insulation, lineoleum and wall boards, all of which are marked with the Armstrong name.

Correction

Steel Union Gets Pay Lift

Cleveland, Oct. 19.—Pay increases ranging from 3 to 8 cents per hour have been awarded to 17 employes of the Atlas Screw and Belt Company in Cleveland, following negotiations with the company to adjust inequalities in wage rates. The total increase in the payroll will be more than $1,500 a year.

James Hart, field representative of the SWOC, who represented the district office in these negotiations, was assisted by the committee of Local Union 2200, composed of the following members: Michael A. Ferante, Willie Dawson and Carmella Valerio.

MUST RETURN DUES

Washington, Oct. 19.—Dues deducted for a company union by the Hughes Tool Co., Houston, Texas, since July, 1935, must be returned to the employes, the NLRB ruled in an order issued this week abolishing the stooge outfit.

Lewis Backs Willkie; Asks Labor Defeat FDR

Aircraft Profits Fly High

Washington, Oct. 26—Profits of the nation's booming aircraft industry are zooming skyhigh, while its wage level remains grounded far below the level of the unionized automobile industry, Federal Trade Commission statistics revealed today.

For 1939 important producers showed an average profit rate of 34.4 per cent on their invested capital, the figures showed. In 1938 the profit rate had been 24.2 per cent.

Cash dividends paid out to stockholders jumped from $11,000,000 in 1938 to $20,000,000 in 1939, it was disclosed. Foreign orders accounted for 63 per cent of the business of seven firms during last year, the FTC declared.

Washington, Oct. 26—A contract totaling $17,760,000 has been awarded to the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. of Wilmington, Del., the War Dept. announced this week.

STATES VIEWS: CIO President John L. Lewis, who spoke to a nationwide radio audience on Friday, Oct. 25, and stated his views on the national political situation.

CIO Head to Resign If Workers Reject His Counsel

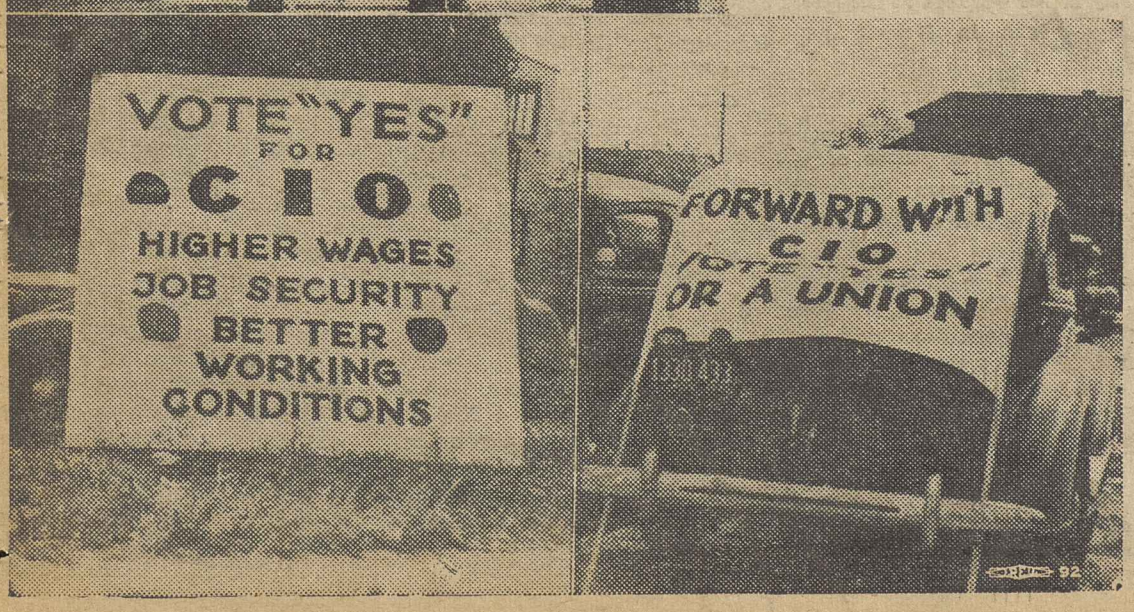
WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—John L. Lewis tonight warned the workers of the United States that a vote for the third term is a vote for war and dictatorship, and urged that they rally to the banner of Wendell L. Willkie.

Speaking to a tremendous radio audience over a three-network hookup, Lewis declared:

"I think the re-election of President Roosevelt for a third term would be a national evil of the first magnitude. He no longer hears the cries of the people."

A study of Roosevelt's speeches from his "quarantine" address in Chicago to his latest in Philadelphia, gives a clear key to "his motivation and his objective," Lewis said. "It is war.

"His every act leads one to this inescapable conclusion. The President has said that he hates war and will work for peace, but his acts do not match his words.



"I am opposed to any involvement of our country in foreign wars. I believe that every thoughtful and normal citizen is similarly opposed."

"I think that the election of Mr. Wendell Willkie is imperative in relation to the country's needs."

Declaring that he chose to speak "only in the role of a citizen and an American," rather than as an official representative of organized labor, the CIO president said that he will accept the re-election of Pres. Roosevelt "as the equivalent of a vote of no confidence and will retire as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at its convention in November."

Win $1,365,000 Pay Raise At Jersey Shipyard

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 26.—Pay increases totaling around $1,365,000 in the next year will go into the pockets of 9,000 members of Local 1, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, employed by the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, under the terms of an agreement signed this week between the CIO union and the company.

The wage boost, which will increase hourly rates and incentive contracts a flat seven per cent, and piece rates six per cent, is retroactive to October 4 when the old agreement expired.

27 CONFERENCES

The negotiations came to a successful conclusion after 27 conferences between the union's negotiating committee and the management, when a final compromise acceptable to the union was reached, averting the need to submit the dispute to arbitration. Union spokesmen have said that the local might be forced to call a strike if a settlement was not reached.

Some 5,000 members of Local 1 voted unanimously to accept the proposed terms at a mass meeting held last Sunday morning in Convention Hall. Gains won by the union in the new agreement include:

1. Elimination of differentials in pay for the same work on ships and in shops.

OLD AND NEW: Mervyn Rathborne (left), president of the CIO American Communications Assn. for the past several years, who resigned his post this week because of ill health. He will be succeeded after the CIO national convention by Joseph Selly, now vice-president of the union's telegraph department.

Rathborne Ill, Resigns As Wire Union Leader

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. — Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the CIO American Communications Assn. today announced his resignation on account of ill health.

His resignation, accepted with regret by the union's international executive board, will take effect immediately after the CIO convention at Atlantic City, N. J., which Rathborne will attend as a delegate.

Joseph P. Selly, vice-president of the union's telegraph department, has been appointed acting president of the union until a special election can be held. A new president will take office on March 1, 1941.

IN POOR HEALTH

In accepting Rathborne's resignation, the Board declared it had known of his poor health for some time but had prevailed upon him to remain in his position.

"At this time," the statement continued, "we feel that he should be given the rest that is absolutely essential to his health and which he so richly deserves.

"Pres. Rathborne, who was one of the founders of our union, and who has devoted himself to the labor movement for many years, has provided inspiring and courageous leadership for ACA during the past five years.

"One of his outstanding characteristics has been his constant effort to develop leadership from among those who work with him. If ACA has come to be known in the labor movement as a progressive rank and file trade union, a great deal of this credit should go to Mervyn Rathborne."

HEAR REPORTS

The Board meeting also heard reports of "marked progress in the campaign to organize Western Union, whose company union, the Association of Western Union Employes, has been ordered dissolved by a court-endorsed Natl. Labor Relations Board decree.

The meeting pledged support to the position of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis that labor law violators be denied government purchasing orders, protested efforts to deport Harry Bridges, demanded repeal of the Burke-Wadsworth military conscription bill and supported efforts of the New York Dairy Farmers Union to obtain better prices for raw milk.

Lumber Union Sets Final Plans For Big Drive

ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 26.—After hammering out a well defined and militant program to speed up organization of the remaining unorganized workers in the lumber industry, the fourth annual convention of the International Woodworkers of America adjourned here last week. Since last year's convention 30 new locals have been chartered and 6,000 new members taken in, according to the officers' report.

A number of resolutions rounding out the organizational, economic and political policies of the IWA were adopted the last two days of the six-day meeting. Delegates voted to support the policy of CIO President John L. Lewis and Labor's Non-Partisan League and to withhold endorsement of any presidential candidate.

In outlining the union's stand on national defense, the convention declared that it was not only necessary to defend "our shores, but labor's democratic rights" as well.

Following the reading of a message to the delegates from Harold Pritchett, the union's Canadian-born president who was unable to attend because U. S. Immigration authorities refused a visa, the convention unanimously pledged him "support in his efforts to return to the U. S. that he may more effectively carry out his duties as president of the International Woodworkers."

Win 35c Hourly Raise

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 26. — A 35c hourly wage increase, one of the biggest in American labor history, was won today for Portland boommen by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America.

A contract signed by the union and Portland operators covered seven booms and went into effect immediately.

Boommen are in charge of floating lumber rafts down the river to sawmills.

Seamen Ask FBI Release Secret Report on Union

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Demand for publication of a 100-page FBI report on the Natl. Maritime Union, and for a public hearing on the material in the report, was made by NMU President Joseph Curran in a letter to President Franklin D. Roosevelt just released here.

The demand was made, Curran wrote, to enable the union to show that shipowner-inspired attacks on its Americanism "have no basis in fact, except the wilful desire of the operators and industrialists to destroy the union."

"We believe," Curran wrote, "that the NMU is being called unAmerican because it took steps to expose the milking of the U. S. Treasury by the shipowners and because our union has made it impossible for the shipowners to maintain the rotten conditions and pitifully low wages that were formerly the lot of the seamen."

The FBI report on the NMU came to attention recently when Congressman Anderson of Missouri attacked the union on the floor of the House, stating that he had got the material from J. Edgar Hoover's files.

The FBI material, Curran pointed out, came chiefly from Walter Carney, now in Sing Sing prison for theft, who was exposed as an employer spy in the NMU some time ago and expelled with a number of other shipowners' agents.

GIRDLER SUED AGAIN:

Stockholder Asks $12,800,000

CLEVELAND, Oct. 26 — Tom Girdler's handling of Republic Steel's labor policy during the 1937 strike was once again under fire today.

Thomas F. O'Brien of Suffern, N. Y., a Republic stockholder, brought a $12,800,000 suit against Girdler and 17 other of the company's officials.

He charged that the corporation's bosses "negligently and recklessly permitted and still permit the defendant Girdler and others to act as the chief executive officers of Republic in charge of labor relations although they were and are known to the defendants to be violently anti-labor."

Like other suits of a similar nature brought against the group of Republic anti-union die-hards, O'Brien's brief listed a group of excessive expenses piled up in connection with the fight against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Itemized, these expenses were listed by O'Brien as:

Strikebreakers	$ 200,000
"Wholly untrue" publicity	100,000
Industrial ammunition	300,000
Back wages ordered by the NLRB	7,500,000
Damages incurred by assaults, deaths and injuries	2,000,000
Legal fees	200,000
Business losses	2,500,000

O'Brien said that these figures were inexact, and that only through his suit could the precise amount spent to break the strike be determined. By appealing the NLRB decision case to the U. S. Supreme Court, he charged, the company acted contrary to "the exercise of ordinary prudence and business judgment.

Textile Parley In April or May

New York, Oct. 26.—The next convention of the Textile Workers Union of America will be held in Washington during April or May, 1941, President Emil Rieve announced this week. The decision was reached at the TWUA Executive Council meeting held here recently. The Council will announce exact date of the convention later.

Speed Drive At Gypsum Factories

New York, Oct. 26—With about one-third of U. S. Gypsum's employes now in District 50 of the United Mine Workers, the union is pushing ahead to get complete organization of the company's 52 scattered plants.

In recent months, according to Organizer R. W. Hanson, three of the corporation's Jersey properties have gone CIO. These together with plants at Philadelphia, Jersey City and Staten Island, N. Y., the east, have given the union a substantial footing.

In recent months a large majority of the workers at the River Rouge plant in Detroit have signed up.

An attractive paper issued by the union calls attenion of the U. S. Gypsum employes of the benefits that will come from complete organization of the Gypsum system.

Despite isolated efforts in the past, "our wages and standards of working conditions remained far behind the tremendous profits that were rolled up by this Morgan corporation," the magazine declares.

Company profits in 1939 were double those of 1935, and in the first six months of this year the profits jumped 13 per cent over the same period last year.

Ohio CIO Hears Law Violators Attacked

AKRON, Oct. 26.—Delegates to the Ohio CIO Convention and 2,000 rubber workers gathered in the Akron Armory heard Philip Murray, CIO vice-president, exhort them to "Be aggressive—if need be, more militant," in pushing ahead for "a better life for America," as a climax to the convention's sessions.

"We are not satisfied that the profits from national defense shall go into the pockets of big business enterprise to the detriment of the working people," the steel union leader warned.

"We are going forward to increase our wages and improve our conditions. Our program is not a defensive program - - oh no. We are clamoring for better conditions and a better life for America — to make America a better country for its 130,000,000 citizens."

Other speakers were CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood and R. J. Thomas, president, United Automobile Workers, CIO, who pledged support to the rubber workers in their fight to defend the six-hour day in Akron rubber shops.

HAYWOOD SPEAKS

Haywood reminded the delegates that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," adding:

"The morale of our people is a vital part of national defense. The morale of the French worker was destroyed and France was destroyed.

"We cannot keep the morale of our workers at a high level by taking away hard-fought gains under the pretext of an emergency because of national defense."

Later the delegates passed a resolution supporting the CIO's position that government contracts should be barred from corporations which violate the Wagner Act.

Pres. John Owens and Sec.-Treas. Ted Silvey were both unanimously re-elected at the council sessions. Resolutions were passed providing for setting up a fund of $100,000 to obtain reforms in the unemployment insurance laws and to assist workers in getting claims; endorsing Pres. Roosevelt for a third term; and barring Communists, Nazis and Fascists from holding office in the council.

New CIO Local Asks 8-Hour Day

Washington, Oct. 26.—First results of a switch from AFL to CIO by city Sewer and Highway Dept. workers here were seen when the newly chartered CIO union, Local 183 of the United Federal Workers, went on a campaign for an eight-hour day for the workers involved.

Says U. S. Can Bar Contracts To Law Violators

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—The U. S. Government can deny contracts to firms that violate U. S. labor laws, even though they may be low bidders, according to a ruling issued by Acting Comptroller-General Elliott here.

The ruling, coming shortly after the opinion of Attorney-General Robt. H. Jackson that Natl. Labor Relations Board decisions against violators of the Wagner Act were binding until reversed by the courts, was seen as a further reinforcement of the CIO's position that Federal contracts should not go to law-breaking corporations.

The Comptroller General's decision also followed statements made by the Attorney-General, by Defense Commission officials and others, that the policy of denying contracts to violators would not be put into effect. These statements were made during testimony before the Smith Labor Board Investigating Committee, where the Jackson opinion and other amplifying statements were sharply attacked.

CIO POLICY

CIO policy has long had as one of its major planks the demand that the government should stop rewarding firms that break U. S. laws. The CIO has repeatedly tried to get legislation to this effect passed, only to have it blocked in the reactionary-controlled House Rules Committee in spite of passage in the Senate. The CIO has also asked for an executive order to this effect from the President of the U. S.

Boston Store Votes CIO

Boston, Mass., Oct. 26—R. H. White, one of Boston's largest department stores, will soon be called upon to sign a CIO contract. Employes voted at a Labor Board election this week for the United Retail & Wholesale Employes as their sole bargaining agency, defeating an AFL union 430 to 313.

Shipyard Union Leads

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 26—The CIO defeated a company union ....more than two to one in a Labor Board election held among employes of the Dravo Corp. here, Don Harris, CIO regional representative, reported today.

Workers voted 111 for the CIO's Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, Harris said, to 44 for the stooge outfit.

CIO Unions Win Polls At Campbell's Soup, GM, Westinghouse

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Chicago's branch of the biggest cannery in the world—Campbell's Soup—has gone CIO by a landslide vote for the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers.

The CIO majority, 1139 to 459, was polled for UCAPAWA Local 194 after weeks of campaigning in the face of every trick and subterfuge of intimidation in the company's bag, CIO union leaders declared.

"The winning of this election means the dawn of a new day, not only for Campbells workers but for cannery workers all over the U. S.," said Donald Henderson, UCAPAWA general president. Union leaders predicted that the next election, to be set at the Camden, N. J., Campbells plant, would be an easy victory now that Chicago has been won.

"After this victory in Chicago," said John Tisa, Camden organizer, "we can win the Camden plant even if the company does put its union on the ballot. Membership in the company union has declined to nothing in recent months."

The Campbell company — probably the most profitable cannery in the business—put on a high-powered but futile anti-CIO campaign in an effort to frighten or deceive workers into voting against the union.

Indiana GM Plant Goes CIO

ANDERSON, Ind., Oct. 26.—The 64th General Motors' plant was brought into the column of United Automobile Workers, CIO, when the huge Delco-Remy Division here balloted this week under the auspices of the NLRB.

Delco-Remy workers voted 3,894 for UAW-CIO as against 2,398 for "no union." The Guide Lamp plant here also operated by GM voted CIO last April.

R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, and Walter P. Reuther, director of its GM department, joined in congratulating Delco-Remy Local President, Lawrence Horton on the victory. GM workers celebrated far into the night when it became known that the "town had gone CIO."

Three years ago Anderson CIO workers were subjected to a reign of terror. Two hundred were thrown out of the Delco-Remy plant by force.

Westinghouse Victory

Newark, N. J., Oct. 26—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers rolled up its 20th Labor Board election victory in plants of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Text of Lewis's Radio Speech

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—John L. Lewis tonight urged the election of Wendell L. Willkie as the only way for the people of the United States to avoid war and dictatorship.

Speaking on three national networks in a program sponsored by the National Committee of Democrats for Willkie, Lewis said that if labor gave him the "equivalent of a vote of no confidence" by voting for Roosevelt, he would resign as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations at the convention in Atlantic City, N. J. in November.

Lewis reviewed the failure of the present administration during the past eight years to solve such major problems as unemployment, warned of the increasing drift to war, and predicted that a third term would pave the way for dictatorship.

The CIO leader declared that those who have heard the President's series of speeches in recent years "will understand his motivation and his objective. It is war. His every act leads one to this inescapable conclusion."

I address all Americans. Our country is at one of the cross-roads of its political destiny. The issues run deep and will inevitably affect the well-being and lives of every American. They will also affect the population of every other civilized country, and may well determine the stability or instability of all the free institutions of our present day culture.

I am conscious of the degree of responsibility which attaches to my words. I am a qualified representative of many organizations of labor, and other groups of citizens. It is not necessary to enumerate them, since my listeners are familiar with their identity. Suffice it to say that the direct and affiliated membership of these several organizations amounts to substantially ten million men and women. Adding to this number the numerical strength of their dependent families, there is achieved a sum-total of human beings amounting to approximately one-fourth of the total population of our nation. Abandoning my right to speak officially for this great segment of our population, I choose to speak tonight only in the role of a citizen and an American. I do so in all the pride of my heritage, and with a desire to protect and preserve that heritage, and likewise the heritage of my peers. Accordingly, tonight, I do not speak for labor, but on the contrary, I speak to labor and to all my countrymen. I do not control the vote of any one man or woman. I have no power and no influence, except insofar as those who believe in me may accept my recommendations.

Drift To War

On September 4th, 1939, in a public radio address, I said (quote): "The nation cannot forever continue its appalling drift — thoughtless and sadly executed experimentation will not always suffice to beguile a suffering people. The internal national debt has already reached such proportions that it may never be liquidated by orthodox methods. In the face of the economic debacle in America, many of our statesmen are more concerned and agitated over the political quarrels in Europe. War has always been the device of the politically despairing and intellectually sterile statesmen. It provides employment in the gun factories and begets enormous profits for those already rich. It kills off the vigorous males, who if permitted to live, might question the financial exploitation of the race. Above all, war perpetuates in imperishable letters on the scroll of fame and history, the names of its political creators and managers."

The foregoing statement constitutes the first basis of my personal opposition to the re-election of President Roosevelt for a third term as Chief Executive of the Republic. Those who hear these words, and who have studied the public addresses of the President, from his Chicago "quarantine speech" to his Charlottesville "stab in the back" address, and then to Dayton and Philadelphia, will understand his motivation and his objective. It is war. His every act leads one to this inescapable conclusion. The President has said that he hates war and will work for peace, but his acts do not match his words. I am opposed to any involvement of our country in foreign wars. I believe that every thoughtful and normal citizen is similarly opposed They are willing, as I am willing, to contribute everything for any necessary defense of our geographical integrity, our families, our possessions, our liberties and our lives.

The flaming horror of the current war now engulfs many nations. Reason would seem to prompt a course of national action designed to restrict and abate the war, rather than to expand and intensify its scope and destruction.

President's Power

The present concentration of power in the office of the President of the United States has never before been equalled in the history of our country. His powers and influence in this republic are so far-reaching that they intimately and vitally affect the lives and fortunes of every citizen. In like measure, they may affect the lives and fortunes of other nations and their populations.

How startling, therefore, is the spectacle of a President who is disinclined to surrender that power, in keeping with the traditions of the republic. The suggestion of a third term, under these conditions, is less than wholesome or healthy. Personal craving for power, the overwhelming abnormal and selfish craving for increased power, is a thing to alarm and dismay.

Eminent Americans have analyzed this principle in a manner that should bring conviction to the heart of every questioner. No citizen with the proper regard for the maintenace of orderly, temperate and considerate government should light endow any politician or statesman with a brief of authority that, for all practical consideration, runs in perpetuity.

Power for what? Personal and official power to what end? In all history, the unwarranted exercise of continuously vested authority has brought its train of political and social convulsions, for which humanity has paid an appalling price in loss of liberty, in disorder, tragedy and death.

Need No Superman

America needs no superman. It denies the philosophy that runs to the deification of the state. America wants no royal family. Our forbears paid the price in blood, agony, privation and sorrow, requisite for the building of this republic. Are we now to cast away that priceless liberty, which is our heritage? Are we to yield to the appetite for power and the vaunting ambitions of a man who plays with the lives of human beings for a pastime?

I say "No." And whether I stand alone, or whether I am sustained, as I think I will be by the overwhelming number of American citizens, I should retain these convictions. It is time for the manhood and the womanhood of America to assert themselves. Tomorrow may be too late.

If President Roosevelt is re-established in office in the forthcoming election, he will answer to no man, including the congress, for his executive acts, that may create a dictatorship in this land. This election may be historically comparable to the controlled elections and plebescites of some of the nations

SHOOTING WITH BOTH BARRELS

Henry for The CIO NEWS

Stable Door Ajar

Acting Comptroller-General R. N. Elliott has recently issued a ruling to the effect that government departments have the right to refuse to award contracts to concerns which do not comply with the Wagner Act and other labor laws, even though they may submit the lowest bids.

This furnishes additional evidence of the complete legality of the course so long urged upon the government by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

There is now no shadow of legal reason why an executive order should not be issued making observance of the National Labor Relations Act and other labor laws a binding condition of all government contract work.

Policy statements have been issued by the Defense authorities and sent to Congress by the President, calling attention to the importance of labor law observance on government contracts. Attorney-General Jackson has issued a ruling that a corporation which refuses to obey an order of the National Labor Relations Board must be considered in violation of the law unless and until it can obtain a court reversal of such order.

Yet huge government contracts have continued to be issued to flagrant violators of the Labor Act such as the Bethlehem Steel Corp. In fact, Bethlehem together with such other law violators as the Todd Shipbuilding Co., Diamond T Truck Co. and the duPont Co., have received more than a billion dollars in defense business since Sept. 6, when the policy statement on this subject was adopted.

Now Defense Commissioner Knudsen has announced that all of the present schedule of defense contracts, to an amount of 13½ billions, will have been issued by mid-November.

If immediate action is not taken, and made retroactive, it will be another case of locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen.

Freedom of the Air

The nightly CIO program has been barred from the air in San Francisco, through the refusal of Station KYA to renew the contract for this broadcast.

It has been barred on the grounds of being "controversial" in subject matter, and so in violation of a provision of the code of the National Association of Broadcasters against selling time on controversial subjects.

This attack on labor's rights to buy time is deeply resented and raises a number of far-reaching questions:

(1) What right has a private association of station owners to enforce regulations thus curtailing freedom of the air?

(2) Why should a labor news program be barred as "controversial" when the air waves are cluttered up with so-called news programs sponsored by big employers which are definitely biased against labor?

(3) Under the law, radio stations are supposed to be operated "in the public interest." Is it in the public interest that the regular presentation of labor news and comment should be suppressed?

Labor is as much concerned with freedom of the air as it is with freedom of the press. Besides protesting the barring of the San Francisco program, the CIO will also concern itself with the issue of principle thus raised.

In the public interest, it will not be satisfied until freedom of the air is assured to labor as well as to big advertisers, in the spirit of our country's constitution.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

SOMETHING has got to be done about the younger generation, writes a "Disturbed Father." From all I read, he says, it is in grave danger of "moral disintegration;" it is "losing faith"; and all this is doing something to our "national fibre."

Walter Lippmann, a reformed debunker, thinks the trouble is in history books. The idea that our founding fathers were not unmindful of their own economic interests, for instance, he points out, is a "disintegrating" one. Next thing you know, someone will be doubting the story of George Washington and the cherry tree.

Librarian Archibald McLeish blames it on books that portray the less attractive aspects of war. They shouldn't be written, he thinks.

Professor Nicholas Murray Butler blames the professors and says that any of them who refuse to take sides in the "war between beasts and human beings" should be fired.

To debunk or rebunk, that seems to be the question.

"Disturbed Father" undertook to restore the faith of the younger generation in his own home, with disturbing results. Here's his story:

I resolved to expose my son John, aged 19, to the elevating sentiments expressed by the great statesmen of our day, who at the greatest personal sacrifice are offering to serve their country if elected to office.

So one evening I cornered John, closed the door firmly and turned on the radio, until the faith-restoring phrases and the frenzied applause of the crowd filled the room.

The effect was instantaneous. The cat stopped lick-herself and tail erect headed for the kitchen door. John grabbed for his hat and made for the front door.

"I'm going to the movie," he announced.

"What's on?" I stalled.

"Oh, nothing particular."

"Wouldn't you rather listen to these speeches?"

"No," John replied, with a positiveness that he gets from his mother.

The only way I could induce him to sit down was to turn off the radio. And I thereupon demanded to know why he considered any old movie better than listening to the speeches of politicians.

"All they say is bunk," John blurted out.

"Why do you say that?"

"Because they don't mean what they say. When they talk about peace they are thinking of war. They blab about the American standard of living, and then you find out that the average income is around five or six hundred dollars a year.

"They'll promise anything to get elected and then they don't keep their promises. When they get in, they reward their rich friends and look after themselves and don't worry about the rest of us.

"They pass one law for the rich and another for the poor. The poor have to obey the laws to protect the rich, but the rich don't have to obey the laws to protect the poor."

"Now wait a moment," I interrupted, shocked at this revelation of moral disintegration, lost faith and all the other things of which Lippmann warned, right in my own home. "You can't get away with a statement like that, young man. What do you mean?"

"Well," John began to explain, in a tone of voice as if he were educating me, instead of I him, "it's like this. A lot of laws have been passed to protect labor, haven't they? They say that a worker can't work too long for too low wages; that an employer can't fire a man for joining a union; that the workers have a right to choose their own union representatives and the boss must bargain collectively with them—and a lot more like that."

"Yessir," I replied warmly, encouraged by this spark of faith in the younger generation. "And mighty fine laws they are. Doesn't that make you think politicians are worth listening to when they can pass laws like that."

"But I'd still rather go to a movie," John persisted stubbornly. "You see the unions have to do most of the work to get laws like that passed. And when they are passed, the big businessmen are tipped a wink that they don't have to pay much attention to them.

"If I don't go and register for the draft when I'm 21, you know what'll happen to me. But when Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel says he doesn't like labor laws and doesn't see why he should obey them, he gets a billion dollars of government business and is practically told there's no reason why he should obey these laws."

That stumped me for awhile. And before I could think up a snappy answer, John had grabbed his hat and was off, with faith unrestored and with his moral fibre still disintegrating all over the lot.

I am forced to the conclusion, says "Disturbed Father," that there are only two things we can do about the younger generation. Either we must treat them to a lot more expert and persistent rebunking, or else we must crack down on the politicians and make them do some of the things they say.

And judging from my experience with John, he concludes, the easier course is to get to work on the politicians.

Maritime Unions Criticize New Appointee to U. S. Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Appointment of ex-Congressman John J. Dempsey to the U. S. Maritime Commission was protested in a statement issued by the CIO Maritime Committee here on the ground that he "not only fails to represent maritime labor but has continually shown hostility to all organized labor." The protest was sent in a wire signed by Joseph Curran as chairman of the CIO Committee and Bjorne Halling, executive secretary.

The Maritime Committee's statement pointed out that CIO unions have "repeatedly stated that because of the importance of the merchant marine in the defense program, it is imperative that labor be represented on the Maritime Commission," and asked for immediate open hearings before the Senate Commerce Committee on Dempsey's nomination by Pres. Roosevelt.

It also went into ex-Congressman Dempsey's labor record at some length, describing him as a "fit companion for the notorious anti-labor Congressman Martin Dies" on whose un-American investigating committee Dempsey has served.

Dempsey's first anti-labor acts were committed as far back as 1918, the Maritime Committee declared, when as vice-president of the Brooklyn, N. Y. Rapid Transit Co. he was in charge of breaking a strike of subway motormen. A direct result of this job, according to the Committee, was the death of 99 people and injury to 100 more when a scab motorman wrecked a crowded train.

Dempsey was indicted for manslaughter on this count, the statement adds, after which he was "moved to New Mexico and there proved that any American boy, even a strikebreaker, can become a Congressman." In Congress, his voting record, as recited in the Committee statements, included:

1. A vote for the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory miltary training bill.

2. A vote for the Smith Committee set up to investigate the Natl. Labor Relations Board—the committee that subsequently came out with the Smith "ripper bill" designed to wreck the Wagner Act.

3. A vote for the Congressional bill to deport Harry Bridges, CIO California director and leader of the CIO Longshore and Warehouse workers, without trial or hearing.

4. A failure to vote on the anti-lynching bill when it came before the House in 1940.

ALIEN BAITING

In addition, the CIO Committee statement cited Dempsey's sponsorship of the Dempsey bill, HR 4860, which passed the House and which would require the deportation of any alien advocating any change whatever in the American government.

This bill, the statement added, would "gag labor, religious, fraternal and other groups to which aliens belong." Dempsey also supported the Hobbs anti-alien bill, which would put deportable aliens in concentration camps without trial for indefinite periods. The Smith anti-alien registration and fingerprinting bill, now the law of the land, was also supported by him.

"As a member of the Dies Committee," the statement concluded, "Dempsey has repeatedly stated that he is anxious to be fair, but he has never demonstrated by his actions that he would support the right of labor officials to make full and free statements before the Dies Committee, nor has he ever demonstrated by his actions that he really believes what he says."

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 26 (FP)—Bemis bags have been piled on Mississippi levees to hold floods in check, but the big bag company has itself succumbed to the flood tide of unionism.

For the first time in its 82-year history, Bemis Bros. Bag Co. has signed a union contract.

The agreement, which will be automatically extended as other units in the chain of 21 Bemis plants are organized, was signed with the CIO Textile Workers Union. It was the result of a strike by 900 workers in the two local plants and the Minneapolis mill.

Possibly instrumental in bringing Bemis abreast of the times was the picketing of the Minneapolis plant by strikers clad in clothes of ancient design. The old-fashioned garments were meant to symbolize the firm's labor policy.

PAID VACATIONS

Under the new contract every plant where the TWU shows a majority automatically comes under the agreement. Benefits include a one-week paid vacation, sole bargaining rights, settlement of disputes by conciliation and recognition of shop committees.

Negotiations are now going on at the firm's Omaha and Buffalo plants, while intensive organization is progressing at Kansas City, St. Louis and three Tennessee plants. The company has a total of 5,800 workers.

Electrical Union Smashes AFL Group's Long Reign of Terror

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Employes of the Belmont Radio Corporation after three years under a collusive closed shop contract held by Local B-1031 of the AFL Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers voted in a Labor Board election here last week nearly three-to-one in favor of the CIO's United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America. The UE got 393 votes. The IBEW got 109 votes.

This is the first Labor Board election in Chicago in which the UE has participated. The National officers of UE view the victory as a significant "break through" of the ring of collusive contracts maintained by employers and by "Umbrella Mike" Boyle's IBEW in that area.

The IBEW set up at Belmont was typical of their "organizing" strategy. The IBEW sold Belmont management on the idea that it would be better to sign up a "cheap" contract with IBEW than to let genuine CIO unionism get a foothold in the plant.

For three years, IBEW contracts steadily worsened wages and other conditions. For fear even the "Class B" local might run away from them, the IBEW permitted only a few employes to be members, the others worked under a "special permit" for $2 per month.

FEW SAW CONTRACT

No employe was permitted to see the union contract, and only "Pop" Marquis and his son, Harold, as business agents of the IBEW local, knew what the contract provisions were.

The IBEW local never held a business meeting. Its monthly gatherings were devoted to discussing social affairs. No financial reports were ever made to employes. No grievances were handled.

When the UERMWA filed petition for certification on June 10, the IBEW in collaboration with the employers went into a "reign of terror." Nine workers were fired for aiding the UE. Mysterious phone calls threatened other UE members. IBEW strongarm squads attempted to beat up UE leaflet distributors at the plant gates.

DELAYED VOTING

Through pressure on the Labor Board, the IBEW got a series of delays in the election. A few weeks before the election, Belmont took on a number of workers from other plants under the IBEW collusive contract. The idea was that the newcomers would propagandize for the IBEW, but coming as they did from IBEW-dominated shops, they were fed up with the AFL stuff and did not assist IBEW after all.

Since the election victory, negotiations on a contract are opening at once, and the local is going ahead to make the plant 100 per cent UERMWA.

Pamphlet For Aliens

New York, Oct. 26—Complete information for aliens, all of whom must register under the Alien Act before December 26, 1940, is contained in a new pamphlet put out by the Common Council for American Unity, Inc., under the title "Alien Registration, a Manual of Information for Aliens and Those Advising Them."

The pamphlet explains the citizenship and naturalization laws and the Alien Act itself.

An appendix contains the text of the Alien Act, a list of immigration quotas, and advice on how to become a U. S. citizen. It sells for 15 cents, and can be secured from the Common Council for American Unity, Inc., 222 4th Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Excuse Draftees From Dues In Steel Union

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 26.—Members of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee who volunteer or are drafted for military service, will be excused from dues payment during their time in the army.

SWOC Sec.-Treas. David MacDonald this week sent a notice to all local unions in which he wrote:

"If any members of your local union are called up, volunteer or are conscripted for military service with the armed forces of the United States, they are entitled to exoneration from dues payments for the period they serve."

of the Old World. I ask my countrymen to pause briefly and think deeply before the die is cast on this grave issue.

Earlier Criticism

On January 24, 1940, at Columbus, Ohio, in a public address, I said in part, as follows:

"In 1936, a coalition was effected between the Democratic party and organized labor. The resources of both interests were pooled — the objective being the return of the Party to power in the election of the same year. Organized labor furnished money, speakers, party workers in every political subdivision and many millions of votes. It substantially financed the National Committee, various state committees, congressional committees, Labor's Non-Partisan League, the American Labor Party, the Progressive National Committee and the Good Neighbor League. Psychologically and politically, organized labor created the atmosphere of success that returned the Democratic Party to power with an ample margin of safety.

"A political coalition, at least, presupposes a post-election good faith between the coalescent interests. The Democratic Party and its leadership have not preserved this faith. In the last three years, labor has not been given representation in the Cabinet, nor in the administrative or policy-making agencies of Government. The current Administration has not sought nor seriously entertained the advice or views of labor upon the question of national unemployment or lesser questions affecting domestic economy, internal taxation, foreign trade, military and naval expansion, relations with foreign nations or the issues of war or peace. Labor today has no point of contact with the Democratic Administration in power, except for casual and occasional interviews which are granted its individual leaders. In the Congress, the unrestrained baiting and defaming of labor by the Democratic majority has become a pastime, never subject to rebuke by the titular or actual leaders of the Party.

"As the current year opens, the Democratic Party is in default to the American people. After 7 years of power, it finds itself without solution for the major questions of unemployment, low national income, mounting internal debt, increasing direct and consumer taxation and restricted foreign markets. There still exists the same national unhappiness that it faced seven years ago."

No Reply

The foregoing indictment has never been answered nor refuted, nor sucessfully denied by any single spokesman for the Democratic Party or the Roosevelt Administration. They cannot gainsay the cold, stark facts of that record. There is no spokesman in the Democratic Party, or in the Roosevelt Administration, intellectually capable of this task.

If this be true, what of the future? President Roosevelt is asking the American people to contribute to him at least four more years out of their individual lives. What will he do with those lives and this nation in the next four years, and how does he propose to do it? He has not said, and he asks from the people a grant of discretionary power that would bind him to no course of action, except the unpredictable policies and adventures which he may later devise.

After all, Americans are not a nation of guinea pigs, constantly subject to the vicissitudes of the economic and political experiments of an amateur, ill-equipped practitioner in the realm of political science.

Millions Starve

One of the Commissioners of National Defense recently called public attention to the fact that there were forty-five million hungry people in America. In his subsequent press conference, the President rebuked the Commissioner for the statement and asserted that the condition had no relationship to the problem of national defense.

It is authoritatively stated that 20,000,000 people in the United States are able to spend only five cents per meal per person. Consider the astounding facts: 45,000,000 people in this land suffering from insufficient food and undernourishment, 20,000,000 of whom are required to live on an actual expenditure of fifteen cents a day. This, in a land of plenty, with its agricultural granaries, overflowing with surplus farm commodities, which the farmer is unable to sell. There now are the tears for the "ill-housed, ill-clothed and ill-fed?"

Army of Jobless

The Roosevelt Administration is trying to create prosperity by the making of guns and lethal weapons. It points to the increased volume of production. It forgets to state that the productivity of the individual worker has vastly increased since 1929, and that increased volume does not correspondingly mean increased employment of workers. It forgets to state that there are 9,115,000 men and women in America still unemployed, and that the National Defense Program of production, when it reaches its maximum, will fall 5,000,000 short of providing employment for all. The Administration spokesmen forget to say what will happen to economic America when the 25,000,000 men now under arms in foreign nations, and the 70,000,000 citizens who service these armies, are returned to peacetime pursuits. The manufacturers of America and the workers of America will then have to compete in the remaining world markets with the quantitative production of foreign nations, whose workmen will occupy the relative economic and social status of chattel slaves.

Where will our country then sell its goods? Surely not in Europe, nor in the Baltic or Mediterranean areas. Surely not in Africa or the Orient. Surely it is obvious that South American markets will be penetrated by the cheap labor products of the world commercial adversaries of the United States of America. What is being done by the Roosevelt Administration to safeguard our population from such an impending economic disaster?

What is being done to modernize the marketing methods of the United States in foreign trade territories, so as to compete with the changed rules of international commerce?

New Deal Incapable

As a literal fact, the record of the last seven years is proof sufficient that the Roosevelt Administration is incapable of meeting this situation and maintaining this nation's rightful share of world commerce. And yet, this administration in nonchalant and sprightly fashion, bluntly asks the American people to grant it at least an additional four years of power, so it can continue to toy with the lives of men and the destiny of nations.

If not Roosevelt, whom do I recommend to do the job of making secure our nation and its people? Why, of course, I recommend the election of Wendell L. Willkie as the next President of the United States.

He is a gallant American. He has opened his heart to the American people. He is not an aristocrat. He has the common touch. He was born in the briar and not to the purple. He has worked with his hands, and has known the pangs of hunger. He has had experience in various fields of American enterprise, and is an administrator and an executive.

Some sources have suggested that I should withhold my support of Mr. Willkie because Messrs. Grace, Girdler and Weir were allegedly supporting him. This is specious reasoning. One could as well suggest that the communicants of a particular faith should leave their church because of the presence of a hypocrite in their midst.

Aside from this, these gentlemen must possess some virtue, because President Roosevelt has awarded them many fat and lucrative government contracts, at the expense of the public purse.

I may also add in passing, that it is a reasonable hope that these gentlemen, acting in their corporate capacities, will soon execute collective bargaining contracts with the C. I. O.

Willkie's Pledges

Wendell Willkie has said that he will put the unemployed to work; that he will abolish pauperism. He has said that he will increase the national income by working to increase the wages and incomes of those unemployed.

He says that he will enlist the representative brains of the nation to do this job. He says that he will take the representatives of labor into his Cabinet and into the policy-making agencies of government, to assist and cooperate in the economic rehabilitation of America.

He has said that he will reduce the cost of operation of our government, and thus reduce the taxes imposed upon individual citizens.

He has said that he believes in, and will enforce the right of labor to organize, and will promote collective bargaining between industry and labor.

He has said that he will preserve and maintain all social legislation previously enacted for the protection of labor and any other citizen.

Guarantees Peace

Wendell Willkie has given his guarantee to the American people that if elected President, he will not send the sons of American mothers and American fathers to fight in foreign wars. He avers that he will not use the power and influence of this mammoth nation to promote or create war, but rather exercise that power and that influence to abate war and promote and maintain peace between nations.

This statement of principles and objectives entitles Mr. Willkie to the support of every thoughtful citizen.

Can he accomplish such a task, many will ask. It is my considered judgment that if Wendell Willkie is elected President, this task can, and will be done.

Can we believe Mr. Willkie, some will ask. I reply that I have confidence in Mr. Willkie's integrity and honor. I do not think that he would wittingly deceive the people, or lead them astray for selfish purposes. He is a strong man. He is strong enough to enlist the services of other strong men to do the job of saving our nation, whether from attack by external foes, or disintegration from disunity within. For long years, I have served the men and women of labor. While serving them, I have ever sought also to serve my country and all its citizenry. I have been able to carry on, only because my acts were sustained by the confidence of the millions who stand behind me.

The words I utter tonight represent my mature conclusions and my sincere convictions. They are expressed, because I believe that the men and women of labor, and all other Americans, are entitled to know the truth as I see it.

Third Term Danger

I think the re-election of President Roosevelt for a third term would be a national evil of the first magnitude. He no longer hears the cries of the people. I think that the election of Mr. Wendell Willkie is imperative in relation to the country's needs. I commend him to the men and women of labor, and to the nation, as one worthy of their support, and as one who will capably and zealously protect their rights, increase their privileges and restore their happiness.

It is obvious that President Roosevelt will not be re-elected for the third term, unless he has the overwhelming support of the men and women of labor. If he is, therefore, re-elected, it will mean that the members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations have rejected my advice and recommendation. I will accept the result as being the equivalent of a vote of no confidence, and will retire as President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, at its convention in November. This action will save our great movement, composed of millions of men and women, from the embarrassment and handicap of my leadership during the ensuing reign of President Roosevelt.

To the leaders of the C.I.O., its executives, staff officers and field representatives, I know, and have worked with each of you. Upon some of you, I have bestowed the honors which you now wear. Through the years of struggle, you have been content that I should be in the forefront of your battles. I am still the same man. Sustain me now, or repudiate me. I will not chide you, and will even hope that you will not regret your action.

To the Mine Workers of the nation, who know me best, and who have always been the shock troops in the forward march of labor, I say it is best for you, and for those you love, to help oppose the creation of a political dictatorship in free America.

To the Steel Workers, the Automobile Workers, the Shipbuilders, the Maritime Workers, the Lumber Workers in the far northwest, the Textile Workers, the White Collar Workers, and the men and women of labor in the miscellaneous industries, I say I have worked for you and have fought for you. Believe me now, when I say that your interests, and the interests of the families you support, lie in the acceptance of the truth of the words I speak tonight.

Affects All Groups

To the farmers of the nation, I say that I know something of your problems. I was born and reared in an agricultural state. You cannot be prosperous while the urban and industrial population is idle and debased. Thhe national income must be increased, so that your crops will move to market at prices that will sustain you. Your interest lies in aggressive support of Mr. Willkie.

To the youth of America, many of who will cast their first vote in November, I say that the road of oportunity for you lies in the election of Wendell Willkie for President. Surely, you wish to preserve the privileges, for which your elders and your forbears fought. Surely, you wish to widen the horizon of opportunity for yourselves and your contemporary citizens.

To the members of the Negro race in our northern states, I say your incomes as a group are the lowest; your living conditions are the poorest; your unemployment is the highest; discrimination against you is the worst. Surely, you have no cause to believe that President Roosevelt is an indispensable man; and surely you believe that Wendell Willkie can, and will do more for you than has been done in the last seven years. As a proven friend of the Negro race, I urge you to vote for Willkie.

You millions of young men, who have qualified for the peace-time military draft have you cause to rejoice? You, who may be about to die in a foreign war, created at the whim of an international meddler, should you salute your Caesar? In cold, common sense, I think you should vote for Willkie.

You members of the Christian Church, why should you vote for and support the man who ignores home considerations and practices the modern sorcery of war mongering?

First Victims

Labor and the Christian Church are the first victims of the social and political convulsions which follow war and one-man government.

To the women of our race, I say perhaps you can do the greatest part of all. May I hope that on election day, the mothers of our sons will, with the sacred ballot, lead the revolt against the candidate who plays at a game that may make cannon fodder of your sons.

For myself, it matters not. I do not fear the bravos of the Roosevelt Administration. I fear only for the people, and for our country. I am joining with Mr. Willkie in trying to do my part. I shall believe, my countrymen, that you will do likewise.

Good night.

LABOR AND THE LAW:

Two Major Cases

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

There have been two recent cases in the courts which are of vital importance to labor.

The first involved the National Labor Relations Board case against the Ford Motor Company. Several years ago the Labor Board, after lengthy hearings, found the Ford Motor Company to be one of the worst violators of common human decency and fundamental rights and that it had violated practically every provision of the National Labor Relations Act. Its agents had brutally beaten several representatives of the United Automobile Workers Union who were attempting to distribute leaflets to the employes of the Company. Flagrantly and openly the Company was found to have carried out a systematic and brutal campaign of intimidation to deny its employes their rights guaranteed under the Labor Act.

ONE POINT FOR FORD

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals recently affirmed substantially the order of the Labor Board. However, the Court reversed that portion of the Board's order in which the Company was ordered to desist from distributing leaflets which were directed against the United Auto Workers Union and aimed at discouraging its employes from joining that union. The Court upheld the right of the Company to distribute such leaflets upon the ground that this practice was merely the exercise of free speech and could not be prohibited. It is of the utmost importance that this case be taken to the United States Supreme Court in order to obtain a clear ruling on this specific issue and the CIO has made strong representations to the Labor Board and to the Department of Justice to this effect.

One of the most effective amendments of the National Labor Relations Act which the anti-labor corporations have been urging upon Congress has been the one to allow employers, under the guise of freedom of speech, to defeat the rights of their employes to organize into unions of their own choice. The opinion of the court in the Ford case would accomplish this result. Under the guise of freedom of speech, to defeat the right of their employes to destroy unions and defeat any attempt of labor organizations in unorganized plants. It is to be hoped that this ruling of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals will be reversed by the United States Supreme Court.

There is no absolute constitutional right to express oneself at all times regardless of the rights of others. The National Labor Relations Act simply establishes a social policy that employes should be free from any interference from their employers in their right to choose their own union. To this extent Congress has declared that the employer's right to express himself on union matters is limited. Certainly this social policy should not be held to be illegal or unconstitutional.

There is no real issue of freedom of speech where the employer attempts, through leaflets or other expressions, to interfere with the right of workers to organize into their own free unions. It is in the nature of the situation that among unorganized workers who are attempting to join a union, any expression by the employer adverse to the union necessarily interferes with the workers' freedom of choice.

The employer doesn't have to engage in threats or open intimidation. Implied in an employer's advice to his employes not to join a union is the threat that if the employe does so, he may not continue with his job—although his subsequent discharge would obviously be for reasons other than for joining the union.

The Oregon Case

In the second recent case, the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon held an Oregon anti-picketing law to be unconstitutional. The CIO had participated in the proceeding brought in the Oregon courts to challenge the legality of that statute which had been adopted through the initiative process in that State in 1938.

The Oregon Supreme Court relied substantially upon the United States Supreme Court case in which a local ordinance that prohibited all picketing had been held to violate the constitutional right of workers to exercise free speech. In the United States Supreme Court decision the basic principle was laid down that:

"publicizing the facts of a labor dispute in a peaceful way through appropriate means, whether by pamphlet, by word of mouth, or by banner, must now be regarded as within that liberty of communication which is secured to every person by the Fourteenth Amendment against abridgment by a state."

The decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court and of the Oregon Supreme Court are of far-reaching importance in the struggle of labor to achieve equality under the law as against the protection of property rights through its demand for the protection of fundamental constitutional civil rights.

The legal doctrine underlying the Oregon case is that union organizers and members of unions, in their attempt to organize through picketing, are exercising fundamental rights of free speech and assembly which cannot be interfered with by local or state authorities and that any such interference constitutes a violation of the United States Constitution.

This situation must be distinguished from the one which arises in the Ford case. The economic handicaps under which workers operate must be recognized to the extent that where workers attempt to express themselves in a labor dispute, the social interest in keeping such right of expression free from interference is of greater importance than the interest in protecting the employer's business. Workers have no economic means at their disposal other than their right to refuse to work and their ability to convey to the public the facts in a labor dispute.

To eliminate or to interfere with these rights, would force the workers into a position of economic slavery. On the other hand, where an employer's freedom of expression is limited or curtailed to the extent that he may not interfere with the right of his employes to be free in deciding whether to join a union, such a policy has a desirable social basis.

Oregon's High Court Kills Anti-Strike Law

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 26.—Oregon's reactionary anti-picketing law, passed by state referendum two years ago, was declared unconstitutional today by a 5-1 decision of the Oregon Supreme court.

The decision climaxed a campaign initiated by the CIO, the AFL and the railway brotherhoods almost immediately after the statute became law. The high court's ruling upset an earlier decision in favor of the bill which was handed down by the state circuit court.

The majority decision was based on U. S. Supreme Court opinions which found similar statutes in California and Alabama unconstitutional.

"In the field of federal constitutional law," the Oregon court declared, "the Supreme Court of the United States is the final arbiter."

The state statute, considered the most stringent of its kind, placed major obstacles in the way of bona fide picketing, forbade "jurisdictional" strikes, and curtailed drastically the political and fund-raising activities of unions. Violators could be intered in county jails and fined up to $1,000.

TORIES ACTIVE

Alfred A. Hampson, attorney for the Associated Farmers, defended the statute, according to the Federated Press. He is a member of the law firm of Dey, Hampson & Nelson, attorneys for such corporations as Southern Pacific, Standard Oil and Associated Oil.

Considered by the state supreme court were these cases:

1. Grand jury indictment of 21 members of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America, for picketing a Portland dock on which "hot" lumber had been placed.

2. A suit filed by the AFL motion picture operators against a Portland theater which announced a 17 per cent wage cut on expiration of a contract.

3. Arrest of George Cronin, member of the CIO Maritime Office Employes, a local of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, for contempt of court in connection with picketing to enforce a Labor Board order.

In all three cases, the law destroyed collective bargaining by forbidding picketing where the union had less than a majority of the total number of workers employed by the firms in all parts of the country.

Engineers Keep Busy On Coast

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—Organizing drives among technical workers in the aircraft and oil industries are taking the time and energy of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians here, according to an announcement by Marcel Scherer, vice-president.

Three new FAECT chapters have been set up in the Vultee, Douglas and Lockheed aircraft corporations, where the drives are being coordinated with the United Automobile Workers Union, currently organizing production workers.

Many new members have signed up with FAECT in the oil fields of southern California, Scherer reported, with prospects good in Shell, Texaco, Union and Wiltshire.

Shoe Union Wins Strike

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 26—Without too much difficulty the CIO United Shoe Workers today caught up with the Inter-Allied Slipper Co., which ran away from union conditions in New York City to the openshop haven of Jersey City.

A five-week strike by 350 members of Local 73, USWA, ended in the signing of an agreement which lifted wages more than 7 per cent and brought about the closed shop.

The firm is located in the Harborside Building, long known as a refuge for runaway companies. During the strike the firm threatened to pick up and move once again, but the militancy of the strikers prevented that development.

Mayor Frank Hague's police marveled at the militancy and self-discipline of the workers, and one official termed it "the longest strike this city has seen in years."

Washington, Oct. 26—National defense projects approved since July 1 call for more than $83,000,000 in WPA funds, according to Howard C. Hunter, acting commissioner.

Ask Regular Wages For Draftees

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 26 (FP)—The Milwaukee County CIO Industrial Union Council is urging affiliated locals to seek contract clauses from employers which will provide that conscripted employes be paid the difference between military pay and regular earnings.

Local Asks Rehiring of Worker

San Francisco, Oct. 26. — Reinvestigation of five-year-old charges against Michael J. Powers of Local 133, Utility Workers Organizing Committee, has convinced the local that Powers was unjustly suspended and that he should be reinstated.

Accordingly, the local has gone on record stating Powers is completely exonerated of all charges and offering him reinstatement in the union. The charges were made before the local was affiliated to the CIO.

Lewis Endorses Annual TB Stamp Sale Drive

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Pres. John L. Lewis has endorsed the 24th annual Christmas Seal campaign in a letter sent to the Natl. Tuberculosis Assn., campaign sponsors. Pres. Lewis' letter read in part:

"I deem it a privilege to express my approval of the exemplary activities of the Natl. Tuberculosis Assn. Its efforts to eradicate the causes and resultant ravages of tuberculosis are worthy of the highest commendation, and they should be supported wholeheartedly by the citizens of our nation."

AMERICANA: This float, depicting the first Thanksgiving dinner, was entered by Local 423 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the City of Torrington, Conn.

CIO Construction Contract Signed In Tennessee

KINGSPORT, Tenn., Oct. 26.—First contract gained by the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee in the State of Tennessee was signed here by Local 133 and the General Shales Corp.

Sole bargaining rights for the UCWOC, grievance machinery, the 40-hour week and time and a half for overtime work were included in the pact, as well as provision for four holidays with pay —Labor Day, July 4, Christmas and New Year's.

CHECK-OFF

In addition, the agreement provided for a check-off system under which the company will deduct union dues from the wage payments of all employes who so request.

Charges against the company had been filed by the UCWOC with the National Labor Relations Board asserting that four union leaders were dismissed because of their CIO activities. The NLRB decision, favorable to the union, was later upheld by the U. S. circuit court of appeals and the men were returned to their jobs with back pay.

Following that, the union won an election at the plant and was certified as sole collective bargaining agency.

Plans are now being made to organize the company's four other plants at Clinton, Johnson City and Knoxville, Tenn., and at Richland, Va.

The victory at Kingsport came in the face of determined opposition from the local Chamber of Commerce, the Tennessee Eastman Corp. and the big Borden Cotton Mills, all of which have so far resisted union organization.

Push Drive For Unions In Tennessee

Jellico, Tenn., Oct. 26—Paul Christopher, until recently South Carolina director for the Textile Workers Union of America, has been named executive secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee Industrial Union Council.

In a letter to unions throughout the state Christopher announced that permanent headquarters for the council will probably be established in Knoxville or Chattanooga by December 1.

"We earnestly hope to make this office a strong and constructive influence in behalf of our membership and the promotion of CIO organizational activities," Christopher declared, "and believe every local union will be benefitted and every national and international union strengthened if each of us will cooperate with each other in Tennessee."

Waterman's Pens Back On Fair List

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 26—Official notification that L. E. Waterman Co. of Newark, N. J., makers of fountain pens, pencils and ink, has been removed from the unfair list of the United Rubber Workers was sent out to all labor organizations today by URW Pres. S. H. Dalrymple.

"This action has been taken," Dalrymple declared, "following the signing of an agreement with Local 134 of our organization which includes the union shop, restoration of all strikers to their jobs without loss of seniority and wage protection. In our opinion, the agreement is an outstanding one and provides the basis for harmonious relations between the workers and the management for a long time to come.

"It should be added that the new agreement was signed following a change in the management of the L. E. Waterman Co., the change including removal of the company official who was largely responsible for the strike which caused us to place the company on the unfair list."

10c Wage Increase

Baltimore, Oct. 26—Wage increases of from two to ten cents an hour were won in a closed shop contract renewed with the Maryland Bolt & Nut Co. here.

Brandon Sexton, organizer for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said 56 of the 105 employes received increases of more than 5 cents an hour.

Invite 5,500 In Philly To Join CIO

Philadelphia, Oct. 26—Michael J. Quill, head of the CIO's Transport Workers Union, has invited the Warehouse Employes Union here to bring its 5,500 members into the CIO. The WEU left the AFL last week in revolt against an order of the AFL Executive Board permitting craft unions to cut away slices of its membership.

Edward Hartsaugh, WEU president, said the AFL's order would take away 30 per cent of the union's membership. The remaining members under the AFL Board edict, would be chartered by the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen & Helpers.

In a speech at a mass meeting in Lu Lu Temple, Quill told some 2000 workers that industrial organization is the "only true democratic form of union."

Win Pact

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 26—Two years of organizing and negotiating effort have won a contract for Local 45 of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, at the Armour and Co. branch house here.

The contract provides for reduced hours, increased wages, time and half for overtime and double time for holidays, and other general improvements in working conditions.

Lively CIO Local Keeps Up Fight for Contract

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, Oct. 26.—One of the liveliest CIO groups in the country is Pioneer Tobacco Workers Local Industrial Union, whose fighting spirit hasn't been diminished a bit by its 3½-year effort to secure a contract from the P. Lorillard Tobacco Co.

Meetings of the local bring out tremendous crowds of workers employed at the local plant, and the union is determined to keep plugging away until the company finally recognizes the law of the land and bargains collectively with the CIO.

Back in 1938 the union struck for a contract, but the walkout was called off when the national guard, called out by Martin Davey, ex-governor of Ohio, threatened to endanger the lives of the strikers.

Several months later a Labor Board order certified the union as sole bargaining agency and ordered the firm to negotiate a contract. The NLRB then took the case before the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati and asked for an enforcement order.

Before the case could be argued on its merits, Lorillard asked that the case be remanded to the Labor Board. The court turned down that plea, and now the issue will be heard by the circuit court in December.

MORALE HIGH

Despite all this legal flim-flam, the workers have kept their morale high and have been steadily paying their dues to the union, which the company has been doing its best to destroy. Company stooges are inspired to pick on CIO members in an effort to cause fights in the plant, and discrimination is still going on.

The AFL has also tried to serve as a company agent, but its splitting tactics are getting the cold shoulder from the workers.

For some day, they know, Lorillard is going to have to sign a CIO contract.

CIO Drive Cuts Reign of Terror At Ford Plant

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 2.—With Ford workers responding enthusiastically to the organization drive of the CIO's United Automobile Workers, Michael F. Widman, Jr., director of the Ford Organization Committee, this week announced a program of proposals to improve working conditions in the only unorganized automobile plants in the country.

The program includes a general wage increase to bring Ford wages up to those in the rest of the industry. Many departments of the giant River Rouge plant in Dearborn are already solidly organized into the union, and there is at least a functioning union nucleus in every important department, Widman said

MANY AT MEETINGS

"The success of the drive so far shows conclusively that the old fear of Ford's notorious service department has almost entirely disappeared," the campaign director declared. "Ford workers come to meetings, talk unionism, accept union literature, and most important, join the union, scorning any threats of reprisals from the service department."

The program for Ford workers announced by Widman looks toward the negotiation of a contract, as soon as a majority of Ford workers have joined the union, calling for a general wage increase; seniority rights, shop steward system; grievance procedure; overtime pay; paid vacations, and a joint time study of operations to determine a fair speed of work.

As an ultimate goal, when Ford employes have won collective bargaining rights, the program calls for (1) a six-hour day, 30-hour week at 40-hours' pay and (2) a guaranteed annual wage.

Lewis Moves To Halt Threats To Rights Of Labor Unions

(See Stories Pages 3, 5, 8)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Action on three threats to labor's rights was taken this week by Pres. John L. Lewis in letters to government agencies responsible for protecting them.

Most important issue was dealt with in a letter to U. S. Secretary of War Stimson, in which Lewis urged Federal regulations to curb possible anti-labor use of state military units now being formed to take the place of Natl. Guard regiments mobilized for regular army training.

Lewis urged the Secretary to require strict observance of constitutional and statutory guarantees of civil rights by the home guard, prohibition of private contributions, and full publicity of all acts of its officers.

Lewis also lent his aid to civil rights in writing to the Federal Communications Commission, which has supervision over radio broadcasting, to protest against the refusal of San Francisco station KYA to renew a two-year-old contract with the local CIO for a nightly labor program.

In addition, he wrote to Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmyer calling his attention to gross violations of the merit system in the appointment of personnel on the Pennsylvania State Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Win $150,00 Raise In 'Brass Valley'

Bristol, Conn., Nov. 2.—Wage gains of $150,000 for 370 employes, plus a night work bonus, ylus air tight seniority rights, plus job guarantees for drafted workers, plus paid vacations, plus dues collections on company time, have been won by Local 500 of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers here as one more step in their drive to sign up brass plants in the highly industrialized Connecticut River valley.

This victory was matched by similar gains in the nearby Scovill main plant at Waterbury, when the management decided to meet the wage raises won earlier in the Bridgeport and American Brass Co. plants. The Scovill agreement brings the workers the four cent raise gained four weeks ago at Bridgeport and American.

MAJOR GAINS

The series of brass contracts, which already have netted more than $1,000,000 a year in increased worker purchasing power, bring wages to the highest level in the industry, union officials announced.

A by-product of the contract gains was seen in the reaction of AFL workers in one division of the Scovill plant, who were reported to be considering a switch to CIO following failure of the AFL to win any gains for them.

Women Rally For Election

New York, Nov. 2.—Women, recent statistics show, will comprise nearly half of the voting electorate in this year's election, and so the New York State CIO Auxiliary Council scheduled a special meeting to be devoted to a study of women and the coming elections.

Speakers at this meeting of auxiliary members from CIO unions throughout the city at Transport Hall Oct. 30, Wednesday, at 8 p. m., were:

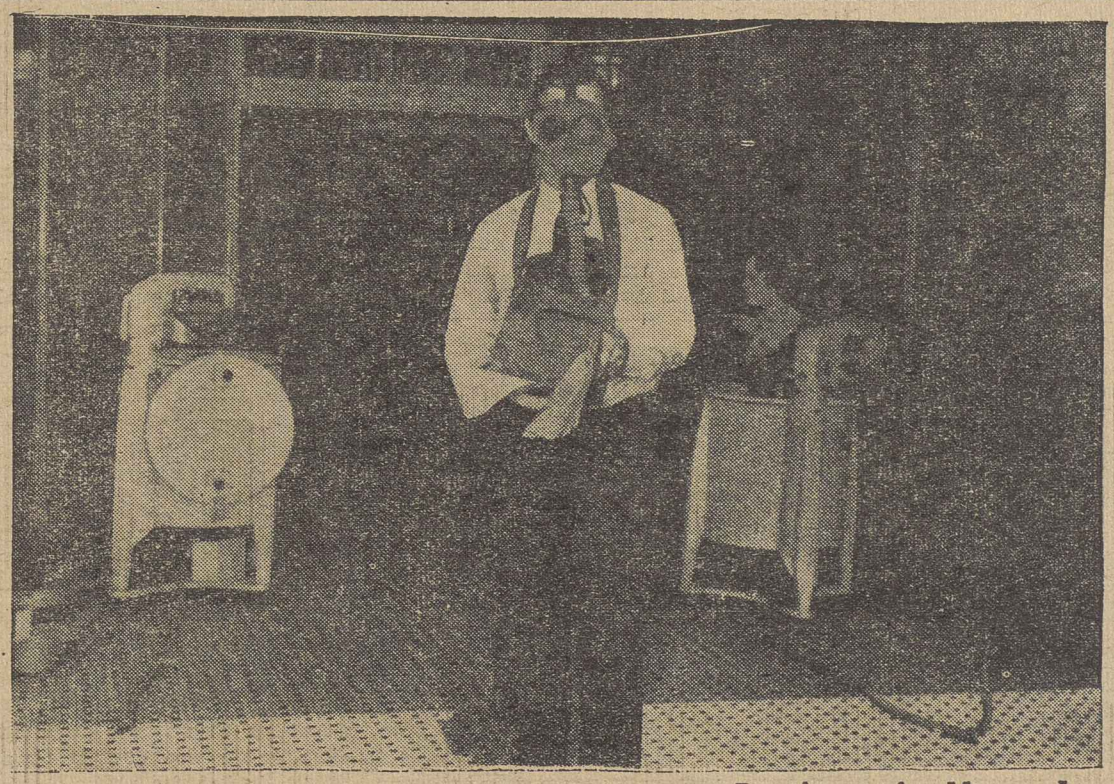
Miss Josephine Timms, international secretary-treasurer of the American Communications Association.

ANTI-LABOR BOARDS

New York, Nov. 2—Reports from labor papers in half a dozen states indicate that the demand for union labor for 50 per cent representation on draft boards has been ignored. Many boards are packed with anti-labor members and in some areas labor got as low as one-half of one per cent representation.

Gotham CIO Defends Vote Plan



New York, Nov. 2—The Greater New York Industrial Union Council, central body for CIO unions, today called on its members and followers in the city to vote against the Tammany-sponsored proposal to amend the New York City Charter to abolish the proportional representation system of voting for City Councilmen. The PR proposal will be on the ballot November 5.

The current issue of the CIO Council's Legislative News Letter sent to Local CIO unions with an aggregate membership of about 400,000, urges a campaign for a "No" vote on the proposal. Besides contracting CIO members the local union officers are urged to carry this campaign to "all followers of the CIO in New York City."

The News Letter declares:

"The abolishment of proportional representation will strike a serious blow at the principle of democratic municipal government despite the serious limitations and lack of progressive activity of the present City Council.

"There is every reason to believe that a return to the old system of election and to the old Board of Aldermen will make more difficult the adoption of measures favorable to labor."

'WAR' ON THE HOME FRONT: Proprietors of a Monroe, La., store apparently thought they could chase off CIO pickets by a gas attack, so they ran exhaust pipes from two churning washing machines to the front entrance. But the picket fooled 'em, donned a gas mask and continued his beat. The picket is a member of the Monroe Newspaper Guild which is on strike against local papers.

Seek 3 Aircraft Polls in Southwest

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 2.—CIO aircraft organizers today were setting the state for quick follow-ups on two recent National Labor Relations Board election victories in southern California.

Local 683 of the United Automobile Workers announced that it had filed requests for NLRB elections to determine sole bargaining agents in three plants here — North American Aviation, Harvill Aircraft Die-casting Corp., and Menasco Manufacturing Co.

Prospects for victory are bright in each case, union officials declared.

"We expect no difficulty this time," said Wyndham Mortimer, UAW international representative. In a decision branded as "unfair" by the workers, the NLRB had earlier turned down a similar petition at North American.

STRONG FOR UNION

Union sentiment is reported strong at Harvill, where 90 per cent of the workers are earning only 50 cents an hour.

The earlier victories were gained at Vultee Aircraft, where collective bargaining negotiations are nearing successful completion and at Ryan Aircraft, where negotiations will commence as soon as formal union certification is received from the Labor Board.

Win Two Elections In Delaware

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 2—Two more Labor Board elections have been won by the CIO in Delaware.

At the Deemer Steel Casting Co., New Castle, the CIO United Steel Casting Workers Local 1071 polled 78 votes to only 15 for no union.

At the Wilmington Fibre Specialty Co., located in the same town, the CIO United Fibre Workers, Local 1074, received 54 votes to 40 for no union.

Newspaper Ordered To Negotiate

Washington, Nov. 2. — The Knoxville Publishing Co., Knoxville, Tenn., has agreed to comply with an order issued by the National Labor Relations Board to bargain upon request with the CIO's Newspaper Guild as sole bargaining agent of editorial employes.

A consent decree settling all issues involved in a decision against the publishers issued May 26, 1939, has been presented to the Sixth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the NLRB has announced.

Win Vote By 85-3

Washington, Nov. 2—All regular employes of the Rickert Rice Mills, Inc., New Orleans, La., will be represented by Local 7, International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in District 2.

The NLRB certified Local 7, following an election won 85 to 3 by the CIO union early in October.

Name Rubber Workers Union

Washington, Nov. 2—Local 83, United Rubber Workers, has been certified by the NLRB as sole bargaining agent for employes at the Trenton, N. J. plant of the Thermoid Co., following an election won by the URW 544 to 405 for an independent group.

Furniture Firm Must Bargain

Washington, Nov. 2—The Gillcraft Furniture Co., Los Angeles, Cal., has been ordered by the NLRB to bargain collectively upon request with Local 576 of the CIO's United Furniture Workers and to embody any understanding reached in a written signed contract.

The Board's order was based upon a stipulation in which the company also agreed to stop discouraging membership in the CIO union and to offer full reinstatement to 17 employes by persons hired since Feb. 28, 1940.

A complaint charging the company with refusal to bargain with the union when approached more than a year ago, was issued by the Board Oct. 7. The board found that after this refusal the employes went on strike last February, and that the 17 employes ordered reinstated had been out since that time.

On Oct. 7 prior to a hearing, the company, the union and counsel for the Board entered into a stipulation settling the complaint. The company also agreed to the entry of a consent degree by the Ninth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, enforcing the Board's order.

CIO Sweeps Boiler Plant Election

Carteret, N. J., Nov. 2.—The CIO's United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, last week defeated a company union in a Labor Board election in the Foster-Wheeler plant, which manufactures boilers, condensers and pumps.

The "F-W Association," a company union, had won a Labor Board election in 1937 and promptly "gained" a 10 per cent wage-cut for its members.

Last week's CIO victory was the result of a three-year campaign by the UE.

Certified At General Electric

Washington, Nov. 2 — Based upon an election among production employes of the General Electric Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., won 3,053 to 902 by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, the NLRB last week certified this CIO union as sole bargaining agency.

The AFL machinists were certified as the union representative for a small craft group.

Shell Oil Firm Signs First Pact With Technicians

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The first contract with a Shell Oil Co. subsidiary was announced last week by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians. The agreement which covers employes of the Shell Development Co., Berkeley, Calif., provides for pay increases and recognition of the FAECT.

Lewis Alan Berne, international president of the union, said that the contract is the first result of an intensive organizing campaign started more than a month ago among Shell plants in the California area. Vice-President Marcel Scherer, who was placed in charge of the campaign at the union's last convention in June, is now in California assisting in the drive.

OTHER PARLEYS

Negotiations are also in progress, President Berne said, at the Shell Oil Refinery in Martinez, Cal., covering several hundred chemists and technicians. In addition to a union shop, salary increases and seniority provisions, the FAECT is asking the company to guarantee job, seniority and wage protection to employes who may be conscripted.

So far the company has refused to grant any of the demands, a union statement declared, and has made a counter proposal to increase salaries by increasing the work week.

Berne has advised the Shell headquarters in New York that strike action is being precipitated by the Martinez management, and calls upon Shell to accede to the "modest demands of its employes, in the way of increases, recognition, and conscriptee protection." He also pointed to the more than 300 per cent profit credited to this giant corporation.

Lewis Commends Work Of Highlander School

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Nov. 2.—A message from CIO President John L. Lewis praising the work of the Highlander Folk School here was greeted as one of the highlights of the school's fall term which closed the end of October.

President Lewis wrote: "I would like to take this occasion to commend the work of the Highlander Folk School and to endorse its program and objectives."

Regular and special students and visitors to the weekend institutes held at the school represented 28 international unions. In addition to the regular classes in union problems, economics, history and dramatics, panel discussions were held each Saturday afternoon on problems of interest to labor.

A panel on National Defense was led by Yelverton Cowherd, CIO regional director in Alabama and Al Hartwell representative of Labor's Non-Partisan League, directed another. CIO leaders who assisted with classes included Paul Christopher, secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee southern director of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Alton Lawrence, southern director of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Among the CIO representatives who spoke during the term were Miss Lucy Mason, CIO public relations representative in the South; George Bass, of the United Rubber Workers; and John Schulter, United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

Electrical Union Ends Long Strike In St. Louis

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 2 (FP)—A 4-month strike against the Century Electric Co., which was marked by the murder of a picket and considerable police violence against strikers, ended today with the signing of a 2-year agreement by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

The slain striker was Oscar Buckley, who was stabbed to death by a scab while on the picket line last August. His death evoked widespread protests from workers throughout the city.

The UERMW had considerable support in the long campaign to win a contract. When the CIO United Automobile Workers held their convention here in mid-summer, hundreds of the delegates took a turn on the picket line.

1,100 EMPLOYES

Under the new agreement which covers 1,100 workers, the company agreed to consult union representation on all changes in wage rates in the working force. Other gains included 1-week paid vacations, top seniority for shop stewards, semi-monthly conferences with the union, and arbitration of all disputes not settled through direct negotiations.

Win 4-Week Steel Strike

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 2 — After weeks of prolonged negotiations and a four-week strike, the W. E. Caldwell Co. here has signed a contract with Local 1878, Steel Workers Organizing Committee. Production was completely shut down during the strike.

Signing of the contract has established a mutually satisfactory relationship between the firm and the employes, CIO Regional Director Peter Campbell reports.

High Court Bears Down On Tannery

Chicago, Nov. 2 — The bigger they are the harder they fall — that's what Local 43 of the CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union is saying about the U. S. Supreme Court ruling that Greenebaum's Tannery here must obey the Wagner Act by reinstating three fired workers and dissolving a company union.

The three workers were fired for union activity in 1937. Now they will get back pay for three years in addition to full reinstatement. Workers who were forced to pay dues to the company union can sue for return of their money.

ORGANIZING: Employes of the Emerson Radio Co. of New York take part of their lunch hour to listen to the message of unionism brought to them by organizers for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The company is one of the few remaining non-union radio manufacturers, and the UE predicts they'll be under contract before long.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—A tremendous volume of support for the October 25th national radio speech of CIO President John L. Lewis on the presidential elections was revealed by an analysis of the thousands of telegrams received in Lewis' office after the speech was delivered.

Out of some 5,000 wires received, less than ten per cent were unfavorable. The wires came from people in all walks of life, with a notably heavy proportion from labor unionists, professional and small business people, and Negro, youth and old age pension groups.

The largest volume of favorable responses among union groups was from members and officers of the United Mine Workers of America. District leaders in Illinois, Kansas, Ohio, Maryland, Washington, Tennessee, Colorado, Kentucky and anthracite and bituminous districts of Pennsylvania, were among the first to wire their wholehearted support of Mr. Lewis' stand, and there were hundreds of wires from local unions in these and all other districts to the same effect.

Typical of many responses from International Executive Board members was that of John O'Leary, International Board Member from Pittsburgh District 5, who wired: "I wrote to endorse your recommendation, also a vote of confidence in you."

UMW LOCALS

A particularly large number of favorable wires came from local unions of the United Mine Workers in West Virginia congratulating Lewis and supporting the political stand he had taken.

Especially noteworthy in the Mine Workers response, as in the responses from most other organizations, was the large proportion of rank and file members who took the trouble to wire in their support, many of the wires being signed with dozens of names.

AUTO WORKERS

Another CIO union from which there was a large volume of favorable rank and file response was the United Automobile Workers of America. A number of national officers and local unions wired 100 per cent support, and scores of congratulatory wires were received from local officers and rank and file members in Detroit and other auto centers.

Among the first CIO international unions to wire in pledges of support were:

The International Fishermen and Allied Workers of America, whose president, J. F. Jurich, wired "Congratulations on the most glorious and courageous position taken by a real leader of labor. I wholeheartedly support your objectives." Secretary-Treasurer George Lane also wired appreciation.

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, whose Vice-Chairman Nicholas Fontecchio and Assistant Director Henry Johnson both wired support. A resolution was also received signed by 75 officers of all the PWOC locals in Chicago, adopted at a meeting of officers, stewards and members in official session, declaring that they "hereby unanimously endorse John L. Lewis' speech and pledge our unstinted and wholehearted support to follow his great leadership and to go along with the policies as outlined in this presidential election." The Joint Council of Packinghouse Workers in South St. Paul also wired 100 per cent endorsement, and similar wires were received from other packinghouse centers.

The State, County and Municipal Workers of America, whose Pres. Abram Flaxer and Secretary Henry Wenning wired that "your denunciation of Roosevelt and his disastrous policies deserves hearty endorsement of all labor," and pledged continued support to Mr. Lewis' leadership.

Connecticut CIO Hails Lewis Record

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 2.—Declaring that 'under the leadership of John L. Lewis the Congress of Industrial Organizations has evolved into the most powerful instrument that the industrial workers of this nation ever had," the Third Annual Convention of the Connecticut CIO went on record by a large majority as insisting that John L. Lewis continue as President of the CIO regardless of the outcome of the national elections.

The convention unanimously voted to table both a majority report of the resolutions committee against any endorsement, and a minority report for endorsement of President Roosevelt for a third term.

Ten thousand new members were obtained in this small but industrially concentrated state during the past year according to reports on organization. The 190 delegates pledged themselves to recruit 25,000 additional CIO members in Connecticut during the coming year.

Mention of the need of labor for a third party brought repeated cheers from the delegates and visitors, who overflowed the convention hall in Hartford, October 26 and 27.

Retail Food Prices Up

Washington, Nov. 2.—(FP)—Retail food costs in large cities increase 1 per cent from mid-August to mid-September, Commissioner Isador Lubin of the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported here.

There are advances in the price of meats, eggs and dairy products, all partly seasonal in character, and a decline in the price of flour. Prices of fruits and vegetables also registered seasonal declines.

Move Office

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 26. — Southern Regional offices of the Textile Workers Union have been moved from Atlanta, Ga. to this city, R. R. Lawrence, Southern TWUA director, has announced.

The change was made, Lawrence said, because Charlotte is nearer the center of the textile industry in the South and the union will be in a better position here to service its locals throughout the region.

'Won't Accept Labor Dept. Post'—Lewis

Washington, Nov. 2 — Radio statements by Senator Robert F. Wagner to the effect that Pres. Lewis' October 25th statements on the presidential race were prompted by a desire to become U. S. Secretary of Labor were promptly branded by Lewis as "a futile attempt to answer my previous indictment" and as an attempt to evade the issues raised in Lewis' speech.

Lewis' statement, made public here, pointed out that he had been offered the post before and had declined it, as he would decline it "if, in the future, it should again be tendered me."

TEXT OF STATEMENT

The statement follows in full:

"Sen. Wagner's radio speech was a futile attempt to answer my previous indictment. He did not deal with a single point at issue. As I stated in my address Friday night, 'There is no spokesman in the Democratic Party, or in the Roosevelt Administration, intellectually capable of this task.'

"Senator Wagner is an honorable man and I esteem him highly. It is unfortunate that he stooped to charge by inference and innuendo that an offer of the portfolio of Labor would influence me. In the past, I have declined it. If, in the future, it should again be tendered me, I would decline it.

"In addition to all this, Senator Wagner was misinformed on many of his facts."

SPEAKS TO NATION: John L. Lewis, photographed as he finished his epoch-making speech to the nation on Oct. 25. Speaking into radio network microphones placed on his desk at the United Mine Workers Building, Lewis called on labor to elect Wendell L. Willkie and to defeat the third-term aspirations of Pres. Roosevelt.

Lewis Refutes Columnists' Lies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—John L. Lewis today branded as "gratuitously false" certain statements about him and his national election campaign radio speech that were carried in the Washington Merry-Go-Round, syndicated column of Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen.

Full text of his letter to the columnists follows:

"I refer to your column called 'The Washington Daily Merry-Go-Round', as published in today's issue of the 'Times-Herald' of Washington, D. C.

"A. I did not submit a draft of my October 25th radio address to Republican leaders or anyone else.

"B. The speech did not contain at any time a section dealing with the election of pro-labor or anti-labor candidate for either branch of Congress. It was not censored in this respect, or in any other respect, by anyone.

"C. No individual, in or out of the Republican Party, or the Democratic Party, had any knowledge of its contents prior to its public release before delivery.

"D. The membership of the United Mine Workers of America is contained in 2901 local unions scattered throughout the mining districts of North America. Thirty-five of these local unions nominated Mr. Philip Murray for President, instead of 198 as you aver.

"The audited financial records of the United Mine Workers of America, for the fiscal year from June 1, 1939 to June 1, 1940, reveal that the undersigned received $3,775.49 as reimbursement for expenses incurred in the official work of the organization—this in contradistinction to your assertion of an approximate expense of $60,000.00.

"Your column, therefore, contained statements which are gratuitously false, and which you are incapable of sustaining. Your statements also conflict with the sound considerations of private morality and journalistic ethics.

"Under these circumstances I inquire whether you would be interested in making proper retraction and apology in your column.

"Yours truly,

"JOHN L. LEWIS"

Steel Union On The Go In 'Mop Up' Campaign

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 2—New union contracts, back pay victories, and substantial wage increases are being won by local unions of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to bolster the steel union's "mop up" drives at plants of the "Little Steel" segment of the industry.

The impetus of the CIO's campaign in steel is even reaching over into Canada, where a new union contract to cover 4,000 workers at the Dominion Steel & Coal Corp. was signed recently.

It culminuated a long battle waged by the union to win the pact, and came after a government conciliation board recommended that Dominion Steel deal with the organization through a union agreement.

Wage increases were won for union members under the contract, and clauses were included to govern hours and working conditions.

The SWOC's victory at Dominion Steel was coupled with another Canadian triumph when 3,000 steel workers formerly affiliated with an independent steel union voted by a 20 to one majority to join the SWOC in a body. Their action boosted the SWOC to the position of third largest union in Canada.

These two major advances, reports Charles H. Millard, Canadian CIO director, are being felt throughout the Dominion, and plant after plant is reporting a tremendous upsurge in membership.

In the Midwest more than a thousand delegates met in two SWOC district conventions and pledged, on behalf of the 200,000 union steel workers they represented, to back officers in the drive to "make the SWOC America's most powerful labor union."

Meeting in a Calumet convention in Harvey, Ill., one Sunday, and an Indiana district meeting in Muncie, Ind., the following week, delegates declared that by promoting genuine collective bargaining and seeking a solution to the basic problem of unemployment.

They heard reports of the progress being made by their own Regional Director—Van A. Bittner—who is leading the new union campaign at properties of the Bethlehem Steel Corp.

Mr. Bittner has opened headquarters in Bethlehem, Pa., the stronghold of Bethlehem Steel, in the second largest office building in town. From there he is guiding the campaign at huge mills in Lackawanna, N. Y.; Sparrows Point, Md.; Alameda, Cal.; Johnstown, Bethlehem, Pottstown, Steelton, Lebanon, Rankin, Leetsdale, Williamsport and Coatesville, Pa.

LOOK WHO'S TALKING!

A Reminder

In the excitement of a Presidential election, the importance of electing the right men and women to Congress tends to be overshadowed.

It is therefore timely to recall the following warning issued last July by John L. Lewis, in his capacity as chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League:

"Whether labor achieves its program depends squarely on the men and women whom we elect to the United States Congress and Senate.

"Regardless of who may be the next President of the United States, we are confronted with this fact: if the men and women who are elected to the halls of Congress cannot be depended upon to support the welfare of the people through legislation, no man in however high an office can or will give labor what it needs."

Let us therefore vote as union men and women, and apply the practical test of adherence and support to labor's program to every candidate for Congress.

Workers Prefer CIO

Political election campaigns come only once in awhile, but labor's union campaigns go on every day in the year.

It is therefore encouraging to note the continuous succession of election victories for the CIO in Labor Board polls. Among the latest are:

The nearly two-to-one vote for the CIO United Automobile Workers at General Motors' Delco-Remy Division in Anderson, Ind., with more than six thousand workers participating.

Add to these the election success of the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes at R. H. White, one of Boston's largest department stores; and a whole series of CIO victories at smaller plants in Wilmington, Del., and many other cities.

This is but the score for a single week, and almost every day brings reports of CIO unions winning more elections.

The CIO has long been far ahead of all contenders in the workers' votes cast for it at Labor Board elections. The latest reports indicate that the trend continues increasingly in its favor.

Don't Be Fooled

A dog with a bone in its mouth crossed a low bridge. Looking down it saw the bone's reflection in the water. Greedily it opened its jaws to snatch what it thought was another bone—only to lose the bone in its mouth.

The favors of politicians are a reflection and result of the union strength and voting power of organized workers.

If labor is fooled by this reflection; if it prefers credit-claiming politicians to its own leaders to whom the real credit belongs; if it allows its union strength to be disrupted by dissension-breeding politics—it will be in the same fix as the dog in the fable.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IT IS said that an argument once arose between the proverbial cart and the proverbial horse.

It was election time, and as is customary on such occasions, the cart was placed before the horse.

The cart was condescension itself. "My good fellow," it said to the horse, "I am sure you are grateful for the splendid service I have always rendered you.

"If it were not for the loads of manure I have carried for you, the soil would not be fertilized from which you get your hay and oats.

"I shall continue to bestow ever new benefactions upon you, if you will continue to follow my leadership."

The horse replied: "Why, you big box on wheels, I have to do all the hard work, while you just roll along behind me.

"If it were not for me, you'd never have gotten any place. As it is, I have to strain and sweat to get you to render any useful service.

"If I were not pulling you all the time, you'd just stick in a rut or roll off in the opposite direction from which you are supposed to go."

The proverbial horse had only horse sense to guide him and he was not satisfied until the cart was put in its proper place.

But a lot of human beings are less logical and less particular. At any rate they put up with endless orations from political spellbinders about the benefactions they have bestowed on labor.

To listen to some of these speeches, you would think that labor's union rights, higher wages, protective legislation and the rest were handed to it on a silver platter, for which gracious favors it should be humbly grateful.

Labor's forward march has not been a hitch-hike in anyone's limousine.

Millions of plain people have fought and sacrificed, in sweat and sometimes in blood, to make possible the modern labor movement; and through it to wring from industrial and political leaders such consideration as is now accorded to labor.

Politicians gave little heed to labor demands, until large numbers of working people won the right to vote and until they also began to organize in unions.

The great increase in the industrial working population in recent times has made many politicians look to the labor vote to carry them into office and to keep them there.

But it has taken increased union organization and aggressive labor leadership to win any substantial concessions even from those who are thus dependent on the workers' votes.

The rise of the CIO, and all the improvements in labor's lot that have followed, have shown in recent memory how much working people have to depend on their own organized efforts, their own fighting leadership, to advance their cause.

It took the most strenuous efforts of organized labor to have the right to organize included in the NRA, and later to enact the Wagner act.

Where aggressive unions were on the job, they were able to take advantage of this opportunity secured by labor. Where they were not, spontaneous efforts to organize soon collapsed.

The CIO was formed to do the job which labor has always to do for itself. It supplied the money, the organizers, the enterprise and the right form of organization, together with the leadership of men like John L. Lewis.

The steel, automobile, rubber and other big industries were unionized by the courage, loyalty and sacrifice of the countless workers who responded to the fighting leadership of Lewis and the CIO.

In the General Motors strike, the Little Steel strike and every other critical struggle for unionism, the workers had little help and often actual hindrance or opposition from politicians dependent on labor support.

The real behind-the-scenes story of these great struggles has yet to be told. But when it is, it will reveal how Lewis had to fight day and night, and almost hourly, to win even toleration from proclaimed friends of labor, and to restrain them from actual attack on the striking workers.

If labor is to make further progress, its members must never forget that it is their own organized efforts, their own independent strength, their own leadership that have won past gains and will win in the future.

in a wire signed by Pres. Joseph Curran, Sec. Ferdinand C. Smith, Treasurer Hedley M. Stone, and Organizers Frederick N. Myers, Jack Lawrenson and Howard McKenzie stated that the "administration has no right to expect the support of laboring millions whom he has consistently betrayed," pledged support and declared their "sincere belief that the millions of workers and their families will see the wisdom and sincerity of your action and bring about an overwhelming defeat of F. D. Roosevelt."

Pres. Martin Wagner of the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers (District 50, UMWA) pledged "my unqualified support of your courageous stand designed to win for organized labor its due political recognition," and other wires were received from representatives of this organization throughout the country.

Edward T. Cheyfitz, national executive secretary of the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, wired congratulations, declaring "the Die Casting Workers will not forget all you have done for them. Your leadership needed more than ever. Count me in as one of those who stand solidly behind you."

Pres. Lewis Merrill of the United Office and Professional Workers wired: "I am in complete agreement with your objectives and will give every possible support."

Harold J. Straub, national director of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, wired congratulations and declared that the national office of his organization would "endorse your stand 100 per cent and urge all our members to vote for Willkie."

Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union wired "congratulations on your stand in refusing endorsement to Roosevelt because of his failure to fulfill obligations and promises to labor."

UCWOC PLEASED

The United Construction Workers Organizing Committee was represented in a large volume of wires from officers, locals and rank and file members, all expressing congratulations and support of Mr. Lewis' stand.

The Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union was represented in wires from officers and rank and filers pledging support.

Bertel J. McCarty, secretary-treasurer of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, wired that "the IWA has full confidence in the ability and leadership of John L. Lewis. Organized labor and the American people, their needs, their rights and their desires have been forgotten by the Roosevelt administration."

The United Retail and Wholesale Employes, United Rubber Workers, Fur and Leather Workers, Hosiery Workers, Clothing Workers, Newspaper Guild and Steel Workers were among other CIO national and international unions from which much rank and file support was in evidence. Typical of these responses was a wire of praise from the president of a local union of the United Rubber Workers, pledging support and declaring that "the officers of this local will exhaust every avenue to convince our membership that your position is correct."

REGIONAL LEADERS

CIO state and regional leaders wired support from nearly every state in the union and many official expressions from State and Local Industrial Union Councils were among the wires of support.

Philip M. Connelly, president of the California State Industrial Union Council wired "hearty thanks for your sound opposition to Roosevelt third term. Certainly labor must unequivocally condemn Roosevelt war drive."

Pres. Richard Francis of the Washington State Industrial Union Council wired agreement that "we want no political royal family in this country," and pledging complete support.

James Robb, president of the Indiana Industrial Union Council, declared he would "do everything humanly possible to make your speech come true and also make it impossible for you to resign as president of the CIO."

Similar expressions were also received from many other state and local council leaders.

American Federation of Labor unions were also represented in the favorable responses to Mr. Lewis' address. Pres. George L. Berry of the Intl. Printing Pressmen's Union wired, "Congratulations to you upon your thoroughly statesmanlike speech last night. I associate myself with you and all that you have said and approve without reservations."

There were also similar responses from AFL locals in different parts of the country and many wires from rank and file AFL members.

Townsend groups, Negro, farm and youth groups also were represented with congratulatory messages.

Protect Labor's Civil Rights, Lewis Asks Stimson

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Police power of state military units, unless curbed by Federal regulations, can involve "the most serious dangers of abuses and excesses threatening the fundamental rights of the American people," John L. Lewis warned in a letter to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson made public here.

These state military units, it was explained, are taking the place of the Natl. Guard, now mobilized into regular Army service Lewis' letter, written after the Secretary of War announced that they would be used to "suppress sabotage in national defense production," urged three basis regulations to guarantee that labor's rights would be protected from possible anti-union acts.

THREE POINTS

Lewis' proposed regulations included:

1. Payment of all military unit expenses from public funds, with private contributions banned. This, Lewis explained, "is necessary in order to prevent these military units from being used as a special private police by any one group in the community for its exclusive benefit."

2. Daily reports from officers to the Secretary of War, including names of persons detained, injured or killed, and by whom, plus details of property seized or damaged; this record to be made public in order to "hold public officials to a minimum level of responsibility" by listing their names when responsible for acts of the home guard.

3. Compliance by these home guard units with the U. S. Constitution and all Federal laws protecting civil rights.

DEFENSE OF DEMOCRACY

"It would be a deep tragedy if in the struggle to preserve democracy, we should lose our democratic rights," Lewis wrote. "The Federal government will subsidize in large part the maintenance of these military units and it has every reason to require that they shall not violate the fundamental rights of freedom of speech, press and assembly, nor engage in unlawful searches and seizures

"To implement this guarantee, it is necessary that the Federal guarantees against the prohibition of a writ of habeas corpus be preserved and that military units authorized by this law shall not be allowed to take the place of the civil authorities but only to aid them in the enforcement of the law."

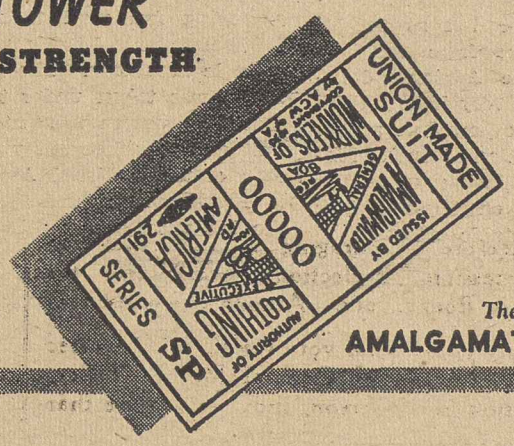
Wheeler Praises Lewis' Knowledge of U.S. Affairs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2 — John L. Lewis "is a man of absolute integrity" and without him "there would be no CIO," Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana said here following Lewis' radio speech on the national election campaign.

Wheeler's statement was quoted by Fulton Lewis, Jr., national news commentator on the Mutual Broadcasting System. As quoted by Fulton Lewis, Wheeler said that attacks on Pres. Lewis were "most regrettable," since he is:

'ABSOLUTE INTEGRITY'



". . . a man of absolute integrity, and regardless of whether you agree with him or disagree, his statement showed great courage and independence.

"The truth is there would be no CIO if it were not for Mr. John L. Lewis . . . and the millions of workers, who have been able to organize under the CIO principle, would still be without a union. . . .

"It is obvious that John L. Lewis, who is here on the scene in Washington, who has a constant first hand knowledge of the true conditions and developments in Washington, who has personally handled the fight for labor in dealing with the government, is better informed on national affairs" than those who have attacked him for his stand on the election, Wheeler declared.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK:

Sees 'Priority' Order Lifting Living Costs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The President's order for priority for national defense production "has in it the seeds of concrete dangers to labor's welfare," according to the October issue of The Economic Outlook, monthly survey published by the CIO.

This danger, the Outlook explains, comes from the transfer of men and plant facilities from the production of consumers' goods to the production of arms involved in the priority policy.

This policy is not necessary in a country as rich as the United States or with as many unemployed (estimated by the CIO for August at 9,797,000), the Outlook says, adding:

"Such a system of priorities, as was pointed out in the July Outlook, usually results in a rise in the cost of living. While the total amount of consumers' goods available remains steady or decreases, the amount of wage payments rises substantially in such a period.

"A larger amount of money becomes available to buy a smaller amount of goods. Result —rapid cost of living rises and falling real wages."

MORE JOBS?

The Outlook, after calling attention to the CIO estimate on unemployment, points out that Secretary of Labor Perkins' statement that there would be five or six million more non-agricultural jobs at the end of 1941 than at present "seems high". In fact, the Outlook says: "It does indeed seem to indicate a probable reduction in unemployment beyond the total previously admitted by the Secretary of Labor.

Turning to the new tax bill, the Outlook declares that it cannot "in any way be called an Excess Profits Tax bill."

COMPANIES ESCAPE

The effective rate of tax on 13 major corporations will be only slightly over eight per cent of normal profits, the Outlook adds, rather than the announced rates of 25 to 50 per cent. This is done by permitting corporations to deduct up to 95 per cent of their normal 1936-39 taxable profit and by allowing them the alternative of exempting a profit equal to eight per cent of their capital investment, if that gives them a higher exemption.

"It is interesting that it happens that the tax as drawn, under pressure from the National Defense Advisory Commission, rests very lightly upon such major corporations as the U. S. Steel Co. and General Motors," the Outlook says.

The section on taxes is illustrated by a table showing the amounts certain corporations can be expected to pay under the new bill on their 1940 incomes. Six corporations, General Motors, du-Pont, American Tobacco, U. S. Steel, U. S. Rubber and Anaconda Copper will probably pay nothing.

of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Walter Smethurst, CIO, director of Aircraft Organization, were speakers at the meeting.

Thomas R. Molloy of Hartford and John J. Driscoll of Waterbury were reelected unanimously president and secretary-treasurer of the State Council, by a convention noteworthy for its unity and spirit of good will.

In his address before the convention Allan S. Haywood, organization director of the CIO, stated that unity is the important thing. "You may have your divisions," he said, "but let me admonish you not to permit any political divisions to enter your councils."

All speakers stressed the great for unity in the ranks of labor in the fight against war, and for better working conditions, higher wages and shorter hours.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Full endorsement of the leadership of Pres. John L. Lewis and insistence on retaining him at the head of the CIO marked statements issued this week by numerous CIO national and international union officials after his radio speech on the 1940 national election.

Writing in the official organ of his union, the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Pres. Reid Robinson (who is also a vice-president of the CIO) declared:

"It is clear, therefore, that John L. Lewis must be kept in office as president of the CIO—not for his sake, but for the sake of the workers of the United States who have fought with him and who still need his courageous leadership in the fight to preserve and extend their rights and gains.

"To permit John L. Lewis to leave the helm of the CIO would be to invite the enemies of the labor movement to launch an immediate attack to destroy our organizations.

"If our membership values the great role of John L. Lewis in American labor history, if you and I have not forgotten his assistance to us in times of need and his constant wise guidance, if we realize our great need for his guidance in the future, if we are still determined to fight for the program adopted at our convention, we must let John L. Lewis know through letters and messages and repeated calls that:

"The country — our union — needs the CIO!

"The CIO needs John L. Lewis!

"John L. Lewis must remain at the head of the CIO!"

UCAPAWA LEADERS

In Chicago, Pres. Donald Henderson and Secretary-Treasurer Michael Howard of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union said in a wire to Lewis that was released to the press:

"We have fullest confidence in your leadership and will continue to support you and the CIO program. We commend your courage in sweeping away the illusion that Franklin Roosevelt has been a friend of labor during the past three years and in showing all Americans where his policies will lead us.

"We must insist that your leadership will be more necessary after the election than ever before regardless of who wins."

EDWARD CHEYFITZ

Toledo, Nov. 2—John L. Lewis' leadership must be kept for the sake of the workers of this country and for the welfare of their organizations, Edward T. Cheyfitz, secretary-treasurer of the Natl. Association of Die Casting Workers, declared here in commenting on Lewis' radio speech on the national election.

"Speaking as an individual and not for the Die Casters, because of my great faith in John L. Lewis, I want to personally offer my active aid in carrying out his program. It is my belief that to a great extent CIO will rise or fall with John L. Lewis. Therefore, when it comes to choosing between Roosevelt and Lewis,—I take Lewis."

LEWIS MERRILL

New York, Nov. 2—John L. Lewis has earned "the right to counsel," according to a statement issued by Lewis Merrill, president of the United Office and Professional Workers. Merrill's statement follows in part:

"If there is any man who has earned the right to counsel the workers of this country, it is John L. Lewis. . . . The tremendous contribution of John L. Lewis to the creation of these policies and their fulfillment is the best answer to his critics."

Lewis Asks U. S. Act To Stop Ban on CIO Radio Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The ban on the "CIO Reporter," San Francisco's two-year-old nightly radio program, "threatens to make radio communication inaccessible to organized labor for all practical purposes," while employers can go on buying all the time they need to attack labor, John L. Lewis said here in writing to Federal Communications Commission Chairman James L. Fly.

Lewis' letter to Fly was in protest against Station KYA's refusal to renew its contract with the San Francisco CIO after it had run two years without protest from the public and with approving fan mail that sometimes brought in 1,000 letters from a single broadcast. The station's action was taken under the plea that the program was "controversial" and therefore out under the code of the National Association of Broadcasters. The Association is the trade body of the broadcasting industry.

"The issue raised in this case is of paramount importance to labor," Lewis wrote. "It threatens to make radio communication inaccessible to organized labor for all practical purposes. To the contrary, under the code pursuant to which this action is taken, employers of labor are being afforded the opportunity to purchase time for the dissemination of news adverse to labor.

"I believe this matter merits your serious consideration because the impact of this action, if adopted throughout the nation and if continued, may have very serious results for organized labor."

Lewis enclosed a memorandum prepared by the San Francisco people in charge of producing the program. According to this memo, the CIO Reporter was as much a news commentary as any of the numerous news programs sponsored by commercial outfits, with the difference that its emphasis was on labor and labor news.

"Our program devoted much time to relating the history of labor, explaining the aims of CIO unions, and generally selling unionism to the public," the CIO memo said. "If this is controversial, then every commercial plug or sales argument on the air today is equally controversial.

EQUAL STATUS

"If soap manufacturers, cigaret companies and others are free to sponsor commentators on the air and yet the CIO is to be denied the same right, then the air waves are not being administered either in the public interest or in accord with the laws of the land."

The effect of KYA's ban on the CIO Reporter will be to rule the CIO off the air entirely in San Francisco, the memo says, since no other station will sell time to the CIO. Free radio time, as provided under the Broadcasters code is not enough, since free time is only given sporadically and at the pleasure of the stations—not on a regular basis, which is the only way sustained listener interest can be built up and maintained.

EMPLOYER BIAS

The anti-labor bias of most commercial radio commentators is well known, the CIO memo adds, but labor does not want simply to crack down on them. It wants instead the chance to reply, through its own programs, regularly broadcast. As the memo says:

"It must be emphasized, however, that the issue we are fighting here concerns our right to the use of the air waves, and not primarily a protest against the broadcasts of the employers.

"In other words, we don't say: 'If we are to be restricted, they too must be restricted.' We demand equal rights, not equal bans."

A SHORT SHORT STORY:

The Union Road to Love

John Lady-Killer was a wow when it came to women. There wasn't a female in his town who could resist him when he turned on the charm. He had an air; he had a line; and he had a wardrobe that made any girl proud to be seen with him. When he passed down the street there wasn't a girlish heart that did not flutter. That is until Mary Union-Conscious moved into town.

Mary Union-Conscious had curly hair and big brown eyes and a funny crinkly smile. John Lady-Killer lost no time in making her acquaintance. That night Mary and John went for a long drive. He was just warming up to his description of her curly lashes when she interrupted him.

"John," said Mary Union-Conscious, "are you a union man?"

"Why, er, yes," answered John, "have been for ten years."

FLUSTERED

And so puzzled was Mr. Lady-Killer by this question that he quite forgot to run out of gas in a convenient spot.

Next Wednesday night, John took Mary to the movies. He took special pains in choosing his suit, his shirt, and his tie for that night's date. And he did look handsome. The girls all envied Mary when they saw her pass down the street on John Lady-Killer's arm.

As they were walking home from the movies, Mary suddenly turned to John, and looked him up and down. John tried not to look to pleased; he knew she was going to tell how well she thought he dressed. The girls always told him that. Instead she flicked his tie over, looked carefully at its lining and said, "Hmm, I was afraid of that."

NO LABEL!

"Afraid of what?" asked John, quite amazed.

"That there would be no union label," answered Mary.

"Oh, is that all?" said John. "I thought it was something serious."

Next night when John called, Mary was not at home. The night after it was the same thing and the night after that. John Lady-Killer got worried. No girl had ever acted that way before. When he saw Mary at a dance on Saturday night with Tom Union-Builder, he decided that was too much. He managed to draw Mary aside.

"Listen here Mary," said he, "why don't I see you any more? What's that guy got that I haven't got?"

UNION CLOTHES

"Well," said Mary, "I'll tell you, what Tom Union-Builder has. He has union labels on the clothes he wears. He thinks union labels are important. And I do too. Tom and I both think that no union man is a good union man unless he demands union-made garments. Tom and I think that when union men and women buy union-made garments that they are helping to build unions not only in all branches of the clothing industry but elsewhere too. In fact, Tom Union-Builder and I think that a union man who doesn't have a union label on his clothes is not much better than a scab."

There wasn't much sleep for Mr. Lady-Killer that night. He tossed and turned. Finally he got up and looked over his wardrobe. Suits, topcoat, overcoat, shirts, ties, gloves, underwear. All without a union label, and for the first time, John asked himself: "What kind of shops are these clothes made in?" "I wonder how much these workers make?" "I wonder whether this tweed suit of mine, which I just bought last week, came from a factory on strike, or whether the boss is trying to stop unionization. I wonder, I wonder . . ."

ALL'S WELL

"Gosh," said John to himself "if my clothes had an Amalgamated Clothing Workers label on them I wouldn't have to wonder."

Next day he called up Mary. "Listen Mary," he said, "I thought over what you said last night, and I agree with you. Will you come with me the next time I buy clothes? We'll look for the Amalgamated union label."

"Sure thing," said Mary Union-Conscious, "I would love to." "And listen, Mary," continued John, "do you think you could see me tomorrow night?"

"Sure thing," answered Mary Union-Conscious, "I would love to."

Labor League Hails House Record Of Rep. Marcantonio

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Rep. Vito Marcantonio, seeking re-election in the 20th Congressional District here, today made public a letter from John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, complimenting his "outstanding and courageous activities in Congress on behalf of labor legislation."

"An examination of your record in the House of Representatives," Jones declared," shows that you have always supported legislation to increase relief for the unemployed, to protect the National Labor Relations Act, to protect the Wage and Hour Act, to provide better pensions for the aged, to provide more housing for low-income families who now live in slums, to provide jobs and other federal aid for our young people, to protect the civil rights of minority groups, to abolish the unfair poll tax restrictions and to protect the Negro race from lynchings."

Jones added that he was also aware "that you have worked harder than any other member of the House Mining Committee" to get the Neely-Keller Coal Mine Safety Bill before the House for action.

"Your courageous work on behalf of this bill, as well as all other legislation of benefit to labor, the unemployed youth, and other low-income groups has justly earned you the reputation of being the outstanding pro-labor man in Congress," Jones wrote to Marcantonio.

Portland Mayor Stalls On Charges Against Cop

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 2 (FP) — The demand of the Portland Industrial Union Council, CIO, for a public hearing on its charges against five officers of Portland's notorious "red squad" has been pigeon-holed by Mayor Joseph K. Carson, Jr.

The charges include running a labor spy agency, spending city funds illegally in an attempt to frame Pres. Harry Bridges of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, slandering local citizens by falsely accusing them of subversive activities, interferring with freedom of speech and assemblage, and slandering the Labor Newdealer, local CIO weekly.

'NOT VERY SOON'

After a conference with the CIO council's special four-man committee, Mayor Carson referred the matter to the department of public safety, which he himself heads.

"When will you set a hearing?" Carson was asked by a union spokesman.

"Not very soon—I can assure you of that," was the reply.

Francis Murmane, head of the CIO committee, said the PIUC would not give up its fight for a public hearing.

Southern Coal Miners Hold Convention

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 2. — Delegates representing 20,000 members of the United Mine Workers employed in Alabama coal mines, attended the fourth convention of UMW District 20 held here last week. Officials said the meeting was the best attended of any held by the District organization.

William Mitch, UMW district president, in his opening speech stressed the importance of strict observance of contracts and warned members to be careful what they said during these troubled times. Anti-labor elements were always looking for a chance, he said, to tack the label of "fifth columnist" on any man or group of men trying honestly to better conditions for the worker.

On the closing day of the convention addresses were made by Congressman Luther Patrick, Ora Gassaway, member of the UMW international board, and Yelverton Cowherd, CIO regional director, and a number of important resolutions were passed during the two days the delegates met.

The convention pledged loyalty and cooperation to President John L. Lewis, William Mitch and other district officers, and elected a scale committee to draw up the union's proposals to be submitted for inclusion in the new agreement soon to be negotiated with the coal operators.

Resolutions were passed calling for a reduction in the waiting time for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance; endorsing President Roosevelt for a third term; calling for the reinstatement of drafted men to their jobs and petitioning the UMW Board to give local unions the right to restore drafted members to active status in the union without initiation fees.

Canadian Miners Re-Elect Official

GLACE BAY, N. S., Nov. 2. — Nine members of the district executive board of eleven were returned in the election of officers in District 26, United Mine Workers of America, which has just been completed. Five were returned by acclamation. District 26 comprises the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in Canada.

Heading the list of executive officers returned in the balloting was District President D. W. Morrison. Returned with him in the voting were Vice-President P. G. Muise, Secretary-Treasurer A. A. McKay and International Board Member Silby Barrett.

Acclamations were given Sub-District Board Members W. H. Carey, Douglas McDonald, Dominic Nearing, D. C. MacLeod and W. S. Walker.

Newcomers to the board are Sub-District Board Members Howard Tatterie, a former office holder, and John Morrison who replaced Robert Stewart and Ed Emberley, respectively.

District tellers J. B. Moss and Jack Delaney were re-elected.

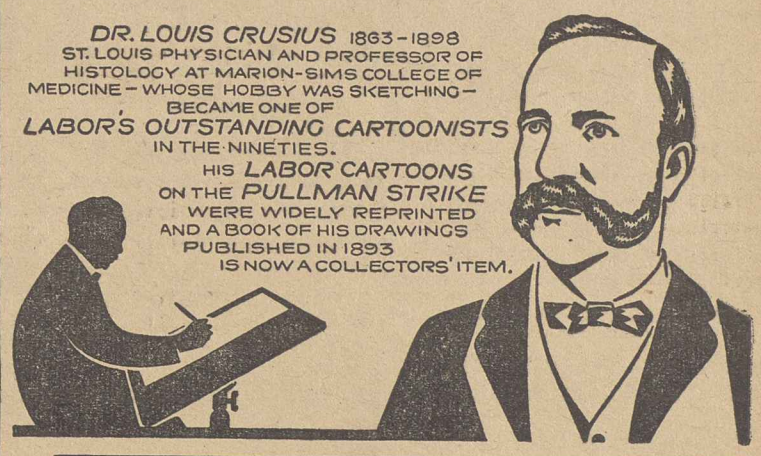
Union Heads Draw Late Draft Figures

New York, Nov. 2—Several officers of CIO unions drew late order numbers in the national draft lottery, a partial survey conducted by the Federated Press, labor news service, revealed today.

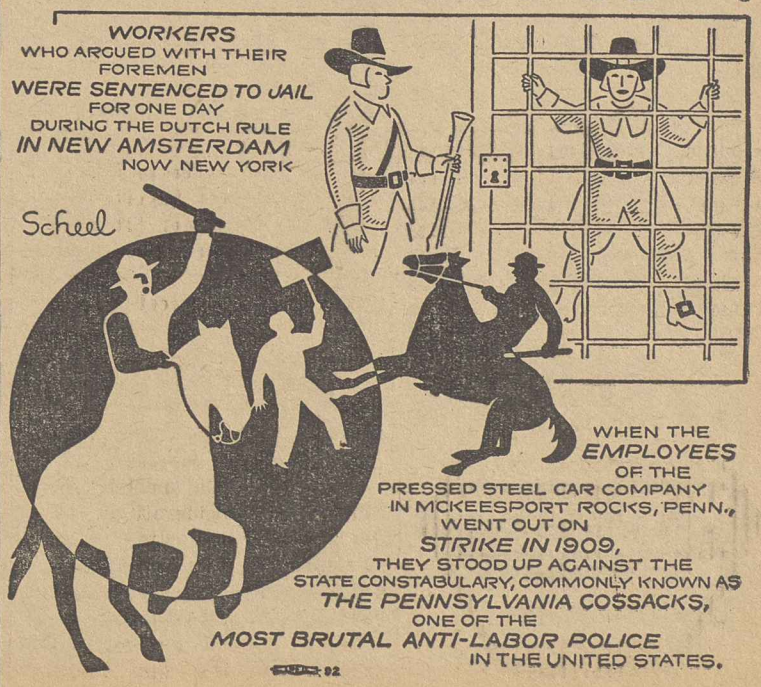
James B. Carey, CIO secretary and head of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, ranked about midway with 4060. Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union was behind him with 4477.

Donal M. Sullivan of Boston, 29-year-old president of the American Newspaper Guild, was allotted 8542. Sec.-Treas. Henry Wenning of the State, County & Municipal Workers grinned when 8894—just 100 capsules from the bottom of the goldfish bowl—opened up with his serial number.

Acting Pres. Joseph Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn. drew 5741. Edward Cheyfitz of the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers reported num- 6946. Saul Mills, executive secretary- treasurer of the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, entered the high brackets with 8529.



Refugee Aid Office Signs With Union



New York, Nov. 2—Some 70 employes of the National Office of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugee and Overseas Needs, are covered by a contract signed by Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers.

Terms of the agreement provide minimum salaries ranging from $21 to $40 a week; union recognition, seniority rights, vacations, holidays, and grievance machinery.

Peter K. Hawley, Local 16 president, said that the excellent contract obtained, "marks the beginning of a new relationship with the management on a basis of dignity and equality in the solution of day to day problems."

Bare AFL Dues Scandal

Initiation Fee $80 For Workers On Army Housing

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—A first-rate, old-fashioned scandal broke today over the heads of AFL craft union leaders who have "gone into business" on initiation fees charged to defense housing workers.

The AFL's Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, it was revealed, has set initiation costs at $80 for non-union workers at Fort Dix in New Jersey.

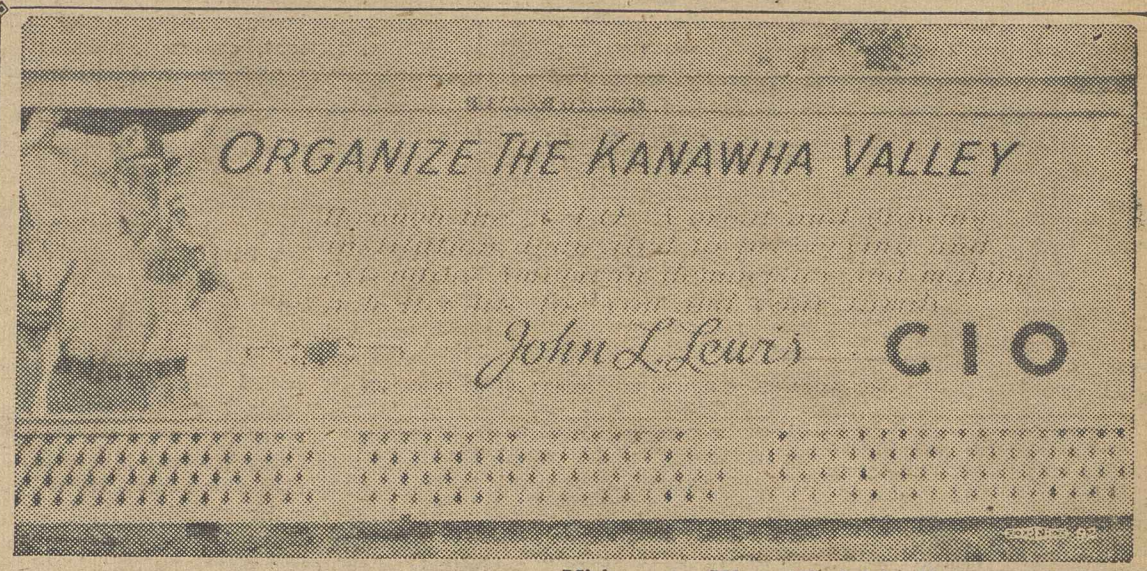
It is $55 at Fort Meade in Maryland.

Not only does the $80 initiation fee set by the local AFL czars apply to non-union men at Fort Dix, but it goes for members of the AFL carpenters union, who transfers from other locals, are obliged to pay the difference between their original initiation fee and that set by the Jersey group.

Union members from New York City, where the AFL carpenters have had to pay "only" a $50 initiation fee, must pay $30 into the Jersey local treasury.



The situation has become so bad that even the head of the New York state AFL carpenters' union has written a letter of protest to his national office.

'NOT UNUSUAL'

While officials of the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee declined to comment on the exorbitant fees of the AFL craft union, they pointed out that the situation is not unusual in the federation's building trades affiliates.

In many cases, they added, the AFL outfit is taking money from workers without admitting them to the union. A "working permit" is given to non-union workers, usually at a cost of $2 or $3 a month.

UCWOC officials declared that their program for industrial unionism and elimination of graft and corruption from the construction industry, would end practices of this sort.

TELLING THE WORLD: Visitors to West Virginia's Kanawha Valley are welcomed with this signboard put up by CIO unions in the area. District 50, United Mine Workers, is carrying on a big campaign throughout the Valley.

Protest Hiring Policies At Pennsylvania Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Failure of the Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Bureau to follow the merit system in hiring employes was vigorously protested in a letter sent by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis to Chairman Arthur Altmeyer of the Social Security Board.

Lewis wrote:

"I am writing you in regard to the situation in Pennsylvania concerning the enforcement of the federal safeguards with respect to employes of the Pennsylvania State Unemployment Compensation Bureau.

"As you know, organized labor vigorously supported the amendment to the Social Security Act which gives the Social Security Board the authority to require the state agency to establish and maintain personnel standards on a merit basis.

"From the evidence submitted to you by the State, County and Municipal Workers of America, affiliated with the CIO, this provision of the federal law has been most flagrantly violated by the Pennsylvania State Secretary of Labor. I understand further that the Board has completed its investigation into this situation, and I hope that the Board will promptly take action which will safeguard the rights of these employes and enforce the federal law."

7,000,000 To Remain Unemployed

New York, Nov. 2—U. S. expenditures on the arms program, even though they may reach the Treasury estimate of $600,000,000 a month by the end of 1941, will reduce unemployment to seven or eight million at best, and cannot be considered a cure for the nation's No. 1 problem, according to an article by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., appearing in the current issue of Social Work Today.

Hetzel's article, based on the rate of expenditure of the five billion dollars scheduled by the Treasury to be spent by June, 1941, on present unemployment figures, set by the CIO at close to 10,000,000, and on drastic cuts in WPA and other relief, points out that only about 4,000,000 idle workers will get defense jobs within the next fiscal year.

"This does not mean that there will be a reduction in the number of unemployed from the present level of 10,000,000 to 6,500,000 by the end of the fiscal year," Hetzel writes.

In the first place, there is a large increase in the number of available workers each year. Numbers of drafted workers will not be replaced in their jobs.

"It seems clear now that it is the task of labor and of progressive-minded citizens to see that military occupations are not considered a cure for unemployment and that expenditures for military purposes do not become our only method of meeting the needs of the unemployed."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Rapid organization of local consumers' groups in all parts of the country to protect consumers against the stresses of the defense emergency was called for at a conference held here by representativs of 43 organizations. The conference voted to set up a continuations committee for the purpose of forming a national consumers' organization.

Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, and Professor Colston Warne of Amherst College were the main speakers at the conference. Miss Kathryn Lewis, head of the CIO National Council of Women's Auxiliaries, presented the preamble embodying the general recommendations from the various round tables.

IMPROVED TAXATION

Declaring that Congress had made no provision to pay the high cost of the defense program, the conference went on record in favor of more sharply graduated taxes on corporate profits and individual incomes; increased inheritance and gift taxes; excess profits and indistributed profits taxes. It opposed any increase in excise and sales taxes and other consumption taxes which bear most heavily upon those least able to pay.

"Even an income tax is actually a consumption tax," it was stated in the round table report on taxation, "when it is paid by low income receivers who are unable to save any part of their income."

Sign Farm Machine Pact

Chicago, Nov. 2—Two new contracts with the Oliver Manufacturing Co. covering about 2,700 workers in plants at South Bend, Ind., and Charles City, Iowa, have been announced by the CIO's Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.

"A solid, militant stand by the men in the plants gave us the necessary power to secure improved contracts," said a joint statement issued by union officials who assisted the local union committees in negotiating the agreements.

Union officials said the agreement was reached after that union had set a strike deadline. They praised David Roadley, conciliator for the Dept. of Labor, for his assistance in arriving at a settlement without strike action.

Win $40,000 Raise At Chemical Plant

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 9. — A $40,000 wage increase was the dividend won for several hundred employes of the Vanadium Company's big plant here.

Negotiated by District 50 of the United Mine Workers, the increase contradicted fables that Niagara Falls is too hard a town for a union to crack.

Under the agreement, which followed four days of negotiations, workers with two years' service will receive a 6c wage increase, while those who have worked less than two years will get a 5c raise.

The company, which produces chemicals and alloys, is working on large government national defense orders.

Radio Station WOV Off Air As Staff Strikes

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Radio Station WOV went off the air Nov. 3 and gained the dubious distinction of being one of the first broadcasters to close on account of a strike.

Leonard Ohil, vice-president of the broadcast department of the CIO's American Communications Assn. said that 36 of the station's 40 employes walked out when representatives of the management refused to discuss "90 per cent of the union's demands.

ACA requests for higher wages, a shorter work week and longer sick leave were categorically rejected by spokesman for Arde Bulova, owner of Station WOV and a well-known radio manufacturer. Union leaders said the rejection of the demands were described as final and no attempt was made by the management to bargain on them.

In refusing to discuss the issues the station was following a long-established anti-labor policy, the ACA pointed out. The day before the strike the New York Supreme Court had handed down an order that the WOV management carry out the terms of an impartial arbiter's award made on July 17.

The arbitration case arose out of the extension of the work week from 35 to 40 hours, in direct conflict with the union's agreement. The station management refused to respect the arbiter's decision.

Many Gains Won By Labor, Election Results Indicate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9 — Election results throughout the nation showed a generally favorable pro-labor trend.

Re-elected to the Senate were such friendly veterans as Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin and Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania.

They will be joined by progressive newcomers including Abe Murdock of Utah, for many years a member of the House of Representatives; Mon R. Wallgren of Washington; and Harley M. Kilgore of West Virginia.

Sen. Matthew Neely of West Virginia, a supporter of coal mine safety legislation, was elected governor of the state with the aid of labor votes.

Two outspoken foes of the Wagner Act went down to defeat. They were Rep. Routzohn of Ohio, majority member of the notorious Smith Committee, and Rep. Arthur C. Anderson, whose long anti-Wagner Act campaign was not forgotten by Missouri workers despite frantic pleas by AFL Pres. William Green.

In Illinois both Rep. Kent Keller and Rep. Frank Fries, who have earned a solid pro-labor reputation, were narrowly squeezed out in their election races.

The usual crop of southern reactionaries, aided by the disfranchising poll tax, were returned to Congress almost without opposition.

Los Angeles labor and reform groups scored a signal victory when they ousted District Attorney Burton Fitts, whose 12-year term has been marked by savage attacks on union workers and by general municipal corruption.

Join Union, Get 4,000% Dividend!

BRISTOL, Conn., Nov. 9.— Does it pay to join the CIO? Ask any brass worker in the Connecticut Valley who joined the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and you'll get an answer — it pays 4,000 per cent on your dues investment.

Here's how it figures out: The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have won 10 contracts in the brass industry. Pay increases amount to $420 per worker per year. Dues amount to $13 per year.

A dividend of $420 on an investment of $13 is 4,000 per cent.

CIVIC LEADERS URGE:

'No U. S. Orders To Law-Breakers'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Close to 200 prominent trade union leaders, writers, educators, ministers and professional workers are on record as favoring observance of the Wagner Act by all firms getting defense or other U. S. contracts, according to a survey just completed by the Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties here.

The survey covered three main points:

1. "Do you believe that any surrender of civil liberties, including the surrender of labor's rights as defined in the Natl. Labor Relations Act, would undermine the foundations of democracy and thereby weaken the national defense?

2. "Do you believe that collective bargaining strengthens the national defense by furthering democracy and ensuring continuity of production?

3. "Do you believe that the interests of civil liberties, industrial peace and national defense will best be served by requiring corporations receiving orders from the Federal government to comply with the Wagner Act?"

Among those answering yes to the questionnaire were Elmer Benson, former Governor of Minnesota; Rep. Lee Geyer of California; Tom Mooney; George Seldes; R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Auto Workers; Edward Cheyfitz, CIO Die Casting Workers; Edw. Flora, AFL vice-president; John Green, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Don Henderson, Cannery and Agricultural Workers; Donald Ogden Stewart, president of the League of American Writers.

Gold Miners Ask Higher Wages

Bralorne, B. C., Nov. 9—Workers at Bralorne gold mine have rejected a company committee as their bargaining agent and approved Local 271 of the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers by a majority of 81, it was announced this week.

The union is now demanding $1 daily increase which company council failed to press.

Expose FBI Frame-up Plot In Montana

BUTTE, Mont., Nov. 9. — Accusing J. Edgar Hoover's Federal Bureau of Investigation of seeking to engineer a frame-up, the powerful CIO Butte Miners Union today was demanding complete exoneration of Joe Mason, its financial secretary, on "ridiculous" Mann Act charges.

Pretext for the arrest of Mason was an automobile trip taken by the local union man from his fiancee's home in Spokane, Wash., to Kellogg, Idaho, where they were to be married on Sept. 20 in the presence of relatives and friends.

Enroute to the wedding, the couple—together with Herb Wurst, local official of the Workers Alliance — were seriously injured when their car left the road and turned over several times.

POSTPONE WEDDING

Hastily abandoning the wedding plans, the group drove into Butte to provide the girl with adequate medical attention. After three weeks of medical attention by Butte doctors, the couple were married on Oct. 14.

The following day Wurst was seized by a Butte policeman, thrown into jail and questioned. On Oct. 16 both Mason and Wurst were brought before the local U. S. Commissioner, where the FBI men launched formal Mann Act charges against the two men. The Mann Act is aimed at preventing white slavers from taking girls across state lines for illicit purposes.

HOT POTATO FOR FBI

Though the FBI had promised a number of "witnesess," they turned up at preliminary hearing without a single one and instead asked that the charges be dismissed.

They announced their intention, however, of bringing other witnesses before the next session of the Grand Jury, thereby leaving the door open for further frame-up attempts.

The whole matter is regarded by Butte miners and workers generally as an obvious frame-up by FBI agents, who seem desperately intent on harassing local unions.

More than 85 FBI men are known to have visited Butte since last March, according to the union, and some 15 or 20 are estimated to be stationed here at the present time. Apparently they are missing no opportunities to smear the union.

Baltimore Newsmen Get Back Wages

Baltimore, Nov. 9—The Baltimore Afro-American, leading Negro newspaper, has returned to 11 employes nearly $9,000 due them in back wages, under the federal wage-hour law, a United States district court settlement revealed today.

The American Newspaper Guild has had numerous bouts with the management, and a few months ago succeeded in winning a considerable back pay settlement for an employe dismissed in violation of the Wagner Act.

Eleven employes received about $8,000 in straight back pay, including some overtime. Virgil Williams, Jr., who was listed as "apprentice reporter" but actually worked as pressman's helper and compositor for a year without pay, got $431 due in straight pay.

In a separate civil suit, Williams won an additional $300. He said he had been promised a job after his apprentice period but was fired instead.

Map Drive To Organize In Oregon

Portland, Ore., Nov. 9—Plans for an intensive organizing campaign will soon be worked out by the Portland Industrial Union Council.

With Oregon's anti-picketing law out of the way as the result of a state supreme court decision, local CIO leaders feel that many retraints which have slowed organization in the past two years will be lifted.

"There have been too many issues distracting our attention from the main job of organizing the unorganized," a delegate from the longshoremen's union told the city CIO group.

"I sincerely hope that when this election is over we'll forget all our arguments over politics and get down to that main job."

Brokerage House Signs

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 9 — The CIO has signed its first contract with a Los Angeles brokerage house.

The firm, J. A. Hogle & Co., reinstated nine union employes with back pay and reached an agreement with the United Office & Professional Workers. Negotiations lasted several weeks.

Rap Scripps-Howard Chain For Refusing to Bargain

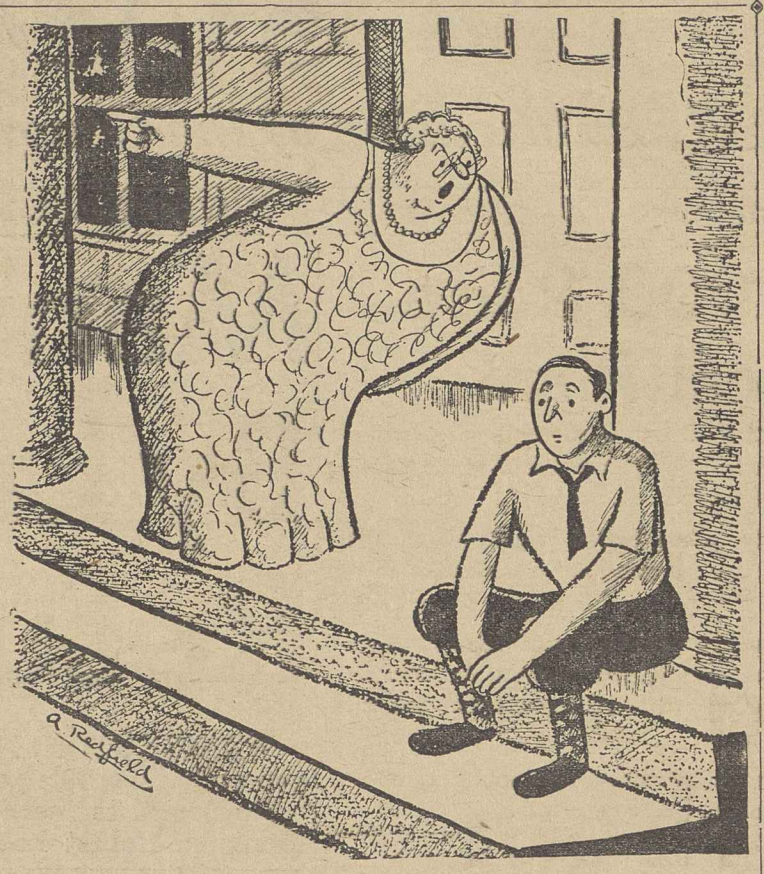
NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The American Newspaper Guild this week moved towards a major test of strength with the Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers.

Representatives of Guild units from all the Scripps-Howard papers, who met at Cincinnati last week, termed the paper chain's refusal to bargain on a national scale "specious and evasive."

At the same time they passed a stinging resolution demanding the reinstatement of James P. Kirby, a founder of the Guild and known as one of the ablest newspapermen in the mid-West. Kirby's dismissal from the Cleveland Press was described as a "challenge to the security of the American Newspaper Guild," and Guild leaders did not hesitate to ascribe his firing to union activities.

EFFORTS TO UNDERMINE

At present the Guild has contracts with 16 of the 19 Scripps-Howard papers and with four of its syndicates. But ANG leaders from all parts of the country who attended the Cincinnati session reported increased evidence of management attempts to undermine and eventually wreck the union.



Contracts have been violated, active unionists have been shifted to inferior jobs or fired, and there have been the usual threats to suspend publication if Guild demands are pressed.

The union faces much the same problem that confronted the United Automobile Workers when it demanded an industry-wide contract of General Motors several years ago. The head office refused to discuss a master contract and insisted that local plant managers were officials with whom to bargain. When negotiators went to the local plants heads, they found that the small fry had no authority to grant the union demands.

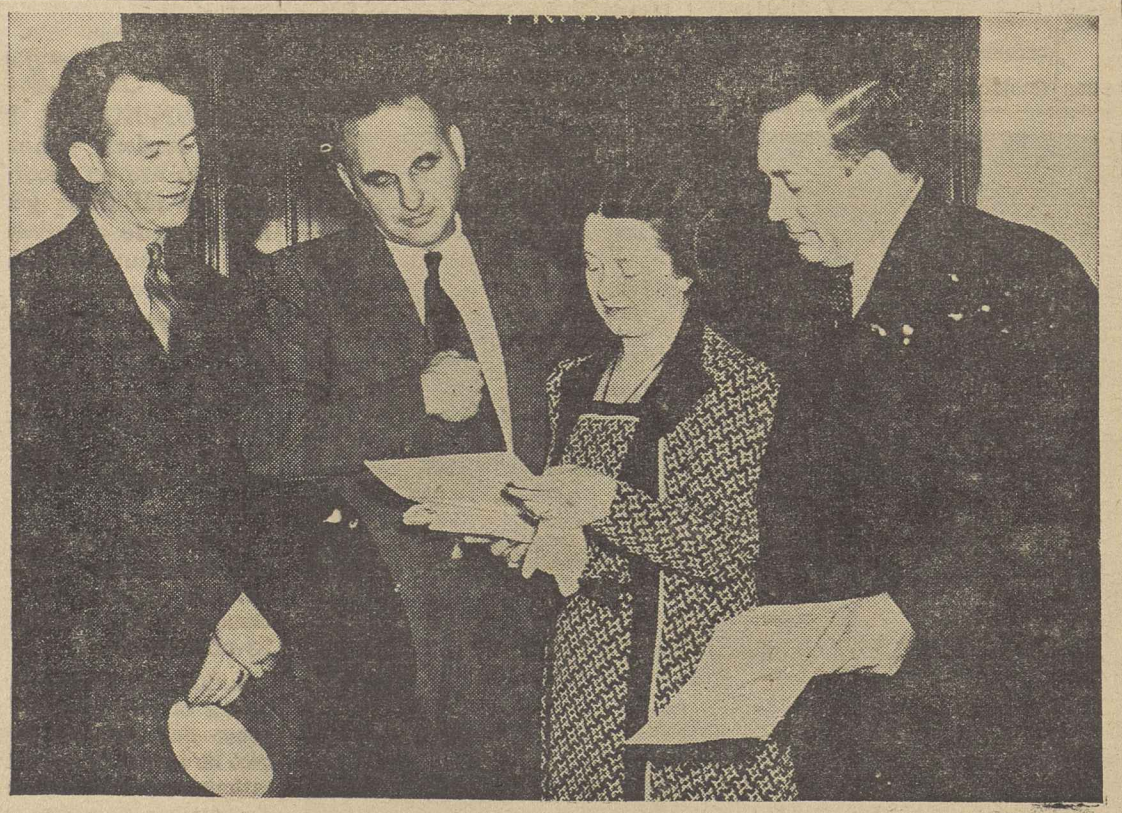
ASK UNIONS' AID

The Guild conference resolution said Scripps-Howard's refusal to bargain nationally represents a "determination . . . to withhold complete union recognition from the Guild."

All Guild locals were called upon to fight for the recognition and "to stop in its tracks the growing anti-Guild campaign of the Scripps-Howard newspapers."

"A fine son you are! Papa waiting to show you his new teargas gun and you just sit there."

CIO Unions Plan Council in Memphis



MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—Leaders of CIO unions in this Crump-machine dominated city today made plans for formation of a Memphis Industrial Union Council.

Paul Christopher, executive secretary of the state CIO, said that representatives of 15 local unions affiliated with nine international organizations, had asked for chartering of the new council.

Other unions represented at the meeting included the federal workers, newspaper guild, steel workers, inland boatmen, marine engineers, telegraph workers, cannery and agricultural workers and the woodworkers.

The CIO has been steadily growing in Memphis despite periodic blasts by "Boss" Crump, local Democratic machine head, who has been attempting to fool the people into fright of a "menace" from the CIO while solemly assuring them that the CIO has no membership in the city.

WIN FIRST ROUND: Judge Lila Neuenfelt of Dearborn, Mich., who ruled that the Ford duchy's anti-handbill law is unconstitutional, shows her decision to Richard Leonard of the auto workers' executive board; Maurice Sugar, UAW counsel, and Pres. R. J. Thomas, who was arrested for leaflet distribution some time ago. But next day Dearborn cops were making more arrests while city officials, clinging to a technicality, ruled the ordinance was still on the books.

Set Minimum Of 93½c In New Pact

Detroit, Nov. 9—(FP)—A minimum hourly rate of 93½ cents an hour for all production workers not on piecework was won today by Local 42 of the United Automobile Workers at the Detroit Gear & Axle Co.

The company agreed that no workers, regardless of his occupation, will get less than 75 cents an hour. The firm is a subsidiary of Borg-Warner.

Rents Rising

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 9 — (FP) — Local 1 of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers is asking members to report rent boosts.

Intl. Pres. John Green has warned that if landlords try to grab some of the 7 per cent pay increase won recently by the union, a rent strike will be called.

DAY AFTER ELECTION:

U. S. Gives Ford Huge Order

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6. — One day after election the National Defense Advisory Commission announced that it had cleared the following purchasing contract:

Ford Motor Co., Dearborn, Mich. . . $122,323,020.00

Ford is now involved in nine separate Labor Board cases. One NLRB decision was upheld in its essential parts by the U. S. Circuit Court a fortnight ago. Two cases are now before the Circuit Courts. Three decisions have not yet reached the courts. And in three cases the NLRB has not yet acted on its trial examiners' recommendations.

CIO efforts to bar contracts to violators of the Wagner Act until they swing in line with the law have so far been unavailing.

Arrest 25 At Ford Gates In Dearborn

DEARBORN, Mich., Nov. 9.—The Ford Motor Co.'s professed devotion to freedom of speech and freedom of the press—a devotion ardently publicized over a period of years—was exploded here Nov. 1 when Dearborn police, controlled by the company, again arrested distributors of union leaflets on public property near the Ford gates.

Those arrested were union organizers and members of the CIO United Automobile Workers.

When Judge Lila Neuenfelt declared a local anti-leaflet ordinance unconstitutional on Oct. 31, union officials believed Ford would let the distribution issue rest. For in her decision Judge Neuenfelt cited a recent federal circuit order upholding Ford's arguments on distribution of anti-union circulars to his employes.

WORKS BOTH WAYS

She declared that if Ford had the right to distribute circulars at the Ford gates, then the union had the same right. But Dearborn prosecutors, hearing of the UAW's intention to hand out leaflets, hastily rendered an opinion that the ordinance was valid until final judgment had been rendered by a higher court.

Eleven arrested unionists who were brought before Judge Neuenfelt on Nov. 1 were freed, but 14 haled before Judge Leo Schaefer were released on $25 cash bond and must stand trial on the same charges on which Pres. R. J. Thomas had been freed the day before.

The leaflets told of the Neuenfelt decision and urged Ford workers to join the UAW. As the afternoon shift poured out of street-cars, buses and flivvers to enter the plant through the tunnels and overpasses, they eagerly took the leaflets.

Even when police grabbed the distributors and took the badge numbers of Ford workers accepting them—to have witnesses for the prosecution—the workers crowded around to get more.

COMPOSE SONG

En route to the police station, UAW distributors sang a new song to ridicule Harry Bennett, chief of the Ford service department. Sung to the tune of "We Shall Not Be Moved," it went:

"Just like the garbage in your alleys.

"He shall be re-moved."

When Bennett told the press that the Ford Motor Co. would gladly distribute union leaflets to its men if the leaflets were "not antagonistic to employes and did not cause disturbances," UAW Pres. Thomas replied:

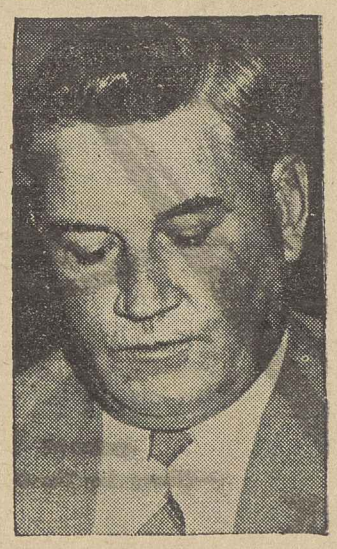
"We are not prepared to accept Mr. Bennett as minister of enlightment" — an obvious allusion to Bennett's proposed dictatorship.

To Ask Pay For Draftees At Chrysler

Detroit, Nov. 9—Full pay for any Chrysler Corp. employes who are drafted into military service is a leading demand in the program to be presented to the company management by United Automobile Workers contract negotiators.

The union committee, consisting of Chrysler representatives from local unions and international officers and representatives, want the highly profitable auto firm to make up the difference between regular wages and the $21 a month paid to conscriptees.

Basing their demands on Chrysler's $45,106,094 profit during the first nine months of the year—a 16½ per cent increase over 1939—the UAW is seeking vacation bonuses and other improvements.



Miners' Board To Meet At Atlantic City

Washington, Nov. 9—Meetings of the national policy committee and the international executive board of the United Mine Workers will be held at Atlantic City, N. J., starting Nov. 12, it was announced by the UMW.

The sessions will precede the convention activities of the CIO. The CIO executive board will meet Nov. 15, and the convention will get under way.

FRANK FRIES

KENT KELLER

Regret Loss Of Rep. Fries, Keller

Washington, Nov. 9 — Defeat of two outstandingly progressive Congressmen disappointed labor officials here.

The men were Rep. Frank Fries of the 21st Illinois District and Rep. Kent Keller of the 25th District in the same state. Both have served on the House Labor Committee and were active and loyal supporters of all progressive legislation at times when many so-called liberals deserted labor's cause.

Keller sponsored the Coal Mine Safety Bill in the House and together with Fries had worked to bring the legislation out of committee and on to the floor of the House.

Labor Wins Many Seats In Congress

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—Labor fared well in Congressional state and local contests in the November 5 elections.

Re-elected to office were such nationally prominent friends of labor as Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, who ran far ahead of his Republican opponent; Sen. Robert LaFollette, Wisconsin Progressive, who eked out a 43,000 plurality over a conservative industrialist; Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania, who had practically unanimous labor support in the Keystone State; and Sen. James M. Mead of New York, whose Republican opponent, advertising executive Bruce Barton, was under heavy fire from labor representatives.

Wheeler and LaFollette have distinguished themselves as leading spokesmen against the increasing U. S. drift to war. The Wisconsin Senator gained widespread labor popularity through his chairmanship of the epoch-making Senate Civil Liberties Committee, whose investigations focussed public attention on anti-democratic processes of tory employers.

THREE NEWCOMERS

In Utah, Abe Murdock, who distinguished himself by his outspoken criticism of the reactionary majority on the Smith Committee to "investigate" the Labor Board, romped home an easy 2-1 victor for the Senate seat left va-

Defeat of Fitts, Foe Of Coast Labor, Heads Local Gains

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Increased power for the forces of organized labor in city and state governments took shape today as election returns showed the election of numerous union-supported candidates.

Most effective victory in the country undoubtedly occurred in Los Angeles, where CIO, AFL, independents and reform groups joined forces to throw out of office District Attorney Buron Fitts, whose twelve years of service have been marked by violent anti-union attacks.

Los Angeles CIO officials, holding that Fitts was a main obstacle to continued organizing endeavors in southern California, made his defeat their Number One election effort. Their fight was successful and Fitts bowed to former Congressman John Dockweiler by a "tremendous majority."

Senate Civil Liberties Committee and Labor Board hearings had offered ample evidence that Fitts worked closely with Los Angeles open shop organizations and used his office to further their interests. His regime had been marked by a long series of frameup cases against union workers.

OTHER RETURNS

Returns from other local contests were filtering slowly into Washington headquarters of the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Following are a few highspots from the national balloting:

Flint, Mich. — CIO candidates for city commissioner won six of nine places.

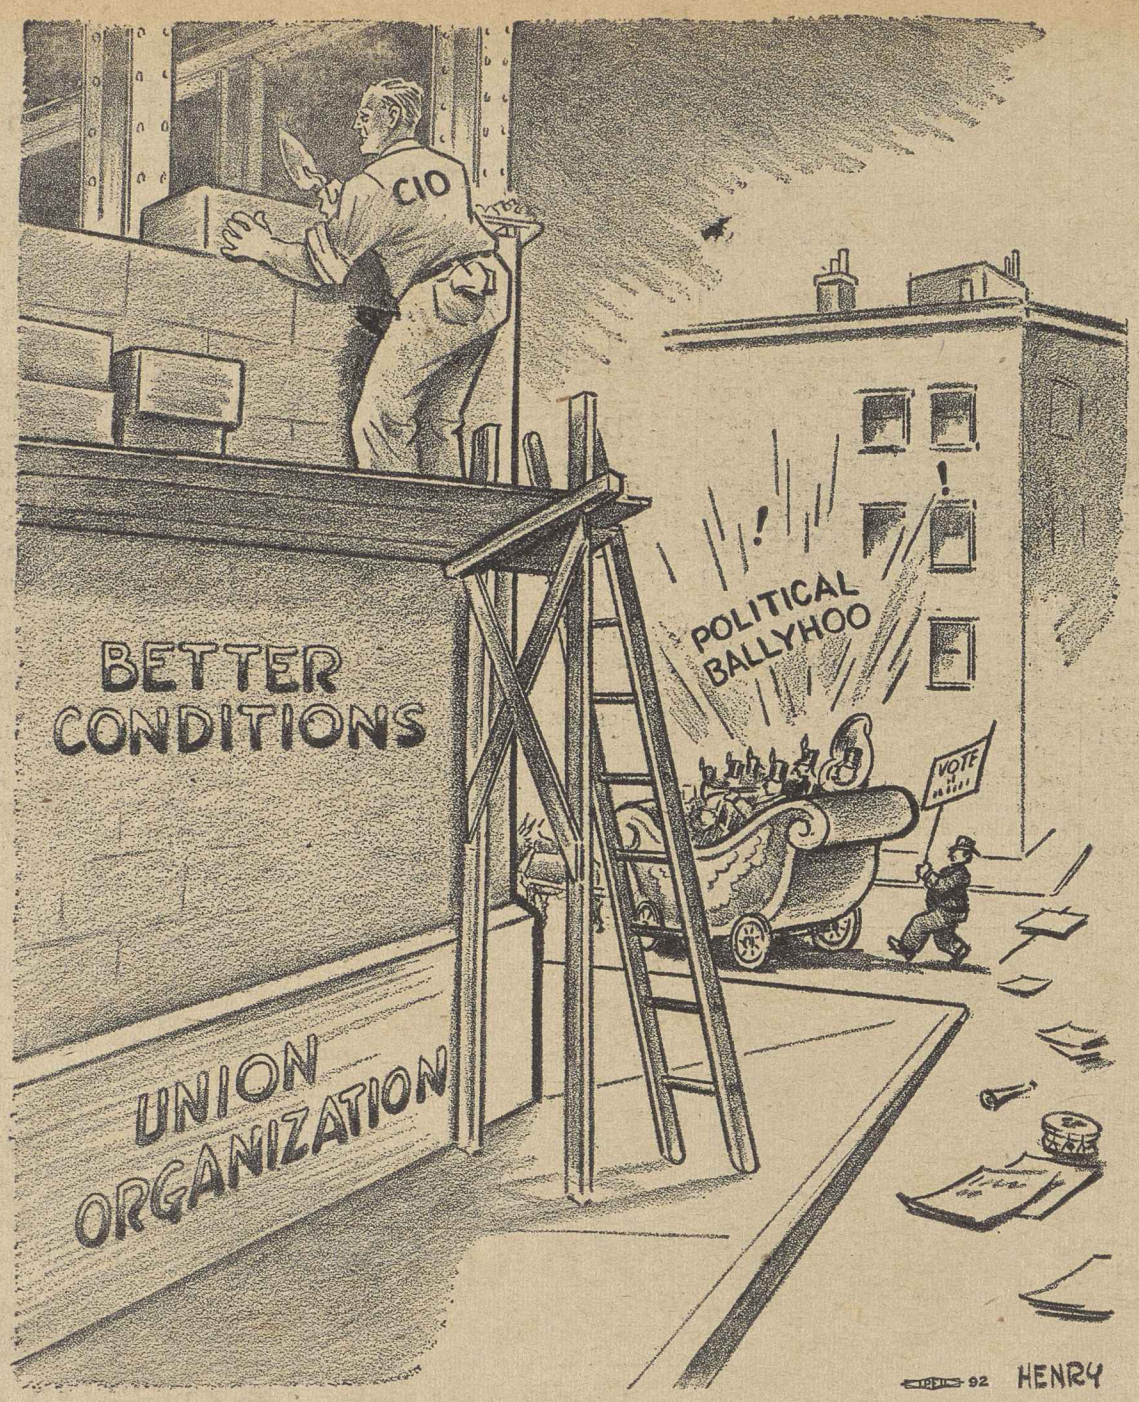
Toledo, O.—Tom Burke, financial secretary of powerful Local 12, United Automobile Workers, and Virgil Cramer, both labor-supported, were elected to the state legislature.

Ansonia, Conn.—Henry McCormack, business agent for Local 445, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers was elected to the state legislature. As a city alderman McCormack led a brilliant fight for lower utility rates.

Milwaukee—Two labor-endorsed candidates, George Hampel and Allen Busby, were elected to the state senate, while several favored candidates for assemblymen were victorious.



CIO Wins 2-1 Majority In Fruit Packing Polls

SAN JOSE, Calif., Nov. 9.—By a majority of nearly two to one, the CIO swept to victory in a National Labor Relations Board election in 13 dried fruit and nut packing companies throughout California's Santa Clara valley.

The Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union received 1,096 votes, while an AFL outfit was able to muster but 634 ballots. Only 47 workers voted for no union.

The election was held after an AFL local switched to the CIO in order to obtain real collective bargaining in the interests of the workers, it was explained by Sec.-Treas. Louis Goldblatt of the California state CIO. An NLRB hearing exposed the AFL setup as company-inspired.

It is now expected that the Labor Board will soon certify the ILWU as sole bargaining agency for the upwards of 2,000 workers employed in the 13 plants, which do an estimated $22,000,000 volume of business each year.

BACK TO WORK

Labor's Power

Labor was a major factor in the recent elections. The voice of the labor-baiter was strangely silent for the duration of the campaign. Union support was vigorously and often desperately solicited by contenders for office.

The labor vote was decisive in many states. So politicians who once "dissembled their love" for the CIO, to the extent of making silly cracks about "the kiss of death," and raving about "the CIO menace," turned to ardent courtship.

Whether labor used to maximum advantage the bargaining power inherent in its greatly augumented strength, may be debated. But that it had this power is amply demonstrated by the attention it received.

Returns from Congressional and state and local elections reveal many outstanding victories in the election of Senators, Congressmen and other officials endorsed and supported by the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League. But labor, on its voting strength, was entitled to many more such victories.

The CIO has demonstrated on the industrial field the power of independent organized action on the part of workers for the advancement of their economic interests.

Where labor is organized for political purposes on an independent basis, so that it is not bound to any chariot driven by others, it also has decisive political power for the election of worthy representatives and for the enactment of labor's socially progressive program.

Election Postscript

One bloc of states returned its full quota of reactionaries to Congress almost without challenge in the elections. Not that the people of these states wanted such representatives — they just didn't have a chance to say whom they wanted.

These were the eight poll-tax states, where people have to pay to vote. If they haven't the money, they lose this democratic right and have to put up with the representatives chosen by the well-to-do minority.

Some ten million Americans, representing 75% of the adult citizens in these states, are thus deprived of the right to vote, it is estimated.

The CIO supports the Geyer anti-poll tax bill because it believes in democracy, and because it wants these disfranchised millions to have a chance to send progressives instead of reactionaries to Congress.

Still In The Lead

In the month of October, when everyone was supposed to be engrossed with the excitement of the political election campaigns, the CIO did not neglect its basic union work by any means.

On the contrary, it just naturally kept on organizing more and more workers and winning more and more Labor Board elections.

Latest Labor Board figures show that in October the CIO won more elections than AFL and independent unions put together. It also polled more than two and a half times as many votes as the AFL, and nearly six times as many votes as independent unions.

Such popularity must be deserved.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IT WAS all very confusing, George thought. Before going to bed, he had looked over the house and locked the door. Everything was in the usual order, or disorder. But now—

To begin with, what was all the hubbub? The radio seemed to be blaring at him from two directions. Or rather, wait a minute . . . The noise was a speech coming from . . . but no, he wouldn't believe it!

But, believe it or not, there they were, two rather clumsy angels floating about in the air, one of them with a cigar in his mouth and the other making a political speech.

George tried to listen to the speech and to applaud at the right places. But his attention was immediately distracted by two rather pot-bellied devils at the other end of the room, also orating to beat the band.

Now George was a good citizen, and he knew he ought to clap the angels and boo the devils. But the trouble was that every time he got going good with his applause, it seemed that both angels and devils were saying the same thing, so that people might think he was clapping the wrong one.

George squirmed and pinched himself. He must be dreaming or crazy. Those weren't angels, of course, and he wasn't at home. He was in a smoke-filled hall, listening to speeches and really getting into the spirit of things.

But, doggone it, there they went up in the air again. Maybe they were storks. But how could a stork smoke a cigar? And here was he, a grown man, imagining he saw storks bringing babies!

Or was it babies? It looked more like a house being brought out of thin air to him by that big what-have-you with the cigar in his mouth. It WAS a house. What's more, it was his own house!

And here was he, hardheaded George, applauding till his hands hurt at being presented with his own house—a house he had bought from his own savings with the aid of that wage-increase the union had won.

Talking about raining cats and dogs and babies! The more he applauded the speeches, the more those fellows brought to him out of the sky. But everything looked very familiar.

There was his flivver, for instance. He couldn't afford one until the CIO organized his shop. But now he was being told he owed it all to having voted for the right party. And he was applauding like mad.

The booing, too, was fun. George cupped his hand to his mouth and let out a ripsnorting Bronx cheer. Then he gave a dirty look and shook his fist at the fellow across the aisle who was clapping instead of booing.

But, hold on, who was that they were asking him to boo? Wasn't it a union man who had stood by him through thick and thin, when the going was really tough, when he was on the picket line, when every hand seemed turned against him, and when some of these people who now claimed credit for everything were nowhere to be found?

Wasn't it a man who was always getting all the abuse and brick-bats in creation for fighting for the laws that helped union organization, and for battling every inch of the way to get the most possible for labor?

Suddenly George felt rather ashamed of his Bronx cheer. He began to wonder, too, why he should pick a fight with his union brother across the aisle.

But now the applause was going strong again, and George's enthusiasm rose once more. It kept on rising, too, higher and higher, as the cigar-smoking cherubs fluttered clumsily about, graciously presenting him with everything he already had.

The laws, the rights, the conditions his union had won—even the sewer system and the water supply—everything, it appeared, was the gift of these speech-making vote-seekers.

George's spirits rose and rose. And when two of the winged ones approached him, offering cigars and to lead him to peace and prosperity, he got up, grabbed each by the hand and actually floated up into the air with them.

Well, I'll be darned, George thought. I always figured I could fly. If the birds can, why can't we? And he started to swing his arms like wings.

But suddenly he realized it was all a dream and he was falling, falling, falling—right into a windmill that was shaking him up something terrible.

"Wake up, you!" his wife was saying. "What's all the snorting and puffing and hissing about? Anyone would think you were at a political meeting. Don't you know the elections are over, and you've still got to go to work?

"And, by the way, I think you ought to drop in next door on the way and be a bit neighborly. Tom there is a mighty good union man, though you've been glaring at him like an enemy over your political arguments. Believe me, we've got to stick together."

George's wife was right. The elections are over. People still have to go to work. The CIO is still the worker's best protection. It still has big union tasks ahead. And, believe you me and her, we've got to stick together if we don't want to be dropped by the politicians like George was.

State Polls Show Many Victories For Labor

Washington voters turned thumbs down on the political aspirations of Stephen Chadwick, bitter labor foe, and instead chose liberal Rep. Mon C. Wallgren for the Senate. Sen. Schwellenbach, the incumbent, will take a place on the federal judiciary in January.

In West Virginia, one Senate liberal was replaced by another. Sen. Matthew Neely, longtime friend of the United Mine Workers and a sponsor of the federal mine safety bill, was elected governor. He will be succeeded in the Senate by CIO-endorsed Harley M. Kilgore. The miners and other CIO groups in West Virginia conducted an active campaign for both men.

MICHIGAN

Michigan labor hailed the whisker-close victory of Murray van Waggoner over Luren Dickenson, 81-year old reformer, whose principal concern has been with liquor and the activities of Michigan girls on visits to New York City. Dickinson apparently classed labor organization as "sin."

Wisconsin's reactionary Gov. Julius Heil, who has been under steady attack from unionists since his election in 1938, squeezed in ahead of his Progressive Party opponent. In adjacent Minnesota, Gov. Harold Stassen, attacked for his labor record, secured a bare majority over the combined Democratic and Farmer-Labor vote to win a second term. Backed by workers' votes, Clarence C. Dill appeared to be winning a see-saw tilt for governor of Washington.

ROUTZOHN DEFEATED

Composition of the House of Representatives showed comparatively little change, but a few returns stood out in the general election.

One major source of satisfaction for labor was the defeat of Rep. Routzohn of Ohio. As a member of the Smith Committee, the Ohio Congressman was a constant and bitter foe of the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board. His re-election had been urged by AFL Pres. William Green.

Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, and Vice-Pres. Morris Watson of American Newspaper Guild, both running on the American Labor Party ticket, failed in their Congressional election efforts in New York City. But ALP Rep. Vito Marcantonio, who was strongly endorsed by national Labor's Non-Partisan League, scored an almost 2-1 triumph over his Tammany opponent.

BAY STATE RESULTS

Outstandi g in Massachusetts were the triumphs of Senator David I. Walsh, who led all candidates in popular vote, including the President, and Thomas H. Eliot, young former government attorney, who defeated reactionary Robert L. Luce for the Ninth District Congressional seat. Walsh defeated Henry Parkman, Republican. Other endorsed candidates for Congress, all Democratic incumbents, were also elected — Thomas Flaherty, Joseph Casey, Arthur Healey and John W. McCormack.

Paul Dever, Democrat, was apparently nosed out for the governorship by Governor Leverett Saltonstall, but, amid rumors of ballot thefts, the LNPL-endorsed candidate demanded a recount. The vote was Saltonstall 997,285; Dever 988,228.

In Connecticut, Herman P. Koppleman, defeated for re-election in 1933, made a sweeping comeback with the aid of labor votes.

MIDWEST

In Michigan two candidates sponsored by auto baron Henry Ford were soundly trounced by incumbent Reps. Lesinski and Tenerowicz.

Wisconsin laborites were cheered by the victories of Merlin Hull Bernard Gehrman, both running for re-election and both CIO-endorsed.

All Minnesota Farmer-Laborite candidates for Congress were apparently defeated, but John T. Bernard, who made a progressive record in Congress two years ago polled 45,000 votes in the state's eighth district. He was opposed by steel trust officials and AFL higher-ups.

Jeannette Rankin, who as a member of Congress in 1917 voted against American participation in the war, defeated former Rep. Jerry O'Connell in Montana. They were running for the seat left vacant by the defeat of Jacob Thorkelson, extreme reactionary and friend of the fascist Silver Shirts.

DEFEAT ANDERSON

Missouri CIO leaders were pleased with the defeat of Rep. C. Arthur Anderson in the state's 12th district. An arch-foe of labor and opponent of the Wagner Act, Anderson had introduced his own amendments to the Labor Act and later was an enthusiastic supporter of the Smith "ripper bill."

Labor campaigned against Anderson on the basis of his record and helped secure his defeat by 18,000 votes. Local AFL groups disregarded pleadings of their Pres. Green to support him.

Kent Keller, House sponsor of the mine safety bill and a trusted supporter of labor causes, lost his re-election effort in Illinois. In the same state another prominent progressive, Frank Fries, also went down to defeat.

CALIFORNIA

Leading California liberals — Reps. Thomas Ford, John Tolan, Richard Welch and Lee Geyer, the latter chief sponsor of the anti-poll tax bill—were returned to office. All had CIO support. On the other hand Rep. Franck Havenner of San Francisco, another labor-endorsed candidate, was licked to a great extent through local shipowning and utility interests, who indulged in a wild red-baiting campaign.

Park City, Utah, Nov. 9. — A week's paid vacation, plus settlement of outstanding grievances involving laid-off workers, were won by members of Local 99 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers employed in the metal mines here.

Federal Workers Ask U. S. Protect Draftees

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Pointing out that Uncle Sam, as an employer, should not lag behind employers in private industry in protecting the interests of drafted employes, Local 52 of the United Federal Workers today urged support of H. R. 10585, to maintain the pay of drafted Federal workers.

The bills endorsed were S. 4356, an administration measure, introduced by Senator Sheppard of Texas, providing that accumulated leave would be either paid for or carried forward until the draftee returns to work; and a bill, H. R. 10585, introduced by Rep. Michael J. Kennedy of N. Y., providing that Federal employes shall continue to receive their regular rate of pay during service. The provisions in the latter bill are in the form of a pay differential, and would have the effect of preventing any reduction in a draftee's total pay from the Government.

Frank Cacciola, chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Council, expressed confidence that these measures would be won.

Locals of the UFWA in the New York region include two Veterans Hospitals, several locals in the Treasury Department, two locals in the War Department, the Social Security Board, the Post Office (Custodial), the Navy Yard and others.

Cafeteria Union Gets Pay Boost

Washington, Nov. 9 — Pay increases and improved working conditions were written into a contract signed by the CIO United Cafeteria Employes with the Press Cafeteria in the National Press Building here.

The union conducted a strike against the cafeteria for some weeks last summer, maintaining an effective picket line which received much public attention.

The workers involved in the settlement, the majority of whom are colored, unanimously approved the agreement.

450 ON STRIKE

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Aircraft Industry

• High strength with minimum weight. This is the basic principle underlying the construction of everything that flies—from birds to airplanes.

Stainless steel—with its high strength-weight ratio—has already contributed much to aviation progress. This metal is highly resistant to corrosive attack by moisture-laden air and salt water spray. It practically eliminates the hazard of corrosion and thus protects from the always present chance of failure from rust-weakened members. Since no painting or coating is necessary to protect its gleaming surface, maintenance is greatly simplified and kept at a minimum.

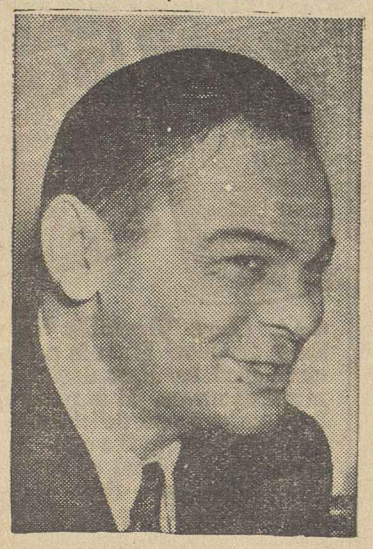
U. S. Court Reverses 'Anti-Trust' Decision In Fur Union Case

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—A U. S. Circuit Court decision overruling Sherman Anti-Trust Act convictions against Pres. Ben Gold and 10 other leaders of the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union was hailed today as "a victory of outstanding magnitude for the entire labor movement."



In reversing the decision of the federal district court last April, the circuit court ruled that the government's case against the union was "even weaker" than that in the motoring Apex case, in which the U. S. Supreme Court early this year decided in favor of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

The fur union case dates back to 1931 when the union launched a drive to organize the New York market. The indictments were pigeon-holed for 6½ years and were received during the midst of Asst. Atty. General Thurman Arnold's anti-trust campaign several months ago.

REBUKE LOWER COURT

District Court Judge Bondy in his charge to the jury had spoken of a "conspiracy" to organize the whole industry, which he said made the union liable under the Sherman Act. The circuit court, in its decision this week, said that in so doing the lower tribunal "repudiated the Apex case" decision of the Supreme Court.

"It is now held," the circuit order declared, "that the only restraints forbidden were those which limited competition in 'business and commercial transactions' and which 'tended to restrict production, raise prices or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers of consumers of goods and services."

NULLIFIES SENTENCES

Sentences against the union officers ranging from a $500 fine to $2,500 and a year in jail, were nullified by the reversal of the decision.

Still remaining against four of the defendants are charges of "obstruction of justice" in connection with the trial.

"The imprisonment without bail on this charge of Irving Potash, manager of the New York Furriers Joint Council, Joseph Winogradsky, John Vafiades and Louis Hatchios, is "now exposed as deliberate persecution and hounding of our union officers by the Department of Justice," a statement issued by the IFLWU declared. Appeal of this case has not yet come up for trial.

RECALL CHARGES

The union recalled that "shortly after the trial the union forwarded to Atty. General Jackson photostatic copies of a document which indicated that the 6½-year-old case against the union had been revived by the Dept. of Justice at the behest of anti-union employers.

FLIMSY EVIDENCE

Discussing the anti-trust case, the IFLWU noted that the Court of Appeals "could not help but recognize the flimsy and fantastic character of both the legal charges and the factual evidence offered by stoolpigeons, labor spies and sweatshop bosses in the service of the Department of Justice. A resounding blow has been dealt to the enemies of labor. Their efforts to deprive labor of its rights received a setback.

"The Fur & Leather Workers Union is proud to have carried the fight for all labor's rights through to victory."

LABOR AND THE LAW:

Labor's Rights & The Anti-Trust Laws

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals a few days ago reversed a conviction in the lower court of several officials of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union under the anti-trust laws. The case will be of far-reaching importance to organized labor throughout the country.

The conviction and sentencing of the officials of this union under the anti-trust laws occurred in the Lower Federal District Court prior to the Apex Hosiery decision of the United States Supreme Court. The single issue in the Fur Workers case was whether the refusal of the union members to work on non-union made goods within the same integrated industry for the purpose of organizing the non-union shops where a labor dispute was involved, was subject to the criminal provisions of the anti-trust laws. The Apex case made it clear that the Fur Workers case should not have been prosecuted; but the Department of Justice, in the appeal to the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals—which occurred subsequent to the Apex decision—attempted to urge a doctrine which, if adopted, threatened to make union activity unlawful where aimed at organizing unorganized workers in accordance with the basic laws of the land.

The Department of Justice, in its brief, disregarded the basic principles of the Apex case and urged the theory that would curtail all union activity intended to organize unorganized portions of an integrated industry for the protection of the labor standards of the unorganized plants.

Basic Principle

The Supreme Court in the Apex case had laid down the fundamental principle that the anti-trust laws could not be used to prevent strikes and other union activity to achieve industry-wide collective bargaining contracts. It made the anti-trust laws applicable to their proper subject, namely, the evils arising out of monopoly practices of business combinations and affirmed that the anti-trust laws do not apply to the efforts of unions to eliminate competition based upon non-union standards.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in the Fur Workers case affirmed and applied that doctrine. This Court held that the Apex case made it clear that the only restraints forbidden under the anti-trust laws were those which limited competition in "business and commercial transactions" and which "tended to restrict production, raise prices or otherwise control the market to the detriment of purchasers or consumers of goods and services."

The Court made the important observation that "these words were no chance words; they were the burden of the reasoning by which the Court (the United States Supreme Court) affirmed a reversal by the Circuit Court of Appeals (in the Apex case)."

After examining the facts in the Fur Workers case, the Appellate Court stated that although the Fur Workers Union had intended to stop the marketing on the part of the employers involved:

> "The operations of those firms were not shown to have been upon a large enough scale to make their cessation affect market conditions in New York. That this is now an essential element appears from the following extract out of the Apex case: 'It will be observed that in each of these cases where the Act (Anti-Trust Law) was held applicable to labor unions, the activities affecting interstate commerce were directed at the control of the market, and were so widespread as substantially to affect it'."

The Apex case leaves a very small undefined area wherein unions still may become subject to anti-trust laws. Generally speaking, these circumstances are those where a union engages in a combination with employers that has a substantial effect on prices in the market. However, the CIO and organized labor throughout the country should make it clear beyond any peradventure of doubt to the officials of the Department of Justice that they should not attempt to use the anti-trust laws to destroy or threaten unions and bona fide union activity.

No Upsets in South; Poll Tax Helps Reactionaries Win

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. — The Southern Congressional Tory bloc sailed through the election campaign wtih flying colors, no opposition and—thanks to the poll tax—scarcely any votes.

Back for two more years in the House of Representatives came these reactionary standard bearers:

1. Martin Dies of Texas, nation's Number One union-baiter.
2. Howard Smith of Virginia, specialist in harassing the National Labor Relations Board.
3. Sam Hobbs of Alabama, author of a notorious anti-alien bill.
4. Eugene Cox of Georgia, who vies with Dies in fighting labor.
5. A. Leonard Allen of Louisiana, author of the Bridges deportation bill.

How the poll tax prevents the poor from voting is shown by these comparative election figures. Grouped states have approximately equal populations.

MINNESOTA	1,044,500
S. CAROLINA	86,400
MARYLAND	614,400
TEXAS	1,044,500
CALIFORNIA	2,958,300
GEORGIA	282,100
WISCONSIN	1,365,300
MISSISSIPPI	100,300
KANSAS	814,300

*(Figures in most cases are incomplete. Southern state returns are less complete than those in the north or west but sufficient to give the correct picture.)

TWO SOUTHERN BELLES: This duo of southern reactionaries can thank their lucky poll tax for re-election to the U. S. House of Representatives. With the tax keeping most people away from the polls, Representatives Howard Smith of Virginia and Eugene Cox of Georgia are on the public payroll for two more years.

Unions Form Group To Aid Drafted Men

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Formation of a "Committee for the Protection of Labor's Rights Under the Conscription Law" was announced today by the San Francisco Industrial Union Council.

At the same time the council urged union affiliates to set up similar groups to aid directly those members drafted into the military service under provisions of the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

The council's committee consists of five persons.

The various union committees will have the duty of assisting their members of conscription questions and of representing members before draft appeals boards on questions of deferment of military service.

Another function will be to help protect such personal belongings of members as automobiles, furniture, etc., which have been only partially paid for and which conscripts might be in danger of losing during the period of service.

The city CIO council recommended to its affiliates that each union maintain in good standing all members who are drafted for the military forces.

Strikebreakers Supplied by AFL In New Jersey

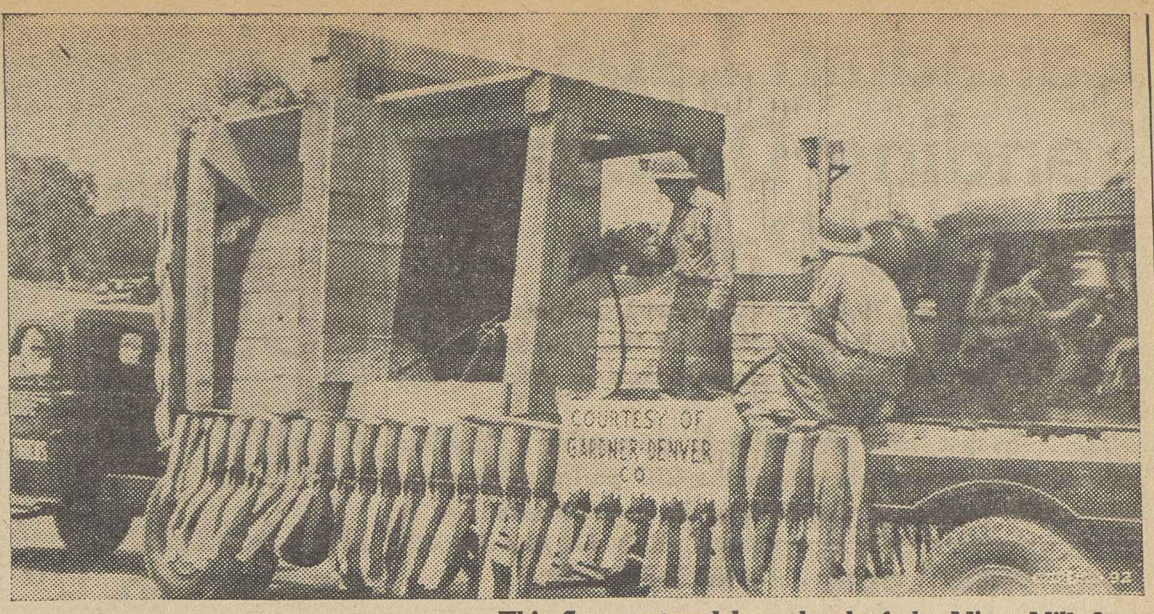
NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 9.—Answering a call for help to organize the garbage workers in Hudson and Bergen counties to better their economic conditions, the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, responded and sent organizers into these two counties to start the organizing drive under the leadership of James A. Murphy, Regional Director, UCWOC, James McDade, General Organizer UCWOC, and Mr. John Serratilli, Business Agent of Local 127, UCWOC.

M. Volpe & Co., North Bergen, was the first contractor to be organized, followed by O'Connor Bros., West New York, and D. Melanka & Sons, Union City.

When the men employed by the Melanka Company reported for work on Wednesday midnight, October 30, their jobs were filled by AFL strikebreakers supplied to the Melanka Co. by Mr. John Conlon, International Vice-President of the Chauffeurs, Teamsters & Stablemen's Union, AFL.

The Melanka Company positively refused to recognize the CIO, which organization the Melanka men chose to represent them. This in itself is a violation of the Wagner Act, and charges have been filed with the National Labor Relations Board charging the Melanka Co. with violation of the Wagner Act.

Union men in Hudson and Bergen county area are seething with indignation at the conduct of John Conlon, Vice President of the Teamsters Union, AFL, for dragging their organization down to the level of a strikebreaking agency. Telegrams of protest from various organizations have been sent to Daniel Tobin, International President of the Teamsters Union, condemning Conlon's conduct that will definitely hinder Mr. Tobin's effort to bring about labor peace in CIO and AFL.



Despite the conduct of the AFL, the UCWOC is determined to carry this fight to a finish, and their members are standing up 100 per cent. They have been threatened and annoyed before by AFL strikebreakers and backdoor contracts that require police protection, to carry on their work.

STAGE PROTEST

On Thursday, October 31, the strikers staged a demonstration at the offices of the State Labor Board demanding that the Wage & Hour law of 1932 be enforced, which calls for eight hours a day, time and a half for overtime, prevailing wages of 87½c per hour for drivers, and 62½c for loaders and pullers.

The UCWOC have notified Commissioner of Labor John J. Toohey that if a decision is not handed down immediately, a general sympathy strike will be called of all garbage workers in fifteen other cities and towns, involving some 800 to 1,000 men. The UCWOC have been trying to get a decision since last July without any results. Mr. Murphy feels that the New Jersey Labor Department is solely responsible for these delays.

The state labor law has not been enforced. That is the reason for the garbage workers' demanding a general strike to have the law enforced. At present, the garbage workers are working some twelve to seventeen hours a day, six days a week for wages ranging from $21 to $24 a week. These workers are the most exploited in the county.

MINE ON WHEELS: This float, entered by a local of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers in a community parade at Bingham, Utah, was judged most representative entry in its division.

Three Steel Pacts Signed In Ohio

Cleveland, Ohio., Nov. 9—Three new contracts announced here by William Donovan, district director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, bring increased wages and improved conditions for several hundred employes.

Two of the agreements were signed with firms in Akron. One, at the National Standard Co., provides for full seniority for men called to military service, vacations with pay for men with five years' service and reduction of the work week to 32 hours before layoff of workers.

$13,000 BOOST

The other Akron contract, at the Atlantic Foundry Co., provided a $13,000 annual wage increase, with raises of from one to 17 cents an hour going to 157 workers. Earlier this year a pay boost of over $8,000 had been negotiated.

Wilmer Tate, SWOC official, noted that "the first charter granted by the national SWOC was issued to Atlantic Foundry Local 1001. This company signed the first contract negotiated under the banner of the SWOC. The local is 100% organized."

District Director Donovan announced that the Cleveland agreement, signed with the Oster Manufacturing Co. provides for an upward extension of wages if living costs rise. Learners' wages are to be lifted every three months and at the end of a year a new man will be receiving pay comparable with that of older men.

The pact is the fourth signed by the company with the SWOC.

FIRESTONE PACT

Los Angeles — (FP) — The local plant of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has signed its first union contract with the CIO United Rubber Workers.

Win 5c Pay Boost

Barre, Vt., Nov. 9—Pay increases ranging from two to five cents an hour were granted to employes of the Buckite Refractories Co., of Woodville, Ohio, the CIO Quarry Workers International Union reported here this week.

The one-year agreement signed with Northwestern Ohio Branch 237 of the QWIU, among other things, protects the seniority of employes called for military service.

Such employes will be reinstated to their former jobs provided application for reinstatement is made within 60 days from date of discharge from military service.

Contract Covers 300 In South

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 9. — The Southern Aggregates Corp. here has signed a contract with the Quarry Workers International covering plants at Greystone, Rolesville and Wendell, N. C. Some 300 workers are employed in the plants.

Shop committees to handle grievances at each plant are provided for under the terms of the pact, and employes reporting for work at the order of supervisory officials and finding no work available will receive four hours' pay.

CALL ELECTION

Rock Island, Ill., Nov. 9.—Hourly paid and piece work employes in the production and maintenance departments of the J. I. Case Co. here will vote on being represented by the CIO's Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee at an NLRB election to be held within the next few weeks.

Quarry Union Meeting Hails CIO Policies, Plans Organizing Drive

BARRE, Vt., Nov. 9.—High praise for the aims and activities of the CIO were voiced here at the convention of the affiliated Quarry Workers International Union. The parley opened here Oct. 21 and adjourned Oct. 26.

In line with plans for extending organizational work the delegates rewrote their constitution and proposed that the union henceforth be called the United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America. Final action on the suggestion will be taken at the CIO convention in Atlantic City, N. J.

Reporting to the convention Pres. Cecil Crawford and Sec.-Treas. John Lawson pointed out that the union "has at all times supported the program and policies of the CIO and its illustrious and courageous president, John L. Lewis.

"The growth and continued success of our international union depends upon our ability to cooperate in formulating plans consistent with the policies of the CIO.

"It is our responsibility as an organization affiliated with the CIO to organize the unorganized workers in the stone and allied products industry and secure for them the benefits that can be obtained through aggressive industrial organization in these industries."

The report recalled the craft union raids which the organization had suffered prior to its withdrawal from the AFL in 1937 and its subsequent affiliation with the CIO.

"We have found our affiliation with the CIO very helpful and constructive . . . in bringing the benefits of industrial organization to the workers in the stone and allied products industry," the officers' report declared.

DEFEND WAGNER ACT

The delegates took a vigorous stand in defense of the Wagner Act and warned the membership of possible future attacks on the law by anti-labor employers. Another resolution charged that the "primary objectives" of the Dies Committee "are to destroy the American labor movement and hamper the progress of our democracy."

Activities of the Ku Klux Klan, which are held responsible for the beating of three of the union's members in Lithonia, Ga., were roundly condemned. At the same time the convention criticized poll tax restrictions on voting in the southern states.

Dismiss Injunction

New York, Nov. 9 — Application by the Modern Age Furniture Co. here for an injunction against Upholsterers Local 76, United Furniture Workers and 18 striking employes was denied by complaint dismissed by Supreme Court Justice Lloyd Church, a statement issued by the CIO union declared today.

The union and the company agreed to settle the strike on terms providing for the return of the workers to their jobs under the same conditions as before the strike.

Pact Wins 15c Boost

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 9—Acting quickly after a 58-0 Labor Board election success, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee negotiated a 15-cent hourly wage increase and signed its first local contract with the Wheeling Steel Corp.

Will Watts, local SWOC representative, signed the pact in behalf of all employes in the warehouse and pipeyard of the company.

The agreement lifts minimum wages from 30 to 45 cents an hour, provides vacations with pay, time and a half for overtime and procedure for the settlement of grievances.

Furniture Union Moves

NEW YORK, Nov. 9 — The CIO United Furniture Workers announce that union headquarters have been moved to 261 Fifth Avenue, New York City. The office was formerly located at 1133 Broadway.

Short Crews on New U. S. Ships Endanger Lives, Union Says

New York, Nov. 9—Increased manning scales on new ships contructed under the Maritime Commission building program are being demanded by the National Maritime Union. A study made by the NMU showed Commission ships to be so undermanned as "to make them a safety menace for ship, cargo, crew and pass."

An editorial in the Pilot, official NMU paper, declared:

"The Roosevelt administration has appropriated billions of dollars for a war machine, but nothing has been appropriated to increase the manning scales or to improve living conditions on these vessels. The few changes that have been brought about were secured only through united action of the members of the NMU."

Attention is also called to Pres. Roosevelt's recent nomination of Congressmen John J. Dempsey, Dies Committee member, for a vacancy on the Maritime Commission.

"With the shipowners selling ships every day to the Army, Navy and foreign governments," the editorial says, "thousands of seamen are being thrown on the beach with no prospect of employment."

Canadian Labor Sending Delegate To CIO Parley

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 9.—A fraternal delegate from the Canadian Congress of Labor will attend the third convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in Atlantic City November 18.

This is the first time that a delegate representing a Canadian national union centre will attend the CIO parley. This move follows the decision of the CCL at its recent convention to strengthen its ties with the CIO in the United States.

The Canadian Congress of Labor comprises locals of national and CIO affiliates. The decision to send a fraternal representative was approved by the CCL's executive council meeting held here this week.

PLAN CAMPAIGN

Meeting in the Royal York hotel the executive council agreed to push an organizing drive in Canadian basic industries. It accepted offers of financial assistance from the United Mine Workers and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

It is believed the first concerted organization drive will be begun in the mine, mill and smelting and rubber industries.

The council also decided to appoint an organizing committee to direct a drive in the shoe industry with C. H. Millard as chairman of the committee. The United Shoe Workers Union (CIO) is to be asked to take part in the campaign.

Form New Local At Goodyear Plant

Bowmanville, Ont., Nov. 9 — Workers in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber plant here, organized a local of the United Rubber Workers Union at an enthusiastic rally here.

Of the 350 employes in the plant, a large majority joined the union. The municipal council cooperated in this move to raise the substandard wages of the community by granting the union the use of the town hall for meetings.

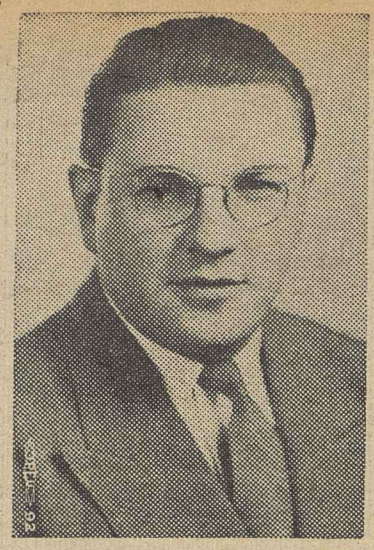
Vermont Quarry Poll Won By CIO

Barre, Vt., Nov. 9—Semi-skilled and unskilled production and maintenance employes in three plants of the Rock of Ages Corp., a granite quarrying and manufacturing concern here, voted 46 to 3 for the Quarry Workers' International Union in a Labor Board election held recently.

Negotiations for a contract covering the three plants will open shortly, John C. Lawson, Intl. secretary-treasurer of the union, said. The company which is now under contract with the union for quarry employes, consented to the election.

REPORT CONTRACT

Signing of a contract with the Sta-so Milling Co., Fair Haven, Vt., was also reported at union headquarters here.



The agreement provides pay increases ranging from two to seven cents an hour, seniority, check-off of union dues, fees and assessments, and grievance machinery. Overtime is to be paid at the rate of time and a half for more than eight hours with double time for Sundays and holidays.

About 150 workers, all union members, in the company's plants at Castleton, Vt., and Hampton, N. Y., are covered by the pact, which was signed five weeks from the time of the first organization meeting.

Leather Union Gets $22 Pay Boost

Oshawa, Ont., Nov. 9—Recently organized by the Fur and Leather Workers Union, employes of the Robson Leather Co., here, obtained wage raises ranging from $10 to $22 monthly under an agreement signed between the tannery and the union. About 200 workers are involved.

The union organized the workers recently and followed this by immediate negotiations. Faced with a solid employe organization, the company, which originally fired workers for joining a union, agreed to sign a contract and enter into collective bargaining with the CIO affiliate.

RE-ELECTED: CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson, who was returned to office as president of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers by a large majority in a referendum election of the membership.

Metal Miners Re-Elect Pres. Robinson

Denver, Colo., Nov. 9—Members of the CIO Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers today had re-elected Pres. Reid Robinson for another term, and approved eight constitutional amendments.

Results of a membership referendum poll showed Robinson, who is a vice-president of the CIO, leading with 11,411 votes to 6,717 for retiring Sec.-Treas. John M. Sherwood and 2,944 for John J. Morris.

Ora L. Wilson of Idaho was re-elected vice-president, while James Leary of Montana defeated John J. Driscoll of Connecticut for the post of secretary-treasurer left vacant by Sherwood.

One major constitutional amendment provided for international elections every two years, rather than annually as in the past, but stipulated that annual conventions should be continued.

Another amendment established a 65-cent per capita dues payment to the union's national office, an increase of 25 cents. Leaders of the union had appealed for the increase in order to make organizing efforts more effective.

$8,000 UP

Baltimore, Nov. 9.— An $8,000 annual pay boost and wage rates 15 cents an hour higher than any others paid locally were won by Local 28 of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers at the Hercules Co. here.

That Wasn't No Draft — It Was A Hurricane!

BATAVIA, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The draft was a chill wind that blew no good for the Barone family here.

Frank Barone, executive vice-president of Local 7, Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, revealed today that he and six of his brothers had to register for possible military service.

They are: Frank, 35; Philip, 34; Anthony, 33; Joseph, 28; Louis, Jr., 26; James, 25; and Dominic, 23. Two other brothers—Peter, 17, and Lawrence, 15—don't have to register yet.

Chicago Die Casting Firm Rapped by Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—An order requiring the Paragon Die Casting Company of Chicago to stop discouraging membership in the CIO's National Association of Die Casting Workers, or any other labor organization, was issued last week by the National Labor Relations Board.

The firm was also told to reinstate seven employes with back pay from the date of their discharges during September and October, 1939. The company had said they were fired because they carried on 'union agitation' in the plant during working hours.

The Board held that since there was no rule prohibiting employes from talking during working hours and since it was not unusual for employes to leave their work to talk with other employes, the seven were discharged discrimatorily because of their union activity.

The CIO die casters began organizing at the Paragon plant in August, 1939 when a field representative distributed pamphlets to workers entering and leaving the premises. The company superintendent ordered this distribution stopped, telling the union representative that "it is no good" and "we don't like it."

Wisconsin CIO Meets Nov. 14

Milwaukee, Wisc., Nov. 9—The annual convention of the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council opening in La Crosse on Nov. 14, will be the biggest yet, state CIO leaders predicted today.

Plans for the session were made at an all-day meeting of the state CIO executive board.

The group sent a strong protest to Gov. Heil against the extremely small representation of the CIO on draft boards throughout the state. Demand was made that the CIO be given more adequate representation on the draft appeal boards.

End 18-Month Store Strike In Akron

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 9 — The longest retail store strike in this city's history has ended finally with a complete victory for the CIO's United Retail & Wholesale Employes, the union announced this week.

After being struck for 18 months, the Akron Dry Goods Co. agreed to a settlement with Local 201 reinstating all strikers to their jobs with full seniority rights dating back to the date they were hired; granting full recognition of the union and its grievance committees, and promising no discrimination against strikers and union members.

Lena Buck, president of the Local, declared that the strike was a victory for Local 201 and that "all members of organized labor can be proud of the terms of settlement."

U. S. Pamphlet Tells About New Defense Jobs

Washington, Nov. 9 — Answers to workers' questions on defense jobs—how to get them, where men are needed, how to get training—are discussed in "Workers and National Defense," just published by the Division of Labor Standards of the U. S. Labor Dept.

The pamphlet also discusses maintenance of labor standards in the defense program. It can be obtained by writing to the U. S. Labor Dept., Washington, D. C.

Textile Union Wins Pact At Lane Cotton Mills

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 16.—A contract with the Lane Cotton Mills—hailed as "one of the most significant steps made thus far in the organization of the South" — was announced today by Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union following ratification of the pact by the firm's 1,500 employes.

The agreement with Lane, which for many years bitterly resisted union efforts, provides the closed shop, checkoff, arbitration of disputes, prohibition of strikes or lockouts, recognition of the union as sole bargaining agency, establishment of grievance procedure, a flexible wage clause, a "war seniority" clause and other standard Textile Workers Union provisions.

IMPARTIAL CHAIRMAN

Under terms of the contract a permanent impartial chairman of the board of arbitration will be named, and all questions which cannot be settled by the union and the mill management will automatically be referred to him for final decision.

The war clause provides that workers who enlist or are conscripted for military service will have their seniority continue to accrue during the period of service. Upon release from the armed forces, the worker must be returned to his job or a similar position.

The TWU, and its predecessor, the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, have held a majority of the workers at the plant since September, 1937, when the TWOC won an NLRB election by a 3 - 1 margin.

ORGANIZING: Keeping up with the times, CIO Shipyard Union organizers at the big Bethlehem Sparrows Point plant push on their campaign for 100% unionization. They're shown handing literature to workers entering the yards.

Hails Defense Of Rights During Crisis Period

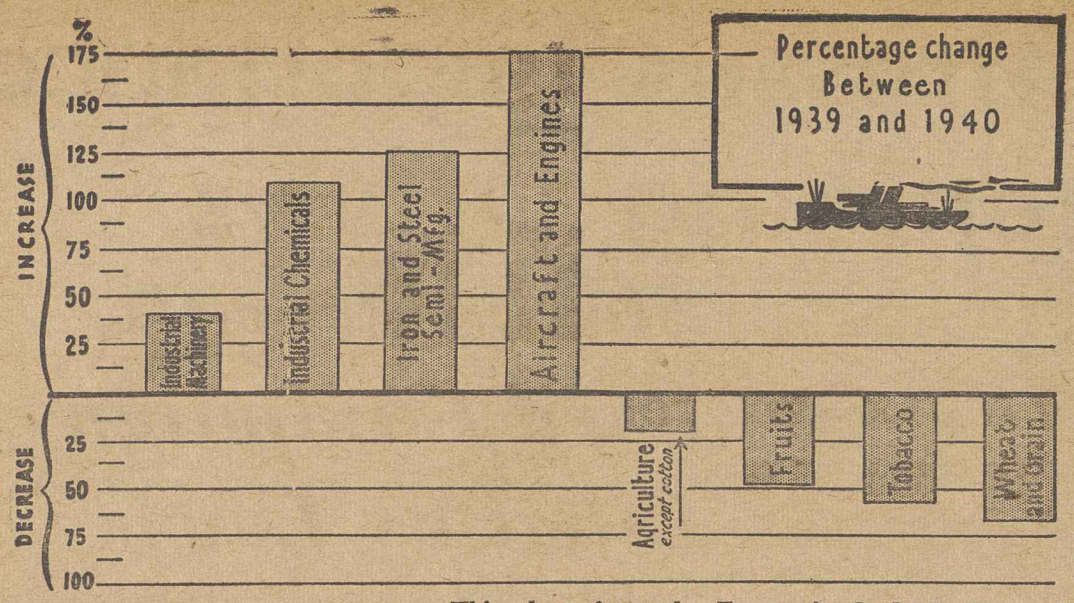
ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 18 — Over 500 delegates, meeting here in convention to mark the fifth year of CIO, heard President John L. Lewis report that CIO's affiliates and membership have not only withstood severe attacks rising from the world crisis but have made substantial new organizing progress as well.

"This convention of the CIO is held in a period of severe testing for all American institutions," Lewis wrote in the introduction to his report. "We meet under the shadow of a world crisis, which threatens to engulf our own country.

"All around us we see war and imperialism in their most hideous aspects. We are confronted with the necessity of defending our country against these dangers, of preserving our liberties against assaults from without or within and proving to the world and to the American people the virtue and validity of our institutions."

RECORD OF PROGRESS

How well the CIO has proved its value to the American people is seen in the record of the past year's progress in organizing, in defending progressive social legislation, in pushing forward an economic program of security and well-being, and in preserving civil liberties from the ferocious assault rising out of war hysteria.



The report cited the record of CIO victories in Labor Board elections—standing at three to one for CIO in the past year—as solid evidence of the way American workers prefer CIO's militant, progressive brand of unionism to all others. In addition, progress is cited in the aviation drive, in the campaign to organize Ford, Bethlehem and in the lumber industry as major evidence of CIO's growth.

In the legislative front, CIO's success in holding back tory drives against labor laws is reported by Pres. Lewis, with the warning that defense of existing standards and new progress requires the CIO "to move forward and meet the critical days before us with a comprehensive program that promises a solution to our fundamental problems."

Similarly the economic section of Lewis' report, while noting the dangers in the increasing switch of the U. S. toward a war economy, calls for a program of jobs, full industrial production, better distribution of purchasing power, and other steps to utilize our resources for the common good.

Other sections of the report, dealing with such subjects as social security, press and publicity, housing, health government contracts, legal and court work, Latin American affairs, etc., emphasize the note of CIO's contribution to the welfare of the workers and the people and set forth a program of action for greater improvements.

Throughout the report, the basic program of industrial organization is stressed as dominant in all hopes and plans for social betterment in this nation.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK:

Predict Little Change Soon In Number of Jobless; Rap 'Fantastic' Estimates

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Unmployment, estimated at 9,115,000 for the month of September, will not be substantially cut by the national defense program, according to the current issue of the Economic Outlook, monthly survey published by the Unemployment Division of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

"Fantastic" statements made during the Presidential campaign to the effect that unemployment would be cut by six million defense jobs are contradicted by evidence from U. S. agencies, according to the Outlook, which says:

"For example, the Secretary of Labor was reported by The New York Times as saying that between September, 1940, and September, 1941, there would be an increase of approximately six million jobs.

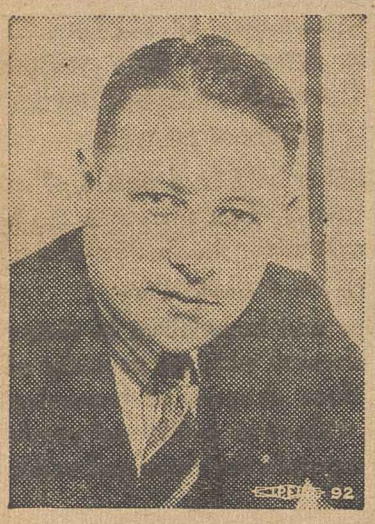
These sources include the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Emonomics, which reported that no more than 2.5 million jobs could be expected by next year, and Mr. Howard Hunter, acting commissioner of WPA, who told the U. S. Conference of Mayors in September that there were between 8,200,000 and 10 million jobless.

DISCREPANCIES

"These discrepancies in statements by responsible officials of the federal government emphasize the confusion created by the government failure to provide figures on the extent of unemployment," the Outlook comments.

"There have been attempts from time to time in various government agencies to establish an official estimate of unemployment for the federal government. Each time these attempts have been suppressed by the policy-making officials."

According to the Outlook, the defense program cannot absorb more than a quarter of the unemployed in the next year. Constant technological improvement, the annual increase in the working population and the fact that large increases in defense jobs depend on the amount of new plant required are cited in support of this estimate.



For example, though steel production is at its highest all-time level, employment is less by 35,000 than it was in 1929.

TAX PROGRAM

Commenting on recent statements by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to the effect that hitherto tax exempt government bonds would be taxed in the future, the Outlook says:

"This measure has been a part of the CIO's tax program and is advocated in almost every progressive program of progressive tax reform. Large sums of money, especially the money that is large fortunes, have gone into tax-exempt securities, thus aggravating the lack of investment in new enterprises."

The Outlook concludes with a table of recent profit figures showing large increases (in one steel corporation amounting to 2130 per cent) between the first nine months of 1940 and a similar period in 1939. This is in spite of the recent corporation practice of setting aside greatly increased sums for taxation.

WILLIAM CARNEY

'Bill' Carney, Jersey CIO Head, Dies

Newark, N. J., Nov. 16.—William J. Carney, president of the New Jersey CIO Industrial Union Council and regional director in New Jersey, died here suddenly of a heart attack on November 10.

Mr. Carney, who was 37, was one of the pioneer members of the United Rubber Workers and took an active part in the big Akron strikes. He came to New Jersey three years ago as CIO regional director, and had been president of the State Council since its organization in 1937.

'LOSS TO LABOR'

In a statement issued after Carney's death, Leonard Goldsmith, secretary-treasurer of the Jersey Council said:

"Bill Carney's sudden death comes as a terrible shock and is a loss to the labor movement throughout the country as well as in New Jersey. Under his leadership the CIO has grown in New Jersey from 12,000 members in 1936 to an organization of 240,000 today.

"Bill Carney has thus built a lasting monument to himself. We who worked closely with Bill, know his heartfelt devotion to the cause of labor and his life will be an inspiration to us to carry on the great work of helping to improve the lot of the working people of America."

Longshoremen Win Coast Pact After Year

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16—Agreement to renew the Pacific coast longshore contract covering some 11,000 members of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Assn., announced here by Harry Bridges, ILWU president, drew "hearty congratulations at this splendid accomplishment" from Pres. John L. Lewis, who wired his appreciation to Bridges.

The agreement to renew the contract follows over a year of patient negotiations on the part of the CIO union, during which the workers had to face constant attempts to break down their standards. Stubborn employer insistence on scrapping basic guarantees against speed-up and continued attempts to break down union hiring caused the prolonged delay in renewal.

WIRE FROM LEWIS

Bridges' announcement of the agreement credited the final victory to Lewis' influence and aid. Lewis' wire follows in full:

"Hearty congratulations on the successful conclusion of negotiations by yourself and Longshoremen's executive committee. Your message was read at staff meeting CIO headquarters this afternoon and we are very happy at this splendid accomplishment.

"Our executives join me in expressing our pleasure and fine satisfaction to you and associate members of your committee for such splendid constructive leadership as you have demonstrated by this accomplishment. We feel the members of your great union will share this appreciation. We are especially pleased by your statement that our own influence at this end was helpful."

Weyerhauser Sawmill Signs First CIO Pact

Everett, Wash., Nov. 16—(FP)—The local sawmill operations of the Weyerhauser Timber Co., one of the largest single plants in the country, are now under union contract. The agreement, signed by the Intl. Woodworkers of America, covers 1,227 workers.

Wage increases of 4 per cent to 5 per cent are provided. Other conditions are similar to those in the recently signed area contract covering 69 logging and sawmill operations in Washington.

The new agreement "signals the start of a powerful drive against the giant timber corporation's open shop areas, and particularly those huge operations in Longview, Wash., Klamath Falls, Ore., and Lewiston, Ida., Acting IWA Pres. C. M. Orton declared.

Weyerhauser's net income in 1939 was $5,151,522, more than double the 1938 profits.

Maryland, D. C. CIO Parley Dec. 12

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16—Officers of the Maryland and District of Columbia CIO Council this week sent out the official call to the fourth annual state convention, to be held here at the Alexander hotel December 12-14. Originally scheduled to be held in Washington, the place was changed to Hagerstown by a referendum of local unions.

Win Poll In Ohio

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio, Nov. 16.—Pushing its organization campaign in the Buckeye State, the CIO today won another in its long series of election victories.

Workers at the Liberty Paper Board Co. voted 111 to 8 in favor of the United Paper Workers Local 66.

Leading the union campaign were Adolph Pacifico, sub-regional director, and Joseph Rice, CIO field representative.

Urge U. S. Expand Present Housing, Security Programs

Atlantic City, Nov. 18 — Declaring that "in the next four years we will have to decide whether we are going to make our social security system worth its name or whether we shall be content with the present meager benefits and shortcomings," Pres. Lewis outlined CIO's program for extending and broadening old age, unemployment and disability payments in his report to the convention here.

The CIO program, based on five main points, includes:

1. Payment of $60 a month at 60 years of age in place of the present range from as low as $5.00 a month to a top of $20. This would include all aged persons instead of the fraction now covered.

FEDERAL STANDARDS

2. Increases and amplification in unemployment compensation, at present inadequate and burdened with excessive red tape. In addition, federal standards should be created to bring chaotic state regulations into uniform order.

3. Adequate health program to care for the millions who now fall sick or die prematurely simply because they cannot buy medical attention.

4. Broadening the scope of the Act to include millions of workers and farmers now exempted, with proper payments to Federal workers, sailors, agricultural workers, etc.

5. General raising of state levels and simplification of administrative processes whose present complexity robs many people of benefits to which they are entitled.

Atlantic City, Nov. 18.—Minimum housing needs in the U. S. call for 1,000,000 new units a year, according to the report of the CIO Housing Committee in John L. Lewis' report to the CIO convention released today.

Present construction rate of around 450,000 units is not nearly adequate, particularly in view of the expanding defense program, Lewis points out, yet the present U. S. Housing program will build only 160,000 within the next three years.

Private construction, estimated at a possible 500,000 during the coming year, will fall far short of meeting the need and will in addition be rented at levels too high for workers to pay, the report notes, yet it is private builders' opposition that has kept the government away from a real housing program.

According to Lewis' report, private constructors have lobbied against Federal housing because, "since real estate owners can raise rents in time of shortage and reap fancy profits, they much prefer having no new homes built at all, or homes built very slowly and in small numbers."

Report Stresses Importance Of Organizing Drives

See Dangers Ahead In War Economy

Atlantic City, Nov. 18. — Dangers to the workers in the present turn of the U. S. to a war economy administered by big business are stressed in the economic section of John L. Lewis' report to the CIO convention meeting here today.

"It is clear that the nation has shifted to a war economy, administered by the representatives of corporate industry and finance," Lewis writes. "And the American people are faced with all the hazards that arise therefrom."

Chief menace to the people in this shift is the growing danger of actual involvement in war that it brings, Lewis points out. "If any nation comes to depend for its prosperity on military expenditures, it becomes chained to a Frankenstein monster which drags it inevitably toward war.

"Unless substantial economic offsets are provided to prevent this nation from becoming wholly dependent upon war expenditures, we will come sooner or later to the dilemma which requires either war or depression."

BURDEN ON WORKERS

Such a depression, like war, falls most heavily on the workers and farmers, who pay either with their blood or with the misery of mass unemployment and destitution, Lewis indicates, citing the economic catastrophies that visited both groups after the last world war.

First fruit of this turn to a war economy is a deep slashing in production of consumers' goods in favor of non-productive arms, followed by steep rises in living costs and declines in living standards, building of huge reserves of workers in the army and in arms industries, which cannot be reabsorbed in peace industries, great plant extension, suitable only for arms, and fantastic war profits, the report points out.

"Under the shelter of the arms subsidy all the economic deformities which cause unemployment and depression in more normal times become aggravated," Lewis writes. "This phenomenon cannot but induce a skepticism on the part of the common people of the nation as to the purpose to which national defense expenditures are being used."

GUNS vs. BUTTER

Yet the European alternative of guns or butter need not be faced here, Lewis points out, since our

Report 97 New Local CIO Unions

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 18.— The Department of Local Industrial Unions, directed by John Brophy, was set up by the CIO Executive Board after the San Francisco convention last year, to serve as a clearing house for the miscellaneous locals affiliated directly with the CIO.

During the past year the department has received applications for charters from 97 groups, 21 of which have been transferred to international unions, and the other 76 chartered directly by the CIO.

Later 13 of the 76 LIU's chartered were also transferred to the jurisdiction of internationals, making 103 altogether transferred to 18 international unions in the last year.

In September Brophy was granted a leave of absence due to illness, and the Department of Organization took over the work of his department.

CIO Affiliates

The CIO now has 42 national and international unions and organizing committees, 32 state and 193 city, county and district Industrial Unions, miscellaneous groups as yet not under the jurisdiction of any national union, but affiliated directly to the national CIO.

Four of the State Councils—in Virginia, Kansas, Tennessee and Georgia—were chartered during the past year, and 19 city, county and district Councils are a year or less in age.

Holds CIO Is 'Ignored' In Defense Set-Up

ATANTIC CITY, Nov. 18 — Labor representation on the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission, limited to "one lonely representative of labor to 100 millionaires" is so inadequate that "labor has been practically ignored," Pres. Lewis states in the section of his third annual convention report on the functions and policies of the Defense body.

According to Lewis' report, the 16 officials of labor unions appointed by the Labor Commissioner to sit on a labor policy advisory committee, of which seven are from CIO, have no real influence on policies "that will effect the millions of workers in the country."

LABOR IGNORED

These seven CIO officials were appointed without consulting CIO, Lewis points out, and they have therefore "been placed in an anomalous position which allows them neither to further as official representatives the policies of the CIO nor to withhold in the name of the CIO, official approval of national defense policies and procedures.

"In effect," the report adds, "labor has been practically ignored insofar as adequate or proper representation is concerned on this important body which will adopt and enunciate policies that will affect the lives of millions of workers in the country.

"There are men in high places in the nation today who do not want labor to participate in the national effort. They do not want labor to participate because they know that labor's voice will be raised against their efforts to pervert the idea of national defense to the service of private greed.

"Labor demands adequate representation and not on the basis that now exists of one lonely representative to 100 millionaires."

To Distribute List of CIO-Made Goods

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 18—A directory of CIO-Made Products just completed by the CIO national office, will be distributed to the delegates at the CIO convention. Products are listed in the directory under ten headings:

1. Food and liquors
2. Cosmetics and Drug Supplies
3. Clothing
4. Household Needs
5. Electrical Equipment
6. Furniture
7. Construction and Maintenance
8. Automobiles
9. Serv[illegible]
10. Miscellaneous

Only a preliminary listing so far, the directory is made up so that it can be continued and expanded if CIO affiliates find it useful. It is compiled from data received up to September 1940.

"The information presented is based entirely on data submitted by the unions for their respective industries," it is explained in the introduction. "The basis of inclusion of all products and all services in this directory has been solely the organization of the plants or offices concerned."

Ford Drive Picking Up Speed

Washington, Nov. 16. — The CIO's big organizing drive at Ford Motor Co. is gaining speed like a snowball rolling down hill, Michael S. Widman, Jr., director of the union campaign, announced today.

In Washington en route to the CIO convention at Atlantic City, Widman said the 86,000 workers employed in the giant River Rouge plant at Dearborn, Mich., are "demanding organization." He cited dues and initiation statistics to show that the men are rallying to the CIO standard in greater numbers.

Whole departments at River Rouge are already 100 per cent organized, he revealed, while a number of others are well past the 50 per cent mark.

The campaign is showing "remarkable results — even greater than we imagined in our most optimistic moments," Widman said.

COOPERATION

Widman was particularly pleased with the cooperation being given by national and local officials of the United Automobile Workers, which, with the CIO is sponsoring the Ford drive. Numerous UAW locals are giving prizes to their members who sign up the most Ford workers, and buttons boosting the campaign are appearing in great numbers around Detroit.

Ford Facts, official paper for the union drive, is stepping up its circulation each issue in response to requests from Ford workers, who are eagerly taking the copies distributed by the staff of 45 organizers assembled for the job of unionizing the last open shop firm in the industry.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 16 — A strike called by the United Rubber Workers shut down the plant of the Republic Rubber Co. here when some 700 employes walked out. The URW recently won a Labor Board election at the plant.

Steel, Aircraft, Ford Campaigns Cited by Lewis

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 18.—The importance of the big drives launched on two of the outstanding anti-union citadels of the country—Bethlehem Steel and the Ford Motor Co.—and on the rapidly expanding aircraft industry, is stressed in Pres. John L. Lewis' report on organization activities presented to the third annual CIO convention meeting here.

The organization department during the past year has been under the direction of Allan S. Haywood, National Director of Organization. Its activities, the report states, "have been expanded during this period, with encouraging results from the campaigns conducted in many important industries."

The organization department is assisted by a force of 43 regional directors, 6 sub-regional directors and 65 field representatives. In addition, 102 field representatives have been assigned to international unions and organizing committees.

Successful outcome of the Bethlehem campaign, according to the report, "means a great deal, not only to the steel workers, but to every worker and union in the land." The Steel Workers Organizing Committee and also the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers "have been exerting untiring efforts to compel this law-violating corporation to comply with the provisions of the Wage-Hour Law and with the National Labor Relations Act."

Contrary to notions spread by Ford-inspired publicity, wages paid in Ford plants are below those paid by other large automobile manufacturing concerns. Therefore, the report declares, "in justice to the workers in the Ford plants, in justice to Ford's competitors who have accepted collective bargaining, and in justice to industry at large, the Ford workers must be organized."

Plans for organizing Ford plants have been worked out in cooperation with the United Automobile Workers, and Michael Widman, CIO Assistant Director of Organization, has been placed in full charge of the campaign which "is now on in earnest."

AIRCRAFT

The drive in the aircraft industry, Lewis reports, is showing marked progress with elections won and contracts negotiated with the United Automobile Workers. Walter Smethurst was appointed by the CIO national office several months ago to head the aircraft drive which is being conducted jointly by the UAW and the CIO.

"We have every reason to believe that marked progress will be made in our joint efforts to establish organization and stability in this comparatively new industry," the report states, "which will eliminate the many abuses that now prevail."

OTHER INDUSTRIES

In addition to these special drives, the report lists assistance given to a number of other CIO internationals in special drives and in negotiating contracts.

A joint organization plan was drawn up to aid the International Woodworkers of America, and Adolph Germer, New York City regional director, was assigned to take care of a drive on the West Coast.

The United Automobile Workers was aided in negotiations with the Briggs Manufacturing Co.

FIRESTONE, GOODYEAR

The United Rubber Workers received assistance in reorganizing Firestone plants, and in conducting a drive in the plants of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

The United Office & Professional Workers was given help in negotiating a contract with the John Hancock Life Insurance Co.

The Transport Workers were assisted in reaching an agreement when the City of New York took over the subway and elevated lines.

Special attention was also given to a Southern organizing campaign. A regional office was set up in Atlanta, Ga., under Charles H. Gillman, to work with the various unions in the South.

CANADA

On the Canadian situation, the report declares that "the entrance of Canada into the war brought forcefully to attention the need for special provisions being made for our Canadian membership. It emphasized the need for a central body to speak for and coordinate the activities of the CIO unions in Canada in this crisis."

As the result of several months of planning and negotiating, a Canadian Congress of Labor was formed, embracing all the CIO unions, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes and several other groups.

A constitution was adopted and officers elected at a convention held in Toronto in September, 1940, and plans were laid for an organizing drive throughout the Dominions. More than 2000 steel workers, the report declares, transferred from an independent group to the SWOC shortly afterward.

Jersey CIO To Meet In December

Newark, N. J., Nov. 16 — The third annual convention of the New Jersey State CIO Council will be held December 14-15, the Council's Executive Board announced this week. The date was changed from Nov. 16-17, set before the time of the CIO national convention opening Nov. 18, was announced.

VOTELESS CITIZENS: In school you learn that every American citizen has the right to vote—but for 10,000,000 Americans in the South the right is meaningless because of poll tax fees. Southern agricultural workers like these are among the millions to whom Nov. 5 was just the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.

Three Stages

The third constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations is held in the same city where the idea of CIO was born, and where two years later the growth of this idea into a great movement was recorded.

The American Federation of Labor convention of 1935, in the same hall where the CIO meets in 1940, was the scene of the sharp clash of debate over organizing the unorganized millions along industrial lines.

The AFL leaders refused to take the great forward step for which the times called; and the Committee for Industrial Organization had to be formed to do the job.

In October, 1937, the CIO (still a Committee in name, though a whole movement in fact) held its first national conference in Atlantic City.

Its first great wave of organization had succeeded beyond all expectations, bringing millions of newly organized workers into the ranks of union labor.

In the three years following, the CIO has pushed ever further ahead in its organizing work; has consolidated every position gained; has added many new unions and new members; has shown its capacity to survive and serve through a period of severe depression; has taken permanent form as a great congress of labor; and has assumed national leadership as the champion of the workers and of the whole progressive cause.

The CIO returns to Atlantic City for its third constitutional convention as a mighty and tested American institution—a beacon light of democracy, peace and social welfare, lending hope and courage to all men and women of good will.

A Year's Record

The report of President John L. Lewis to the third constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations presents a proud record of constructive achievement in a year of world turmoil which has not left America unscathed.

The organization advances reported include the greatest sweep of Labor Board election victories ever to occur. Hundreds of thousands of workers cast their ballots for the modern industrial unionism of the CIO. The AFL crafts and so-called independents were left far behind.

Millions of workers won better conditions, more pay and more security through new agreements negotiated by CIO unions.

Organizing work was pushed far ahead into new fields, and great drives have now been launched to unionize Ford, Bethlehem Steel, the aircraft industry and other remaining non-union sectors.

Legislatively, the CIO has been the strongest defender of labor and social laws under violent attack, and of labor and civil rights threatened by growing war hysteria.

Its successful defense of the Wagner Labor Relations Act against destructive amendments, to cite but one example, is a magnificent achievement in the face of what looked like insuperable odds.

But President Lewis' report also includes a serious warning against some of the changes that have come over the country and the dangers they threaten.

In the past year, he points out, the whole economy of the United States has changed from a peace economy to a war economy. No constructive solution has been advanced by government or industry to meet our basic internal problems.

Only labor's independent organized power, expressed industrially and politically, Lewis notes, can furnish the driving force for a "far-reaching program for a happier and more prosperous America."

Elections Illegal?

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 16. — The November 5 elections could technically be held to be illegal because of the disfranchisement of ten million voters in eight "poll tax states" in the South, according to Joseph S. Gelders, secretary of the civil rights committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The committee takes the position that the requirement of a poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in national elections is unconstitutional and is carrying through a test case in federal courts on this issue.

The eight states requiring a poll tax of voters are Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia.

"These states have a total of 94 electoral votes. If either Roosevelt or Willkie had won by a majority of less than 94 electoral votes, including these states, it would have been theoretically possible to contest the election in Congress because 75 per cent of the adult citizens in these states are deprived of the right to vote.

"This question may be academic for the outcome of today's elections. But the issue of suffrage, so closely bound up with the whole question of free elections, must be met if our country is to survive as a democracy."

In addition to contesting the constitutionality of the poll tax through the courts, the committee is the sponsor of the anti-poll-tax bill, introduced into Congress last spring by Congressman Geyer of California.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

STRANGE echoes in the CIO convention hall in Atlantic City. The ghosts of dead speeches whining around the windows and doors, grumbling at the bustling life of today's delegates.

"I tell you, it's never been done and never will be." "Young man, when you've been in the labor movement as long as I have . . ." "For more than 50 years, this Federation . . ." "We'll never surrender our jurisdiction . . ."

Strange echoes indeed! For in this same hall today is living evidence to disprove so much of what was said here five years ago.

Five years ago in this very hall, the American Federation of Labor met to go through its time-honored convention rituals. Heavy, heavy hung over its head the weight of a dead past.

A crazy quilt of craft jurisdictions, stitched together before the days of modern mass production, and now used to smother hopes of union progress.

A horse-and-buggy leadership content to meander along the by-ways of declining small production, while the main stream of motorized industrial traffic passed it by.

Leaders with the uplift of an old-fashioned pump, the drive of a squeaking wheelbarrow, and the social outlook of the dog in the manger. Or so it seemed to some of the impatient youngsters against whom points of order were raised every time they tried to speak.

In this same hall, five years ago, the handful of delegates from the big unorganized industries like automobiles, rubber, steel, electrical manufacturing and the rest, felt isolated at first.

They represented few members and had fewer votes. They were slighted and squelched, condemned as reds and lectured as upstarts.

But they found a champion here in John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers, and in others of the industrial union group.

And what a battle there was! The debates of that 1935 convention will echo down the years. The ghosts of the dead craft speeches may well grumble and whine, for the living ideas they tried to suppress have grown into a great movement that makes them doubly dead.

Many of the delegates who attended that 1935 AFL convention representing little more than a hope and a handful, returned to that same hall in November, 1940 as officers or delegates of CIO unions with tens and hundreds of thousands of members.

In those five years, sheer human determination, and the dynamic leadership of that same champion who came to their aid in 1935, have toppled industrial tyranny and conquered one anti-union stronghold after another.

Gigantic struggles have taken place. Huge organizing campaigns have been launched. All the forces of industrial and political reaction, of brute force and devious lies, have battered in vain against this advancing army of the CIO.

The roster of the unions represented at the 1940 CIO convention, their millions of members and the record of the higher wages and better conditions they have won, are vindication indeed of every argument that Lewis and his associates made in the same hall in 1935.

But something more than a multiplication of union membership and union gains has taken place in the years between 1935 and 1940.

There has been a change in quality as well as quantity in the labor movement.

The old leadership that Lewis challenged in 1935 was narrow and servile in spirit. It was content that labor should have an inferior status to the masters of industry and politics.

Lewis dedicated himself to the eradication of labor's inferiority complex. In speech and action he expressed his conviction that labor's millions need take a back seat to nobody; that if they organize they can demand rights, not plead for favors; and that every principle of democracy entitles labor to greater representation in government and greater consideration in all other respects than has ever yet been accorded.

The spread of industrial organization through the CIO has brought a growth of this new spirit of independence and aggressive self-confidence to labor.

The remnants of company-union thinking still remain. A childish belief in some kind of industrial and political Santa Claus is still propagated to prevent labor bargaining for a better deal.

Every effort of labor to free itself from the shackles of servility is bitterly attacked by factional confusionists, deplored by so-called liberals, and roundly denounced and misrepresented in the anti-labor press.

But the CIO has always confounded its critics with concrete achievement, and experience is a great debunker.

If you would know how much labor has grown in stature and spirit, thanks to the CIO, just look back to 1935.

Labor Staved Off Attacks on Social Laws, Report Notes

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 18.—Labor has stood off vicious attacks on social laws during the past year, according to the legislative section of Pres. Lewis' report to the CIO convention. It has saved the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour Act from crippling amendments, and has blocked some of the more extreme attempts to abolish civil liberties.

CIO's legislative year, the report notes, has necessarily "been largely devoted to preserving existing social and labor legislation," without possibility of substantial advances. At the same time "while existing standards have been safeguarded, new conditions have arisen which create serious dangers to the further preservation of our present gains.

"It is not enough to stand still and maintain existing legislation. We must move forward and meet the critical days before us with a comprehensive program that promises a solution to our fundamental problems.

"Everyone of our past problems still faces us—economic insecurity for millions, the necessity for collective bargaining and federal labor standards, the extension of social security, the reshaping of our tax structure according to ability to pay, the necessity for putting our economy on a full-time expanding basis."

WAGNER ACT

The reactionary offensive in Congress continued against the Wagner Act, the report points out, coming to a height with the passage of the Smith ripper amendments in the lower House, where William Green's treacherous endorsement helped the bill through. These amendments are at present locked up in the Senate Labor Committee, though the danger of their being brought out and passed in an outburst of anti-labor hysteria remains. Similar attempts to amend the wage hour law out of existence were made in Congress during 1939, where again the CIO was able to block them.

The attack on these two basic pieces of labor legislation, though headed off in Congress, has had a sharp effect on the agencies administering them, the report points out. The Labor Board and the Wage Hour Division of the Labor Dept. have both shown the effects of conservative pressure in interpreting the laws against the interests of the workers for which they were originally passed.

This development, the report emphasizes, shows the need "for the most constant vigilance on the part of the workers" to protect gains that have been already won, not only from Congressional attacks but from administrative misinterpretations as well.

CONTRACTS

CIO efforts to stop profitable U. S. government contracts now going to violators of the Wagner Act have been blocked by the stubborn refusal of House tories to pass an amendment to the Walsh-Healey Act that would bar law-breaking corporations, the report points out. This amendment, though it has been passed three times by the Senate at CIO urging, has not been allowed even to reach the House floor for a vote.

This situation is particularly acute due to the enormuos expenditures under the arms program, the report points out, since notorious Wagner Act violators such as Bethlehem Steel and Henry Ford are receiving billions of dollars in arms orders.

Earlier statements by the Defense Advisory Commission to the effect that Wagner Act violators should not be rewarded with government orders were quickly withdrawn "under the driving attack" of the commercial press and the reactionary Smith Committee in the House, the report points out, adding that CIO's requests for an Executive Order to carry out the same policy have also been refused to date.

MINE SAFETY

A further example of Congressional refusal to pass labor protective laws is seen in the bottling up of even so simple a measure as the Mine Safety bill, which would be a step toward cutting down the appalling toll of miners' deaths—a toll that has reached 1600 in the year and a half since the bill was introduced.

"In spite of this incredible toll of human life and its accompanying suffering for widows and orphaned children, the House Committee on Mines and Mining refused to report the Coal Mine Safety Bill to the House of Representatives for a vote on the floor," Lewis writes.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Period or war hysteria are marked by savage attacks on workers' rights and the rights of all people to freedom of speech, press and assembly, the report points out in citing a number of oppressive measures that CIO has campaigned against.

Symptoms of such attacks are seen in current proposals directed against aliens and other minorities, in a bill to legalize wire-tapping, in continued stalling on the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax measures, in a proposal to allow employers to set up private armies for use against strikers. In addition, the report cites menacing activities by the FBI directed ostensibly against "espionage and sabotage" but actually designed to intimidate workers.

Dangers to labor in the conscription law, opposed before passage by the CIO, are cited in the report, and affiliates are urged to demand labor representations on local draft boards in order to prevent discrimination against active union men.

productive capacity, our resources and our 10,000,000 unemployed are enough to produce both a huge defense apparatus and sufficient consumers' goods for all—provided those in control are willing to utilize them for more than simply the creation of a war machine.

"If, on the other hand," Lewis writes, "prices are held within bounds, wages rise evenly, profits are only reasonable; if the low incomes of the nation rise and the high incomes are lowered; if the people are equipped with the money to buy all those things they need; if unemployment is vigorously wiped out, then our people need not fall victims to a war economy."

WPA CUT DOWN

At the present time, these things are not being done. WPA has been drastically reduced, saddled with vicious provisions that make "just administration difficult and proper care of the unemployed impossible." This, Lewis points out, in spite of the fact that unemployment remains close to 10,000,000, of which no more than a quarter can be taken up by the defense program even at its maximum.

Whatever effort has been made to increase purchasing power is due to organized labor and particularly to the CIO, the report notes, yet enormous sections of the population live far below the lowest minimum for health and decency. The tax system continues to be regressive—that is, the greater share falls on those least able to pay, the low-income consumers. Social Security payments continue to be low, while payroll taxes continue to freeze enormous sums in unused reserves held by the government.

CIO PROGRAM

CIO's program, calling for federal steps to end unemployment and to bring about full use of productive capacity, for a progressive tax program to tap huge fortunes and to spare low income groups, for control of prices and profits, and for full recognition of the right to organize and bargain collectively, is the answer to these problems, Lewis declares.

"In such terms as these, it is possible to create an economy moving immediately to absorb our extensive unemployment, not only in the making of arms but also in a greater production of goods needed by our people," Lewis writes.

"Such measures also provide the basis for an economy competent to absorb the shocks of the extensive national defense program. The nature of the economy should be such that it will be a growing one when national defense expenditures cease.

"Our economy must be capable in the future of absorbing the workers previously employed in the armed forces and in making arms. The alternative is disaster."

CIO-Latin American Relations Growing

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 18.—The committee on Latin America, appointed by President John L. Lewis in February, 1939, and made a standing committee at the national convention last October, has increased its activities until it is now in contact with all the labor movements in Latin American countries, it was reported at the CIO convention in session here.

James Carey, CIO secretary, was sent by the government as a delegate rfom the CIO to the conference of the International Labor Office in Havana in November, 1939. Miss Kathryn Lewis, executive assistant to the President of the United Mine Workers, and Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca, executive board member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, acted as his advisors.

TWO TO MEXICO

Two fraternal delegates, Miss Lewis and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, were sent by the CIO as fraternal delegates to a meeting of the Executive Board of the Latin American Confederation of Workers, held in Mexico City in June.

The CIO Latin American Committee, together with the CIO Maritime Committee, has also been active in forwarding the setting up of a Pan American Maritime Committee with headquarters in Havana, and a program is being worked out by the Committee for use among Spanish speaking workers in the U. S.

"The relationships of the Latin American governments and peoples with the United States," President Lewis' report to the convention stated, "have become increasingly important, from the point of view of national defense, during the past year. It is important that during the development of such future relationships, the interest of labor in Latin America and in the United States be protected.

"The function of the Latin American Committee in developing bonds of friendship and mutual information, between the CIO and organizations of labor in Latin American countries is most important."

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

CIO Meeting New Tests

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 18, 1940

To the Officers and Delegates of the Third Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations,

Greetings:

This convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations is held in a period of severe testing for all American institutions. We meet under the shadow of a world crisis, which threatens to engulf our own country. All around us we see war and imperialism in their most hideous aspects. We are confronted with the necessity of defending our country against these dangers, of preserving our liberties against assaults from without or within, and of proving to the world and to the American people the virtue and validity of our institutions.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is an American institution, dedicated to the defense and welfare of the American people and the preservation and extension of the democratic way of life. We can proudly say that our great congress of labor has met the test of these times. It has maintained and expanded its strength during the past year, because its program, its purposes and its policies are in the truest sense patriotic and American.

Loyalty of Members

It has retained the loyalty and enthusiasm of its members and brought hundreds of thousands of new members into its ranks, because it has demonstrated in actual fact its power to raise the American standard of living, to lighten the lot of the workers, and to defend and promote legislation that is beneficial not only to labor but to the whole American people.

While we may congratulate ourselves, however, on the substantial progress outlined in this report and in the records of our affiliated organizations, we must be constantly mindful of the serious dangers which confront labor and our country on all sides.

National defense, on which our position has been stated clearly, patriotically and without equivocation, includes not only the defense of our shores from invaders but also the defense of our living standards and our liberties from the attacks of reactionary interests which would take advantage for their own selfish purposes of the country's emergency.

War Economy

In the past year the whole economy of the United States has been changed from a peace economy to a war economy. No effective solution has been advanced by the government or industry to meet the unemployment, insecurity and low living standards which have afflicted the country. All that has been done has been to divert our industrial resources and energies to the production of war materials and to enlist large numbers of young men for compulsory military service.

While this transference of our economy to a war footing has had some effect in reducing unemployment and raising wages in some cases, such beneficial results are offset by rising living costs and by other economic disturbances which will be noted later in this report.

Furthermore a war economy is an unhealthy economy, tending politically to promote foreign adventures in order that its momentum may be maintained, and carrying in it the seeds of economic collapse when the war period comes to an end, as witness the severe depression which followed the last war in this and all other countries.

CIO Program

The CIO therefore has every reason to push more vigorously than ever for the adoption of its program for a more lasting solution of unemployment, insecurity and the other economic ills that beset us. This program calls for a progressive raising of real wages and purchasing power, for absorption of all the unemployed through reduced working hours and expanded production, and for legislation to insure security and opportunity for young and old people, the unemployed and all the needy who are not otherwise provided for.

The first essential to bring about these desirable results is union organization. The chief and most basic service which the CIO has rendered to the country has been the organization of previously unorganized millions of workers in modern industrial unions. For it must not be forgotten that such legislative and political advances as have been made were won chiefly through the organized efforts of the working people.

Organizational Progress

It is therefore gratifying to note that during the past year the CIO has made many substantial organizational advances. The Labor Board election results register these advances in a succession of victories in most of our basic industries. CIO unions have received sixty per cent of all the votes cast in these elections in the past year and three times as many votes as have been cast for the unions of the American Federation of Labor.

The General Motors election, the largest Labor Board election ever held, was won overwhelmingly by the CIO, United Automobile Workers of America, as were elections in nearly all the other major automobile plants.

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America is another CIO union which has won election after election in the past year in the great plants of General Electric, Westinghouse, RCA and other companies.

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee can also record an almost unbroken record of election victories in the plants of Armour and the other big meat packing companies.

CIO Preferred

These are but a few examples of the many election successes of CIO unions in industry after industry. Through their votes the workers have registered their emphatic preference for the modern industrial form of organization which the CIO was formed to promote.

New and improved contracts in the steel, automobile, electrical, packing, glass and scores of other industries have testified to the solidity and permanence of the new CIO unions and their ability to raise the wages and improve the conditions of the workers.

The CIO has also pushed ahead into new territory during the past year, as witness the progress of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and the advances into unorganized territory of many other already established unions.

New Drives

Noteworthy among the new organizing campaigns launched during the past year are the campaign to organize the employes of the Ford Motor Company; the expanding drive in the aircraft industry; the campaign to complete organization in the steel industry, notably in the plants of Bethlehem steel and other independents; and the organizing drive among the wood workers of the northwest.

The organizing progress and plans of the CIO will be outlined in more detail later in this report. Suffice it here to say that organizing the unorganized still remains the basic and most important task of the CIO, to which it will continue to devote its energies in the future.

Legislative Activities

On the legislative field, the CIO has had to devote most of its energies to preserving existing labor and social legislation against vicious attacks. Its outstanding achievement in the past year has been the preservation of the National Labor Relations Act against determined efforts to force through destructive amendments. Amendments designed to destroy the Wage-Hour law were also defeated, due chiefly to the efforts of the CIO.

Other important legislative actions of the CIO have included defense of American civil liberties against the flood of anti-alien, anti-labor and generally restrictive bills that usually accompany a period of war hysteria.

The efforts of the CIO to obtain Congressional action or a Presidential executive order to require observance of the National Labor Relations Act and other labor laws on government contract work, were unremitting during the past year. The issue has assumed additional importance, on account of the huge government contracts placed under the defense program. But effective action has yet to be taken to end this scandalous governmental encouragement of labor law violators.

Legislative Record

The legislative record of the CIO is described in detail later in this report. It is necessary here only to note that most of it has had to be in defense of existing legislation rather than in advance to new gains, because the government and Congress have not seen fit to put forward a real social and economic program, such as is advocated by the CIO, to cope with the continued problems of unemployment, insecurity and other domestic evils.

A real challenge is presented to labor by this situation. Such advances as labor has secured have been won by the economic and political strength which it could muster to compel consideration. Labor must therefore make renewed efforts to increase its independent organized power, through the extension of industrial organization and through the election to office of representatives responsive to the people's will, if we are to defend our liberties and democratic institutions, to protect existing social legislation and to go forward with a far-reaching program for a happier and more prosperous America . . . .

Conclusion

The foregoing constitutes the report of your President covering the period which has ensued since the adjournment of the Second Constitutional Convention in San Francisco, October 13, 1939.

Any proper appraisal of the work and accomplishments of the Congress of Industrial Organizations requires an analysis of its varied activities and record over the five-year period since the organization of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Substantial gains have been made and the sum total of the contribution made by the CIO to the men and women of labor and to the nation as a whole cannot be measured and properly equated without arousing feelings of pride and satisfaction in the hearts of its officers and membership.

An Instrument of Progress

The Congress of Industrial Organization has definitely established its position in American life. After the passage of five years we meet again in the same city, in the same hall, where the founders of our movement crystallized the opinions and policies which gave birth to this magnificent instrumentality of modern progress.

I submit this report with the belief that the accredited delegates to this Convention and our membership at large may find it of interest, and will extend their approval.

It is not only a record of the work of the President, who after all merely acts as the coordinator of the activities of our movement; it is a record of work of all the departments and officers and representatives of our organization.

I commend strongly the work performed by my associate officers on the staff and in the field, by our department heads, clerical staff, throughout the period covered by this report.

I am personally and officially indebted to them for their cooperation and continuous consideration. I ask for them a continuance of your confidence and consideration to the end that our movement may proceed on the onward march to the attainment of its objectives.

Lewis Report Lists Gains Despite War Crisis

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 18.—CIO delegates, meeting here in the CIO's third constitutional convention, heard Pres. John L. Lewis' report that CIO is meeting successfully the severe tests rising from the world crisis, that its unions are holding their gains and making new progress despite the menace of war abroad and of assaults from within our own country.

The report, of which the introduction and conclusion are printed here in full, pointed to CIO achievements in organizing during the past year and to current drives in Bethlehem, Ford and aircraft as examples of the vigor and correctness of CIO policies. These successes, the report showed, are evidenced in the scores of thousands of new members signed up and in the three to one record of CIO votes in a number of major Natl. Labor Relations Board elections.

On the legislative front CIO has held back a reactionary drive to wipe out social laws won by labor in the past few years, Lewis reported, and has kept up an unremitting campaign of pressure for this extension and improvement. Principal successes have been in the defense of the Wagner and the Wage-Hour Acts from tory amendments designed to destroy their usefulness to labor. At the same time, CIO has stood out against the flood of oppressive bills aimed at workers' rights and at minorities, that always accompanies a period of war hysteria.

In Lewis' words: "Substantial gains have been made and the sum total of the contribution made by the CIO to the men and women of labor and to the nation cannot be measured without arousing feelings of pride and satisfaction in the hearts of is officers and membership."

'Speed Organizing Plans'—Haywood

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—With political elections out of the way, CIO unions should concentrate on their Number One job — organization of the unorganized — Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, declared in a letter sent out to all affiliates.

TEXT OF STATEMENT

"Now that the national elections are over, it is timely to remember that political campaigns may come and go but the basic work of the labor movement must go on all the time.

"Union organization is the chief and most important instrumentality for the protection of workers. Upon the strength of our unions depends whatever progress we can make not only in improving wages and working conditions, but also in obtaining legislative and political consideration.

"In the heat of political campaigns ill feeling is often engendered which is harmful to our union work. Such ill feeling can be rapidly overcome, if we remember that the basic aims and purposes of our unions and of the Congress of Industrial Organizations remain the same as they have always been, and if we unite our ranks solidly behind these basic union purposes.

STRONG THROUGH UNITY

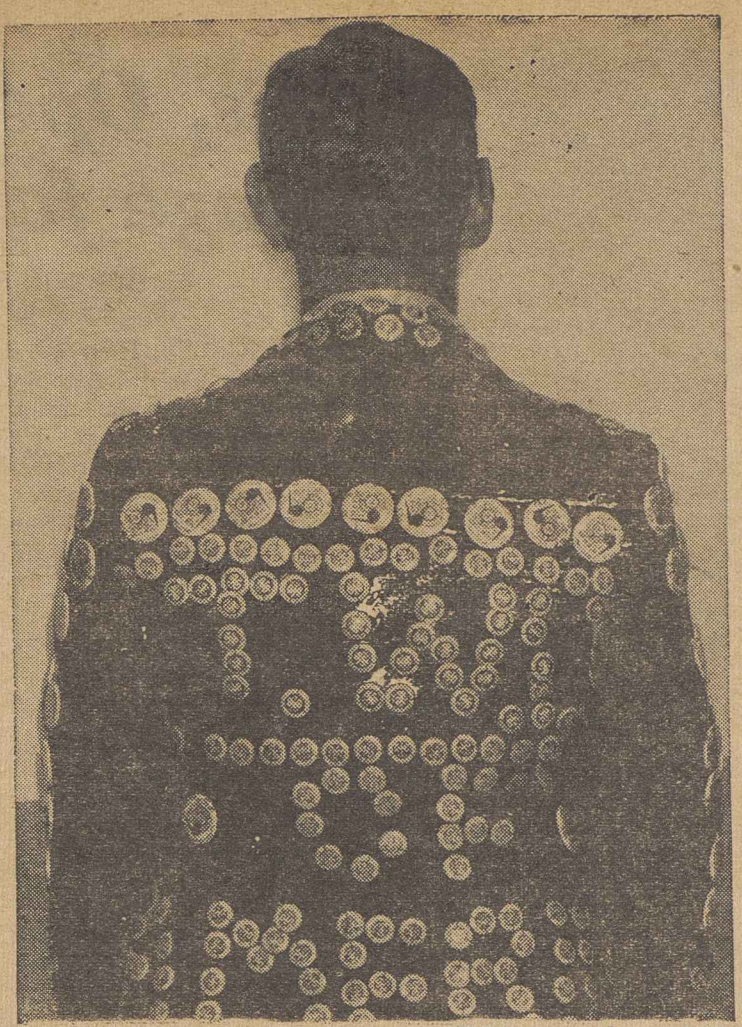
"The CIO was born out of the desire of the workers for industrial unity, for strong unions in which all could unite for the betterment of their lot. The CIO and all its affiliated unions have grown strong and powerful through the unity and solidarity which industrial unionism brings.

"In this spirit of unity, the CIO has accomplished great things. It has organized millions of workers and has brought them some degree of industrial democracy for the first time in their lives. In this spirit of unity, the CIO will go on to ever greater accomplishments for the working people of America.

"The CIO has won many Labor Board elections in the recent past and has secured many new and improved contracts. Our sweeping successes in the General Motors and other automobile elections and in General Electric and Westinghouse plants are examples of an increasingly favorable trend in our direction.

'MUCH TO BE DONE'

"But much more still remains to be done. I need only cite the Ford Organizing Campaign, the drive to organize the Bethlehem and Republic Steel plants, and the necessity of completing organization in the rubber plants of the Goodyear Company. Many other organizing campaigns of immediate importance to our unions and to the whole CIO in stores, offices, etc., could be mentioned.



"These campaigns, and the day-to-day work of strengthening and expanding our unions, are the basic work of the CIO, for which it needs the united energies and loyalty of all its unions, all of its field staff and all of its members.

"Let's get to work with renewed energy on these basic tasks, and go forward, all pulling together adding members to our unions, strength to our movement, and serving the cause of Humanity, Justice and Freedom."

Standard Oil Shipyard Signs Pact

New York, Nov. 16.—A contract signed by the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, largest shipowner and operator in the country, was announced this week by Local 22, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The agreement recognizes the IUMSW as sole bargaining agency for 125 of the company's employes engaged in tank cleaning and ship repair work in the Port of New York. Terms provide for the adjustment of all grievances by arbitration, fixes rates of pay, regulates employment and makes provisions for working conditions.

5,000 Inland Boatmen Benefit From Pact

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Nearly 5,000 inland boatmen and allied workers are now protected by union contract as the result of recent negotiations, the National Maritime Union announced this week. Felix Siren, national organizer for the Inland Boatmen's division of the NMU said that pay increases and other gains had been secured for more than 2,300 men on inland waters in recent months.

Most of the contracts cover from 80 to 150 men working on four to eight boats, with the exception of the agreement with the Federal Barge Lines which employs some 700 men on 28 vessels, plus more than 1,000 longshoremen.

25 PER CENT INCREASES

Union activities on the Ohio, Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Warrior rivers, Siren said, wages have been increased 20 to 25 per cent in many cases during the past few months. The Warrior river is in Alabama.

"In the two and one-half years since we started organizing on the rivers," Siren reported, "wages for inland boatmen and allied workers have increased a full 100 per cent. This increase is reflected in the wages of the unorganized, as well as the organized men. Employers try to stop organization by granting wage increases."

Wages averaged less than $50 a month in commercial towing, before the NMU started organizing on the rivers, Siren said. Now the average is close to $100. In addition paid vacations totalling 26 to 30 days a year and increases in the manning scales have been won on the organized lines.

Union Artists Offer Calendar

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.— Art work at prices within the reach of workers is available through the efforts of the United American Artists, CIO affiliate here, in the form of a calendar selling for $1.00.

The calendar consists of 27 original prints, in color, that can be detached and framed. The prints illustrate some phase of labor and social life in Chicago.

Copies can be obtained from The United American Artists, 1118 South Michigan, Chicago, Ill., for $1.00, 75 cents in lots of six or more.

VOTE FOR STRIKE: Employes of the Vultee Aircraft Co. in Downey, Calif., voted to strike if necessary to force the company to negotiate with their union, the United Automobile Workers. The men struck Nov. 15 for decent wages and union recognition. They voted CIO in a recent Labor Board election.

150 Peanut Workers On Strike

Suffolk, Va., Nov. 16.—Prepared "to stick it out for six months, if necessary," 150 CIO workers went on strike at the Lummis & Co. peanut plant here with demands for wage increases, seniority, closed ship and a $10 Christmas bonus.

Organized as Local 232 of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, the Lummis employes—most of them poorly paid Negro women—called the strike when the firm refused to come to agreement with their demands.

On the first day of the strike all activity within the peanut factory had halted and no scabs were going through the picket line quickly set up by the workers.

READY TO STICK

"We'll stick close to the laws of the city and state regulating picketing and we are prepared to stay on strike for six months, if necessary," declared Sam Kovnat, union organizer.

Average wages in the plant have been around $15 a week, and less, it was pointed out.

Kovnat said the union has spent months "doing everything possible to avoid this strike.

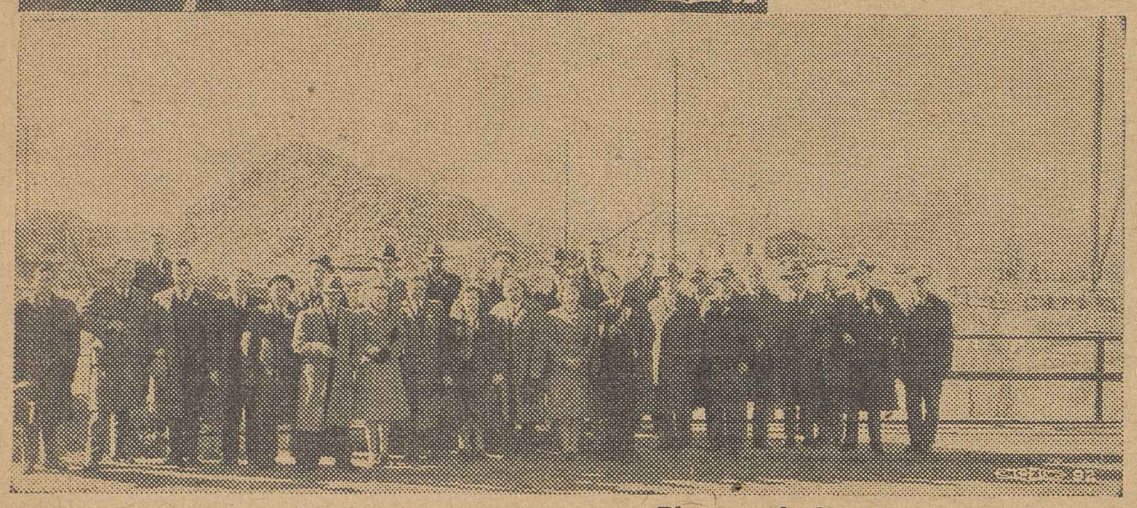
"In the past week we called in a representative of the Department of Labor in Washington and a representative from the state labor commission.

"The company refused to agree to a single demand of the workers for union protection and better wages. The demands of the union are reasonable."

Frank Graham is president of the striking local.

Churchmen Aid Strikers In Philly

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—Some 285 members of the CIO Hotel & Restaurant Workers Industrial Union who have been on strike since July 30 against a 10 per cent wage cut, are keeping up their picket lines at the swanky Penn Athletic Club, located on aristocratic Rittenhouse Square.



A union official said that the club is now manned with strikebreakers, of whom there are 100 more than ever worked on the regular crew—despite the fact that business is reported off by more than 60 per cent.

This week the strikers were cheered by a check for $50 from the Church Emergency Relief Committee in New York. The committee consists of liberal churchmen and the contributions were collected from church people all over the country who believe in labor's right to organize and bargain collectively.

The donation has been earmarked by the union for medicine and special relief for some of the families, as well as the purchase of overcoats that are urgently needed by the strikers during these cold, brisk days on the picket lines.

Photos, drawings, features combine to make a record of five years of CIO in the special Fifth Anniversary issue of The CIO NEWS of permanent value to all union members and their friends. Send orders to The CIO NEWS, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., for your copies. Ready November 25.

Los Angeles Labor Licks Fitts, Open Shoppers' Stooge for 12 Years

By GORDON L'ALLEMAND
(Special to the CIO NEWS)

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16.—With the election of John F. Dockweiler as District Attorney of Los Angeles County, and the defeat of the encumbent, Buron Fitts, organized labor has won a magnificent victory. Fitts, sworn enemy of labor, went down under a majority of 300,000, more than was secured by Pres. Roosevelt in the county.

Dockweiler won on a platform of "prosecution and not persecution. Human rights before property rights." Fitts ran on a fake platform of "Americanism," red-baiting, and trying to arouse the people by prating about fifth column activities and war hysteria. Open shoppers, the L. A. Times, and the American Legion were his backers.

STRIKE-BREAKING

For twelve years Fitts has used the District Attorney's office as a strike-breaking instrument. Prosecuting unionists was for him a "sadistic pleasure." His term of office has made the county one of the most corrupt, graft and crime-ridden areas in the U. S.

Dockweiler, interviewed right after election, said: "To organized labor I promise that civil liberties will be protected. That there will be no patronage from the office of District Attorney. I shall not engage in the 'busting' of unions for any of labor's enemies. Nor will there be any arousing of public hysterias so that under a smoke screen of anti-fifth column drives, civil rights will be abrogated."

The corrupt Fitts' administration has cost laboring men and women millions of dollars since Fitts rode into office in 1928, backed by open shop interests. Trumped up charges and frameups have since been his tools in a ruthless war against labor unions.

The defeat of this man removes the last cancer of the powerful Shaw anti-labor machine. Fitts' downfall was brought about by a popular front of CIO and AFL unions working with L. A. Mayor Bowron, and good government and reformist groups.

CIO WORKED HARD

Labor's Non-Partisan League worked closely with the CIO in mobilization work. The League got out and distributed 250,000 4-page tabloids.

The CIO Industrial Union Council endorsed Dockweiler before the August primaries. The AFL had endorsed Bonelli of the Board of Equalization. When Bonelli was defeated the AFL came over and endorsed Dockweiler.

The CIO, in addition to putting out 250,000 4-page tabloids written by members of the American Newspaper Guild, put on a radio program that covered every important broadcasting station in Los Angeles county. For ten days before election day, Nov. 5, Tom Van Dyke, editor of the daily radio program OUR DAILY BREAD, interviewed union leaders via air about experiences their unions had had with union-busting Buron Fitts.

Among those interviewed were: J C. Coulter, president of L. A. Industrial Union Council; Lew Elet, manager of the Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Lloyd Seleger of the ILWU, Local 126; Ken Gillie, Chrysler Local 230, UAW, and many others.

CONSTANT BLITZKRIEG

District Attorney Buron Fitts' twelve years in office have been a constant blitzkrieg against organized labor. He has forced into the courts thousands of cases against workers, cases charging conspiracy, felonies, extortion. Nothing was too fantastic to charge. He has obtained not one conviction of importance. But he has cost union treasuries hundreds of thousands of dollars, and the taxpayers far more. He alone was responsible for the disastrous UAWA defeat in the Douglas Aircraft workers strike in 1936. He wrecked the union treasury to the tune of $50,000, and brought on an era of low wages in the aircraft industry.

His "extortion" case against 15 auto workers in the famous Chrysler case of 1939, based on their efforts to collect union dues would have, if successful, set a precedent that would have allowed the attack and wrecking of unions throughout the country. The unionists were acquitted.

LOTS OF PUBLICITY

Fitts' theory in fighting unions has been to keep a steady stream of union cases in the courts. With reactionary papers making a Roman holiday on anti-union publicity, he went gaily about wrecking union treasuries. Needless to say he has always worked hand in hand with Southern Californians, Inc., Merchants & Manufacturers and other big anti-union employers' groups recently so discredited by NLRB decisions handed down in Washington, D. C.

Buron Fitts is now under indictment in a contempt of court charge, and a $65,000 false arrest suit. The contempt charge came in the notorious "red mass murder" case. He made the mistake of seizing Longshoreman Britt Webster on a phony, oft revived murder charge, and holding him incommunicado for three days. Meanwhile he gave the press a conference and tried to convict Webster in the papers before the case got to court.

SEES 'ERA OF PROGRESS'

Philip Connelly, California state president of the CIO said of Dockweiler, who became District Attorney on December 2: "John Dockweiler has a good record as an attorney in Los Angeles, also in Congress. I feel that organized labor in Southern California can look forward to an era of progress."

Jones, LNPL Head, Lists Victories In Elections

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Analysis of late election returns by Labor's Non-Partisan League demonstrates that labor voters won many victories in state and Congressional contests in all industrial areas, John T. Jones, LNPL Director, said today.

"Candidates endorsed by Labor's Non-Partisan League were almost uniformly successful," Mr. Jones said, "and labor also defeated a number of office holders who were consistently anti-labor."

Throughout the campaign it was League policy as outlined by Chairman John L. Lewis in a statement in September to place emphasis on the election of Representatives and Senators. Voting records were studied and guided state units of the League in their endorsements or rejection of candidates.

Among outstanding liberal Senators returned to office with League support are Senators Wheeler, Murdock, LaFollette, Guffey, Mead and Walsh. Virtually every Representative who voted to protect the Wagner Act was returned. More than 100 Representatives who were formally endorsed by the League scored outstanding victories.

The League was victorious also in defeating certain incumbents who had opposed pro-labor legislation. Foremost of these were C. Arthur Anderson, D., Mo.; Harry N. Routzohn, R., O.; Robert Luce, R., Mass.; and Chester H. Gross, R., Pa.

Both Anderson and Routzohn were bitter-end foes of the Wagner act and had been endorsed by William Green, AFL president, who was thus repudiated by labor votes in these contests. Labor voters also rejected Green's demand that they defeat all Representatives who stood by the Wagner Act and refused to approve the Smith Amendments. Nearly all those voting against the Smith amendments were returned with labor support despite Green.

Industrial states recorded many League victories in gubernatorial and local contests. Outstanding was election of Murray D. Van Wagoner as Governor of Michigan, Charles Edison as New Jersey Governor and Dwight H. Green as Illinois chief executive, and Matthew M. Neely as West Virginia Governor.

One of the League's most important triumphs was the defeat in California of labor-baiting Buron Fitts, Los Angeles District Attorney who sought re-election.

There were many other important gains in state contests such as election of seven state Senators and eight Representatives in Massachusetts; election of state officials in Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Illinois and other industrial states.

New Union Magazine

New York, Nov. 16—The first issue of msg, new Marine Department publication of the American Communications Association, CIO, is rolling off the presses today.

Issued monthly under the auspices of the recently set up Marine Department Organizing Committee, the new magazine is intended as an organizing and educational bulletin for all radio operators in the American Merchant Marine.

50 Textile Workers Get Back Wages

New York City, Nov. 16.—Fifty employes of the Nu-Art Division of the American Manufacturing Company of Brooklyn have collected $33,750 back pay in accordance with an order of the National Labor Relations Board, it was announced today by Jack Rubinstein, manager of the Greater New York Joint Board of the Textile Workers Union of America, which brought the charges in behalf of the workers.

All but a few of the workers received their payments Saturday and today at the regional office of the labor board here. Payments ranged from $400 to more than $1000 for each worker.

The 50 workers were ordered reinstated with back pay by the labor board which sustained charges of discrimination growing out of a strike at the Nu-Art Division in 1937. The company fought the case through the Supreme Court of the United States, which sustained the Circuit Court of Apends in its order to enforce the decision of the labor board.

Plan Drive In Shipyards

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 16.—Plans for an intensive drive in all Bethlehem shipyards and repair plants were drawn up at a meeting of the general executive board of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers held here last week.

Lucien Koch, regional director for the union in the Fore River area in Massachusetts, has been appointed to head up the Bethlehem drive.

L. A. Judge Raps Fitts

Los Angeles, Nov. 16.—In a sweeping decision outlining the duty of fairness to an accused on the part of a district attorney, Superior Court Judge Emmet H. Wilson today ruled on motions to strike and other technical objections in the Fitts (District Attorney Buron Fitts) contempt case.

The proceedings are being prosecuted under special order of Judge Wilson by Attorneys Lee Gallagher, A. L. Wirin and Grover Johnson.

The major grounds for the contempt citation constitute attempts by District Attorney Fitts to prejudice the rights of Britt Webster, charged with first degree murder, to a fair trial by improper appeal,s to the passion and prejudice of the grand jury and of the public, against communism. Others included in the citation are deputy district attorneys William Simpson and Russell E. Parsons.

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22—Philip Murray today succeeded John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers as president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Sec. James B. Carey, Vice-Presidents Emil Rieve, S. H. Dalrymple, R. H. Thomas, and Reid Robinson were re-elected. Elected to the vacancies created by the election of Murray to the Presidency and the retirement of Sidney Hillman because of Natl. Defense activities were Frank Rosenbloom of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union.

Murray, the man who took over the tremendous task of CIO-organizing the nation's mighty steel industry and made the greatest success of that job in American labor history, was elected unanimously on the final day of the historic third constitutional convention of the CIO.

John L. Lewis, chairman and president of the CIO since its formation in November, 1935, stepped down from his high office amid the ringing cheers of the several hundred delegates.

Women's Group Holds Sessions

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 23.—Women of the CIO, mothers, wives and sisters of union members, held their second annual conference at the CIO national convention during the sessions held here. Miss Kathryn Lewis who headed the National Coordinating Committee for Women's Auxiliaries of CIO Unions during the past year was re-elected following the unanimous rejection of her resignation.

In her report summing up the work of the Committee since the 1939 convention, Miss Lewis stated that CIO Auxiliaries have gained public recognition in the field of women's activities for outstanding organization of women who are not club or society ladies, but the women in workers' families who speak for the needs and interests of the majority of the women of America.

The conference voted to petition the CIO Executive Board to appropriate funds for the work of the National Committee which was organized a year ago by representatives of auxiliaries at the San Francisco CIO national convention. Since then more than 500 auxiliaries in 36 states, attached to unions in 32 international unions have been set up or aided in coordinating activities.

RESOLUTIONS

At the conference held here, a resolution was adopted unanimously condemning the exclusion of working women's organizations from the Women's Centennial Congress. Resolutions were also passed voicing support to the Women's Auxiliaries of the striking American Newsaper Guild in Monroe, La., and to the Vultee Aircraft workers of California who walked out recently to win a decent minimum wage rate.

OTHER OFFICERS

Mrs. Julia Katz, Washington, D. C., secretary; Mrs. Clara Fuller, Cincinnati, Ohio, Mrs. Dorothy Connolly, Los Angeles, Cal., Mrs. Faye Stephenson, Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Mary Santo, New York City, vice presidents.

The four vice presidents will serve on the Executive Board of the Coordinating Committee which will be made up of representatives of International Auxiliary Committees and State Councils of Auxiliaries.

Before the conference adjourned, a program was endorsed for assistance to unions, consumers groups and other organizations under which "women can help fill the 52 million shrunken bellies."

CIO Resolutions Urge Security, Liberty, Peace

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—Scores of resolutions expressing the concern of the CIO in vital problems affecting the millions of workers of America were passed at the CIO convention during the week's sessions. Dangers incident to the National Defense program and the war situation were faced in a number of resolutions. The texts of four important resolutions on these subjects are printed in full in this issue of THE CIO NEWS. They are:

1. The Protection of Labor in the Administration of the Conscription Law.

2. Preservation of Peace and Democratic Institutions.

3. Guarantees of Collective Bargaining in Government Contracts, Loans and Purchases.

4. Statement reaffirming Americanism of CIO and opposition to foreign "isms."

The alertness of the CIO to safeguard labor's rights through legislation is shown in a series of resolutions adopted by the delegates. Here is a summary of the outstanding legislative demands:

Labor Representation on Government Agencies — Urging that labor be given equal representation with consumers, farmers and industry upon all important federal and state governmental agencies.

National Labor Relations Act—Opposing any amendments to the act at this time and asking for the appropriation of sufficient funds to assure the effective administration of the Act.

Administration of the NLRA—Calling for a vigorous and effective enforcement of all provisions of the Act and warning CIO unions to be vigilant in watching the policies and administration of the NLRB.

Unemployment Compensation—Urging the enactment of a national unemployment compensation system covering all workers and providing adequate benefits and instructing the CIO Executive Officers to prepare and distribute a model state bill.

Old Age Pensions — Endorsing an old age pension program in cooperation with all progressive and old age groups based upon a flat pension of $60 a month with supplementary allowance to wives up to a maximum of $90 a month for each married couple with an age limit of 60 years.

Permanent and Total Disability—Urging passage at the coming session of Congress of legislation to provide cash benefits in cases of total or permanent disability as part of the Federal old age pension program.

Wage-Hour Law—Opposing all amendments intended to weaken the present law and calling for extension of the law to groups now exempt and the immediate increase of minimum wage standards to at least 40 cents an hour for every industry.

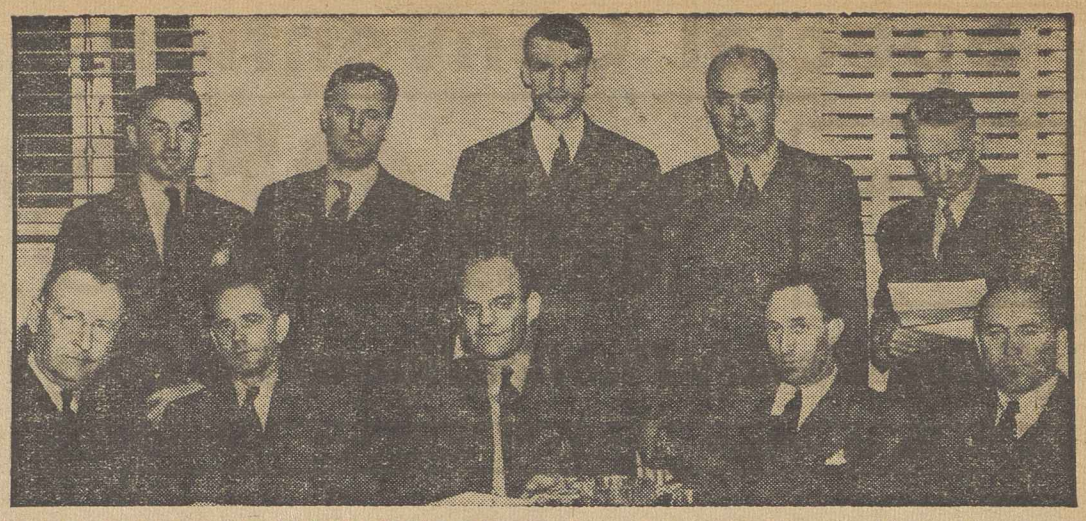
WPA—Asking for the continuation of the WPA on a basis adequate to meet the needs of all persons not otherwise employed; assurance that all WPA workers be guaranteed the right of collective bargaining and that white collar, professional and art projects be continued and extended.

LaFollette - Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices Bill—Pledging the CIO to secure the passage of this bill prohibiting and regulating the use of labor spies, strikebreaking agencies and other brutal practices used against employes.

Unemployment — Calling upon the Administration to make good its platform pledge to hold a national conference of the leaders of labor, industry, government, farmers and consumers to agree upon ways to end employment; to put into force measures necessary to prevent economic disaster following in the wake of the end of national defense spending and to institute a program of public work for the relief of unemployment similar to that set forth at the 1939 CIO convention.

Housing — Urging the government (1) to take steps at once to expand the construction of houses to not less than one million a year; (2) to increase the U. S. Housing Authority program to at least 300,000 units a year; (3) to extend the program to the lowest income groups in all regions; (4) to lower private interest rates on construction loans and extend the repayment period for such loans.

Southern Poll Tax — Calling upon the progressive elements throughout the country to unite in support of legislation to prohibit the imposition of state poll taxes as a condition to voting in federal elections.



Health—Reaffirming support for the immediate adoption of a national health program, including federal insurance for medical care with free medical care for those unable to afford insurance and construction of hospitals in rural and urban areas throughout the country.

Federal Mining Inspection Bill — Endorsing this bill already passed by the Senate and blocked in the House, to provide for adequate federal inspection of mines and do away with the needless loss of thousands of miners' lives because of inadequate safety controls.

Walter-Logan Bill — Opposing such measures as this bill aimed to nullify the administration of all federal social legislation by subjecting it to interminable legalistic tactics and red tape.

Civil Service for Government Employes — Reaffirming the CIO policy in support of extension of the merit system bases on civil service for all branches of government and calling uon the Social Security Board to enforce its supervisory powers over the personnel policies of state social security agencies.

Anti-Lynching — Endorsing the principle of federal anti-lynching legislation and calling upon the people to demand that Southern Senators cease their obstruction to passage of such legislation.

Protest Naming Dempsey To Maritime Board

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22. — Protest against the appointment of John J. Dempsey of New Mexico to the U. S. Maritime Commission and a plea that Senate confirmation of his appointment be withheld, were voted by delegates to the third CIO constitutional convention here.

Acting on recommendation of the CIO Maritime Committee, the convention on its opening day ordered a telegram be dispatched to the Senate Commerce Committee asking adverse action on Dempsey.

Previous to the convention the CIO maritime group, through its chairman—Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union—had characterized Dempsey as a "strike-breaker extraordinary, responsible for the death of 93 persons during the 1919 subway strike in New York City."

BEFORE GRAND JURY

Curran was referring to the famous Malbone street disaster in Brooklyn, when a scab motorman wrecked a subway train. Dempsey, as vice-president in charge of operations for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co., was later indicted as a result of the grand jury investigation of the wreck.

Organize, Then Seek Unity, Report Advises

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 23. — Unity in the labor movement can be achieved "only if the CIO can continue to organize the unorganized workers in the mass production and basic industries along industrial lines" and only if labor activity in legislation and economic work continues "along the progressive path blazed by CIO," according to the section on labor unity in the convention report of the committee on officers' reports.

This real unity, the report declares, must be all-inclusive. "It must protect and include all the organizations in the CIO. The millions of newly organized workers are the pride of the CIO and the proof of the effectiveness of the principles of the CIO.

"Not one must be abandoned to the cavillings of jurisdictional claims of craft unions and the prevalent racketeering within the AFL.

The report sharply condemned "irresponsible statements to the effect that Pres. Lewis has been responsible for the failure to achieve a unified labor movement," which, it said, "do not even merit the serious consideration of this convention. They are utter falsehoods."

The report recommended that the convention continue the negotiating committee, consisting of John L. Lewis, Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, "with the authority to participate in any future negotiations, looking forward to real labor unity, which must be in accord with the foregoing principles."

Speaking on behalf of the committee report were Van A. Bittner and John Owens, both officials of the mine union.

Bittner, deriding claims that the existence of the CIO has hurt the American workers, pointed out that members of the AFL "should thank God for the CIO because we have made them stronger," because of the CIO's contribution to the growth of organized labor.

Owens declared that "it may not be amiss to notice this fact when we are discussing unity in the labor movement, to tell those that have forgotten it or do not know, that we are out of the AFL because they expelled us without giving us a hearing."

Delegate Tells of CIO In Richmond

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 23—A 62-year-old colored woman who has been working since she was eight years old, made her maiden speech before the microphone at the national CIO convention here and held her own on a list of speakers noted for eloquence.

Mrs. Ella Betts, a tobacco stemmer from Richmond, Va., told the delegates about the union to which she belongs — Tobacco Stemmers Local Industrial Union 332—which has 300 members, with all the poise of a delegate seasoned by many years' speaking.

Her eyes glowing with enthusiasm, Mrs. Betts told how the union had raised the piece work rate in the tobacco plant where she works, from three and four cents per pound to 10½, 12½ and 13 cents per pound.

When she gets back from the convention, Mrs. Betts said in an interview after her speech that she was going to help organize a Ladies Auxiliary among the women relatives of the colored tobacco workers.

READING REPORT: CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson, who headed the Committee on Officers' Report, reads the committee's foundings. The group hailed the work of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

Tribute to Carney

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 22—Somber tribute to the work of the late William Carney, head of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council, was expressed by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis.

Lewis closed the first section of his Nov. 18 address, which was devoted to praise of Carney's activities, with a request that the delegates stand for one minute in silence.

Carney, the CIO leader told the hushed convention, "was a soldier in the ranks of labor, a stalwart citizen of the United States; proud of his heritage, willing at all times to fight for the preservation of that heritage and the privileges which accrued under our flag to all Americans . . .

"All honor to William Carney. He has fallen. Others have fallen before him and others will fall after him, if these rights and these privileges are to be maintained . . ."

Election of Murray As CIO Head Features 3rd Convention

He was elected unanimously at the final session of the CIO's third constitutional convention today, following previous announcement by John L. Lewis that he had not swerved from his promise t oretire from leadership of the organization which he helped to found in 1935.

Re-elected to office were Sec. James B. Carey, who heads the electrical workers; Vice-Presidents Emil Rieve, head of the textile workers; S. H. Dalrymple of the rubber workers; R. J. Thomas of the automobile workers; and Reid Robinson of the mine, mill and smelter workers.

The election of Murray and the retirement of Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman because of the press of duties in his post as a member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, left two positions open in the group of six vice-presidents.

The two new vice-presidents are Frank Rosenbloom of Chicago, a vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; and Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union.

Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee since its formation in 1936 and vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America for many years, earned a high reputation as one of the most capable labor leaders in the United States.

As head of the steel drive he accomplished what AFL leaders and industrialists had long thought to be impossible—the almost complete organization of the nation's Number One basic industry.

MANY DEBATES

The election of officers came at the end of a five-day convention which marked by numerous debates on matters of CIO policy, but general agreement from all sections that the CIO must be preserved and must grow into an even stronger organization of the workers in the nation's mass production industries.

When Lewis was introduced to the convention by Leonard Goldsmith, executive secretary of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council, he received a colorful 44-minute demonstration from the more than 500 persons assembled in Westminster Hall.

PARADE FOR LEWIS

In a deeply moving speech that brought tears to the eyes of many delegates, Lewis announced that "in just a day or two I will be out of this office which at the moment I occupy." But he made it clear that he had no intention of retiring from the fight in behalf of the down-trodden millions in America.

"I associate myself with the 52,000,000 shrunken bellies in this country; and I am for them regardless of any consideration, regardless of their creed or their color, their previous condition of servitude or anything else."

HITS CRITICS

He pointed out that the immense volume of criticism directed at the CIO is the best proof of its potency and possibilities. Referring back to his record as head of the organization, Lewis said he was prepared to listen "to anybody who wanted to criticize, or traduce or vituperate or just rave."

Those "who infest the columns of the public press with vile fulminations" that the policies of the CIO are "conceived and endorsed" by Communists, Nazis or Fascists "lie in their beards and lie in their bowels," he charged.

'OLD LADY GREEN'

"And," he added in a remark addressed to William Green, head of the AFL, "that goes for Old Lady Green down in New Orleans. As old as she is, she really should know better."

The CIO president's announcement that he would definitely retire from office caused an air of excitement at the convention which lasted until the elections at the final session.

Huge Press Corps Covers Convention

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22 — Clear evidence of the national interest in the CIO convention proceedings was the record-breaking "delegation" of newspapermen present to cover the sessions.

Well over 100 reporters attended, and they occupied half a dozen tables at the foot of the stage. Veteran labor leaders could recall no comparable turnout of newspapermen at any previous labor meeting.

Papers as far west as San Francisco and Seattle sent correspondents to Atlantic City, while the New York correspondent of the London News-Chronicle, who was among foreign correspondents present, sent close to a thousand words a day to his paper.

Hold Defense Involves Men As Well As Guns

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 23.—Calling attention to the public stand of the CIO on defense, and the necessity for protection of labor's rights and the promotion of economic and social security, the section of national defense in the report of the committee on officers' reports declares that real defense involves not only guns and munitions but dewense and betterment of social conditions as well.

"In the light of this program," the report says, "we believe that Pres. Lewis' report points to a real emergency calling for the immediate attention of this convention when it declares that there has been no enforcement whatever of labor standards which are now the law of the land.

"In spite of many pious declarations of policy, it is now a fact that 13.5 billions of dollars have been awarded in government defense contracts without any regard whatsoever to compliance with the Natl. Labor Relations Act and other similar legislation, and that in fact billions of dollars worth of orders have been awarded to proved violators of the law. The day after the election $122,000,000.00 was awarded to the Ford Motor Co., one of the most flagrant violators," the report adds.

WAR OR DEPRESSION

"It is plain that unless there is a sharp departure by the Administration from the present method of administering the defense program, we shall be faced with the dilemma of war or depression. The people of this nation want neither."

The defense section of the report also raised the demand for actual CIO representation on the Defense Advisory Commission in place of the present method of calling in CIO officials as individuals only without power to speak for CIO or to place CIO's proposals before the defense body.

RAP POLICIES

A hard-hitting section of the defense report bluntly charged that "the vacillations of the Defense Advisory Commission on labor policy," plus huge gifts of contracts to labor-hating corporations, "serve to promote further violations of the law and threaten to break down labor's hard-won gains."

"The elaboration of a true defense program for the U. S. must give no room to appeasement of the corporate and financial interests of our nation," the report concludes.

"The heart of that program must be a defense of the interests and rights of wage-earners of our nation. The CIO will help achieve this by the aggressive presentation of its views and the militant prosecution of its policies. There is no other way."

Report Pays Tribute To Lewis Policies

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 23.—"We pay tribute to our leader, John L. Lewis." With these words, the committee on officers' reports closed its survey of the CIO based on Pres. Lewis' report read to the convention delegates.

"Under his constant guidance, our young organization has in five short years blanketed our nation with powerful organizations that are the best safeguards not only of the workers' wages and working conditions, but of the very democracy of these United States which we are so determined to maintain and defend," the conclusion states.

"Without exception during those years, again and again the full weight of his personal prestige and his organizational assistance has been thrown behind our affiliated organizations in their times of crisis.

"Your committee feels humble in its inability adequately to express to this man its full measure of respect, loyalty and support. We are proud to have worked shoulder to shoulder with him in building this glorious organization. We are confident that he will continue to work with us for the welfare of the men and women of this nation, his understanding and courage.

Junior CIO 'Delegates' At Sessions

Heading the delegation of up-to-two-year-olds was James B. Carey, Jr., son of the CIO Secretary. Others also present but not voting were junior members of the families of Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of the American Communications Assn.; Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union; and Sec.-Treas. David McDonald of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

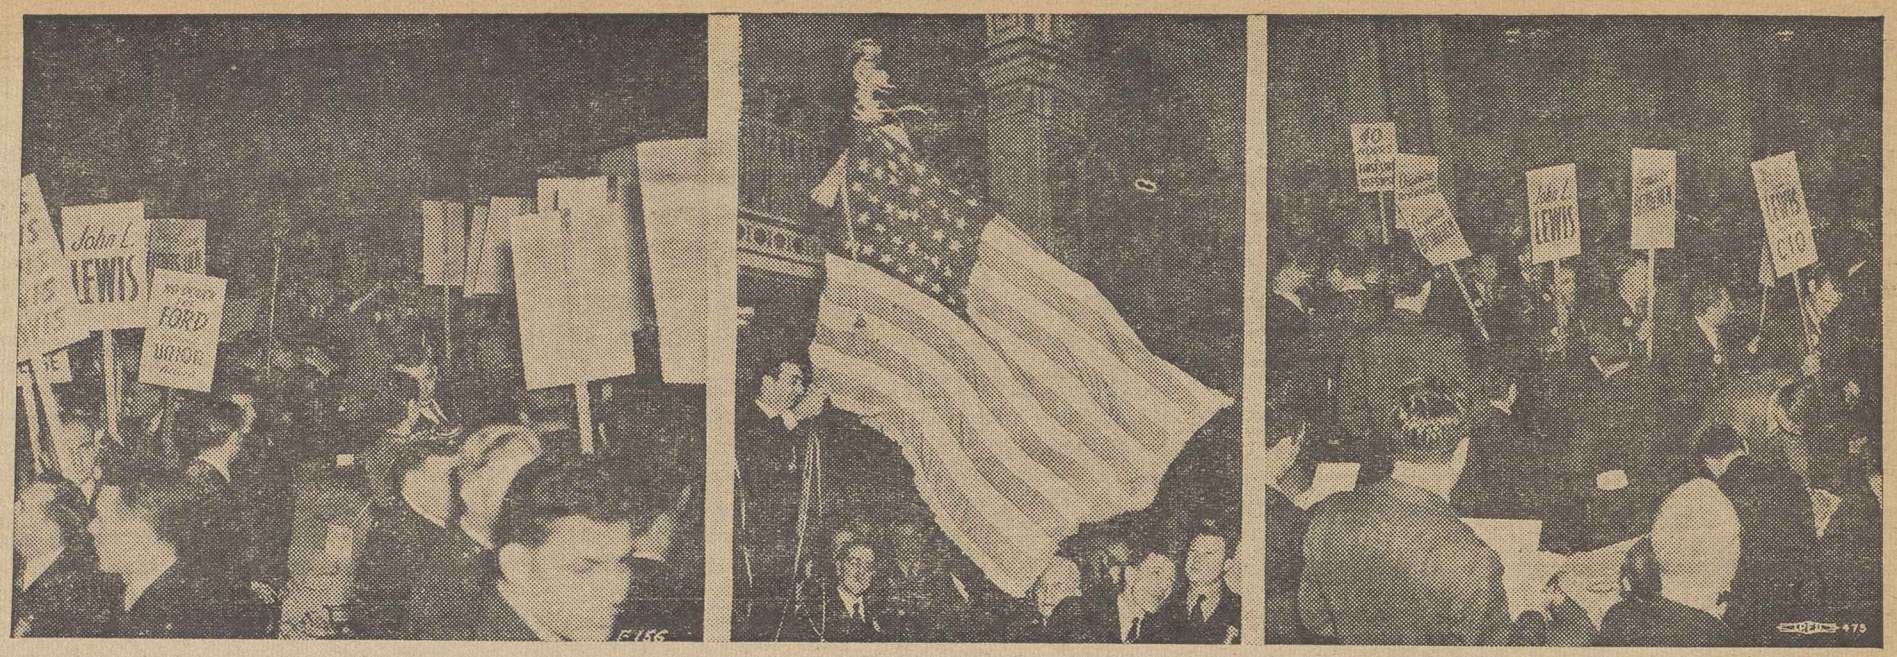
Only person to be escorted from the hall under protest was an unidentified member of the younger set, who unsuccessfully heckled during one of the most important convention speeches.

'DELEGATE': The younger generation was very much in evidence at Atlantic City. Here's James B. Carey, Jr., son of the CIO secretary. He was born during the 1938 convention at Pittsburgh.

Murray's Acceptance Address

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22—In his acceptance speech today at the CIO convention, Philip Murray, newly elected president of the CIO, pledged to give his "untiring efforts" to continuing the work of this "mighty organization" until it has attained the goal of organizing the millions of unorganized workers laid down by John L. Lewis at the San Francisco convention last year.

Calling upon all affiliated unions to give him their full support, Murray declared that "hard work is needed" and asked them to help him perfect an organization that will give to the nation a strong, united and militant union, keeping the CIO what it is today, "the most potent influence in the United States."



He warned that "petty bickering must be stopped" and "the tongue of the scandalmonger must be still."

EXPLAINS POSITION

Since much confusion has been spread by the press on the subject of labor unity, Murray said he wished to clarify his position and make it plain that he had no intention of rushing through an agreement with the AFL. He said he wanted it clearly understood that he was opposed to any "shot-gun agreement" with the AFL.

The people of the United States, Murray said, when they think of unity are thinking of continuity of production. The CIO has done more to promote that kind of unity, he declared, than any organization in the country, by promoting the process of orderly collective bargaining. By working to get signed agreements with industry, more substantial unity has been achieved than could ever be achieved under "any will of the wisp unity" suggested by the AFL, he said.

"I pledge my effort, my energy and my life toward the attainment of your objectives," Murray told the delegates in concluding his speech.

Election of Pres. Murray Features Convention

Officers' Reports, which strongly seconded the policies laid down and the actions taken by Pres. Lewis, were indication of the attitude of the vast majority of the overwhelming majority of the delegates.

REPORT COMMITTTEE

The Report Committee, headed by CIO Vice-Pres. Reid Robinson, praised the "realistic, hard-hitting" document" submitted by Lewis to the convention.

"It lays down the basic principle of social progress," the committee declared, "and records the pride we all feel with the accomplishments of our magnificent organization."

During the discussion on the Officers' Reports, Philip Murray took the floor for another in the series of stirring addresses which featured the sessions.

"Personally, I disagreed with the President of the national organization in the recent elections," Murray said, "but I did not disagree with him upon some fundamental issues nor did he disagree with me upon fundamental questions.

"Rumors have been circulated throughout the country about division between Pres. Lewis and me, and division between other officers.

NO DIVISION

"A division between other officers, Pres. Lewis and myself have never been true, and I trust in God that it never will be.

"The heat, the so-called hot spot, has been here in my heart for a few days," Murray continued ". . . I disdain hypocrisy. I don't want the presidency of the CIO. I have no aspirations. I am content to plug along the mill gates and meet the people whom I have known throughout life."

One of the most spirited debates of the convention occurred on the subject of labor unity. The committee on officers' reports, after having traced the CIO's difficulty in finding a peace formula that would preserve the benefits of industrial unionism, commended the CIO negotiating committee's efforts and said that "any program for unity should involve a joint convention of all labor organizations, including those of the AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods and the CIO, with existing jurisdictional differences to be adjusted in such a convention."

Delegates representing the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Textile Workers Union argued that the incoming officers of the CIO "be instructed immediately to resume negotiations with the AFL" in the hope of effecting a labor unity plan. Speaking for this view were Franz Daniel and Hyman Blumberg of the ACWA and George Baldanzi of the TWU.

MANY SPEAKERS

The previous policy of the CIO was upheld by a number of speakers, among them Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy, Van A. Bittner and John Owens of the United Mine Workers, Pres. James Carey and James Matles of the electrical workers, Neal Weaver of the packinghouse workers, Walter Burke of the Wisconsin CIO Council, Michael Quill of the transport workers and Lewis.

Of the eight men who founded CIO five years ago, he recalled, some "have kept the faith, while others have fallen by the wayside." Declaring that he came from a fighting breed of men, the CIO head asserted that he "had no illusions" about peace terms five years ago and "I have none today. I am not weary of the fight."

'AN EXPLORER'

"We have explored every proposition," he continued. "I have been an explorer in the AFL. Explore the mind of Bill Green? Why Bill and I had offices next door each other in the same corridor for ten years. I was a member of the same Executive Council that he was for one year. I have done a lot of exploring in Bill's mind—and I give you my word that there's nothing there."

The bosses of the AFL, Lewis pointed out, for years have stubbornly resisted industrial organization and the addition of millions of new members to the AFL unions.

"Why?" he asked, "because that would disturb the balance of power." Both Dubinsky of the garment workers and Zaritsky of the hat and cap workers "took the easy way" and went back alone into the AFL, he said. "If there is anybody else in the CIO who wants to take the easy way, let them go on."

The workers want to join the CIO, and if the unions of the CIO are smashed in the process of being "absorbed" by the AFL, all American workers will suffer, the CIO head cautioned.

HILLMAN SPEAKS

The attitude of Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers on the subject of labor unity, and domestic and foreign policies for the United States was explained to the convention in a lengthy speech by the retiring CIO vice-president on Nov. 20.

Hillman, who said that he appeared before the delegates in a dual capacity as CIO official and U. S. Defense Commission member, praised the work of the affiliated unions during the past few years, and promised that the Administration, through the defense organization, would help protect labor's interests.

Spiking rumors that the ACWA might leave the CIO, Hillman said his union will always "state its position firmly, as to what we believe ought to be the policies of our organization; and as in the past will submit to the democratic process of a majority decision of our organization."

DEFENSE ACTIVITIES

Hillman reviewed the activities of the Defense Commission since its inception in June, declared its labor division had made a remarkable record in the relatively short period of its existence, and urged that criticism of that body be made only after consideration of its youth and the enormity of its problems.

Under the national defense program, he predicted that labor would make steady gains and that many of the economic and social problems which have beset the country will be gradually eliminated or solved. Observance of labor legislation is a basic principle in the government's defense program, he reiterated.

"And so," Hillman said, "I have no doubt, I know that labor will cooperate, and that the CIO will do its share, as it is now doing."

The ACW leader attacked these groups in the labor movement "which scorn the democratic process" and take their orders "from Rome, Berlin or Moscow."

"We must warn our young membership not to be misled by the fine speeches they will make," he said, "by the confessions of loyalty and by their agreement. Their loyalty is to someone else. . . These people are a menace to the labor movement."

A statement of policy reaffirming the Americanism of the CIO and rejecting "consideration of any policies emanating from totalitarianism, dictatorships and foreign ideologies such as Naziism, Communism and Fascism," was presented to the convention by the resolutions committee.

It was passed without opposition following a motion by Chairman Thomas Kennedy to close debate on the subject. Kennedy pointed out that the statement simply reaffirmed the policies of the CIO and was not presented "in any spirit of red-baiting or witch-hunting."

Stop U. S. Contracts To Law Violators!

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 22.—Here are excerpts from John L. Lewis' speech urging passage of a resolution by the CIO convention demanding the government stop awarding profitable contracts to violators of the Wagner Act and other labor legislation.

This subject of government contracts is important because it runs to the question of whether the law of the United States will be enforced on the rich and poor alike, or merely the poor.

For nearly three years your organization has been seeking this relief, many verbal conferences with the President of the United States, and voluminous exchange of correspondence with him referring to his legal rights to issue an executive order, and in legislative activities before the Congress, where three times a measure was passed through the Senate providing that these contracts should not be awarded to law violators.

The President did not want to issue an order for the reason, (a) that he did not possess the authority, and (b) because he did not want to do it.

HAS AUTHORITY

We demonstrated in a legal way that he did have the authority, and cited the authority under the statute of the Federal Government. In addition to that the Comptroller General of the United States has issued a formal opinion saying that the authority did exist for the issuance of an executive order; and again the Attorney General of the United States has entered an opinion which says that Government departments do have the authority to withhold government contracts to any concern or corporation, individual or partnership, that does not live up to the Wagner Labor Relations Act as set forth in decisions by the Board.

So what remains? Nothing more and nothing less but for the President to determine whether or not he will give labor this relief which it has been praying for for three years, a relief given to labor three times by the Senate of the United States in a legislative enactment and blocked by the Democratic Party control of the House organization. I mean by that the Speaker and Majority Leader, and the Committee on Rules.

The Committee on Rules has each time refused to grant a rule that would permit the members of the House of Representatives to vote "yes" or "no" on this proposition. And I might tell you, in passing, that each time this bill has passed the Senate we have had pledged to us in the House of Representatives a majority number of those congressmen who, if given a chance to vote, would have passed this bill, but the House leadership, and the House Committee on Rules said no, and the White House has never raised its hand or its voice to say to the House organization or the Committee on Rules, "The democratic processes would require that the people's representatives be given a chance to express themselves on this subject."

So what, you exponents of democracy, so what?

This law should be enforced. The record of this convention says thirteen billion, five hundred million dollars worth of defense contracts have been let without a question being asked by governmental authorities as to whether these corporations were or were not in compliance with the law of the land as enacted by the Federal Congress. Neither has the factor of competitive relationship been involved in it, as demonstrated by the fact that out of thirteen billion five hundred million dollars worth of contracts awarded, Bethlehem Steel Corporation took one billion two hundred million dollars worth of that business.

Why? Because by defying the Wagner Act they were able to maintain a wage structure from eight to ten per cent less than the prevailing wage structure in the steel industry. And another factor, because Bethlehem Steel used foreign iron ore coming into this country duty free. They use 90 per cent of all the iron ore that comes to America, and they do not have to pay for iron ore mined in American mines by American workmen receiving an American wage. They get their iron ore in Chile and in Cuba.

Do any of you know anything about the conditions that prevail in the iron ore mines of Chile, where they take what they call the Chilean peons and use them from three and a half to four years, and send them home to die, to die. That ore, mined under those conditions and transferred to Sparrow's Point in Buffalo in ships owned by Bethlehem Steel, comes in competition with the iron ore mined in America's iron mines where Americans work. That is the reason Bethlehem Steel was able to take these contracts.

They could take government contracts at will because of these advantages; low wages in their own plants here, and iron ore that was smeared with the blood of the peons of Chile and Cuba. In doing so the government of the United States was competitively unfair to those corporations here in our own country who for reasons of benevolence or reasons of expedience paid an American wage, collectively bargained with their employes, and had contracts with the CIO—they were penalized day by day by this condition.

They found themselves at a commercial disadvantage, so that before the so-called war emergency came along Bethlehem Steel was able to take 60 per cent of all contracts awarded by the government of the United States for anything they manufactured, ships, armor plate, guns, munitions, steel, rails, equipment of any character; and that is what they took. They said to themselves, "It probably won't be expedient for us to take it all; we will just take 60 per cent." And they have taken a billion two hundred million dollars worth of those contracts out of the thirteen billion, five hundred million dollars worth awarded.

And nobody stops them. The President can stop them, and he can restore the competitive relationship in the steel industry and in other industry by insisting that all who have the advantage of these contracts and who accept the public money shall obey the laws enacted by the representatives of that same public, the people.

Final Session

Final deadline for this issue of The CIO NEWS came shortly before adjournment of the third constitutional convention. As a result, news of the final session is not covered in this issue, but will be found in next week's CIO NEWS.

John L. Lewis Takes His Stand In Behalf of the Under-Privileged

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 22 — Following are excerpts from the opening day speech of John L. Lewis to the third constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

If I wished to paraphrase the immortal words uttered at Gettysburg, I might say that three score months ago a new union was formed; conceived in liberty and the spirit of progress and forever dedicated to the proposition that the workers in our modern industries should be organized into industrial unions. Today we are engaged in a great struggle to determine whether a union so conceived and so dedicated can endure. And you my friends and delegates to the third constitutional convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations must make answer to that question.

Like every great movement the success of this movement of yours can be measured by the degree of opposition anywhere to an impotent organization or any movement that lacks virility or force, because men do not need from their places of security to oppose an organization of that character.

They oppose those mighty organizations that have the strength and the vision and the enterprise and the courage to push farther in the fight against the exploiters of labor and the human race.

Trust Leadership

Introduce bickering and controversy and cavil as a daily diet into the free forums of an organized labor movement, preach lack of confidence in the accredited leaders of the organization, belittle them, assail them in the press and the public platform, in the highways and in the market places. That is an ancient procedure.

You all know it and yet some of us are prone to become victims of that ancient device and when we do then the efficiency of administration and the attainment or organizational objectives are passed and the mighty energy of millions is consumed in internal contention and argument, and as always under those conditions, thine adversaries laugh. Thine adversaries laugh. And in the night there is the sound of revelry and rejoicing in their camp.

So ask your leaders to do their business and engage thine adversaries in combat. You know your adversaries will fear him just to the degree that you have confidence in him, just to that degree. And as you withdraw your confidence then the courage of your enemy geometrically progresses.

CIO's Future

This organization has saved billions and billions of dollars of national income for its own members and for the people of this country. It has a record of distinction and accomplishment, made possible by the faith and the energy and the collective enterprise and the loyalty of those teeming members.

It can go farther in achieving its other objectives, bringing beneficial rewards to its members and making a contribution to the nation's welfare if you so elect. But if you consume your time in criticism and slander, villification, vituperating each against the other, you won't have an organization long, and your membership at home who will suffer will hold you responsible for that failure. There have been signs during the past year that our efficiency was not what it should be.

Save America First

Perhaps at times we have concerned ourselves with trying to impose our opinions on the whole world with respect to the philosophies and political ideaologies of the various countries before we put our own house in order. America's house is not in order. And I suggest now as I have before publicly that we could do a better job in acting as the moral preceptors of the world if we were able to show a definite accomplishment at home and a home economy that took into consideration the rights and well-being of all Americans.

You know in eight of our Southern states there are ten million five hundred thousand Americans that cannot vote. That is a lot of Americans. Three and a half million of them are Negroes, but seven million of them are white. Yet they cannot vote because in order to vote they have to pay a cumulative poll tax and they cannot take the milk out of their children's mouths to pay that money because their basis of existence is so low and their subsistence is so pitiful that they cannot pay the economic penalty that is imposed upon them to attain the right to vote.

Government by representation in the South? What are we going to do about it? It is just one of the things that need attention. Some of you may hope that the Democratic Pary will do something about it. Well, go and hope. But don't expect that that kind of hope will ever bring the right to vote to the 10,500,000 Americans in the Southern states who would like to have the same right that you have to vote. To accomplish an objective of that character is one of the things for which this movement was founded and it is one of the unfinished jobs ahead of labor in America.

It has been recently stated that there are 45,000,000 hungry people in America. That is an understatement. There are in fact 52,000,000 people in this country who do not get enough to eat and who are undernourished, with all that means and who live in poverty and who have to deny themselves the ordinary requirements of everyday existence.

Is human life worth nothing? But there are 52,000,000 people in this country who do not have enough to eat and there are 23,000,000 farmers in America who cannot sell their foodstuffs at prices that will give them a return. What a paradox! Fifty-two million shrunken bellies and a shrunken belly means that the owner of it will become a victim of human ailments and diseases and finally die before his time. That is what that means. And the children in the homes of the 52,000,000 suffer from malnutrician and become ill because their little bellies do not have in them the food they require. And their fathers and mothers sit and watch them die and weep.

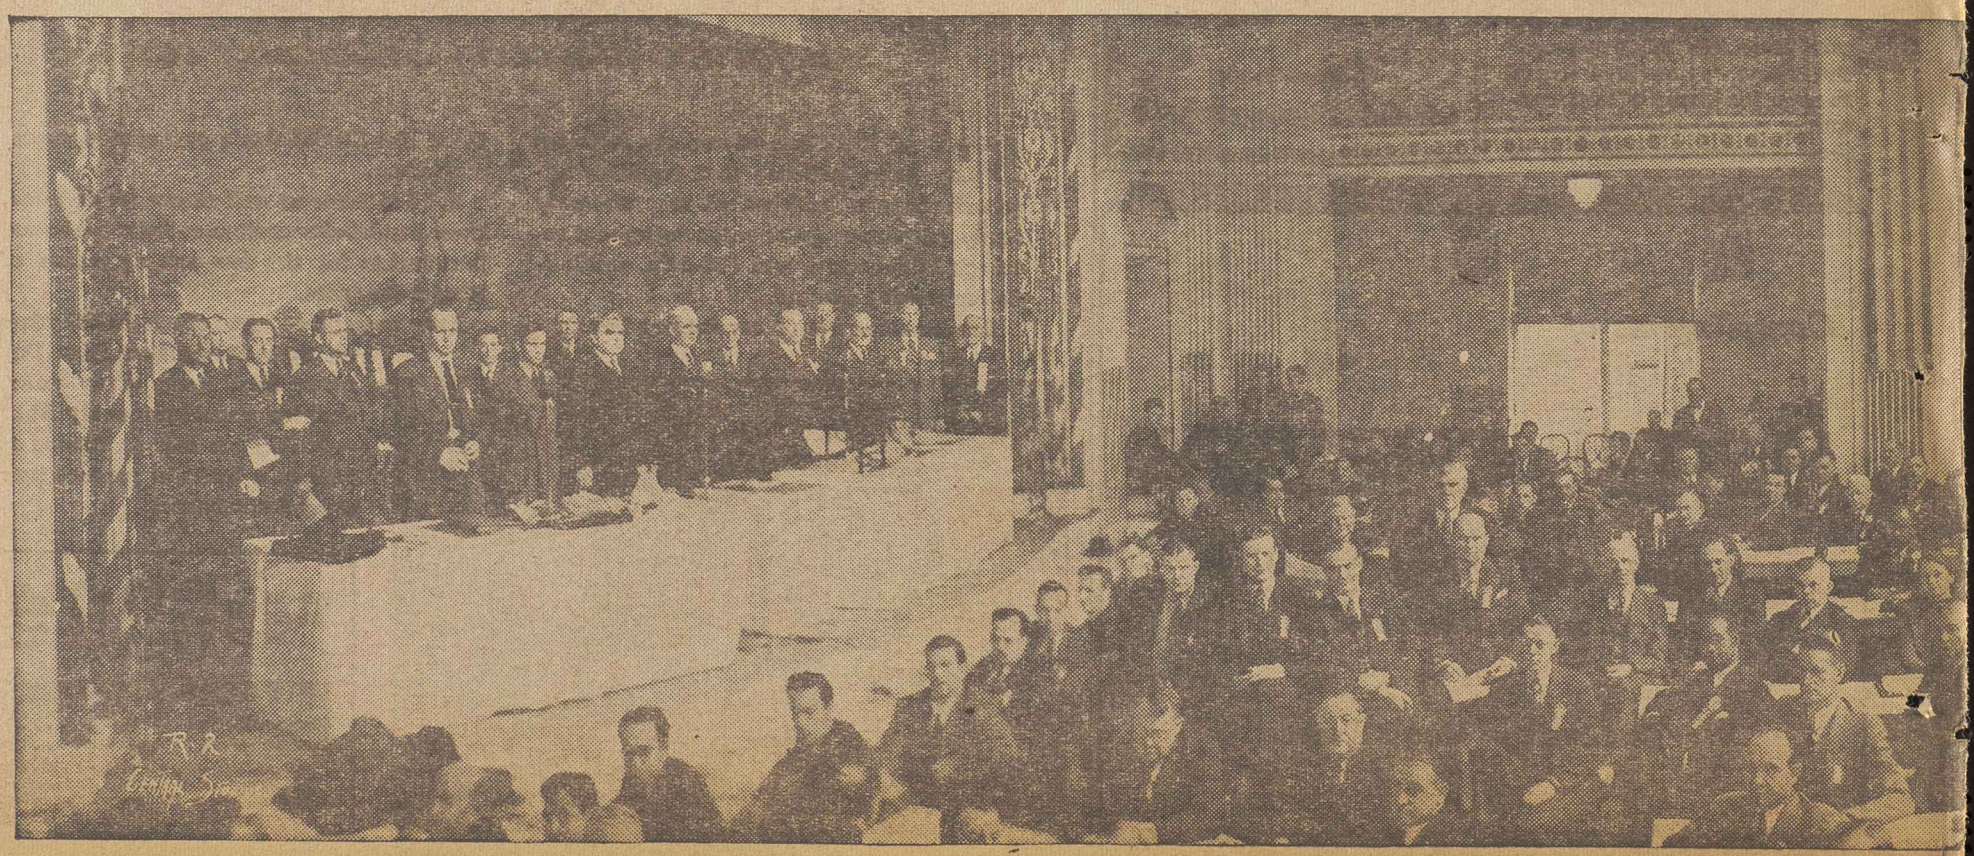
And then in the face of that condition some of us become so confused that we do not hold to accountability those of our statesemn who in long years have done nothing for that 52,000,000 and make no promises to do anything for them in the future.

End Bickering

Well, what are you going to do about it? You are well fed. So am I. You are not hungry. Neither am I. What are we going to do? Well, we might be doing something on that subject while we spend our time in bickering and dissension. I prefer to reserve my energy and what little strength I may possess to use it in furthering constructively and objectively a policy for labor, and in defending the rights to participate in the bounties of this nation of these 52,000,000 people.

I associate myself with the 52,000,000 shrunken bellies in this country and I am for them regardless of any consideration, regardless of their creed or their color, their previous condition of servitude or anything else. They are Americans. They are human beings.

And I am conscious of the fact that in undertaking to aid that unprivileged, that mighty unprivileged segment of our population, that I am making a contribution to the well-being and the security and the future happiness of the rest of the population of America.



And I am perfectly conscious of the fact that in making that contribution I am making a contribution to the perpetuity of our established form of government, to the preservation of our free institutions and to the constant upholding of that flag — and long may it wave! I yield to no man the right to challenge my Americanism nor the Americanism of the organizations which at this moment I represent.

"They Lie..."

For those who infest the columns of the public press with their vile fulminations saying that the policies of the CIO are conceived and endorsed and supported and engineered and administered by the adherents of any Communist philosophy or Nazi philosophy or Fascist philosophy or any other philosophy, I say they lie in their beard and they lie in their bowels. My remark goes for Old Lady Green down in New Orleans, too, and old as she is, she really should know better.

No, my friends, I came to this convention to make a report of my services as your President, and to listen to anyone who wanted to criticize or vituperate or just rave. It is quite all right. I won't be with you long. I have done my work. In just a day or two I will be out of this office which at the moment I occupy. I shall hope that whoever you elect as my successor, that you will give him your support without stint and go back to your membership and ask them to give him a break also, because he will need it. I ought to know . . .

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY ISSUE

THE CIO NEWS

Official Weekly Organ, Congress of Industrial Organizations

VOL. III—No. 48 WASHINGTON, D. C. NOVEMBER 25, 1940

Five Years Of CIO

IN THE past five years great changes have come to pass. Millions of people have been made free to join together with their fellows in unions, and to bargain with their employers for better conditions and a better living.

Five years ago these same people were subject to an industrial dictatorship. The corporations dictated their wages, their working conditions and how they might live their lives, leaving them no choice but to submit or starve.

Since 1935, the frontiers of democracy have been extended into the biggest mills and factories of the land.

THE whole face of industrial America has been changed by CIO in the past five years. It has been the greatest upsurge of labor in history.

The CIO has brought greater comfort, security and happiness into the lives of millions of men, women and children.

It has brought about the enactment of laws to improve the lot of the many. It has defended these labor and social laws from the attacks of reaction. It has made the voice of the working people heard in the councils of the nation.

Through the CIO, the workers have won a new freedom to work out their own destiny and to push forward to new achievements for themselves and for humanity.

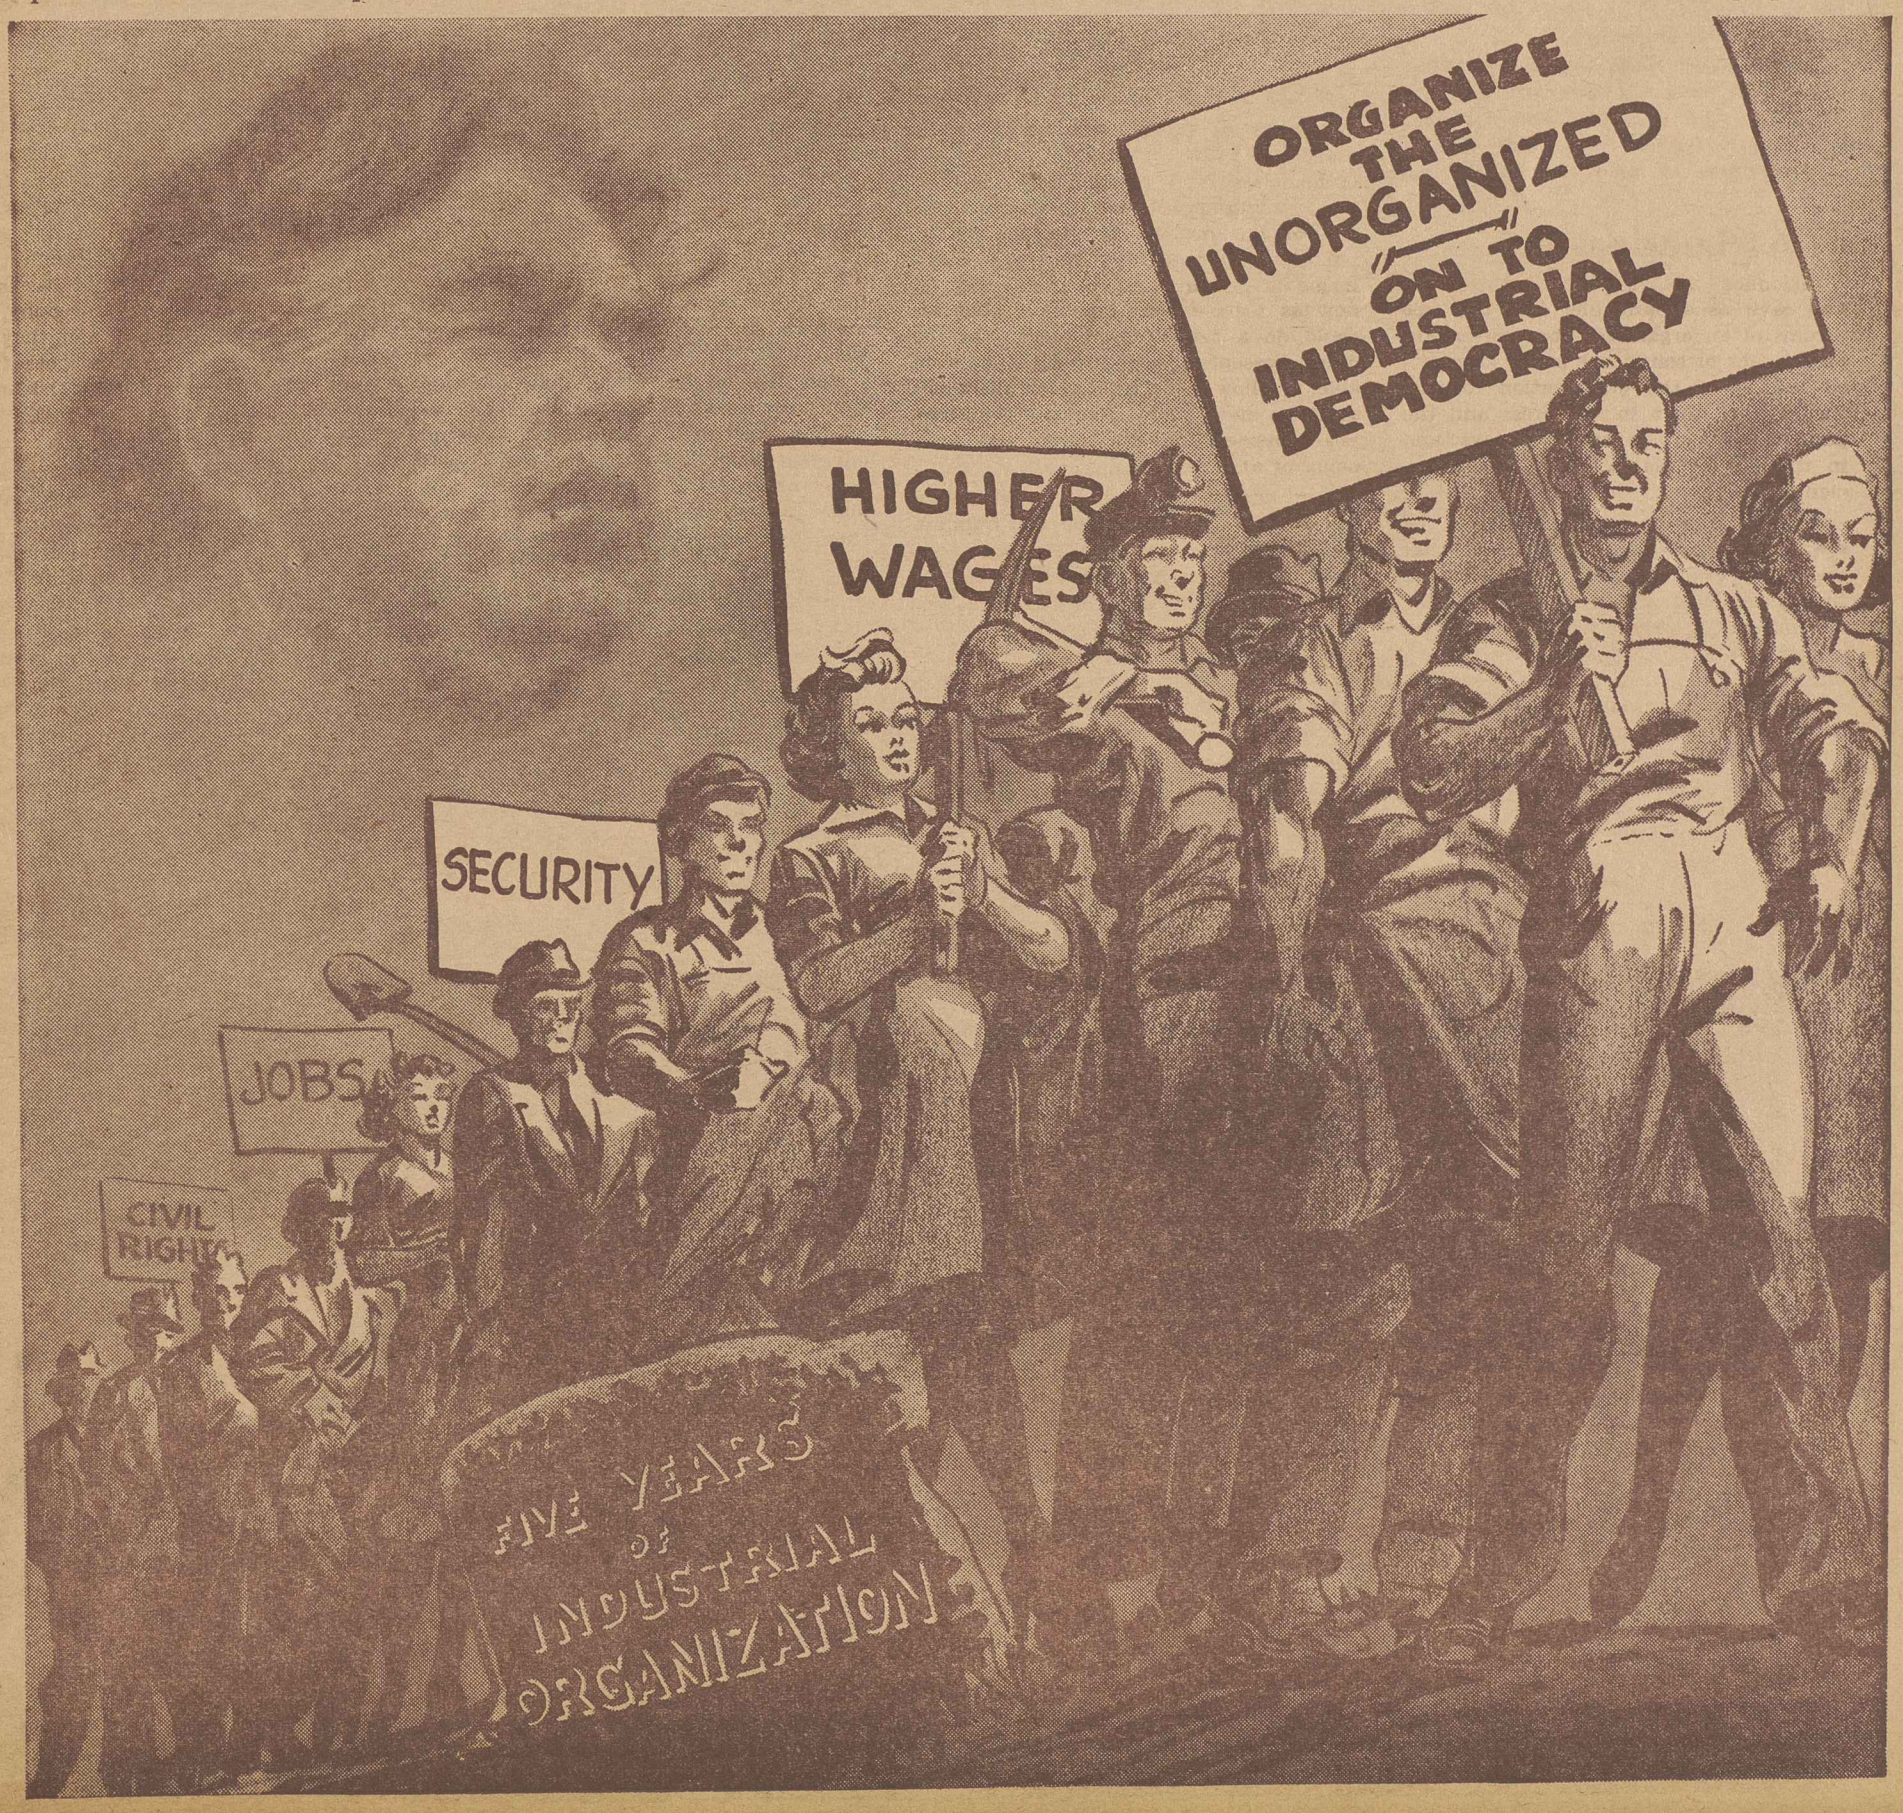
THE story of the CIO is a story of people. It is the story of you and your family and the neighbors along the street.

You are part of the forward-marching army of progress depicted below, along with John L. Lewis and the other fighting leaders who answered the cry of the unorganized and came to their aid.



As head of the mighty United Mine Workers of America, Lewis knew that American industry could not long continue half slave and half free. For their own protection and to advance labor's cause, this union and other established organizations threw their weight and their resources into the great crusade to organize the nation's unorganized workers.

Labor's enemies used brutal violence, cunning intrigue and lying propaganda in their efforts to stop the CIO. They poured the vials of their wrath on the unbowed head of John L. Lewis, because he was the spokesman and leader of the millions they sought to keep in oppression.

All such attacks failed, and the Congress of Industrial Organizations today is a mighty and living monument to the vision, courage and determination of millions of working people and their dauntless leaders.

THIS Fifth Anniversary issue of The CIO NEWS is published in tribute to five glorious years of labor achievement. If it can give its readers a clearer idea of how the CIO came to be; how the CIO functions and serves; what the CIO aims to do; and how we can all do our part to build our movement—it will have served its purpose.

"It Never Ceases..."

Thousands of Men and Women Work To Build A Stronger CIO

THE organizing work of the CIO never ceases. It is hard day-to-day work in which hundreds of thousands of people take part. It has its dramatic moments, its big pushes which from time to time bring union recognition to a whole sector of industry. It has its election campaigns, its strikes when there is no other recourse, its great mass meetings and demonstrations. But most of the time it is plain slogging, in which conviction, endurance, loyalty, persistence and hard work count more than the emotional enthusiasm of the moment.

The immediate purpose of all this is better pay, a steadier job, easier working conditions and in general a better life for you and your family. So it is upon your efforts and support, in the long run, that everything depends. Even the CIO, with all its resources, its organizers and its experienced leadership, can't help those who don't help themselves.

So the organizing work of the CIO is a combination of effort on the part of all the most alert and active workers and the organizing staff.

It includes the talks you have about the union with your fellow workers and neighbors; the distribution of leaflets; the calling of meetings; the signing up of new members; the collection of dues; and hundreds of other similar duties in which everyone can help.

When enough workers are thus organized and ready to stick together, then the union as their representative approaches the employer and asks him to enter into a collective bargaining agreement. If the union's right to represent the workers is questioned, there may be a Labor Board election to decide the question.

The bargaining for an agreement gives you an opportunity through your representatives to have some say as to what your wages and conditions shall be. When the contract is signed it registers your gains and sets forth some kind of democratic procedure for settling your grievances and protecting your rights.

BUT the organizing work of the CIO does not cease after an agreement has been won. It has to continue every day. The strength of the union has to be maintained, if the agreement is to be preserved and if a better one is to be obtained when it expires.

You and your organizers have to keep on the job all the time, to see that all members pay their dues and support their union, to sign up new members and to push the work of organization into other plants which may undermine your conditions, if they too are not unionized.

IF all this work seems hard and often discouraging, if you sometimes become disgusted at the apathy of a lot of people who seem unwilling to take the least pains to improve their lot, don't forget that the sum total of all the organizing efforts that the CIO has put into motion has achieved amazing successes and that you are part of a movement that is constantly growing and gaining new ground.

Elsewhere in this issue of The CIO NEWS, you will read how the CIO succeeded in organizing huge industries like steel, automobiles, electrical manufacturing and the rest—and of the further goals it has set itself with every prospect of success.

On this page are illustrations that show one very important fact. When the workers are given a chance to express their wishes in Labor Board elections, the great majority of them leave no doubt that they want to be represented by the CIO.

Amazing Success

Every year, the number of workers' votes cast for the CIO has been many times greater than those cast for the old-fashioned craft unions of the AFL, for so-called independents or for no union. And the trend of these elections has been increasingly in favor of the CIO.

Just glance at the following official figures, on which the charts on this page are based. They include only Labor Board elections held during the past twelve months.

AUTOMOBILES: 160,560 votes for the CIO; less than 50,000 votes for the AFL and other opposition.

PACKING: 8,426 votes for the CIO, only 2,220 for the AFL, independents and no union.

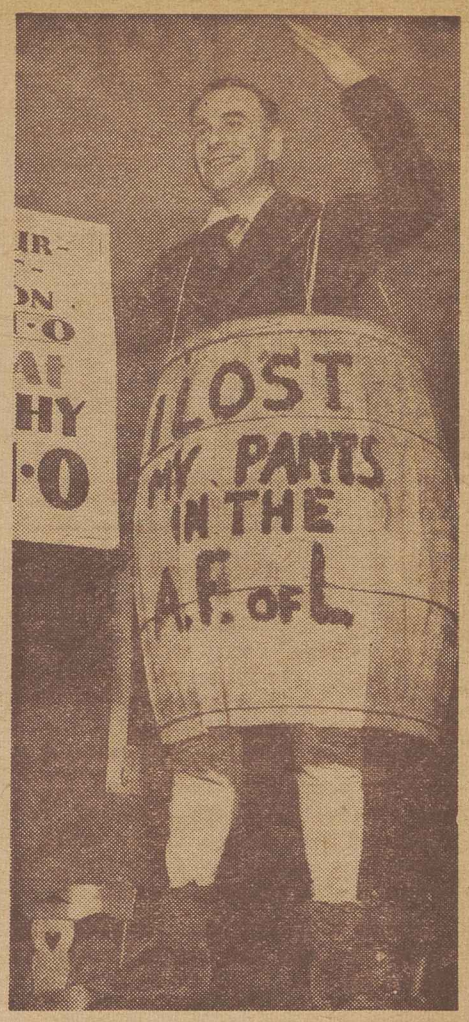
STEEL: 8,013 votes for the CIO, 3,196 against.

The Tasks Ahead

WHAT are the biggest organizing tasks ahead of the CIO today? Every one of the affiliated unions has important organizing work of its own, in which it counts on the never-failing help of the whole CIO.

But the report of President John L. Lewis to the Atlantic City convention calls attention to the following four main concentration points:

1. The drive to organize the huge plants of the Ford Motor Co., the one automobile company that still resists the sweep of union organization. In this drive, the CIO is sharing expenses with the United Automobile Workers and rendering every other possible aid.



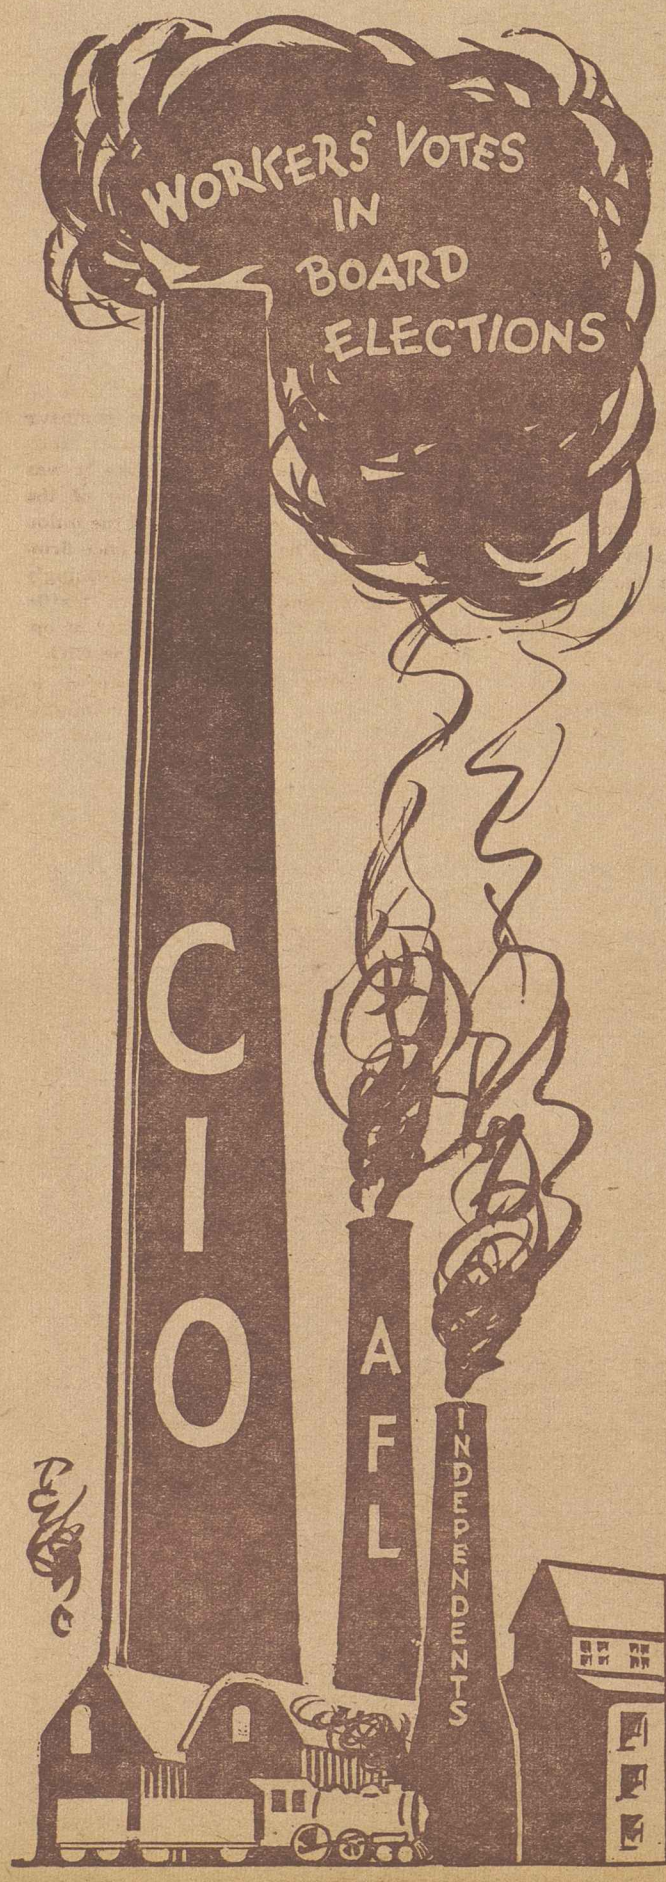
2. The campaign to complete organization in the steel industry, by unionizing the Bethlehem Steel Co. and the other "Little Steel" corporations.

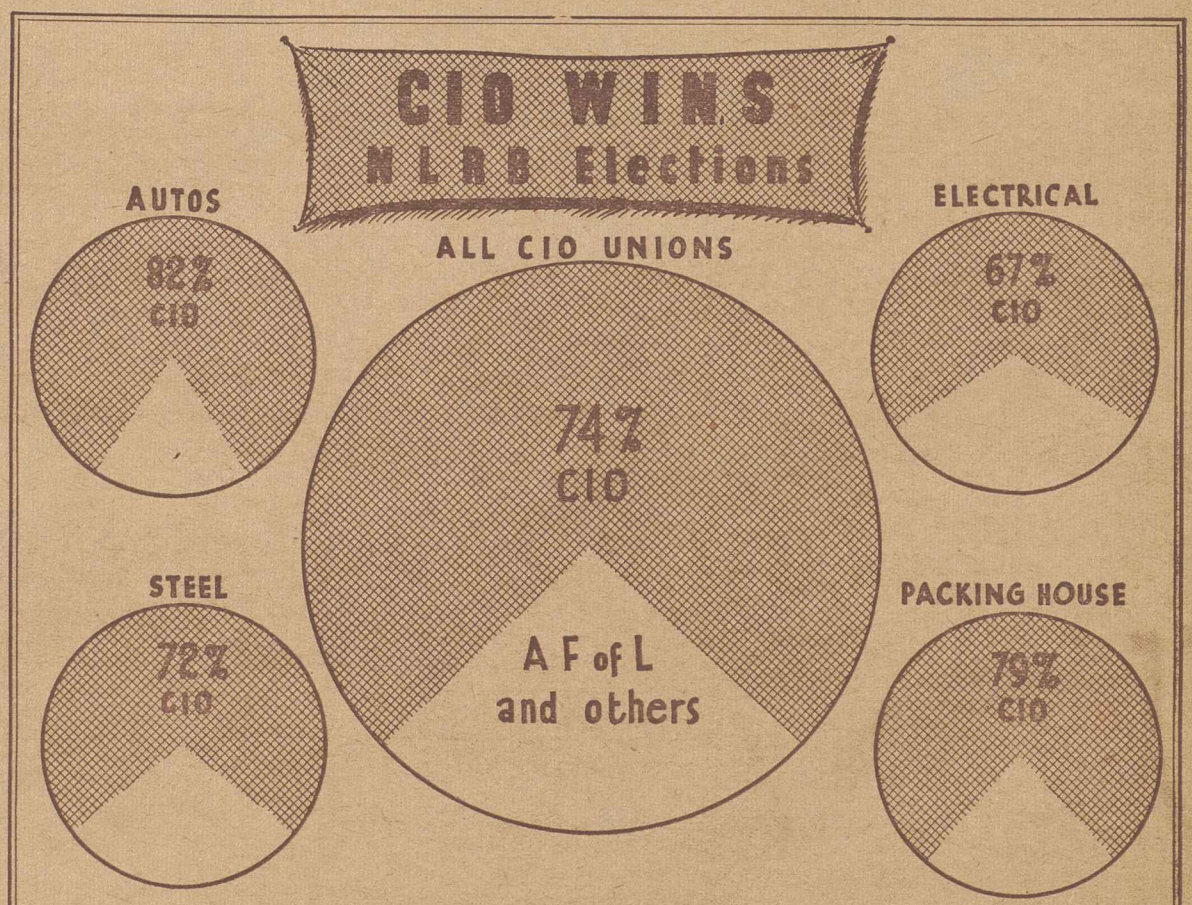
3. Organization of the rapidly expanding aircraft industry.

4. The drive to organize the lumber industry, in which national CIO is rendering direct aid to the International Woodworkers of America.

The AFL failed to organize the mass production industries, among other reasons, because it was not willing to supply the money, the energy, the central direction and the right kind of leadership. The CIO has succeeded, and is still succeeding, because it does all these things and concentrates all its efforts on the main task of organizing the unorganized.

That's the kind of movement you are part of, when you belong to the CIO.





No exaggeration! Losing of pants in the AFL was scarcely news until the CIO came along to show that not only could trousers be retained but new gains amassed for the workers. The man pictured here helped the CIO Packinghouse Workers win a big Labor Board election victory at his plant.

Ladies' Groups Benefit Unions

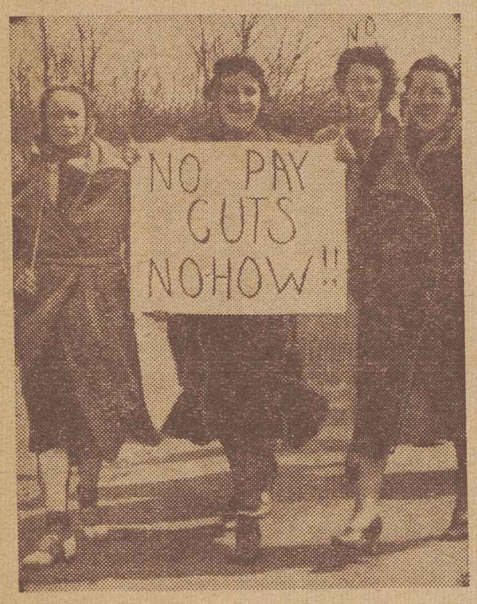
Much effective work, about which too little is heard, is being done by hundreds of CIO women's auxiliaries now functioning in locals affiliated with national and international CIO unions. Knowing that many a good union man's activity has been hindered by a wife who does not understand what unions stand for, CIO auxiliaries aim not only to aid directly the work of the union, but also to bring this understanding to the women relatives of union men.

The women's auxiliaries go on the principle that no woman who knows how unions have raised pay and improved working conditions can be hostile, or consider herself a union widow, because her husband spends an evening at a union meeting.

Proof of CIO popularity is in the statistics. Next time someone tries to tell you that the workers don't like the CIO, spring these tables on him. Taken from official sources, they show how CIO unions have swept the opposition aside in hundreds of secret ballot elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board during the past 12 months. Fact is, the CIO represents the democratic choice of millions.

Miracles For Millions

Five Billion Wage Increase, Vacations and Security Won By CIO For Members



SUPPOSE, for an instant, that your union were to disappear—suddenly, miraculously to be wiped out?

What would happen to your wages, your hours of work, your security, your peace of mind?

If the history of the non-union past is any guide, the answer is simple. Your wages would be cut, your hours of work lengthened, your speed of production increased almost daily.

For CIO industrial unionism, as it ate into the strongholds of industrial dictatorship, brought a direct and steady flow of benefits to millions of Americans.

In its five years of existence, the CIO has added at least five billion dollars to the pay envelopes of American workers, according to estimates made by many economists.

Reporting to the convention of the Steel workers Organizing Committee last spring, officers cited "conservative economists" who figured that in the steel industry alone, wages had jumped 26% between 1935 and 1940. "Translated into dollars, this means a total annual increase in the pay envelopes of the wage earners in the industry of $200,000,000," that report said.

The United States Department of Labor, after looking into the wage situation, finds ample evidence of the unions' effectiveness. Back in 1935 average hourly wages in manufacturing industries were 55.9 cents; by the end of 1939 they'd risen to 66.2 cents.

That's plenty impressive. But when you look at the figures in the CIO-organized industries, you see the reason—and you see that CIO workers are doing even better. Here are the statistics on a few unionized industries:

	Sept. 1939	1935
Steel	76.1	61.2
Machinery	72.2	61.0
Automobiles	93.4	73.9
Aluminum	68.0	54.2
Metal smelting	70.0	55.6
Furniture	53.5	44.8
Oil Refining	96.9	80.1
Rubber tires	95.9	84.2
Bituminous coal	89.6	74.5
Anthracite coal	92.0	82.3

Many New Benefits

BEFORE CIO, the man in the mass production industry worked just about as long as the boss wanted him to work. Today it's a rare union contract that doesn't provide time-and-a-half wages for work done over 40 hours. And slowly but surely CIO unions are moving towards a goal of even shorter hours. Vacations with pay? Scarcer than teeth on a rooster before the CIO unions got on the job. Now almost every union-protected worker gets a week with pay, and plenty are getting two weeks or more.

Seniority? It doesn't take a very strong memory to remember the day when you were through at 40 or at 35 or even at 30—thrown on the ashcan with years of productive work still in you but with little chance of getting a new job. Today's CIO contracts establish rigidly protected seniority lists, and the older men, with heavy family responsibilities, are assured of steadier employment.

In the years B.C.I.O. (before CIO) men with justifiable gripes had to keep their mouths shut in order to keep their jobs open. Today, when the management gets unreasonable, you see your shop steward or your grievance committee and know that your case will get a fair trial before a jury of your peers.

Housing still has plenty of room for improvement; unfortunately neither the CIO nor any other single private group has the resources to do that vitally necessary job of rebuilding America into a land of slumless homes. But through its legislative activities, the CIO has pushed the government into making a start at public low-cost housing; and through its Construction Workers Union is helping to rid the building industry of the racketeering and high costs that have so long prevented private home-building for low income renters.

In the factory the CIO has taken some giant steps towards protecting workers' health. Better safety conditions, more cleanliness and regulation of speed-up are being translated into longer, more satisfactory lives for millions.

"The Good Old Days"

IF YOU'VE forgotten what conditions were like in the "good old days" of the open shop, read over this description of life aboard ship, as recalled by the National Maritime Union:

"Quarters were cramped and filthy. Food served to the crews on many ships was barely fit to eat. Sanitary conditions were deplorable—toilets on one ship were described as 'of the farm-rail fence' variety. One crew reported that stew had been served for dinner on 21 consecutive days. The blacklist was in full swing . . ."

Terror marked the steel towns. A newspaper article, read into the record of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, contained this description of Aliquippa, Pa., then bossed by Tom Girdler:

"An elaborate system of espionage permeated not only the plants but extended into the schools, churches, lodges and even the homes. Nothing was too small to pass unnoticed. The most innocuous remark was apt to be carried to the boss, perhaps twisted in the telling.

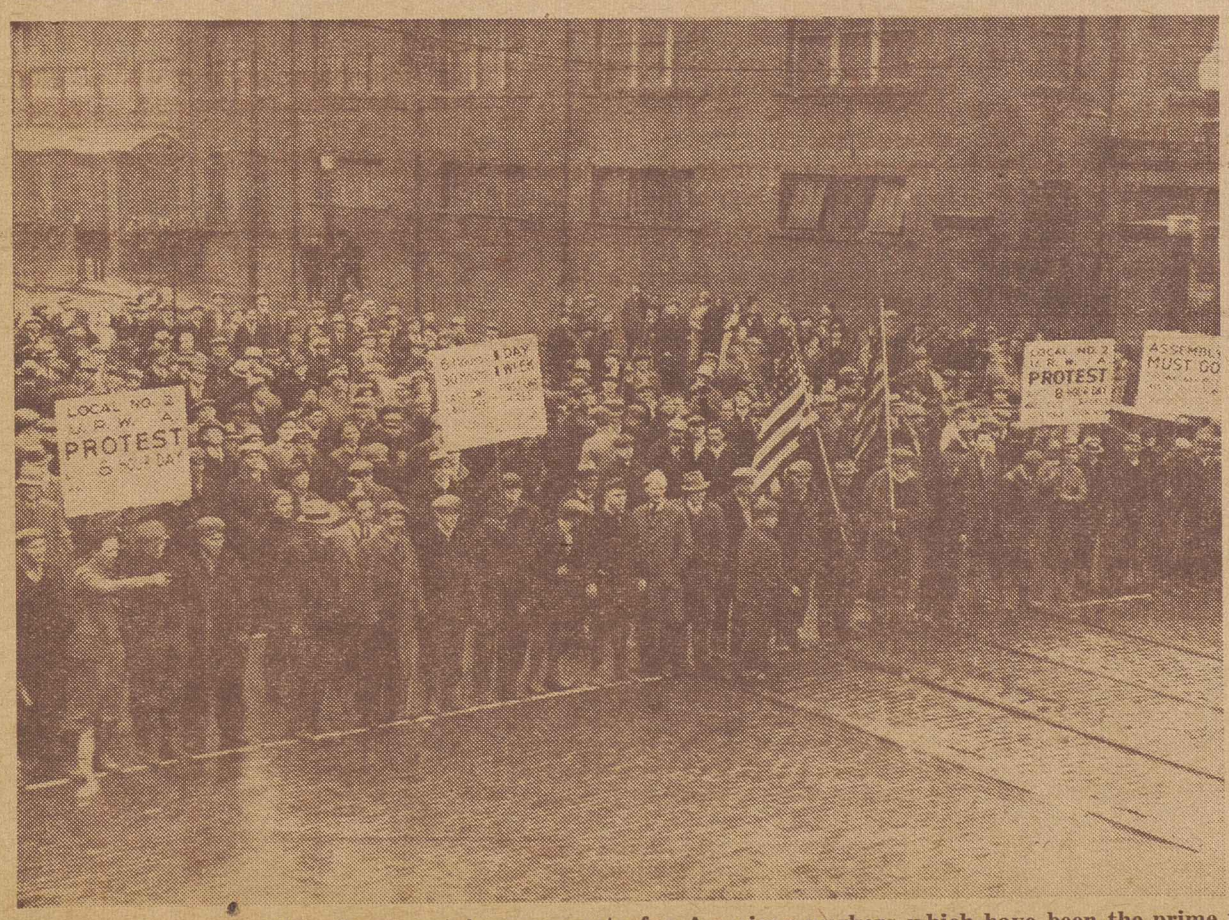
"A check was put against a man's name at the first offense, but if too many checks accumulated he was likely to find himself out of a job, perhaps run out of town."

TODAY Alliquippa is a union stronghold. So are most of the company towns in steel and other industries. Harlan County, Kentucky, where once it was worth your life to be a member of the United Mine Workers, now takes the union for granted. Maine's shoe towns, once firmly open shop, now function increasingly under union conditions. Southern textile barons, though still showing plenty of opposition, are learning to accept the CIO.

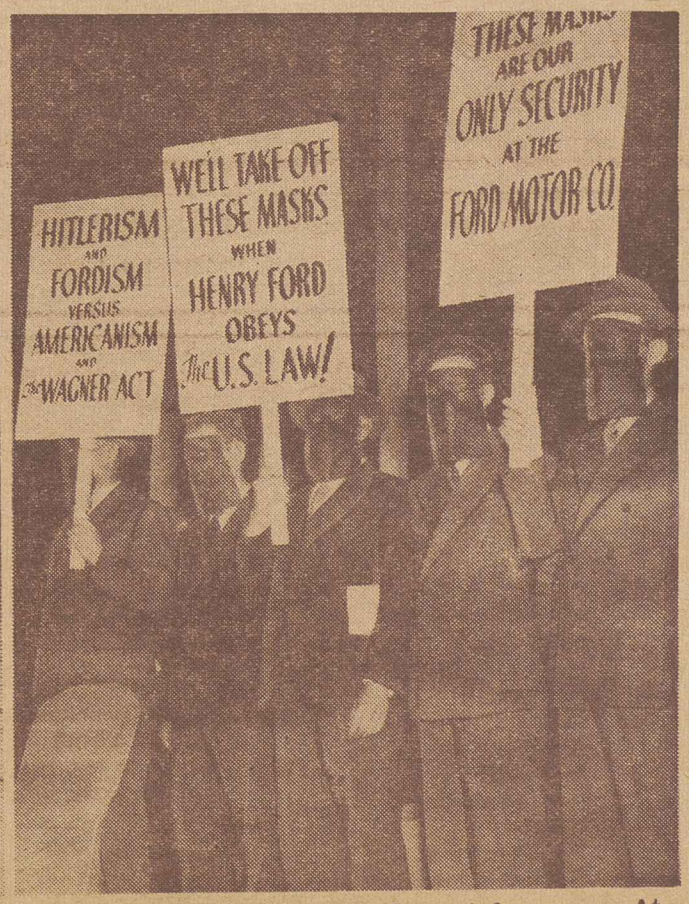
Civil liberties have been restored to scores of towns, income has risen mightily, job security won and gains made in living standards. But the CIO knows that alone it cannot erase all the evils of a century of exploitation. That is why it welcomes the support of all liberal organizations to aid its national campaign for progressive improvements for the millions.

The Record In Brief

1. Starting with one million members, CIO has organized three million more previously unorganized workers.



2. CIO has changed the biggest industries of the land from citadels of anti-union reaction into strongholds of unionism.



3. CIO has raised the wages in all these industries and added an estimated five billion dollars to the purchasing power of American workers.

4. CIO has won paid vacations for millions of industrial workers. It has brought the workers more security and justice through seniority rights, union handling of grievances and freedom from unjust discharge.

5. Through increasing purchasing power, preventing wage-cuts, shortening working hours and checking layoffs, CIO has moderated depression and cushioned its effects on the workers and the country.

6. CIO has doubled the political power of the workers through organization, using this power to enact and protect labor and social legislation and to furnish the driving force behind the whole liberal and progressive cause.

It wasn't easy, getting those vast improvements for American workers which have been the prime result of CIO activity through the past five years. At the left: An early struggle for union rights. Members of the United Rubber Workers picket the huge Goodyear plant in Akron, Ohio, beat off efforts to smash their organization. At right: A reminder of work still to be completed—unionization of Henry Ford's billion dollar open shop.

The CIO—An Epoch In Am

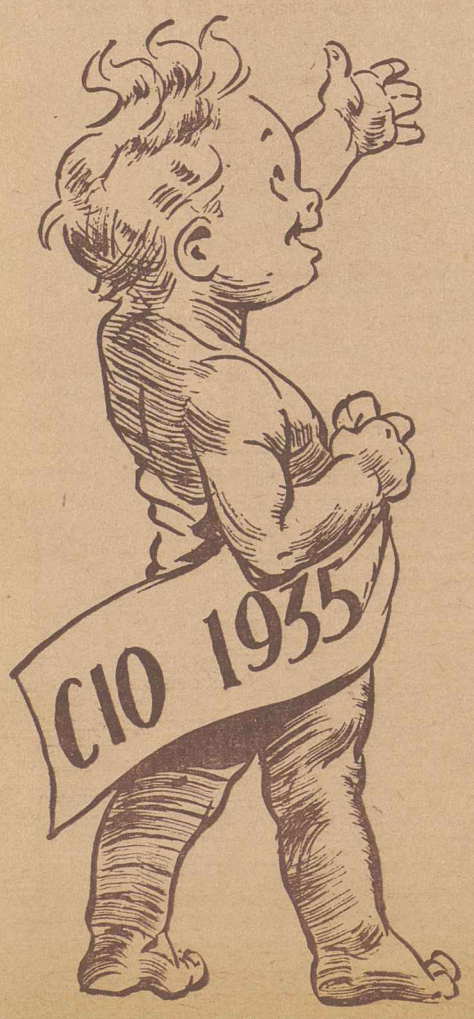
Huge Strides Made During Five Years

THE waves rolled in from the Atlantic as they had always rolled, in that October of 1935. In pursuit of their eternal ambition to splash the people on the Atlantic City boardwalk, they rolled in, fell short by hundreds of yards, gave up and rolled back again.

"Just another one of those things," the waves said to each other, referring to the American Federation of Labor convention on the other side of the boardwalk. "Those boys go through the motions of starting to organize the unorganized regularly every year about this time. They froth and fume a bit, then decide they can't make it, give up, and get ready to go through the same motions again next year.

"And all the time, they know in their hearts, just like we do, that it would take an act of God to get them any further ahead. Though, come to think of it, we do make progress if you think in terms of centuries. Let's stick around and see if the AFL boys are any further ahead a hundred years from now. We've got plenty of time."

WHAT the waves did not know was that some people without their own eternal patience were upsetting all the customary procedures of an AFL convention.



Lewis Asked For Action

John L. Lewis and some of the other forward-looking industrial union leaders were demanding immediate action for a campaign to organize the unorganized millions in the modern mass-production industries. They argued that the only way to do this was to allow them to organize in industrial unions.

The craft leaders argued back that this would break all the sacred precedents of the AFL and would violate the property rights of the craft unions over millions of workers they had never been able to organize.

The arguments went on heatedly far into several night sessions, until finally the craftists won a technical decision. They went away happy in the thought that the AFL still stood immovable as the Rock of Gibraltar—before the days of air raids.

But meanwhile Lewis and his associates had decided that if they could not move away this rock that was blocking organization, they would have to move around it. They met together, the heads of eight AFL unions, in Washington in November, 1935, and announced the formation of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

MOST of the arguments at that 1935 AFL convention revolved around form of organization and jurisdictions. The AFL crafts claimed the right to divide up newly organized workers along craft lines laid down before the era of modern mass-production industry. They favored horse-and-buggy methods in a motor age.

The Will To Organize

About the best the AFL would offer to semi-skilled and unskilled workers was "federal unions," which were not allowed to join together to form one industrial union throughout their industry and were always subject to raids from the craft unions; or Class B membership, with few if any voting privileges, in one or other of the craft organizations.

But the real issues went even deeper than the argument between craft and industrial unionism; they related to the will to organize.

When labor secured the inclusion of the right to organize in the NRA, established industrial unions like the United Mine Workers were able to take full advantage. But in industries where there were no industrial unions, the workers flocked to AFL federal and craft unions, only to fall away again when they found the AFL had little to offer them.

The AFL not only did not allow them to unite as they desired in industrial unions, it also failed to supply the money, the organizers, the leadership and the drive necessary to unionize large numbers of workers. Its leaders did not even believe it was possible to organize the mass-production industries. They just sat on the lid.

Out of 40 million wage workers, only three and a half million were represented at the 1935 AFL convention, and few of these were from the mass-production industries.

THE Committee for Industrial Organization did not want a divided labor movement. It set out to organize the unorganized along industrial lines inside the AFL.

Who Split Labor?

Its early organizing efforts, in fact, were severely handicapped by this attempt to preserve unity. It could only start in those few industries where an AFL union could make a plausible claim to industrial jurisdiction.

Furthermore, it soon became obvious that the unorganized workers did not want to join the AFL. They had had so many bad experiences that they had lost all confidence in the AFL.

But still the CIO kept scrupulously within the laws and jurisdictions of the AFL—until finally, in August, 1936, the AFL executive council struck the blow that split the labor movement. It ordered the CIO unions to disband their committee and cease their organizing work, under penalty of suspension. The suspension went into effect in September.

THIS action of the AFL executive council was illegal, highhanded and undemocratic; its chief purpose was to deny the CIO unions a vote at the next AFL convention. But paradoxically it was the blow that freed the CIO and made possible the greatest wave of union organization in American history.

The CIO felt like Sindbad the Sailor after he shook the Old Man of the Sea from his shoulders. Relieved of the ancient and mouldy craft restrictions of the AFL and the dead weight of its leadership, the CIO set to work with a will.

Its unions put their resources, their experience, their organizers and their enthusiasm into the most modern, efficient and streamlined campaign of industrial organization the world has ever seen.

THE results were spectacular. Even before the suspension, the coming of John L. Lewis to Akron in January, 1936, and the organizing support of the CIO had led to an increase of tens of thousands of members in the United Rubber Workers and the winning of the big Goodyear strike. In the automobile industry rival unions were encouraged to get together along industrial lines, and in steel the big push of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee had been launched.

Speedy Results

But once it became clear to the workers that the CIO was something quite distinct from the AFL, the dikes of anti-unionism began to break in industry after industry. By November, 1936, the SWOC was able to report 82,000 members, and in December the series of strikes began that led to the big General Motors strike.

This first great national test of the strength of the new movement was won hands down by the CIO. The workers and the leaders who rose from their ranks revealed amazing initiative, imagination, courage and loyalty; and Lewis battled day and night, with all the industrial, political and personal influence he could command, to hold off governmental threats to drive the workers from the plants by violence—until General Motors signed on the dotted line.

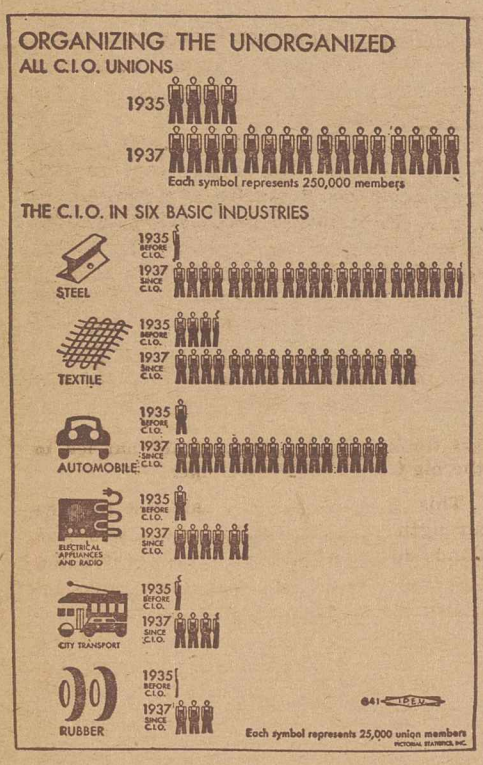
This was the victory that made the CIO. The United Automobile Workers grew in a few months from a few thousands of members to hundreds of thousands. The Chrysler Corp. was brought into line soon after, as well as many other auto companies. And the effects were also felt in nearly every other industry.

In March, 1937, the CIO won its next great and far-reaching triumph, an agreement with the United States Steel Corp., biggest steel-producing company in the world.

SPACE will not here permit a listing of all the organizing successes that followed. The United Electrical & Radio Workers disposed of one of the biggest and oldest of company unions, by winning

nerican History

Dozens Of Successes



an election at the Schenectady plant of General Electric. A huge textile organizing drive was launched, and workers flocked to the CIO unions in every industry.

Even the bloody and bitter-end resistance of the "Little Steel" companies in the summer of 1937 failed to check the wave of industrial organization that swept the country.

The idea that disturbed the tranquillity of the AFL Atlantic City convention in October, 1935, had grown into a great movement by October, 1937, when the CIO held its national conference in the same city.

Represented there were millions of previously unorganized workers in the steel, automobile, rubber, textile, electrical, radio, oil, metal mining, shipbuilding, shoe, communications, transport, packinghouse, government, office, agricultural, maritime, retail, newspaper, architectural, technical, aluminum, fur, die casting, wood, glass and other industries, in addition to the swollen membership of big founding unions like the United Mine Workers and Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which had themselves been aided by their aid to others.

AT ITS Atlantic City conference in 1937, the CIO had to prepare to meet an enemy more redoubtable than all the big anti-union corporations whose resistance it had broken. It was the growing unemployment and depression.

The Power To Survive

This was the acid test of the new movement's power to survive, to prove that it was no mushroom growth. It met the test in an amazing fashion.

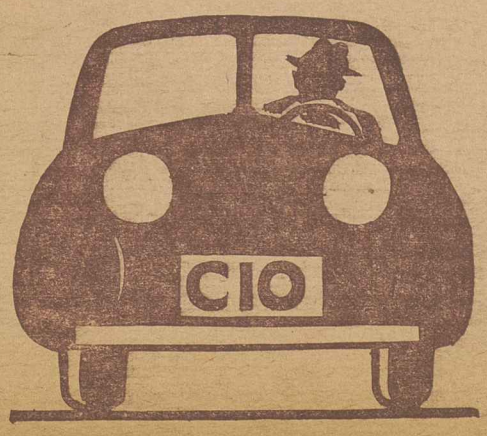
Not only did every CIO union maintain its ranks during the depression years that followed, but many of them continued to expand their membership, and organizing drives were pushed into new industries.

More than this, the CIO succeeded in maintaining wage levels for the first time in a major depression. Without precedent, steel wages were not cut when prices were cut, due to the strength of the CIO steel union. In nearly every other industry, too, CIO organization prevented wage reductions, thus cushioning the depression for the whole country.

By November, 1938, the CIO had established not only its ability to organize, win agreements and improve the workers' conditions, but also its capacity to survive and grow under the severest conditions.

It met in Pittsburgh in that month for its first constitutional convention, to establish itself on a permanent basis as the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Since that time the CIO has been a going and growing concern. It has consolidated its ranks, overcome internal factional troubles in some of the new unions, and at the San Francisco convention in October, 1939, the signal was given for another great forward drive of organization, which has brought in hundreds of thousands of new members.



The Labor Board election successes of the CIO in the past year have been the most sweeping in history. They include the General Motors election, the largest ever held; the victories of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in General Electric, Westinghouse, RCA and other plants; a series of successes in big meat packing plants, and countless other election victories.

New and improved contracts in the steel, automobile, electrical, glass, packing and scores of other industries have brought new evidence in the past year of the solidity, permanence and power for good of the CIO.

It has also pushed out into new territory through the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, and has recently launched new drives to organize Ford, Little Steel and the aircraft and woodworking industries.

Five years of the CIO. From November, 1935, to November, 1940. An amazing record of growth and organization. A miracle of modern times.

How CIO Helps You

Service Is Prime Aim

WHEN you become a member of the CIO, you become part of a movement whose influence reaches into every corner of the United States, and extends from your place of work to the highest councils of the nation.

You are multiplying your own influence millions of times, because the CIO is a democratic movement and its whole structure is designed to pool your weight with that of your fellows for the protection and advancement of your joint interests.

You become a member of a local union. This local union is part of the industrial union representing all the workers in your industry throughout the country. (If there is no National or International union for your whole industry, your local union is known as a Local Industrial Union and is affiliated directly to the national CIO.)

There are 42 National and International Unions (or Organizing Committees, which function like internationals) in the CIO, covering nearly all the biggest industries. Each one of these has its own laws, its own officers and organizers and its own structure designed to serve the needs of the workers in its industry.

To represent your interests in the affairs of your city or state there are 225 city and state Industrial Union Councils. Your local union is entitled to elect delegates to the Council in your city and state to express your wishes.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations (the national CIO) is the central body and headquarters of the whole movement. Affiliated to it are all the National and International Unions, the Local Industrial Unions and the Industrial Union Councils throughout the country. Its policies are determined and its officers are elected by the delegates whom these affiliated bodies send to the national conventions of the CIO.

In between conventions the governing body of the national CIO is the Executive Board, which is elected at conventions and which includes representatives of all the affiliated National and International Unions and Organizing Committees.

THE Congress of Industrial Organizations has its national headquarters at Washington. Its activities are directed by the President and other elected officers, in accordance with the decisions of the convention and the Executive Board.

How CIO Functions

Organizing the unorganized is the major purpose of the national CIO. All its activities are related in one way or another to this main end, to preserving and serving existing organizations, and to advancing the economic and legislative interests of the CIO membership.

The most important department at CIO headquarters is the Organization Department, which is headed by the National Director of Organization and an Assistant Director.

Working under their direction in most of the major industrial centers of the country is a staff of 49 regional and sub-regional directors and 65 field representatives. In addition, there are 102 field representatives on the CIO payroll, who have been assigned to organizing work with affiliated National and International Unions and Organizing Committees.

The Department of Local Industrial Unions is also connected with the organizing work, concerning itself with the interests of these directly affiliated unions.

Other departments at national CIO headquarters include the Comptroller's office, which handles all financial and business matters; the Legal Department, which protects the interests of the movement in legal matters, handles Labor Board cases and other relations with governmental authorities; the Publicity Department, which concerns itself with public relations through press, radio, etc., and publishes The CIO NEWS and other CIO literature; and the Unemployment Division, which protects the interests of the unemployed and conducts economic research, including publication of The Economic Outlook.

Also functioning from CIO headquarters are the Legislative Committee, which works for the enactment and protection of labor and social legislation; the Social Security, Unemployment and Housing Committees; the Maritime Committee, and the Committee on Latin America.

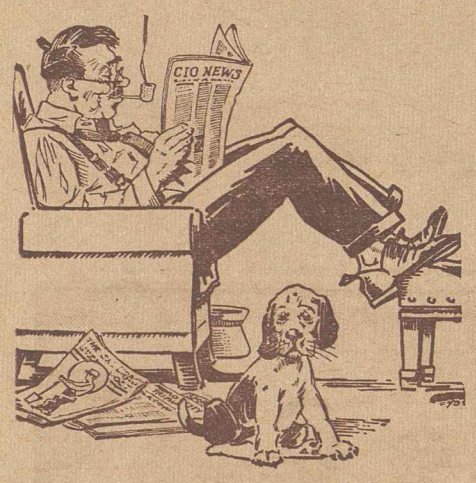
Labor Legislation . . . A CIO Dividend

Politics Is No Vacuum; It's Pressure That Counts

LABOR laws don't come on silver platters. They come when organized workers make their demands known to politicians and when their leaders go to government to press those demands home.

Labor laws, once won, are defended the same way—by the strength of organized labor and by the impression this strength can make upon Congress.



Aware of this, CIO and its leaders have campaigned for every major social advance made over the past several years. The Wagner Act, Social Security, the Wage-Hour law, the Walsh-Healey Act are the direct result of labor action—and their defense over years of counter-attack from reaction is also due to labor's efforts.

Here, in brief review, is the story of a few of the high points in CIO's struggle for a legislative program of jobs, security and workers' rights.

Labor's Magna Carta, the Wagner Act, providing recognition of the right to organize and bargain collectively without interference from employers, became law in July, 1935. This was a few months before CIO's birth. But labor's rising strength—and John L. Lewis' voice speaking for labor—pushed the Wagner Act through Congress, where dilatory politicians would have been happy to let it lie.

Wagner Act

But it isn't enough to get a labor law

past Congress, as workers found when the application of the Wagner Act was held up almost two years before the Supreme Court gave its constitutional O. K. That came in 1937, and until then the employers, acting on the advice of a self-appointed group of "constitutional" lawyers, ignored it.

LABOR laws, like other worldly creations, don't operate in a vacuum. They are subject to stress, to change; they have to be defended and improved, saved when necessary from reactionary attack.

Best illustration of this is again the Wagner Act. No United States law has been more attacked—by powerful corporations, their newspapers, their agents in Congress and in the top leadership of the AFL. No U. S. law has been more stoutly defended by CIO—and CIO almost single-handed.

CIO blocked the first open Congressional attempts to cripple the Act in 1938. In 1939, CIO blocked the amendments presented in the name of William Green of the AFL—amendments that would have made the act and the Labor Board into hatchetmen for craftism against industrial unionism.

CIO showed the workers where Green's amendments came from, when John L. Lewis, in testimony before the Senate Labor Committee, gave full documentary proof of his charge that the Green bill was prepared by attorneys and agents for the National Association of Manufacturers and the most reactionary labor-hating employers in the United States, acting at the request of AFL's counsel, with the full knowledge and consent of Green, who knew and approved what his attorney was doing.

In 1940, CIO has held the Smith bill—described by two of the five members of Smith's committee as "the ripper bill"—in the Senate, after William Green's endorsement greased its way through the lower House.

Defense of the Wagner Act is one of CIO's biggest legislative accomplishments. Another is passage of the wage-hour law and its preservation from destructive amendments proposed by poll tax reactionaries from the sweatshop belt. Their campaign, prompted by the "labor-baiting, poker-playing, whisky-drinking, evil old man" who used to lead the tory forces in Congress, was stopped. Today CIO fights to save the law—from its administrators, who seem determined to put the defeated tory amendments into effect through executive action.

Wage-Hour Act

The Walsh-Healey Act, passed in answer to labor's demands for protection of hard-won union standards, requires contractors to pay prevailing wages on government orders. It has one loophole—a big one—its failure to require government contractors to obey the Wagner Act.

Walsh-Healey Act

CIO has sought to close this loophole for three years. Three times the Senate, acting on CIO's demands, has passed an amendment to deny U. S. orders to firms that violate U. S. laws. The amendment has been held up in the House Rules Committee, where a tory clique has prevented it from even reaching the House floor for a vote.

As it stands now, some of the most notorious Wagner Act violators in the country are receiving billions of dollars worth of arms contracts. Most notable is Bethlehem Steel, with over a billion in orders and a flock of Labor Board and court rulings against its labor policy. Most recent is Henry Ford, with a $122,000,000 defense order awarded the day after the 1940 election, though its labor policy is known and condemned everywhere.

Lewis has asked for Presidential action to stop this stream of cash rewards to law violators. To date it has been refused, though the Attorney-General and other high officials have held that firms benefiting from U. S. funds should obey U. S. laws.

The nation's No. 1 social problem, unemployment amounting today to close to 10,000,000 workers, has taken an important share of CIO's legislative attention. CIO has repeatedly warned, through testimony at Congressional hearings, through statistical evidence, through speeches of John L. Lewis and Philip Murray and other leaders, through convention action, that unemployment must be solved if democracy is to remain a going concern.

Lack Of Work

Years behind other industrial countries, Congress passed a Social Security law in 1935. The law as it stands is inadequate. Benefits are small, many groups of people are excluded, red tape and delays in procedure keep many more from getting benefits they are entitled to. CIO proposes to increase and widen benefits, to pay $60 a month to aged workers 60 years old and over, to simplify administrative procedure.

Other Labor Legislation

Along with improvements in Social Security, CIO urges an adequate housing program—a need felt even more sharply with the huge concentrations of workers in defense industries—and a health program to bring adequate medical care to the millions who fall sick and die prematurely

"The CIO News" Speaks Out For Labor's Rights

Through Its Own Press CIO Refutes Foes' Lies

LYING propaganda has been one of the most effective methods used by labor's enemies to combat the CIO.

The purpose of the CIO is to bring workers together in the most modern and efficient type of unions, so that they can bargain collectively and peacefully for the improvement of their conditions. It is a constructive, democratic and American movement, with the highest of social aims.

If the above facts were known to every worker and the general public, the path of the CIO would be much smoother. But the reactionary monied interests which do not want to see the workers organized lest they cut in on their profits, have done everything they could to make the path of the CIO rough and difficult through misrepresentation and lies.

What can be done to counteract this anti-CIO propaganda, which constantly poisons the minds of the workers and the public against a movement that means them nothing but good?

One of the first and most obvious answers is to build and support a CIO press of our own.

THIS brings us to The CIO NEWS, the paper you are reading, many of you for the first time.

The CIO NEWS is a weekly newspaper. It is the official organ of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Week after week, it reports the news of the whole CIO. It carries every policy statement in full, so that you can read for yourself just where the CIO and its leaders stand on every important public issue.

Reflects CIO Policy

Don't let yourself be fooled by gossip-mongering columnists, who will try to turn you against your own movement by their distortions, half-truths and outright lies. You have a paper of your own which will give you the true facts.

The CIO is a tremendous movement. The daily papers tell you little or nothing of its nationwide activities. If you read The CIO NEWS, you will hear every week of all the important CIO events and activities in every industry and every part of the country. You will find many items you will never get elsewhere that will please and encourage you, and give you guidance in your own union activities from the experience of others.

If you want to know what is going on in Washington, in national politics, as it affects you, your family and your union, read The CIO NEWS. It will not only give you the news from a CIO point of view, but it will also tell you what you can do to help get the laws you want and to protect them from attack.

For The CIO NEWS is more than a newspaper. It is a mobilizer and an organizer of labor opinion for labor purposes. Its aim is not only to inform you but to assist you in your organizing and union work. It can help you, if you will help it, by subscribing yourself and helping to circulate the CIO News.

How To Subscribe To "The CIO News"

IF YOU do not already receive The CIO NEWS, you can have it delivered to your home every week for One Dollar a year. Just stick $1 in an envelope and mail it with your name and address to

The CIO NEWS,
1106 Connecticut Avenue,
Washington, D. C.

For your convenience, there is a subscription blank printed elsewhere in this paper. Cut it out, write your name and address on it, and mail it with a one-dollar bill to The CIO NEWS.

BESIDES its National Edition, The CIO NEWS is published in many special union and local editions. Each one of these editions is the official organ of its respective International Union or Industrial Union Council.

These editions all carry a certain number of the same pages as in the National Edition, but their outside pages are made up of the news of the particular union or council, whose organ they are, and which has full editorial control over their pages.

Unions' Editions

This arrangement makes it possible to combine a union organ with the national organ of The CIO, at less expense than any union could publish a paper entirely by itself. It makes possible a bigger and more attractive paper, with a better balance of reading matter. It makes visible to your members in every issue the full weight of the national CIO behind your union, and at the same time it makes for closer cooperation between your union and the CIO.

In the same way, your Industrial Union Council can have a paper of its own, at least possible expense, by publishing it as a local edition of The CIO NEWS. It will give your readers the advantage of a combination local and national CIO paper, with your local news on the outside pages and the national news inside.

There are a hundred different ways in which The CIO NEWS can serve you and your union. It's your paper—make the most of it. Whatever your needs in the way of a paper, write in to The CIO NEWS. It has probably got the answer to your problem.

Plenty Of Play

IT'S not all work and no play for CIO unions. Thousands of CIO members are enrolled in baseball, volley ball, bowling and basketball teams. Dramatic clubs, singing groups, orchestras, string bands and drum and bugle corps for kids of unionists, give entertainment to many of the CIO unions.

On Labor Day celebrations and other festive occasions millions of CIO'ers take part in demonstrations and march in parades throughout the country.

Many thousands go to classes run by the union to learn how to function more effectively in their local. There are courses given to teach shop stewards how to carry on their duties; classes in public speaking, correspondence courses, even classes in cooking, sewing and household management for union women.

Some unions run summer camps and have vacation and week-end recreation homes for their members. Others have bought projectors and have taken up the showing of movies.

Confident, CIO Faces The Future

THE CIO brought the breath of new life to a labor movement that was stalled on dead center, that was hidebound with narrow craft traditions, that had failed to organize the great modern industries, and that had forfeited its leadership of the American working people.

What the CIO has done in the five years of its existence has been briefly related in this Fifth Anniversary issue of The CIO NEWS.

If you have scanned its pages, you will have read how the CIO put the MOVE into the labor movement—how it organized the mass production industries—how it raised the American standard of living—how it became the dynamic driving force, industrially and politically, behind the whole democratic, liberal and progressive cause.

The work of the CIO has been well begun, but it is not even half done. Millions of workers have been organized, but millions more remain to be organized. The work must and will go on.

In the CIO, the workers have forged a mighty and magnificent instrumentality for the achievement of their social aims. What are some of these aims we hope to achieve through the CIO?

1 To bring union organization, collective bargaining and better conditions to all the unorganized workers.

2 To increase still further the wages and purchasing power of all the workers, so that they may have a fairer share of the fruits of their toil, and so that the whole country may prosper from the expansion of business and industry that results from increased purchasing and consuming power.

3 To increase still further, by organization and education, the political power of the working people, so that in alliance with the farmers and other popular groups they may exert the full influence to which their numbers entitle them in a democracy.

4 To bring a better living and new hope and opportunity to the millions who are deprived of their just share of the country's wealth; to banish poverty from the land; to defend and expand democratic rights and liberties; and to make our country a shining example to the rest of the world and a great force for peace, brotherhood and human betterment.

ALL this, you may say, is a large order. And so it is. But it represents the hopes and the dreams and the aspirations in the hearts and minds of millions of people.

People's Hopes

The CIO is their movement. It is a democratic movement, formed and controlled by American working people, and dedicated to achieving their aspirations.

Look at the pictures on this page. Compare the misery and hopelessness of low-wage slum conditions with the new hope for the future borne by well-fed happy children growing up under decent, healthy circumstance. The faces of the children in the two pictures tell the story.

The CIO is a practical movement. It concerns itself first and foremost with the practical means of improving wages, hours and working and living conditions. In organizing and working for these ends, it develops the power and the purpose to achieve the wider social aims to which humanity aspires.

What about your children? Can they get the foundation of health, happiness and education to build them into alert, quick-minded adults—or will they be haunted by insecurity and hunger? Today and tomorrow, as in the past, the CIO works that future generations may benefit.

The Unions Of The CIO

Following is the list of National and International Unions and Organizing Committees affiliated to the Congress of Industrial Organizations, as of November, 1940:

Aluminum Workers of America.
Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.
United Automobile Workers of America.
Natl. Org. Committee of Barbers & Beauty Culturists of America.
United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America.
Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.
American Communications Association.
United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.
Department Store Workers Organizing Committee.
Natl. Association of Die Casting Workers.
Distillery Workers Organizing Committee.
United Electric, Radio & Machine Workers of America.
Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee.
United Federal Workers of America.
Intl. Union of Fishermen & Allied Workers of America.
Intl. Fur and Leather Workers Union.
United Furniture Workers of America.
Federation of Flat Glass Workers.
Inlandboatmen's Union of the Pacific.
Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers.
Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.
Marine Cooks & Stewards Association.
Natl. Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association.
Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers of America.
National Maritime Union of America.
Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.
United Mine Workers of America.
American Newspaper Guild.
United Office & Professional Workers of America.
Oil Workers International Union.
Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.
United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers Intl. Union.
Quarry Workers International Union.
United Retail & Wholesale Employees of America.
United Rubber Workers of America.
United Shoe Workers of America.
State, County & Municipal Workers of America.
Steel Workers Organizing Committee.
Textile Workers Union of America.
Transport Workers Union of America.
Utility Workers Organizing Committee.
International Woodworkers of America.

In those industries where a CIO National or International Union has not yet been formed, workers desiring to join the CIO are organized in hundreds of Local Industrial Unions, representing every kind of plant or factory.

No Matter What You Do, There's A CIO Union For You

Unions Protect Labor Laws

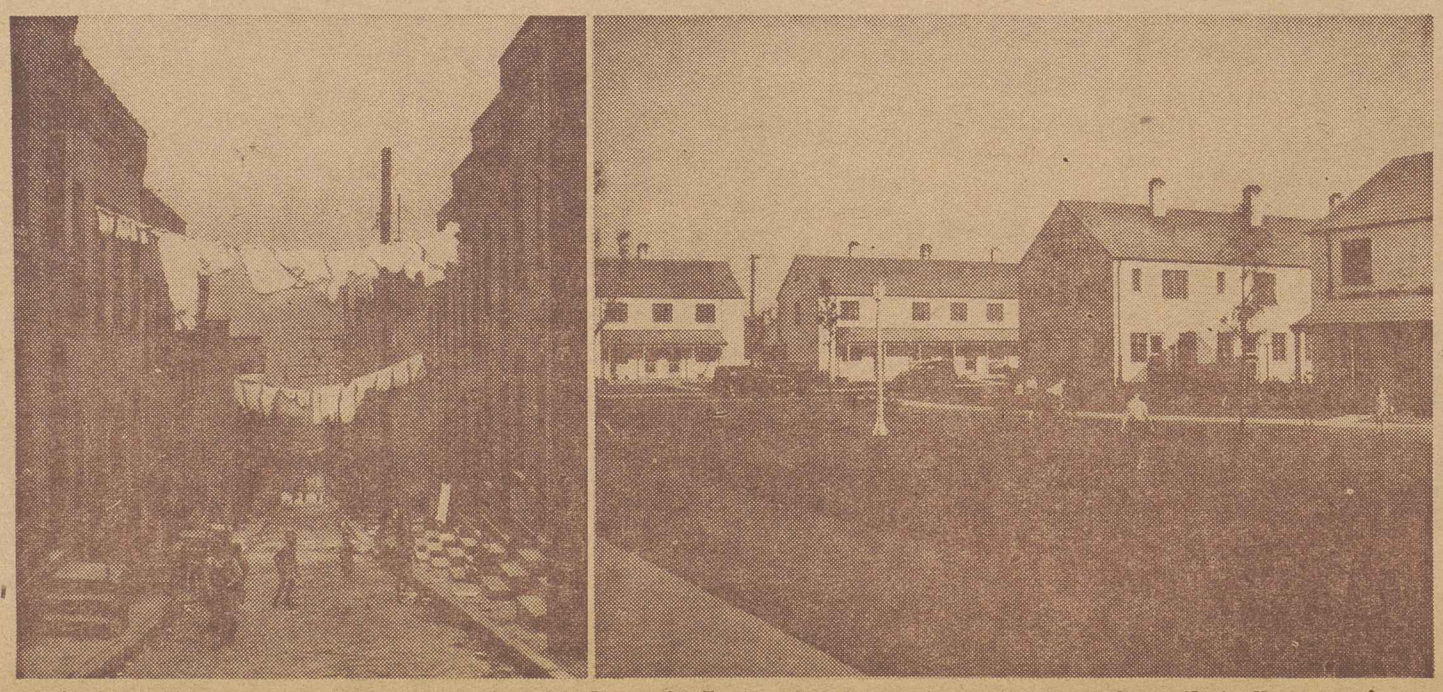
simply because they cannot pay for doctors or hospitals.



MINE SAFETY: The mine safety inspection bill, which would be a long step toward ending the appalling toll of life in coal mine disasters, has been held up in Committee by the same type of reactionary clique that held up the wage-hour law until CIO blasted it out. Here again CIO unions, led by the United Mine Workers, are pressing for legislative action.

CIVIL RIGHTS: Periods of war emergency bring sharp attacks on civil rights, even when the country is not actually at war. The rights of people to assemble, to speak freely and even to worship freely have come under increasing fire in recent months.

Typical of this drive against the people's liberties are the attacks on aliens and other minorities, through which reaction hopes to intimidate workers in general. Realizing this, CIO has campaigned against numerous anti-alien bills proposed in Congress over the past year, has defended aliens as a necessary step in defending labor.

Use of the military against labor has been characteristic of reactionary employers since labor struggles began. In a war period, this policy increases sharply, and CIO has urged that Federal curbs be put on state authorities who might plan to use the home guard against workers.

Similarly, CIO urges labor representation on local draft boards under the conscription law, watches for possible discrimination against active union members.

Disease-ridden slums or pleasant comfortable homes? Let's rebuild America, says the CIO, so that all may enjoy the benefits that all are entitled to enjoy. When you join the CIO you become a partner in this enterprise to build a greater, healthier nation.

The CIO and National Defense

Philip Murray Suggests A Plan For Overhauling of Structure

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—Following are excerpts from the remarks of Philip Murray, vice-president of the CIO and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee. The speech was delivered on Nov. 19.

I would like to preface what I have to say . . . by referring to the action of the CIO International Executive Board at its meeting held in the city of Washington, June 4, 1940. That declaration stated in unequivocal terms the position of CIO in National Defense. And it might be well for this convention to at least give some consideration to the various features of CIO's statement of national policy effectuated June 4, 1940.

There we said the CIO, its officers, constituent unions and membership are fully prepared to discharge our responsibility in the approaching national emergency to the best interests of the United States of America.

At its outset, continuing the report, let us state most unequivocally that we are and always shall be unalterably opposed to any movement or activity of subversive character, Trojan Horse or Fifth Columns which are aimed against our nation and government, or the basic, free and democratic institutions upon which the Republic has been founded.

That portion of this declaration most certainly serve as an answer to the critics of CIO upon this very important phase of National Defense.

'First Line'

Continuing, we state that the CIO is the labor movement in our first line of defense. The mass producing industries of the mines, mills, factories and workshops, by the strength and discipline of organization affiliates of the CIO have substituted industrial peace and stability for industrial warfare in these first lines of defense.

And in that regard I think that we in this convention can point with pride to the record that CIO has maintained in the prosecution of industrial stability and in the maintenance of proper labor relations.

So our country and labor particularly should not be surprised when CIO makes formal representation to the government that our organizations be given more and more representation in the administration of National Defense.

Personally, I have thought since the institution of National Defense that the method of organization with regard to the construction, the prosecuion of proper national defense in America was not properly created, that the mechanisms now constructed are not sufficient to meet the requirements of the United States of America. And that is based upon the lengthy, extended consideration of all problems incident to not only national defense as most of the people understand it, but total defense as we understand it.

Overhauling Needed

It has been the judgment of the officers of CIO for a considerable period of time that there ought to be a complete over-hauling and reorganization of America's National Defense program.

Personally, I would be of the opinion that there ought to be created by the President of the United States industry-wide set-ups to administer efficiently the production of materials essential to the national defense and to see to it that labor is given adequate representation on each industrial board to make possible the perfection of adequate, proper joint labor and industry representation.

It seems to me that we should not stop with the mere assertion that the National Defense system is wrong, that our endeavors in this field should not be confined alone to the criticism of the administration of national defense, but that CIO should be prepared to offer the government of the United States and the Federal Congress and the people of this country a constructive substitute providing for a complete reorganization of the entire national defense system.

In that regard President Lewis, together with a few of the rest of us, have talked to a number of agents of the Federal government and to a number of the distinguished representatives of both branches of Congress in the city of Washington suggesting that in the first instance there should be created in each important industry directly affected by national defense joint labor, industry, consumer, and government boards.

That, sitting on each board, there should be an outstanding representative of that particular industry; that represented on each one of those boards there should be an outstanding representative of the CIO labor organization having labor jurisdiction over that industry; that in the interest of public welfare the consumers should be represented and that to represent the mass interests of the entire nation there should be designated to each board a substantial representative of government.

The creation of mechanisms of that description would bring into the national defense situation men fully conversant with all of the detailed technique incident to production, labor, coal operation, effectuation of labor organization and the perfection of true collective bargaining in each industry.

It would tend to prevent the development or growth of racketeering in national defense, the labor representative being cognizant of the price and profit factors having to do with production in each industry, giving labor an opportunity with industry, consumers and government to furnish the necessary checks and balances against the development of possible corruption in the letting of contracts and the stealing of money from the Federal Treasury.

It is true that immediately after the creation of such Board difference may arise concerning certain features of production, labor relations, or whatever it may be in each industry. But to again check the possibility of confusion arising from those disagreements there should be created immediately above each industry board a board of review, a clearing house upon which labor would again have representation to clear upon all matters in which disputes may arise affecting the constructive prosecution of true national defense.

End 'Spectacles'

And then there should be created above that a final board on which the President of the United States of America may be a member and attached to which again there must be labor representation to definitely decide and pass upon all matters of dispute in each industry affected by the National Defense situation.

These proposals have to do not only with the ordinary prosecution of proper national defense in the United States of America, but they comprehend other things.

It is my candid judgment that if we had such things created when the National Defense Board was originally brought into being, we would not today have the sorry, pitiful spectacle of Bethlehem being accorded contracts amounting to $1,200,000,000 whilst they were violating the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the Walsh-Healey Act. The same is true with regard to the Ford situation.

You and I can remember, many of you at least, many of us know something about the efforts that were made during the days of the War Labor Board when an effort was made during those days by the government of the United States to have proper labor-industry representatives in the administration of the War Labor Board. There are other features of this situation.

Govt. Contracts

Our convention must give constructive, intelligent attention to the feature having to do with the letting of contracts either by the War, Navy Department or by the Treasury Department itself. It is the judgment of your CIO representative at least, that attached to each of our procurement divisions, War, Navy, Treasury or whatever administrative branch of the Federal government has the power and authority to let contracts, there should be assigned substantial representation of labor and industry to prevent—to prevent the letting of contracts in violation of the laws of the United States of America.

Oh, yes, we made our declarations June 4th. We made them there for the preservation of labor's gains. We defined in that instrument our ideals and aspirations with reference to improving labor standards, improving the Social Security Act, improving the administering efficiency of the National Labor Relations Act. We demanded more consideration from industry, through government if need be, to establish better standards of living for the workers of America.

Those are our goals and those are our aspirations and those are some of our ambitions. There we made our declaration, the right of assemblage, the right of freedom of speech, the right of worship as we pleased. They were all a part of CIO's official pronouncements issued June 4, 1940.

That is still the attitude of this organization, the most substantial, the most constructive, the most intelligent, the most understanding program presented to the Federal government since the National Defense was originally conceived.

CIO And Labor Unity

Lewis Exposes AFL's Longtime Effort To Smash Industrial Unions

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 22.—Following are major excerpts from the speech on the CIO attitude towards labor unity, by John L. Lewis. The address was made on November 19.

For five years from time to time the cry has gone up from some place in our ranks that we must have unity, and when the cry goes up men cease to join the CIO because they say, why should we join the CIO if the CIO is going to join the AFL? That has been the record.

It is quite true that five years ago in this hall our organization came to a parting of the ways with the American Federation of Labor. That was not the first time it was discussed, because for more than thirty years the accredited delegates of the United Mine Workers of America in the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor year after year introduced resolutions on this subject and asked their adoption as a matter of policy and principle by the American labor movement. And year after year they were refused and millions of workers throughout the country in America's modern industry were not given a helping hand.

EXPELLED UNIONS

It must not be forgotten by those who preach peace when there is no peace that a large number of these organizations represented in this convention were expelled from the American Federation of Labor, as was related by John Owens, without a trial, without a hearing, for the crime and high offense of undertaking to organize these workers in the modern industries into membership in the American Federation of Labor. And keep in mind that action has never been rescinded or revoked. And if the AFL was sincere or believed the words it sometimes utters that itself in truth or in fact accepted any part or in full the fundamental policy of recognizing industrial organization of workers in the great industries, then the AFL should rescind the infamous action by which it expelled and drove from its own doors a million members in good standing who through the years had contributed of their strength and energy, their money and their services towards the upbuilding of an instrumentality that they hoped some day would come to represent their true labor.

WHERE ARE THEY?

Yes, five years ago a little group of men representing some eight organizations in the AFL in a hotel on the Boardwalk a stone's throw away highly resolved that come high or come low they would go forward with those words—some of them did so and they have kept the faith, while others have fallen by the wayside.

And one of those men was Mr. Dubinsky, representing the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union, who swore by every God that ever sat on high that he, Dubinsky, would never waver in the cause and he signed the scroll and by book, bell and candle vowed to affiliate to this movement. And where is Dubinsky today?

He has crept back into the American Federation of Labor. He abandoned his fellows and he abandoned what he claimed was his principle. And he has gone into that organization on his adversary's terms. He is crying out now and his voice laments like that of Rachel in the wilderness, against the racketeers and the panderers and the crooks in that organization.

And Zaritsky, he was the man representing the Millinery and Cap Workers. He said, "Me too." And now above all the clamor comes the piercing wail and the laments of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. And they say, "Peace, it's wonderful". And there is no peace.

There is no peace because you are not yet strong enough to command peace upon honorable terms. And there will be no peace with a mighty adversary until you possess that strength of bone and sinew that will make it possible for you to bargain for peace terms on equal terms.

Why the resolution read here this afternoon by one of the speakers said that we should go into peace conferences, or explore the mind, or explore the possibilities. We have explored every proposition. What have we all been doing? I have been an explorer in the American Federation of Labor. Explore the mind of Bill Green? Why Bill and I had offices next door to each other in the same corridor for ten years. I was a member of the same Executive Council that he was for one year. I have done a lot of exploring in Bill's mind and I give you my word there is nothing there.

WOLL'S MIND

Explore Mathew Woll's mind? I did. It is the mind of an insurance agent, who used his position as an officer of the American Federation of Labor and a member of the Executive Council to promote his insurance business. It is so because I told him so and he agreed with me.

Explore Tom Rickert's mind, of the United Garment Workers, who was on the Negotiating Committee? I did, and here is what was in his mind. He said he did not propose to let the Amalgamated Clothing Workers into the American Federation of Labor if he could help it. I said to him that he was getting $20,000 a year out of the advertising monopoly in the American Federation of Labor, and I had a paper in my pocket to prove it. He knew it and agreed to that as true. And I thought then I had explored his mind enough.

Well, after all I think there is a limit to which the membership of my organization should permit me to waste my time and their money.

As an academic proposition I agree that peace is fine. I could mention a lot of fields, a lot of individuals and I think it would be helpful if they came to an understanding of peace prevailing as between them. And yet when the question of peace comes to the question of bread and butter and freedom of action and broadened opportunities and life and death for great numbers of men and women, then peace won't come so easily unless those things are protected and guaranteed.

PEACE EFFORTS

We have made numerous offers of peace. The President called both sides down to the White House and said he would like to have peace. The CIO put forth a plan that there should be an assembly under the auspices of the President, a great peace conference composed of accredited representatives of the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods and form in one mighty organization of labor these great groups of millions of men and women.

Mr. Green and his associates said the suggestion was outrageous because he knew that the Railroad Brotherhoods never before had been members of the AFL and that it was absurd and they said the plan would not be feasible.

Now Mr. Green says that there will never be peace until the shadow of John Lewis grows less. Well, the official shadow of John Lewis is growing less.

MUST PROGRESS

That shadow is diminishing. And yet, if I read the temper of this convention aright and if I understand what is in the hearts and minds of the millions of members backed by the men and women of this convention, regardless of John Lewis' shadow, you are not going to dishonor yourselves or to sell the rights of those people that you represent.

I don't care about some of the delegates of this convention who dissent from the tenor of those remarks. It annoys me not at all. I have great concern for those who are possesed of little faith and whose courage is waning. If they find the night too dark, if they find the way too rough, let them sit by the wayside. Let them foregather in the shade of some friendly tree while those other valiant spirits go on in this great movement. They will carry on! They will carry on! And those who prefer to be a follower of the army rather than in the vanguard of its enterprise so be it!

Dubinsky took the easy way. Zaritsky took the easy way. If there is anybody else in the CIO who wants to take the easy way, let them go on. Those who swing against us can never be considered orthodox. Those who undertake to disrupt the status quo of any situation or condition will never be considered as respectable and as nice and harmonious as those who take the easy way and who merely sit in their chairs and weep.

Why, the Auto Workers in this convention, do you know that when the life of your organization was at stake and in your great combat with General Motors, that the president of the AFL and the president of its affiliated organizations in the Metal Trades industry continually wired the Governor of Michigan and the General Motors Corporation day and night, demanding that they not make an agreement with you? They preferred that the Governor of Michigan and the President of the United States use the armed forces of the state and the nation to shoot you men in the mills that you were occupying.

So if peace were possible now under any set of different circumstances, and the members of the CIO became part of the AFL, we would find ourselves in the paradoxical position of paying our tax and our dues and giving our strength and our membership to help the enactment of legislation that would wipe out and destroy the organizations thus admitted.

I think we should be practical in our discussion and consideration of this subject. I would be happy indeed if I had any reason to think that there was a remote possibility of working out an agreement between the great organizations of labor in America. I do not have any such information.

WASTE OF TIME

Under those circumstances, I think it would be a waste of time to raise the hopes of millions of people in this country by making it falsely appear that there is any possibility of peace.

As a practical consideration, these peace conferences would impair the growth and expansion of our own movement, because, believe it or not, there are many men and women in these industries as yet unorganized who, because of having been neglected for decades of time by the AFL have no love for or confidence in that organization, and do not want to become members of it.

They are willing to join an organization that carries with it hope for the future, such as our own, and we can enroll them as members if we will utilize our energy in doing the things for which this movement was formed and was dedicated, and for which its policies are administered, to organize the unorganized.

When we organize the unorganized in sufficient numbers and our strength in comparison with the strength of the AFL becomes more obvious, then you will hasten the day, that happy day, when American labor can once more be unified.

Delegates Honor Brophy

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22—Delegates to the convention paid tribute to the work of John Brophy, director of local industrial unions, who has been ill for several months.

After receiving a wire of greetings from Brophy, the delegates instructed the executive officers to send a wire to him. The telegram, signed by Sec. James B. Carey, expressed hope of Brophy's quick recovery and a return to work.

Keep U. S. Out Of World War

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22. — The CIO, through official convention action, reaffirmed its insistence that the United States remain out of the war and demanded bluntly that traditional American democratic rights be preserved.

Text of the resolution:

WHEREAS, (1) The people of this nation are more determined than ever to prevent this country from being dragged into the foreign wars now raging throughout the rest of the world; and

(2) John L. Lewis in his masterful Labor Day address in September of 1939 warned the nation of the dangers which would beset the country through the efforts that would be made to drag us into the war; and

(3) Because the expression on the part of the people of their grave fears regarding these efforts to drag this country into war, the candidates of both major political parties in the recent presidential campaign gave their sacred pledge that this nation would be kept at peace; and

(4) Under the guise and false pretense of furthering national defense the enemies of labor and democracy are attacking the living standards of the common people, the existence of labor unions, and the democratic institutions of the nation in their drive towards war; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That:

(1) This Convention reaffirms its determination that this nation must not enter into any foreign entanglements which may in any way drag us down the path of entering or becoming involved in foreign wars. Eternal vigilance by organized labor will be the basic guarantee that a repetition of 1917 will be avoided and that peace and security for our nation will be preserved; and

(2) The Executive Board of the CIO at its meeting in June, 1940, unanimously adopted a policy relating to national defense and stated that the Congress of Industrial Organizations, its officers, constituent unions and membership are fully prepared to discharge our responsibilities in the approaching national emergency to the best interests of the United States of America. The Executive Board made it clear and declared in unequivocal terms that we will defend the free institutions of this republic, under which the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution give us the greatest democracy on earth—a government of the people, for the people, and by the people. This policy is reaffirmed in clear unmistakable terms.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations and its millions of members and the members of their families are determined to protect and defend this nation not only against our foreign enemies who may dare to attack us directly but also against those forces within our nation who place the profits of their financial and industrial enterprises above the well-being of the millions of common people.

(3) Labor believes that national defense means the creation of a nation of strong, healthy and well-fed people employed at work at decent and substantial wages and dedicated to the belief that the democratic way is the best way of living. Labor believes that national defense means the continued growth and expansion of powerful industrial unions which will protect and defend the interests and status of their members to achieve economic security. Labor believes that national defense means the vigilant protection and constant safeguardingg of the exercise by all of our cherished civil rights of speech, press, assembly, and worship. Labor believes that ignoring these fundamental principles and limiting our nation's activities to the building of mere armories of aeroplanes, tanks and guns will not serve but rather will defeat the basic interests of national defense.

WILLYS AMERICAR

The car that is common sense built

THE fine AMERICAR did not try to pull against common sense desire for a reduction in transportation cost.

It costs less to buy and will travel farther on a gallon of gasoline than any other full-sized car in America.

The F.O.B. Toledo cost on the coupe is $635* and on the four-door sedan illustrated $665*.

The fine AMERICAR is as good as it is good looking.

It is thrift-travel, but prideful travel as well.

The fine AMERICAR removes the last valid reason for paying a higher price.

CIO RESOLUTION:

Preserve Rights Under Draft

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—With the United States launching its first peacetime conscription plan, the CIO convention here went on record for absolute protection of labor's rights.

Text of the resolution:

WHEREAS, (1) The basis of opposition of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and other liberal organizations to the conscription law, prior to its enactment, was the fear that it would have a seriously destructive impact upon our democratic institutions and endangers the peace of the nation; and

(2) It is essential that the government adopt certain immediate safeguards in order to avoid this result; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that

(1) Since the overwhelming majority of the registrants and those who will be selected to serve their country will come from the ranks of labor, labor should be given an active voice in the administration of the draft law and its simple demand for equal treatment without discrimination should be enforced. This Convention condemns the manner in which CIO unions and their officials have been openly ignored in the selection of labor representatives for the administration of this law.

(2) The law must be administered in a manner so as not to discriminate against individuals because of their union activity nor to break down and destroy union standards through repressive means that may be at the disposal of anti-union members of the administrative bodies.

(3) The workers who are compelled to leave their employment to enter military service must have complete protection for reinstatement without loss of seniority or other rights upon completion of their service. The provisions of the conscription law are thoroughly inadequate and must be amended so as to provide real and bona fide protection.

(4) Legislation must be enacted to provide protection to the men who will be conscripted and for their families by extending to them the benefits of the Social Security laws both while they are in the service and for a necessary period after they leave the service in the event they cannot find employment. These measures should protect and assure the maintenance of the present standard of living of the workers and their families.

(5) The conscription law provides that men should not be conscripted into service unless there are adequate housing and sanitation facilities. This protection must be strictly enforced.

(6) The democratic spirit and practices of the American people must be preserved for conscripted men. Harsh and repressive discipline serving no purpose should give way to the encouragement of initiative and self reliance, with ample opportunity for men in the ranks to advance. The civil rights of the conscripted men, such as the right to vote, must be protected and their right to be in touch and communicate with their families and unions must be observed.

(7) The protection to the conscripted men and the members of their families while they are in military service as provided for under the Sailors' and Soldiers' Relief Act is thoroughly inadequate. This law must be enlarged so as to give real protection to these men and their families by suspending, during the period of military service and a reasonable period thereafter, foreclosures of or evictions from homes, the lapsings of life insurance policies, and the seizure of chattels such as cars, furniture, or household goods.

CIO Condemns Totalitarianism

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 22.—Following is the complete text of the statement reaffirming the CIO's belief in true American principles and condemning the totalitarianism and dictatorships of Nazism, Communism and Fascism:

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is an American institution dedicated to the attainment of its well defined economic and social objectives.

In the words of President John L. Lewis, "we yield to no man the right to challenge our Americanism or the Americanism of the organizations which at this moment we represent; and those who infest the columns of the public press with their vile fulminations, saying that the policies of the CIO are conceived and endorsed, and supported, and encouraged, and administered by Communist philosophy, or Nazi philosophy, or Fascist philosophy, or any other philosophy, they lie."

We neither accept or desire—and we firmly reject consideration of any policies emanating from totalitarianism, dictatorships and foreign ideologies such as Nazism, Communism or Fascism. They have no place in this great modern labor movement.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations condemns the dictatorships and totalitarianism of Nazism, Communism and Fascism as inimical to the welfare of labor, and destructive of our form of government.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations must organize the unorganized and build up and strengthen our unions. We must work for a greater and better America. In this great task we must not be diverted by strange, foreign doctrines opposed to our concept of industrial and political democracy.

There is room for all of us in this great movement to work for these noble ideals and sound objectives.

We highly commend that the Congress of Industrial Organizations continue to carry on in the spirit of real American trade unionism to secure economic justice and social security, and to make of this country a better place in which to work and in which to live.

Resolution On Govt. Contracts

WHEREAS, (1) Many employers, who are denying their employes the benefits of labor laws, particularly the right to organize into unions of their own choosing and to engage in collective bargaining, have obtained and continue to seek government contracts or loans or to sell gold or silver to the United States;

(2) The Attorney General of the United States and the Comptroller General of the United States have declared that the United States government has an absolute legal right to require of these employers full compliance with the labor laws; and

(3) The Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense has enunciated a labor policy which urges employers to comply with labor laws, but it failed to adopt any effective enforcement measures and at the same time approved the awarding of contracts and loans to anti-labor employers; now, therefore, be it

(1) The Congress of Industrial Organizations vigorously reaffirms its determination to obtain from the federal government a promulgation of a national policy that no government contracts be awarded or loans be made to and no gold or silver be purchased from any employer who does not comply with the laws of the nation which have been enacted for the benefit and protection of labor;

(2) This policy can be effectively enforced only through the issuance by the President of the United States of an Executive Order which would:

(a) Compel all agencies and departments of the United States government to deny government contracts or loans to and to refuse to purchase gold and silver from those who are not complying with orders of the National Labor Relations Board or with the orders of any other administrative body charged with the enforcement of labor laws; and

(b) Apply the same policy to the contracts and loans which have already been obtained under our national defense program.

(3) This Convention condemns the action of the government officials in awarding government contracts and loans to scores of anti-labor corporations such as Bethlehem Steel Company, Ford Motor Company, and the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, while these companies refused to comply with the labor laws of the nation and deny to their employes their right to organize into unions of their own choosing.

Hillman Tells Views On Unity, National Defense Problems

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—Following are excerpts from the speech of Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and member of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

I should like to have been here at the opening of the convention, but a special meeting called by the National Defense Commission detained me in the city of Washington. I should liked to have been here yesterday, but a previous engagement for a conference with the President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation in New York City made it impossible for me to be present then.

May I say to this convention at this time that I have placed before the President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, Mr. Grace, and the Vice-President, Mr. Larkin, the need of accommodating the policy of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation with the labor policy enunciated by the National Defense Commission.

I expect in the very near future to ask a responsible officer or official of the Ford Motor Company to get into conference and try to bring their labor policy in line with the policy of the National Defense Commission.

I am here in a dual capacity. I want to take this opportunity to report to you men and women, representing millions of organized workers under the banner of the CIO, the progress made by the National Defense Commission, to tell you as much as I can of the policies of that Commission, to report on the record as far as we have gone, and to tell you, as far as I can, what we intend to do in the future.

Union's Policy

There are misunderstandings, misinformation about the policies of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. I say to you as the responsible officer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America that there has never been a suggestion of our organization leaving the Congress of Industrial Organizations. The Amalgamated will stay in the Congress of Industrial Organizations. There has been some wishful thinking outside, and maybe even on the inside of CIO, but the Amalgamated will state its position firmly, as to what we believe ought to be the policies of our organization, and, as in the past, will submit to the democratic process of a majority decision of our organization; but we will continue to fight for what we believe, and others do, on constructive policies. That is not said in a spirit of boastfulness. There is only one organization that we yield to, because of their long existence as an organization, and that is the great, splendid organization of labor, the United Mine Workers of America.

I would like to discuss with you at this time the progress made by the Labor Section of the National Defense Commission. I find no fault with criticism. That is the democratic process. It will be a sorry day for America, for the labor movement and for all the people if it comes to pass ever that they are afraid to state their opposition, their differences. It is through free debate that we can arrive at constructive policies, that we can execute them most efficiently.

I was called by the President of the United States to serve as one of the Commissioners of National Defense. I considered it my job, and I consider it now and I will consider it as long as I have the privilege to serve, that my first responsibility is to see that the country is prepared to defend itself against its enemies. But, delegates, I find no difficulty in reconciling the objectives of labor and the objectives of national defense; they are inter-twined, they are inseparable. Anyone who advocates the destruction of those laws and policies known as labor legislation, which have been enacted in the last eight years for the benefit of labor, is not only opposed to labor but he is sabotaging national defense.

It was necessary first of all to discuss a policy, not to run around with caps in hand and say, "Please do me a favor." We got a policy established and recognized. I am not finding fault with people who are impatient, but it is my whole experience for thirty years that we are impatient, but I, the same as the rest of you who are experienced in the labor movement, have learned by experience that we had better take our time and do the job right if we expect it to last.

So while we have had complaints here and there, we have busied ourselves working out a policy. The policy was all inclusive. I shall come back later to labor representation, but I will say to you that labor policy was worked out by the Labor Advisory Committee attached to my Commission, men who have made a great contribution not merely to labor but to national defense; and let me say to you that all these decisions were made by a unanimous vote. There have been no disagreements. The representatives of the Railroad Brotherhoods, AFL and CIO understood their responsibility, that we must not play labor politics with national defense; and the record is that every decision has been a unanimous decision.

Defense Record

Examine our record of four months' work, and, delegates, I say to you that I challenge anybody on the record to say that this Labor Advisory Commission has not done a very creditable job in America.

In my Section we have made an inventory, we have classified them by skilled, semi-skilled, unskilled, and we have utilized the public schools for vocational training for those who may need it. I say to you that from five million seven hundred and some thousand, over eight hundred thousand have gone back to work in the last three months.

We have written into the policy of the National Defense Commission a labor policy that workers should not be discriminated against because of age, sex, race or color, and we are maintaining those propositions, to give it effectiveness.

There have been provisions made for defense housing, of course, not enough, but we have three hundred million dollars available—that is all Congress would give us for defense housing, and we are proceeding as speedily as possible. We propose to provide proper housing as far as Congress will permit us to do.

I want to say to the delegates that whatever is going on in the Labor Division I assume full responsibility for; I am not hiding behind anybody's skirts. I have the complete support of the President of the United States.

I have the understanding and co-operation from the Secretary of War, Mr. Stimson, from the Assistant Secretary of War and with others, from the Secretary of the Navy, Knox, because you know that the awarding of contracts is done by these agencies and not by the Commission. All we do is frame the policy.

Cooperation

I believe that every organization, CIO, AFL, independent or anyone else, received complete co-operation from my division. I have played no politics with my division. I would consider it dishonest, contemptible and disloyal to not give attention to some union because I happen to disagree with the policies of some officers. And, delegates, I can assure you, regardless of what remarks you may make, your membership whom you represent will get the full co-operation and service from the division that I have the privilege to be responsible for.

To my knowledge, no contract is made in a plant where the Fair Labor Standards law is violated, and if they are they should be brought to my attention, to my office for complaints. That is what we are there for.

As to the Walsh-Healey Act, I say to you that every determination of the Walsh-Healey Act is being enforced as far as I know.

Everywhere there are government contracts they have made it a policy to respect the 40-hour week, even where there are no laws covering.

We are enforcing the time and a half over 40 hours. And I challenge anyone who came to my office and made a complaint to anyone representing the service, to say that it was not taken up.

In every case we have held to the proposition that it is our duty to promote collective bargaining because it is sound, and in the best interests of national defense.

Can Happen Here

And last, but not least, and I put it last because if you read some of the statements you will think that there is only one law, and that is the National Labor Relations Act and nothing else. Now there is a question on the enforcement of the National Labor Relations Act and of course it is unfortunate. There are questions where decisions have been made by the Board and the cases are pending in the court, and all that I can say to you is that we are applying ourselves to seeing that a further enforcement should be had in all instances.

I hope you are not resting under the illusions that it cannot happen here. Look at what has happened! Where is free labor in France? Under the heel of tyrants. Where are the labor leaders? In concentration camps. What happened to Norway and Belgium and in every place where scoundrels now dominate all the things that for generations back people have fought and bled for? What we call the civilized way of living is crushed under the dictatorships and there no man or woman can be free. You know what could happen here. You know that labor will be the first defense. And you know, as I do, that the way to protect ourselves against these human beasts, with apologies to the beasts of the jungle—you know what they will do. The only thing they recognize is power. And, by God, let us use the time still available to us to make the defense of this country so strong and so powerful that even the maniacs of Europe will recognize that this is no hunting ground for them!

Aid Democracy

I express my appreciation to every one of you for the co-operation given. I know, regardless of whatever opinion you hold, you will work wholeheartedly for the defense of the nation, because we want no war and the only thing that can stop us from getting involved in this massacre is to be ready to meet them if they choose to spread their domination on this hemisphere, and let's help the democracy abroad, the nation that is so heroically taking it. Think of the bombs that are exploding in the workmen's sections in every part of Britain. And I know that labor in Britain is fighting, fighting because they know that it is their only chance for them. Who wants to live in this place dominated by scoundrels?

And so I have no doubt, I know that labor will co-operate and in co-operating—labor is co-operating as much as any section of the nation in national defense. I say we take second place to none, and I know that this Congress of Industrial Organizations will do its share as it is doing and remember, until I leave that office, that whatever shortcomings there are they are mine. Don't blame it on anybody. I face and accept the full responsibility.

I also know from my experience that you don't just make progress through power. You have to have a constructive policy. No patent medicine will do. I have watched people for some thirty years who had formulas. I can recall others. But I do know one thing, that labor will make progress when it unites its forces. You don't make progress when people are not organized. And I believe and plead that if there is any chance to get a united labor movement I am for it. But not at the expense of our objective. No!

I believe that through the democratic processes we can adjust any of our differences, even if a group is in the minority, it must not get peeved, they must not go and say, "Well, we won't play ball." We insist that part of the sound labor movement is the democratic process. I am free to sit here in the conferences with my colleagues in the labor movement and I can agree or disagree on any subject matter as long as they are free men with open minds and as long as they listen to reason.

A Warning

Now I would not be doing the right thing if I would not tell you that from our experience in thirty years I know that there are elements who cannot participate in the democratic processes because they think it is taking orders. Their loyalty is to an organization outside of this organization. I don't have to call them by name, whether their orders come from Rome, Berlin or Moscow, it is the same thing.

I say to you that we must warn our young membership not to be misled by the fine speeches they will make, by the confessions of loyalty and by their agreement. Their loyalty is to someone else. They will take orders.

I say to you and to the unorganized and the organized that these people are a menace to the labor movement. Let them build a sound movement on that basis, if they can.

Now, I am not indulging in any kind of privilege when I say the oldest organization has incorporated it into their constitution and I say what is good enough for the United Mine Workers is good enough for the CIO.

I have said this thing, and of course I feel that I am compelled to do it. I only have one life and I will follow the dictates of my conscience.

I regret that John L. Lewis will not be the leader of this organization. You know I am not to serve as vice-president. My time on the National Defense Commission will not give me the time. I hope you will thresh out your differences and you will elect such officers as will command the confidence of the membership you represent, and it is my considered judgment when John L. Lewis steps down there must be a demand for Phil Murray.

Vultee Aircraft Workers Strike For Wage Increase

PICKETS: Whole families join the picket line as members of the United Automobile Workers strike at the Vultee Aircraft Co. in Downey, Calif., for higher wages and union conditions.

Company Fattens On U. S. Orders

DOWNEY, Calif., Nov. 22. — Thousands of CIO airplane workers formed a half-mile picket line at the closed Vultee Aircraft factory to demand recognition of their demands for increased wages.

In a message sent to the CIO convention, Lou Michener, west coast regional director of the United Automobile Workers, declared:

"The issue in this strike is simple. Billions of government orders on the one hand and starvation wages on the other.

"Manufacturers are attempting to hide behind the subterfuge of national defense. We will not permit them to wax 'ultra-patriotic' at the expense of our wives and children."

The strike was called Nov. 21 when wage negotiations broke down. The CIO is asking a minimum of 75c an hour; the company refuses to pay more than 50c an hour minimum—which is far less than workers doing the same type of working in unionized automobile plants are receiving.

PLANT SHUT TIGHT

Speaking to a rain-soaked crowd in a field near the huge factory, whose operations have ceased as a result of the strike, Michener disputed statements made in an Atlantic City press conference by Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman that the government agency had not been give notice of the strike.

"Commissioner Hillman had not only 48 hours notice, but nine months' advance word that we contemplated taking strike action," he charged.

Michener reminded the strikers of Pres. Roosevelt's recent statement that true national defense can be based only on adequate living standards for American workers.

"I submit to you that a 50-cent hourly minimum, less than $20 a week, does not represent anything worth defending," the UAW official declared. "According to company records about 60 per cent of the strikers receive either 50 or 52½ cents an hour."

Representatives of the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission's conciliation service are now in Downey seeking to find a truce formula.

Lots of Work During CIO Convention

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 22.— A hard-working, smoothly-functioning apparatus kees CIO convention sessions moving at a fast clip.

Half a dozen committees, representing CIO union affiliates, receive, study and report to the convention on a tremendous mass of material.

The resolutions committee, for instance, takes the huge mass of suggestions turned in by the affiliates, and compiles them into one satisfactory resolution on each subject. The committee's own resolution is then read to the delegates, debated if the delegates so see fit, and then approved or rejected. All resolutions offered here have been accepted by the delegates.

The constitution committee does much the same sort of work with proposed amendments to the CIO's basic document.

HANDLE REPORT

Another important committee is the one which handles the President's report to the convention. That document, a sizable book in itself, covers every phase of CIO activity during the past year and makes recommendations on future policies and programs.

The committee reviews the entire report section by section, and has the right to approve or disapprove of its findings, and to suggest new policies or supplement those recommended by the President.

When the officers' report group appears before the delegates, it reads its own report on the president's document, and asks for convention approval for each section.

Election of officers is held on the final day of the parley.

Union Pledges Aid to Strikers

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 22.—The United Automobile Workers, as representatives of striking Vultee aircraft workers in Downey, Calif., is "ready at any time . . . to seek an immediate and constructive settlement of the strike," Pres. R. J. Thomas declared here.

Thomas, a CIO vice-president and a delegate to the convention here, pointed out that "our union is whole-heartedly behind the defense program and has demonstrated that by harmonious relationships which now prevail in plants under contract with us and which are engaged in many millions of dollars of defense work."

He reiterated, however, that employes of firms engaging in defense production work are entitled to decent living standards.

"Of the 3,783 workers employed at Vultee, fully 1,457 receive between $20 and $22 a week," the UAW president said. "Wages of other workers are out of line with their skill and with minimum living costs.

"A proposed basis of settlement put forward by our union would take a little over $1,000,000 a year from the heavy profits which the company is now taking through government orders. The proposal would allocate a major part of the total increase to those in the low wage brackets.

"The Vultee company rejected that reasonable offer, as it has rejected alternative reasonable proposals.

"Eight weeks of patient negotiation on the part of the union preceded the walkout, which was voted by the workers 2,252 to 52."

Pres. Murray Sounds Call For Big Organizing Drives

3rd Convention Ends With Plans To Build Unions

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—CIO affiliates throughout the nation today were buckling down to intensified organizing campaigns in line with the unanimous mandate of the third constituitonal convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Pres. Philip Murray, unanimously elected to succeed John L. Lewis at the convention's final session, asked the delegates and "our millions of people back home for their cooperation in the promotion of this great work."

In the presence of the current national emergency, Murray added, "the forces of the CIO should be united as they have never been before, toward the attainment of that common goal, the aspirations, the ambitions and the ideals of millions of Americans."

Principal discussion after the election of new CIO executives at the last day of the convention was the organization of Ford and other remaining large non-union corporations. Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Sec-Treas. George Addes of the United Automobile Workers, and Michael S. Widman, director of the Ford drive, all predicted speedy unionization of the auto industry's last remaining non-union holdout.

Two Union Presidents Resign

Washington, Nov. 30.—Presidents of two CIO-affiliated international unions have resigned in recent weeks, it was revealed here today.

From the Pacific northwest word came that Harold Pritchett had resigned as president of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, a post he has held since that union was formed. A Canadian citizen, Pritchet's efforts to get American citizenship were thwarted by government officials.

When his visitor's visa expired some months ago, he was forced to return from IWA headquarters in Seattle, Wash., to Vancouver.

In his letter of resignation Pritchett declared that his inability to be present at union headquarters made it seem advisable that he leave his post.

Meanwhile Pres. Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers announced that he was leaving that position for a high office in the Federal Works Agency. Head of UFWA since its organization three years ago, Baker was a former deputy administrator of WPA.

NATIONWIDE BROADCAST:

Labor Is Nation's 'First Defense Line'—Murray

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The CIO "is the labor movement in our first line of defense," Philip Murray, CIO president, told a nationwide radio audience in his first broadcast since his election at the Atlantic City convention.

As such, Murray said, the CIO will continue its vital work in organizing basic mass production industries, bringing collective bargaining to millions of workers, raising wages and cutting hours to bring the living standards of America up to American levels.

This is assured by the strength of the CIO, Murray said, adding: "Five years ago, the group of men who laid the groundwork for the formation of the CIO represented something in excess of 1,000,000 union members. The convention which ended today had delegates from some two score of national and international unions, representing over 4,000,000 union members.

"Nothing else I could possibly say in the course of this talk could give any better reason for the existence of the CIO. When a movement shows such remarkable growth in the short period of five years it is quite obvious that it has substance. And it is also quite obvious that such a movement is long overdue."

CIO PROGRAM

The CIO convention, Murray said, showed again that it backs all measures necessary for the true defense of America. It also showed it was aware not only of enemies from without but of enemies from within—those who try to tear down social laws as well as those who represent "dictatorships and foreign ideologies."

These enemies of social progress, Murray said, "want to scuttle the 40-hour week, nullify the Wagner Act, shelve the Walsh-Healey Act, and destroy bonafide unionism. One of labor's responsibilities is to see that these selfish interests do not have their way. Civil retreat can be just as disastrous as military defeat—in fact, to sacrifice progressive labor measures is to lose the first battle for democracy."

That is why the CIO fights giving fat government contracts to firms that violate such laws as the Wagner Act, Murray declared.

Labor's fundamental aims, he added, include work for all, better distribution of the nation's wealth, better housing, health, and generally higher living standards—plus "a widening of the opportunity for labor participation" in the affairs of the nation.

Win Eighth Election In Delaware

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 30.—State CIO Director Don Harris today announced that the CIO had swept to its eighth straight Labor Board election victory in Delaware.

Last Friday local 201 of the fur and leather workers union won an election in the shop of the Amalgamated Leather Company by a vote of 597 to 55.

In the eight elections CIO has received 1,312 votes. Company unions 75 votes, and no union 215 votes. The city of Wilmington is being rapidly turned into a CIO town.

Sign Contract

Decatur, Ill., Nov. 30.—Signing of a contract between the Hi-Flier Mfg. Co. of this city and the CIO was announced by Regional Director John Doherty, after successful negotiations by Steel Workers Organizing Committee Representatives Fullerton Fulton and Alex Hudson.

Win Vultee Strike, Get Pay Raise

DOWNEY, Calif., Nov. 30. — Four thousand employes of the Vultee Aircraft Co. were back at their jobs today after successfully withstanding one of the fiercest red-baiting campaigns in recent history and winning 12½c hourly wage increases.

The union victory followed shortly after Pres, R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers arrived here for negotiations. The auto union leader flew across the country from Atlantic City, N. J., where he had been attending the CIO convention.

The settlement which was accepted enthusiastically by the strikers provides that minimum wages be raised from 50 cents to 62½ cents an hour, and that the increases be made retroactive to November 1. Officials estimated the total lift in the company's wage bill would approximate $1,300,000 a year.

16-MONTH PACT

The contract signed by the union and the Vultee management —which had previously refused to enter an agreement—runs for 16 months. It sets up machinery for arbitration of disputes during the life of the agreement.

The pact was signed in the Vultee offices while movie and newspaper cameras recorded the scene. Outside hundreds of strikers sang "America" and cheered their victory, the biggest so far in the CIO campaign to lift the substantial wage rates of the nation's aircraft industry.

Wyndham Mortimer, representative of the UAW who has directed the southwestern organization campaign, reminded the crowd "that this is only the beginning. We are going to organize the aircraft industry all over southern California in the next two or three months."

THOUSANDS PICKET

The walkout, which was caused by flat refusal of the Vultee management to consider wage increases, found thousands of the employes—most of them boys and young men—enthusiastically picketing the aircraft firm's property.

Their ranks held firm despite red-baiting blasts from the Dies Committee, from the usual anti-labor bloc in Congress and from Attorney General Robert Jackson.

Union officials steadfastly maintained that the strike had no motive other than to lift the sweatshop wage rates, which are far below the amount paid workers doing comparable jobs in automobile plants.

Walter Smethurst, chief of the CIO's aircraft organizing campaign, who was on the scene throughout the strike, pointed out that of 3,783 workers in the union's jurisdiction, some 1,600 received less than 60 cents an hour, with large numbers getting 55, 52½ and even 50 cents. The strike call came, he noted, only after eight weeks of patient negotiating.

A short time ago the UAW won an overwhelming victory at Vultee in a Labor Board election, and the vote to strike was almost unanimous.

Win New Textile Pact

MILLVILLE, N. J., Nov. 30. —The closed shop, checkoff and one-week vacations are provided in a new contract signed by the CIO Textile Workers Union and the Millville Manufacturing Co., covering 800 workers.

DOUBLE PROFITS

New York — Profits of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. during the first nine months of the year more than doubled over the same period in 1939

First Woman Member

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. —Final day of the CIO convention saw the election of the first woman member to the Executive Board. She is Eleanor Nelson, secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers, who has been a leader in organization of government employes since 1933. Miss Nelson succeeds Jacob Baker, former president of the Federal Workers, who resigned to take a government position.

Settle Aluminum Strike

New Kensington, Pa., Nov. 30 —Over two thousand members of Local 2, Aluminum Workers of America met here Thanksgiving night, November 28, in the New Kensington High School auditorium to hear that they had won a seven-day strike against the Aluminum Cmpany of America.

They quickly voted to acept the results of negotiations with the company, in which CIO President Philip Murray participated, and which resulted in a complete fulfillment of their demands according to union officials.

Negotiations conducted all day Wednesday brought an admittance from Company officials that a N. K. Sheet Mill employe, around whom the strike centered, had been at fault when he threatened a union committeeman in the plant. The Company agreed to discipline the individual by completely isolating him in a newly created job at its boiler house in the Logans Ferry plant, which is located outside the community. The company further agreed to force this employe to enter and leave the plant by himself and force him to work an odd shift, away from the remainder of employes. Immediately plans were made by unionists to disband the elaborate strike organization which they set into motion a week ago.

Participating in the negotiations which brought about a satisfactory settlement were CIO Pres. Philip Murray; AWA International President N. A. Zonarich; AWA International Board Member Walter S. Pasnick, and Amalgamated Clothing Workers Vice-President Leo Krzycki. I. W. Wilson, Vice-President, and R. R. Stevenson, Superintendent, represented the company.

All union representatives but Murray, addressed members of the union at the special meeting, Thursday night. Krzycki gave an enthusiastic talk at the meeting in which he praised the conduct of the AWA and pointed out he was satisfied with the negotiations.

"Four million CIO members will be cheered to learn that this matter has been settled satisfactory." Krzycki said.

Zonarich, who was asked to take part in the dispute last Saturday, presented results of the conference to the receptive membership.

"New Kensington Aluminum Workers have accomplished what they set out to do", he declared. "We have won a substantial victory."

Text Of Important CIO Resolutions

Political Action

WHEREAS, (1) The political program of organized labor must reflect its fundamental objectives to improve the standard of living of the American people, to find a solution for our basic economic problems, and to safeguard our democratic institutions,

(2) The impending crises of a world-wide nature have cast upon labor not only the responsibility of safeguarding its own interests, but of finding a common program of action with all other progressive elements in this country and in the world abroad; and

(3) Recent events have shown that labor must organize its political activities so that it may be able to assume its full and independent strength, thereby placing itself in a position to give and receive the utmost co-operation in a common political program with other progressive groups; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, (1) That the CIO hereby dedicates itself to a full participation in the political life of this country, uniting its strength and resources with all other liberal and progressive forces; and

(2) That the Executive Officers and the Executive Board of the CIO are hereby authorized and directed to give serious consideration to this problem looking toward the formulation of a program which would guarantee and assure an independent political role for organized labor.

National Labor Relations Act

WHEREAS, (1) The past year's history of the National Labor Relations Act has been notable for the defeat of the attempts by employer groups and the AFL Executive Council to destroy the law by amendment, the increasing judicial acceptance of the principles of the Act and of the decisions of the Labor Board:

(2) At the same time the administration of the Act is endangered by division among its administrators, continued tendency to establish AFL craft unions in the face of a history of collective bargaining by industrial unions and the pressure of reactionary forces seeking to use the national defense as a pretext for destroying labor's right to collective bargaining; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, (1) That the CIO hereby expresses its unalterable opposition to any amendments to the National Labor Relations Act at the present time;

(2) That CIO calls upon the administrators of the Act to strengthen their procedure for enforcement, to avoid all compromise and to give workers the full benefit of collective bargaining through industrial unionism;

(3) That CIO calls upon Congress to appropriate sufficient funds to the Board to assure the effective administration of this legislation;

(4) That CIO affiliates be cautioned to use the machinery of the Act only as an aid to sound organizing activity; and

(5) That the CIO expresses its conviction that the labor policy in national defense embody the tested and proven principles of the National Labor Relations Act guaranteeing to workers the right to organize into unions of their own choosing without interference by employers and requiring employers to bargain collectively with the freely chosen representatives of their employes.

Labor Voice on Govt. Agencies

WHEREAS, (1) Labor has a vital stake in the administration of all important legislation and its interests can only be protected by affording recognition to labor in appointment to policy-determining positions in the federal and state agencies; and

(2) The creation of added governmental agencies such as the National Defense Commission and the various local draft boards has re-emphasized the necessity for equal labor representation on governmental agencies; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED (1) That the CIO, recognizing both the rights and obligations of the American people, urges and insists that labor be given equal representation with consumers and farmers, as well as industry, upon all important federal and state governmental agencies, and that the representation of labor should be drawn from the ranks of organized labor and be truly representative of and be acceptable to those labor organizations for which they are chosen to represent; and

(2) The CIO expresses its belief that such representation will insure the administration of important social legislation and the exercise of executive powers in accordance with the intent of the laws and the mandate given to the executive branches of the government.

Murray's Keynote Stresses Need For Nationwide Organizing Drive

CEREMONY: In a move symbolizing the change in CIO leadership, John L. Lewis (left) turns over to Philip Murray, the new president, a prized white gavel. It was first presented to Lewis several years ago by members of the United Mine Workers.

Use Opportunity, He Urges Delegates

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Organize the unorganized!

That slogan will continue to be the CIO's main theme during its coming year, it was evident as newly-elected President Philip Murray closed the historic third constitutional convention at the Hotel Chelsea in Atlantic City late in the afternoon of Nov. 22.

"Leave here with your heads erect, facing what storms may be in the offing, challenge your enemies, prosecute your policies, these policies enacted by you in the course of this great convention," Pres. Murray told the delegates a minute before adjournment.

"Join. . . .in the promotion of the greatest organizational campaign ever undertaken in the history of America. Make it an effective campaign, instill in your followers a desire to do this job."

The final day's sessions brought:

1. The election of Murray to succeed retiring Pres. John L. Lewis; the re-election of Sec. James B. Carey; and the installation as vice-presidents of Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union; S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers; Emil Rieve, of the Textile Workers; Reid Robinson, of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Frank Rosenblum of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; and R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

2. Nomination and election of a new CIO Executive Board.

3. Announcement that the Executive Board would hold its next meeting in Washington, January 8, 1941.

4. Presentation of a scroll to John L. Lewis bearing the signatures of the delegates.

5. A report on the progress of the Ford organizational campaign and a prediction that it would meet with speedy success.

Election of the CIO's new executive officers came early in the Nov. 22 morning session as a special order of business.

PRAISED BY LEWIS

Murray, who is a vice-president of the United Mine Workers, and chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, was nominated by Lewis.

"The CIO," Lewis said, "has a proud record of accomplishment, it is justifying the dream of its founders, it is justifying the faith of its members, and it is demonstrating to the American people that it can function in a way that will advance the interest and well-being of its membership and yet protect the privilege and the rights and the well-being of every American. . ."

WELL QUALIFIED

Lewis spoke of his "pardonable pride" in presenting a man "whom I think qualifies by every material consideration, by every attribute of character, to serve as President of this organization."

Murray has made "a great record," Lewis added; he is "splendidly equipped with every natural and inherent talent, a gentleman at all times, considerate of the feelings of all those with whom he comes in contact, a scholar, a profound student of economics, a natural leader, an administrator, a family man and a God-fearing man."

HILLMAN SECONDS

The nomination was seconded by Sidney Hillman, who had announced previously that he would not seek renomination as a vice-president.

"I know that Philip Murray will bring forth and carry on that splendid unity that has always prevailed in our organization," he told the delegates. "...I know of no man who has made a greater contribution to labor than our friend.

"But even more than that," Hillman concluded, "I know that in Philip Murray we are giving not merely the leadership to our movement, but we are putting him at the service of the nation."

The nomination was enthusiastically seconded by Vice-Presidents Robinson, Thomas and Dalrymple.

Resolutions Show CIO Leads In Struggle for Better Life

Continue to Seek Better Wages

Having won the support and confidence of millions of workers by striving constantly to raise wages, shorten hours and improve working conditions, the CIO convention pledged to continue to further this program.

"It is only fair," the resolution stated, "that the workers receive their fair share of the increasing profits which are being enjoyed by industry through increased business and technological improvements."

The CIO reaffirmed its fundamental economic policy to increase the purchasing power of the American people and thereby improve their standard of living, and warned against any action aimed to deprive the workers of their fair share of increased earnings or to deny them their fundamental right to organize or to strike, "under the pretense of furthering national defense."

Rap Wire-Tapping

Any legislation intended to sanction the use of wiretapping or other unreasonable investigation which would "destroy the freedom of the American people and subject them to regimentation by hidden and secret surveillance upon their daily lives" was condemned in a resolution passed by the CIO convention.

Labor and Farmers

Recognizing as a fundamental policy the unity of interests between farmers and union labor in a balanced and permanent prosperity, the CIO convention voted:

1. To continue its policy of cooperating with farm groups inviting "progressive farmers and farm organizations to join hands with organized labor in the achievement of their common goal."

2. To instruct CIO executive officers to support legislation benefiting farmers.

Aliens' Rights

Untiring vigilance to see that the Alien Registration Act be administered with regard to the rights of aliens was pledged by the CIO convention in a resolution which also condemned measures such as the Hobbs and Dempsey bills and opposed illegal discrimination against honest employes who are not citizens.

Discrimination

Uncompromising opposition to any form of discrimination, whether political or economic, based upon race, color, creed or nationality, was pledged in a resolution adopted unanimously at the CIO convention.

Youth Program

Support of a comprehensive youth program to provide not only full opportunity for education and training but also to give substance to the fundamental right of everyone to a job was called for in a resolution passed unanimously at the CIO convention.

Noting that "the burden of unemployment continues to fall with a special severity on the young men and women of the country who have been deprived of jobs and educational opportunities," the resolution endorsed a youth program which would:

1. Continue support of such measures as the American Youth Act.

2. Recognize the importance of continued and increased co-operation between labor and youth organizations.

Labor and Defense

Awareness of the CIO to dangers inherent in the government's defense program was shown in resolutions passed at last week's convention. Profiteering in defense production was condemned and profit limitation, excess profits taxation, prosecution of profiteers, and measures to control increases in the cost of living were urged.

Measures were also called for to safeguard the social security rights of those called into federal and military service.

In a resolution on the calling of the National Home Guard into Federal service, the CIO convention urged the federal government to prohibit any form of private contributions or support to Home Guard units and to prevent the violation of fundamental civil liberties.

Flay Exile Bill

A bill introduced in Congress for the single purpose of deporting Harry Bridges, West Coast head of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, was denounced by the CIO convention as a violation of democratic principles and an attack upon organized labor.

Endorse Co-ops

A resolution endorsing Cooperatives declared that the CIO recognized "the necessity for developing strong consumer agencies that may serve to supplement the activities of organized labor in defending consumer interests in our national economy." Full support in furthering the development of the cooperative movement was urged.

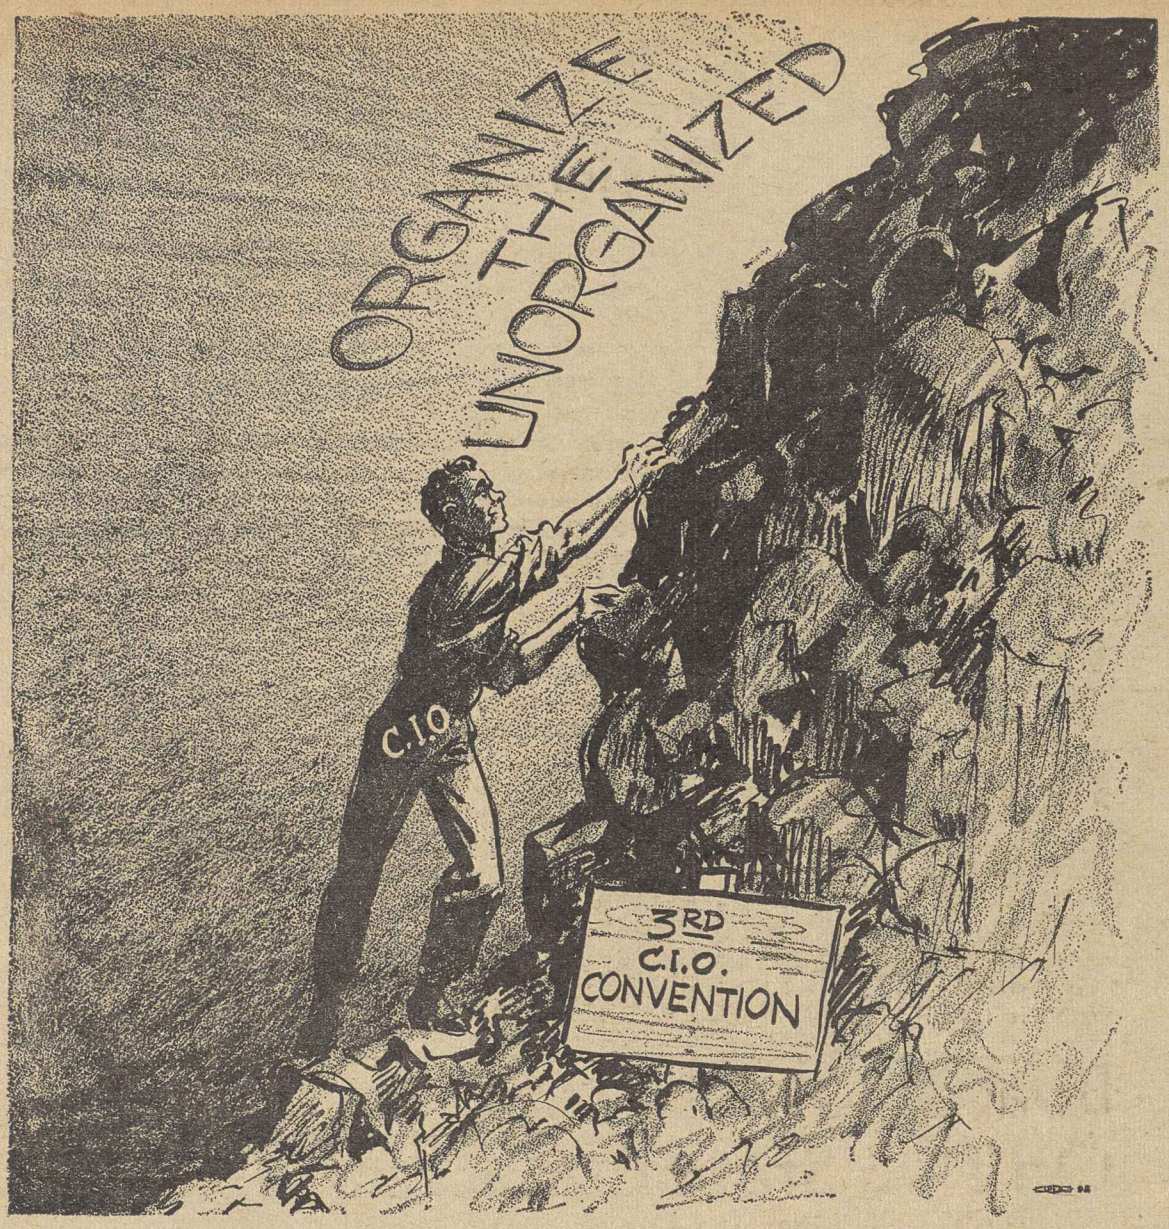
Auto Union Wins Mack Truck Vote

Washington, Nov. 30 — The CIO United Automobile Workers today had increased its steady run of Labor Board election victories with a two-to-one vote at the Mack Truck Manufacturing Co. plant, Allentown, Pa. The UAW polled 1,688 votes to only 855 against.

Announcement of the victory, made to the CIO convention by Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, brought lusty cheers from the delegates.

Name CIO Man To Appeals Board

Washington, Nov. 30—One CIO representative was named to the draft appeals board for the District of Columbia.



The appointee is Cecil Owen, publicity director for the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and president of the Washington, D. C., Industrial Union Council.

Drive All Set to Go, Reporters Are Told

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The "most widespread campaign of organization in all industries ever undertaken" will be first on the agenda of the CIO, Philip Murray, newly elected president, told reporters at Atlantic City, after an Executive Board session that followed the closing of the third CIO convention.

The CIO, he said, "has all the essentials necessary to make possible an effective campaign," adding that the drives now going on in Bethlehem, Ford and other basic industries were showing good progress and that the renewed drive would bring industrial unionism to hundreds of thousands who had never known its benefits before.

Organizing plans were further discussed in a conference of CIO Regional Directors and Field Representatives, Murray said, and a number of assignments made. He also announced that another meeting of the Executive Board would take place in Washington, D. C., on January 8, 1941.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE third convention of the CIO had everything that goes to make great drama.

There was tension, suspense, clash, swiftly moving action, and deeply emotional situations.

John L. Lewis opened the convention with the affirmation of his stand with the hungry and underprivileged, and his simple statement that "in just a day or two I will be out of this office."

Philip Murray, the new president, brought it to a close with a call for "the greatest organizational campaign ever undertaken in the history of America."

In between those two speeches were five close-packed days in which a great congress of labor argued and voted its stand in the democratic way on issues of the widest import—and out of disagreement fashioned unity.

It was great because of the importance of the matters with which it dealt, the depth of conviction it revealed, the eloquence of its utterance, and the poignancy which underlay it.

For the retirement of John L. Lewis from the presidency of CIO brought a profound sense of personal loss to all who knew and loved, and even to many who had fought, this great labor warrior.

And the reluctant decision of Philip Murray, his close friend and associate, to yield to the unanimous demand that he assume the mantle of leadership, stirred deep emotions as he accepted the gavel from his predecessor.

There was more clash than at any previous meeting of the CIO, more fighting speeches, more vigorous arguments.

The men and women who make up CIO did not defeat industrial despotism through practicing the virtues of the shrinking violet.

It took aggressiveness, militancy and determination to build the power of CIO's industrial unions.

And in demanding industrial democracy from their employers, the members of CIO have not failed to become schooled in the give-and-take of democratic procedure in their own ranks.

So the delegates to this third CIO convention fought vigorously for their respective points of view, accepted the majority decisions, and went away united on the basic purposes of organization for which the movement was founded.

To compare the third convention of CIO with its previous gatherings is to see at a glance the major stages of the movement's development.

The first national conference of CIO was held in Atlantic City in October 1937. Unanimous and enthusiastic in all its actions, it met in the full flush of the first successes of a new movement that had swept a continent.

Its keynote was the closing speech of John L. Lewis, in which he dwelt on the purposes of the great crusade so splendidly launched, and warned of the trials of approaching unemployment and depression.

The first constitutional convention in Pittsburgh in November 1938, was the occasion for laying down the laws and regulations and procedures under which the new movement was to operate on a permanent basis.

Agreed-upon objectives were solemnly ratified, officers elected, a constitution adopted, and the Congress of Industrial Organizations was formally founded.

The San Francisco convention of October 1939 was the first in which the new Congress functioned as a going and established concern, operating under already adopted rules and procedures.

Differences of opinion were subordinated in the anxiety of all to demonstrate the unity of the new movement, and to give the lie to enemies who predicted it would break on the first rocks of internal difference.

The third convention, just concluded, represents in many ways the coming of age of CIO.

It has revealed the maturity and self-assurance of a movement which is not afraid to fight out its differences on the convention floor, because it is sure of its basic unity, and because it knows that its established democratic procedures are proof against disruption.

It has also shown that the movement is so solidly established that it can survive the retirement from office even of a leader like John L. Lewis, whose name has been almost synonymous with CIO, and the very suggestion of whose resignation at San Francisco brought grave apprehension for the movement's future.

Two speeches struck the keynote of the Atlantic City convention. The final address of John L. Lewis stressed the importance of internal unity and tolerance, and praised the youth and energy of the new leadership developed by CIO.

The acceptance speech of Philip Murray, pledging himself to carry on the work so well begun, brought out the great opportunities immediately ahead and rededicated the movement to united action for the achievement of its basic purpose of organizing the unorganized.

Opportunity

With others, I joined with John Lewis five years ago in this city to perfect an organization that would give to the workers of this nation unions—strong, militant, aggressive, powerful unions.

Out of the seeds that were sown five years ago there has grown this mighty oak, a mighty organization of labor, the mightiest in the world today, the most potent influence not only in the field of labor, but really the most potent influence in the United States of America—the CIO.

Greater opportunities lie before us today than confronted us five years ago. The right to organize is still here, the right to enjoy the beneficent blessings of true collective bargaining is still with us.

Thousands of men and women have gone back to their places of work, industry is operating at greater momentum than perhaps at any period since the year 1929. The door of opportunity has been widened. CIO must, must take advantage of that opportunity.—Pres. Philip Murray.

Labor Unity

The Congress of Industrial Organizations has steadily and sincerely desired labor unity, a real unity which would enable labor to advance the interests of the workers. . . .

Unity in the labor movement can be accomplished only if the unions in the CIO can continue to organize the unorganized workers in the mass-production and basic industries along industrial lines. And it must be all-inclusive. It must protect and include all the organizations in the CIO.

The millions of newly-organized workers are the pride of the CIO and the proof of the effectiveness of the principles of the CIO. Not one must be abandoned to the cavillings of jurisdictional claims of craft unions and the prevalent racketeering within the AFL. In short, every affiliated organization of the CIO must be chartered and included in any new united labor body that may develop.

Any program for unity should involve a joint convention of all labor organizations, including those of the AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and the CIO, with existing jurisdictional differences to be adjusted in such a convention.—Adopted Convention Report.

Youth and Energy

I have confidence in the future of this organization, because in it is life and virility. It has youth and energy. . . .

One of the greatest contributions of the CIO is the opportunity it has given to the young men and women of this country to become a part of this enterprise, taking a constructive place in the internal economy of the nation, and to go to the university of experience which our movement exemplifies and participate in its free forums.

The CIO is training these young men and women by the thousands and thousands in the duties and responsibilities of leadership. And as the years go by they will be trained and qualified to assume greater and greater responsibilities; and there will be room constantly at the bottom for the younger element to begin their task of apprenticeship in leadership.

These free forums that the CIO has established in every community in America, in countless industries, are forums where any member of our organization can go and voice his opinion and express an idea, whether that idea runs to the affairs of the organization or whether it runs to the affairs of the community, the state or the nation.

This nation in the future must look more and more to the ranks of labor to produce its public men.—John L. Lewis.

Push Organizing Drives, Murray Tells Delegates

the delegates, they rose unanimously in a demonstration for the new president of the CIO.

Lewis then presented to Murray a gavel once given him by members of the United Mine Workers. Describing it as one of his "cherished possessions," Lewis turned the gavel over to the new CIO head, declaring it symbolized "your election and your selection and the high honor conferred upon you today, and in presenting it to you I present it with my profound good wishes for your success."

FEELS 'HUMBLE'

After lengthy applause, Murray made his first address as president of the organization.

"I stand before you today humble in the eyes of God," he said, "elected by you to represent you and the millions whom you have left at home as president of your great organization.

"I doubt that any contribution I may have made to the cause of labor down through the years merited the magnificent tribute paid me by my great and most distinguished friend, John Lewis, this morning."

He pointed out that he knew the responsibilities and obligation of his new office, and added:

"I look forward with you to the day when our country and its people may be able to enjoy a broader security, a security that encompasses the well-being of all the people throughout the nation, a kind of security that will drive from the temples of finance and industry the forces of rapacity, greed and selfishness, and that will mete out to the lowly, the humble and the workers of this nation those things that God, in His infinite wisdom, decreed the masses of the universe should receive.

"To the attainment of those objectives of yours, I give to you from this public platform my being, my energy, and such little wisdom as God Almighty may have given to me."

Turning to the immediate problems ahead, Murray asked for united support in order that CIO might soon attain its goal of ten million members.

"I am not going to be content with a pledge of loyalty and support. I am not going to be content with the passage of a mere resolution.

DEEDS COUNT

"Deeds count! Hard work is needed! Petty bickering must stop! The tongue of the slandermonger must be stilled! The work of the organization must be single in purpose, and that is the organizing of men and women into mighty unions. . . .

"Greater opportunities lie before us today than confronted us five years ago. . .CIO must take advantage of that opportunity."

Discussing briefly the question of labor unity, the new CIO President offered the opinion that a unity devoted to "greater efficiency and more continuity in the production machinery of American industry" is far more effective and far more necessary than any "will-o'-the-wisp method" suggested by AFL leaders.

Murray noted the right of workers to organize into unions of their own choosing under the Wagner Act, and then offered "a mild protest against the use of governmental pressure . . .to force shot-gun agreements between the CIO and the AFL."

Deny FBI Probed CIO Marine Union

New York, Nov. 30 — A denial from Pres. Roosevelt that the Federal Bureau of Investigation ever investigated the National Maritime Union or issued a "one hundred page report" on the union had been received today by NMU Pres. Joseph Curran, who was elected a CIO vice-president at the Atlantic City convention.

The President's communication was a reply to a query from Curran about a speech by Rep. C. Arthur Anderson of Missouri on the floor of the House October 9.

QUOTED IN SPEECH

Anderson, an open foe of labor who was defeated for re-election, referred frequently in that speech to the alleged FBI investigation of the union, and quoted from what he described as the FBI report, allegedly "official file No. 65—4632 of the Dept. of Justice."

Subsequently several newspapers discussed the alleged FBI report and its findings, which they described as confidential.

Hillman Picks Shipyard Committee

Washington, Nov. 30.—Appointment of a shipbuilding stabilization committee composed of representatives of organized labor, the shipbuilding industry, the Navy and the U. S. Maritime Commission was announced this week by Sidney Hillman, Labor Division Commissioner of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Hillman said the committee would "explore ways and means of stabilizing employment in the country's shipyards."

Morris L. Cooke, industrial engineer attached to the labor division's staff as consultant, was named chairman. The committee is scheduled to hold its first official meeting Dec. 5 in Washington.

Those named to serve on the committee: President Harvey Brown, AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists; President John P. Frey, AFL Metal Trades Dept.; President John Green, CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; Gregory Harrison, Pacific Coast Shipyards; Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman, U. S. Maritime Commission; F. A. Liddell, Gulf Coast shipyards; Joseph W. Powell, special asst. to Secretary of the Navy Knox; Prof. H. L. Seward, North and South Atlantic Coast shipyards; H. Gerrish Smith, Great Lakes shipyards; and Philip H. Van Gelder, secretary, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

Protest Appointment

New York, Nov. 30.—Sharp protest against the appointment of Merrill Meigs, former Hearst executive, to the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission was expressed by the Executive Board of the American Newspaper Guild in a letter sent to Pres. Roosevelt.

Meigs, the ANG pointed out, was Hearst's chief union-buster during the Chicago strike, during which he "was responsible for a violent campaign against the strikers and their rights as citizens, a campaign which included physical assault."

Board Settles Dispute On Two State Councils

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 26.—Settlement of two disputes in state CIO Councils, one in New York and the other in Washington state, was announced by Philip Murray, chairman of a special committee which also included Reid Robinson and George Addes, following Executive Board ratification of agreements reached between the parties concerned.

Both disputes involved representation at state Council conventions, during which the two meetings broke up over the question of credentials. In both cases the conventions were ruled illegal, as a result of the disputes.

In Washington state, the Executive Board endorsed the appointment of an administrator, J. C. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, who would select a credentials committee of three to pass on credentials for a new special convention to be held at an early date. This was accepted by the parties involved.

NEW YORK

The New York disagreement was settled on somewhat similar lines, with Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the Mine Workers, Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director and secretary of the N. Y. Council, and Gustav Strobel of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers designated as a committee to administer the affairs of the Council until a special convention is called.

AFL Officer Confesses Bombing CIO Jobs

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 30. — Authorities were holding two prominent AFL officials, one a confessed dynamiter, after bombing of three buildings here being erected by members of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

The bombings, it was indicated, were part of a general effort to terrorize UCWOC members. Only a short time before a UCWOC power shovel at Canton had been similarly bombed.

Confession of Tilford Floyd, AFL official whose brother was killed in the Akron explosions, directly pinned the responsibility on the craft unionists. Also being held is Harry J. Jones, vice president of the Ohio State Federation of Labor.

Both men, active in the Operating Engineers Union, AFL, are charged with malicious destruction of property. Warrants for their arrest in connection with the earlier Canton bombing have also been issued. They are being held in jail here while bond has been set at $15,000 for Floyd and $7,500 for Jones.

Police found the body of Robert C. Floyd, brother of the defendant, in one of the bombed buildings. From the position of the body and the injuries inflicted, police figured that he had been carrying the bomb in his arms when it exploded.

Asking federal investigation of the entire affair, Clifford E. Miller, UCWOC General Organizer, said:

"These bombings are an attempt by certain rival unions to smash the CIO union in the construction industry. Members of the UCWOC were working on all three of these buildings."

The local press took a similar view of the incident and condemned the AFL violence and sabotage of UCWOC jobs.

Pres. Murray Foresees Big Gains For CIO During Next Few Months

Following is the full text of the acceptance speech made by Philip Murray after he had been elected President of the CIO at the final day's session of the third constitutional convention.

President Lewis, my good friends—I stand here before you today humble in the eyes of God, elected by you to represent you and the millions whom you have left at home, as the President of your great organization.

I doubt that any contribution I may have made to the cause of labor down through the years merited the magnificent tribute paid me by my great and most distinguished friend, John Lewis, this morning.

My efforts in life have been singular indeed in that they have been devoted almost exclusively to helping others.

I have no illusions about the mighty honor that this great convention has thrust upon me here this morning. I have no illusions about the weighty responsibility entailed in assuming the presidency of the mightiest labor organization in the world. I sense keenly the work at hand, the immediate services to the affiliates of the CIO, to the membership of this union and to the millions of women and children dependent upon you and me.

I have no illusions with regard to the very definite responsibilities and obligations of an organization of this description, and not only the membership of this mighty union, but to the nation as well. I have canvassed the work of this convention. I have noted with pride in your legislative enactments of this convention with regard to improved standards of living, the maintenance of certain pieces of social legislation enacted by the Federal Congress during the recent years, improvements in social security, involvement in war, and many other things.

A Better Day

My own humble spirit runs even beyond the definite objectives proclaimed by you in your resolutions and adopted by you in this convention.

I look forward with you to the day when our country and its people may be able to enjoy a broader security, a security that encompasses the well-being of all of the people throughout the nation, a kind of security that will drive from the temples of finance and industry rapacity, greed and selfishness, and that will mete out to the lowly, the humble and the workers of this nation those things that God, in His infinite wisdom decreed the masses of the universe should receive.

And to the attainment of those objectives of yours, I give to you from this public platform this morning my life, my being, my energy, and such little wisdom as God Almighty may have given to me.

Yes, my friends, like you, like John Lewis and many others, I have come up through the crucible of sacrifice and hunger and want and privation and we all know what those things are. And it is out of these sacrifices and hardships there come organizations of this description to serve human beings, to serve humanity and to serve great nations like the United States of America.

I have a true appreciation of the immediate difficulties confronting America and perhaps confronting labor in America. I know something of the schemings and the connivances of interests in this nation who are bent upon ultimate destruction of everything reflecting the spirit of true democracy. And it is mighty unions, such as ours here, that must serve this rather useful purpose of stopping these forces of evil and bringing into our midst the destruction of the principles of practices of true democracy such as we have enjoyed in this great convention.

I have no illusions concerning the peculiar twist of fate that thrusts me into this position this morning. I am conscious that under ordinary circumstances this convention would have elected to its presidency the man we all love, John L. Lewis, and I would have supported him.

So forgive me if I should say to you that I, in my heart, in my bosom, in my mind and in my conscience have a very true appreciation of all those factors and in the course of this convention there might have arisen some misunderstandings, there may have been some confused minds.

United Spirit

But to all of you—to all of you, whoever you may be and whatever CIO organization you may represent in this convention, I pray, in the interest of your union, to give to me your united support. That, it seems to me, is absolutely essential to the well-being of this mighty organization and the millions dependent upon it.

I promise each of you definitely my untiring effort to build this organization of ours, to keep building until we make possible the attainment of that goal laid down for us by John L. Lewis in San Francisco just one year ago.

Organization of men and women is the essential thing needed to promote the well-being of this nation and our union. A practical demonstration of your ability to deliver the goods must be given to me during the ensuing year! I am not going to be content with a pledge of loyalty and support. I am not going to be content with the passage of a mere resolution. Deeds count! Hard work is needed! Petty bickering must stop! The tongue of the slandermonger must be stilled! The work of the organization must be singular in purpose, and that is the organization of men and women into mighty unions such as you and I represent upon the floor of this convention.

I ask you here today to not measure these words which I am telling from my mouth to you here this morning as just mere utterances coming from the mind of a man who has no particular interest in the building of a movement, but rather I ask you, the heart and soul and pulse beat of CIO, when this convention is over, to go back and organize men and women into those unions. And do a good job. Work hard at it, apply your energy and your intelligence constructively toward the attainment of that goal. If you do that perhaps a year from now we might to able to report a very substantial increase in membership. I am sure we will.

Opportunities

My friends, I with others, joined with John Lewis, five years ago to perfect an organization that would give to the workers of this nation unions—strong, militant, aggressive powerful unions, and out of the seeds that were sown five years ago there has grown this mighty oak, a mighty organization of labor, the mightiest in the world today, the most potent influence not only in the field of labor, but really the most potent influence in the United States of America—the CIO.

Greater opportunities lie before us today than confronted us five years ago. The right to organize is still here, the right to enjoy the beneficent blessings of true collective bargaining is still with us. Thousands of men and women have gone back to their places of work, industry is operating a greater momentum than perhaps at any period since the year 1929. The door of opportunity has been widened. CIO must, must take advantage of that opportunity.

Another important phase upon which you passed, and which received some attention during the course of this convention, is the matter of labor unity, labor unity. Might I, through the medium of this convention, give expression to my own convictions regarding that one situation? It is my understanding that the people of the United States when thinking of unity think largely in terms of a unity that comprehends greater efficiency and more continuity in the production machinery of American industry. Certainly CIO has done more to promote that kind of unity than any other institution I know of anywhere in the United States.

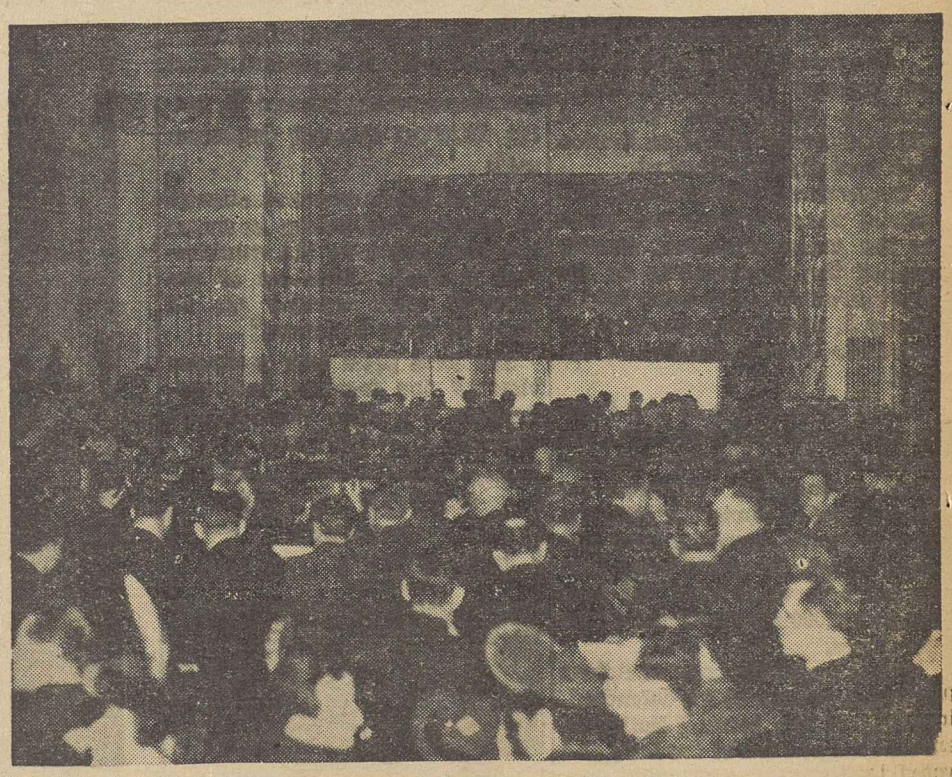
CIO assumes complete jurisdiction over every major defense industry in the United States of America, and in the development of its policies and in the growth of its unions, it has effectuated in each one of those industries almost universal collective bargaining agreements with industrial management and employers, and through the processes of those collective bargaining agreements they have given to the United States of America and to its citizenry more substantial, constructive, practical security than any will-o'-the-wisp method suggested by the leaders of the American Federation of Labor.

Served Nation Well

So that by and large insofar as the apprehensions of business go, and the multitudes of our great citizenry, CIO has served America's purpose in the field of labor unity through the establishment of true, peaceable, constructive collection bargaining agreements with industrial management and employers in the major defense industries of this country.

In that regard I do not want my position to be misunderstood. I stand behind the proposals originally offered by President Lewis concerning unity, and that this convention has approved and instructed its negotiators to prosecute. I do want America to understand at least, through the medium of this convention, that in the development of practical, constructive unity, the kind of unity that America appreciates, your organizations have done more in that field than any other institution in the United States within recent years.

Then there are other features of this so-called labor unity situation to which we now must give our attention. That is this. We have a law in this country of ours, known as the National Labor Relations Act. That Act, as I understand it, gives to the workers in American industry the right, in the first instance, to join a labor organization of their own choosing. And the workers exercise the right in joining that organization to determine the type of organization they want to affiliate with.



Under the law certainly—and I am merely talking about the law now—the workers employed in American industry therefore exercise the God-given right to affiliate themselves with CIO organizations if they want to, but certainly the actual determination of questions affecting affiliation with any particular group is set out in the law itself. I therefore offer a mild protest about the use of governmental pressure in the presence of this law to force shotgun agreements between the CIO and the AFL.

Murray's Position

I definitely pledge myself there, as in other situations, to support and to promote the policies of this convention enunciated in the report of President Lewis and passed by you when the Committee on President Lewis' report was submitted to you.

I merely make those statements in order that there may be a clarification of my position upon those rather important questions, because if I read the news prints aright—and I read them occasionally—I find that many of the news organs in this country observed and suggested that if this terrible man Lewis were pushed out of the way, this mild man, Murray, this moderate, vacillating, weak individual would immediately rush somewhere to perfect an agreement with the American Federation of Labor. Well, I just want you to know, my friends, as I told you the other day, I think I am a man. I think I have convictions, I think I have a soul and heart and a mind. And I want to let you in on something there; with the exception, of course, of my soul, they all belong to me, every one of them.

I am not going to occupy any more of your time. I want you to know that I do appreciate from the bottom of my heart this mighty honor that you have bestowed upon me. I pledge to you my effort, my energy and my life towards the attainment of your objectives.

John L. Lewis Looks Back On His Leadership of CIO

Following is the full text of the "valedictory" speech addressed to the third CIO convention by ex-Pres. John L. Lewis. The speech followed presentation to Mr. Lewis of a scroll bearing the signatures of the assembled delegates and paying tribute to his great services to the CIO. The scroll was presented, on behalf of the delegates, by Sec.-Treas. David MacDonald of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

I extend thanks for this scroll. It is worth more than pearls of great price, or silver, or fine linen, because it is a testimonial from those with whom I have worked and those who have believed that I have tried to make a contribution.

I once heard a very great man say, after receipt of a token of esteem from those who admired him and supported him: "I can only hope that I am not half as bad a man as mine enemies think, and that I am at least half as good a man as my friends think." And I think there is a lot of philosophy in that statement.

You know, all these so-called great men are just people and generally they are only outstanding because they have one or two traits of character or temperament or some special ability that Providence and a long line of progenitors have given them. In other words they are just alike, and yet in all other ways they have the same hopes and fears and substantially the same reaction. They worry about the same things. They have to lace their shoes in the morning and go to their meals like the rest of us and do the same ordinary thing that anyone else does. And if, in a few spare moments, they do something not particularly for themselves, but of benefit to someone else, we call them great. I suppose we do that to encourage them.

The hardest job I ever had in life was trying to measure up to the qualifications my friends gave me and I think most men have the experience that our knees sometimes quake for fear we cannot quite do the job. But I suppose, after all there is some virtue in carrying on even though a man has a bad pair of knees.

Great Convention

I am not going to make a speech. I think the words have been said in this convention, I think the scroll has been written, and it is not good that we sit in sackcloth and ashes, and it is not good that we sit and give to ourselves virtues which perhaps we only hope we possess.

We are closing a great convention. Many times that I have sat upon this platform in the past several days I have contrasted the scenes of this convention and the great world of labor that lies behind this convention and the constituencies behind each of you with the scene here in Atlantic City five years ago when we had not founded an organization, we had not achieved the place for our views and policies in the realm of American thought. We were merely decided to try and do these things, and as one looks about him and sees the breadth and the scope and the accomplishment of the CIO, its present broad base, its established position, the structure of its organization widespread and far-flung, I am compelled to say that we have done something in the last five years.

And when one thinks of starting another five-year-period of effort to follow this one and compares the starting place of today with the starting point of five years ago, in sheer, white logic, what is to prevent the conclusion that five years from today we will have an organization so great that it will have exceeded the dreams of those who first envisioned it.

CIO's Future

We are not starting from scratch today. We have millions of members. We have trained officers. We have headquarters, technical staffs and field organizers splendidly equipped. We have millions of members that are experienced in the work of operating and expanding this union and there is nothing to prevent the rolling and rolling onward of this mighty organization of men and women except ourselves. We will have to demonstrate the CIO and its leaders can stand prosperity. We will have to demonstrate that we will still possess through the coming months and years the ability to be tolerant of each other's opinions and retain as between each other that essential degree of confidence as is required of a voluntary association of men to preserve its integrity.

One who reads much of history, will know that the great associations of men throughout the centuries for the promotion of special principles and the achievement of desirable and meritorious and virtuous objectives are rarely estopped or overcome or disorganized or disbanded by the external forces which they encounter. That goes for nations as well as inferior groups of its citizens. The biggest empires in all the world history had their period of formation and growth, reached after maturities and come into inevitable days of decline because they were destroyed by forces from within.

It is true of political parties. It is true of labor unions. It is true of all forms of combinations of men. It is true of nations and it will be true of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unless each and every one of you of its leaders and its members behind them adhere constantly to the thought that only by being united can the organization endure.

There are lots of individuals who cannot stand prosperity and this organization is merely an enlargement of the individual effort through mutual association and by combination of millions of individuals in order that their pooled and aggregate strength may accomplish things which the individual lacks the strength to accomplish under our system of modern enterprises.

So all any of us can do, or each of us can do, is merely to do our part to the fullest possible degree. That part may be little or it may be much. Many of us are able to do things at times not because we planned it that way, but because opportunity in some mysterious manner came to us that enabled us to render a distinct service at the right moment. And the safety for the future preservation of this union depends upon the degree of confidence that each of our members and officers have one in the other.

Encourages Youth

So, my friends, I shall hope that we can have that confidence and that the acts of our leaders, those who accept leadership in our movement, with all of its implied and actual obligations, will be measured from the standpoint of making a contribution and yielding to all others in our movement the right also to make their contributions and voice their own opinions and apply their own yardstick of indulgence to the problems of today.

I have confidence in the future of this organization, because in it is life and virility. It has youth and energy.

One of my happiest reflections as I sat upon this platform during the sessions of the past week has been to recognize the contributions the young men of industry, of labor, and the young women of industry and labor are making in developing leadership to sustain our organization. And one of the greatest of the contributions of the CIO is the opportunity it has given to the young men and women of this country to become a part of this enterprise, taking a constructive place in the internal economy of the nation, and to go to the university of experience which our movement exemplifies and participate in its free forum and endure the taste of leadership placed upon those young men and women by their associates in plant, mill and factory.

In that respect the CIO differs from the AFL because we encourage the participation of youth with its energy and with its enthusiasm and with its capacity to contribute, when the AFL, with its controlled policies and its concentrated form of internal organization depresses and discourages that same participation on the part of the young men and women of labor.

Contrast With AFL

For many years I was a delegate representing a great organization to the annual conventions of the AFL, and during most of those years I was the President of the largest affiliated organization in the AFL and yet, during all of those years of participation—and I was something of an active, vigorous young man in my own way—during all those years I never achieved even the chairmanship of a standing committee in the American Federation of Labor.

Those chairmanships and those secretaryships and the membership of those committees were farmed out year after year to the same old crowd of sedate, satisfied, overfed executives who compose with throttling grasp the policies, acts, the debates and everything that had to do with the operation of the great instrumentality called the AFL. Rather than promote progress they stopped progress. solved myself that if opportunity ever came to me to do so I would prefer to encourage the free expression of the men and women of labor, a greater participation by the younger men in the organizations who inevitably must assume the mantle of leadership and direction of the labor movement if a form of organization endures.

The CIO is training these young men and women by the thousands and thousands in the duties and the responsibilities of leadership. And as the years go by they will be trained and qualified to assume greater and greater responsibilities and there will be room constantly at the bottom for the younger element to begin their task of apprenticeship in leadership.

This nation in the future must look more and more to the ranks of labor to produce its public men.

I believe the common people of this country are going to constantly insist on having a larger voice, a greater degree of participation in the councils of government, whether that be in the community where they live, in their homes or whether it will be in the legislative halls of the commonwealth, or in the federal Congress of the United States.

Conclusion

I stand for a greater and greater degree of participation and I urge the men and women of labor in this country to constantly aspire for the degree of recognition to which they are entitled as the accredited representatives of their fellows. And I ask them not to be daunted by the obstacles placed in their way by those who make politics a profession or by those who enjoy special privileges in America and do not want to yield the rightful degree of participation to you or those whom you represent.

But today you have an organization and maintain an instrumentality that will protect you while you are achieving that desirable end. And that instrumentality will be the CIO.

My friends, I promised not to keep you long for after all the day is gone, this convention is nearly ended, we have expressed our views, we have enunciated our policies, we have elected our officers and there is work at home for each of us.

I thank you all, you representatives of this organization, for the honors you have conferred on me and the confidence you have had in me in the past. If that confidence has been shaken to any degree in the recent past in the hearts or minds of some of you I can only hope that someday you may come to the conclusion that whether he was right or wrong—meaning myself, at least his heart was right and he intended to make a contribution by saying what he believed and still believes to be the truth.

Thank you, my friends, and goodbye.

Approve 'CIO News' Policies

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 30—Policies of The CIO NEWS and the general conduct of the CIO Publicity Department won convention endorsement here following a brief debate.

The Committee on Officers' Reports told the convention that during the past year "an increasing amount of attention has been devoted to the press and public relations work of the CIO," and the "general program already laid down" has been expanded.

Adverse criticism of the paper's policies came from three delegates who took the floor. The trio—George Baldanzi of the Textile Workers Union, Hyman Blumberg of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and Pres. Joseph Salerno of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council—all expressed opposition to the paper's handling of the Presidential election.

Editor DeCaux replied that The CIO NEWS, as official organ of the CIO, refrains from taking a position on issues on which the CIO as such has taken no position, and consequently took no stand editorially on the Presidential campaign.

When Delegate Blumberg complained that the paper had printed the text of John L. Lewis' speech in behalf of Wendell L. Willkie, the CIO leader took the floor.

"The editor of The CIO NEWS published my speech opposing Franklin Delano Roosevelt and supporting Wendell Willkie for President of the United States," Lewis pointed out. "He did so because I requested him to do so, and for no other reason. I requested him to do so because some thousands of members of this organization wired and wrote in for copies of the address.

"They wanted to see what the president of the organization said; and I requested, merely as a matter of information, the publication of that address.

"There were some people who listened to that address, believe it or not; and there were some people who had their dues paid up in the CIO wanted to read it, believe it or not. And I decided they had really paid enough dues to the organization to have that request granted. So what?"

President Lewis added that "personally," he thought The CIO NEWS is "an excellent paper," and commended its staff.

Vice-President Reid Robinson, of the CIO, Alex Cashin of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and Sec.-Treas. Henry Wenning of the State, County & Municipal Workers praised The CIO NEWS and expressed the belief that it fills a valuable role as an organizing medium.

Convention Pledges Aid To Ford Drive

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. — Enthusiastically and unanimously the third CIO convention went on record to support the current campaign to organize the thousands of employes of the open-shop Ford Motor Co.

After hearing reports from a number of officials connected with the Ford drive, the delegates passed a resolution supporting efforts of the CIO and the United Automobile Workers to "bring the Ford workers the full benefits of collective bargaining and to restore to them their full economic and civil rights as guaranteed by the Constitution and the laws of the United States."

POINTS TO EVILS

The resolution, one of the longest passed by the convention, called attention to Ford's speed-up methods and huge private spy system; to his repression of civil rights in Dearborn, Mich.; to his long record before the Labor Board and to his employment at the Dearborn plant of "avowed Nazi agents whose activities have been subversive of the best interests of our nation."

It asked the federal government, which has handed large orders to Ford, to insist upon the company's compliance with the law; urged the NLRB to apply at once for court orders against Ford and requested that the government probe not only Ford's employment of Nazi agents but also the company's relationship with "German industrial combines."

HEARS REPORTS

The convention also approved an open letter to Ford employes which was signed by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW. The letter pledged continuation of the organizing campaign until the company meets the union for collective bargaining purposes and promised the full support of the CIO.

UAW Sec.-Treas. George Addes, speaking on the motion, suggested that the "greatest contribution which we can make to destroy the Hitlers of the world is to destroy Fordism in America."

CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood reported that the Ford drive is on in full force and that hundreds of members are joining the union each week. He predicted a union contract within the next year.

24 OFFICES OPEN

Michael S. Widman, Jr., chairman of the Ford campaign and CIO assistant director of organization, said that 24 offices have already been opened throughout Detroit as centers for the drive.

Signs have been placed on roads leading out of Dearborn, he added, which say: "You are now entering the United States and you can get your literature here on the United Automobile Workers."

"We have forty organizers at work in this drive in the Detroit area alone," Widman declared, "and we are having the support of more than 250,000 auto workers and CIO members.

"There is every reason to believe that we are going to be successful in a short period of time."

LEWIS TELLS CIO:

White Collar, Manual Workers Have Same Interest

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 30.—Technicians, engineers, all the categories lumped under the term "white collar worker" are coming to realize that their interests lie with all the workers, John L. Lewis told the convention delegates here in accepting a presentation from Pres. Lewis Alan Berne of the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

They are learning this, Lewis pointed out, through the hard experience of finding themselves just as much the victims of depression layoffs and unemployment as the industrial workers their employers had tried to teach them to disregard.

"In recent years those same white collar workers, so essential to the enterprise of modern industry, have come to understand that when business volume fell off and plant operation began to subside that they, although a part of management and a part of plant operation, were laid and dispossessed of their jobs with the same ruthless enterprise that was applied to the millions of manual workers throughout the country," Lewis said.

TRIBUTE TO LEWIS

The presentation was a book of hand-blocked prints showing the trade union development of a white collar worker through depression to an understanding of the need for united action with all workers to preserve his living standards.

In presenting it, FAECT Pres. Berne paid tribute to the CIO and to Lewis, pointing out that Lewis "more thany any other man" had helped technical professional workers to improve their living standards through industrial organization.

"I am happy that the CIO for the first time in the history of the labor movement of our country has been able to make a contribution to the formation and the growth and expansion of these white collar organizations," Lewis said in reply.

"I look forward to the day as we increase and expand the numerical strength of our mighty organization in the basic industries, and as they become more powerful, that they will contribute in an increasing way to the aid and the assistance of these men in the white collar classifications of industry."

Report Urges Unions Build Labor Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Recommendations for increased CIO attention to press relations, to building up labor papers, and to labor use of radio marked the report of the Committee on Press and Publicity, submitted to the CIO convention by Len De Caux, chairman, and unanimously adopted.

"We know from experience that any militant labor movement has not been able to expect an even break from a press which is in its own economic structure big business," the report said, noting that increasing attacks on the CIO came not only from commercial press editorials and from columnists who are "mouthpieces for the publishers who pay their salaries," but often in news columns as well.

"Where a newspaper, in its news columns, or even in its editorials or special columns, claims to present facts, we have the right and duty to demand that facts relating to organized labor be reported intelligently and above all, truthfully," the report added.

BUILD LABOR PRESS

Best answer to this is increasing protest by unions against anti-labor press coverage, plus greater attention to getting the union's side of the case to the papers and to correcting distortions and falsifications, the report declared. More co-operation by CIO affiliates with the labor press to make it "more effective not only as a source of news but also as an organizing instrument" was also urged on the delegates.

The report dealt in some detail with radio, describing it as "especially important as a corrective to the distortions about the CIO which are common in many newspapers in the country," and as one of the most effective ways of reaching both labor and the public generally.

Final recommendations in the report included exchanges of publicity material between CIO affiliates, closer consultation with CIO organizers and officials on press and publicity problems, and greater attention to the building of a mass circulation labor press.

To Negotiate At Crucible Steel Plant

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 30. — A promise by the management to negotiate within five days a settlement of the grievances which provoked a strike of 2,300 employes at the Crucible Steel plant here, has brought an end to the three-day shutdown.

A similar strike of 4,300 workers at the company's plant in Midland, Pa., was settled just before the walkout here. The management at the Syracuse plant had previously refused to meet a grievance committee to discuss pay adjustments, seniority violations and elimination of the staggered week

Senate Passes Bill To Hamstring U. S. Government Agencies

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The Walter-Logan Bill, designed to throw judicial monkey-wrenches into the machinery of Federal agencies such as the National Labor Relations Board and others serving labor, passed the Senate this week by a majority of two. Of 96 Senators, only 52 voted — barely a quorum.

The CIO fought the bill from the start. In June of this year the Legislative Committee, reporting to the Executive Board, described it this way:

"Stripped of its technicalities, it would subject every ruling of a governmental agency to the review of the courts at every stage of the proceedings. It would mean, for example, that the steel companies would be able to delay every order issued by the Secretary of Labor fixing minimum wages on government contracts, like the steel minimum wage order.

"In addition, the bill would apply to agencies serving labor, such as the Natl. Labor Relations Board, the Social Security Board and the Wage-Hour Division. Every decision of any kind made by any one of these agencies could be attacked in the courts and no final ruling could be made until after years of expensive litigation.

"It would mean that workers seeking the protection of Federal rights would have their rights defeated through the delays of litigation while the violators of Federal law could escape punishment through obstructive tactics."

NULLIFICATION

Writing to Congress in February, former President Lewis said that the bill, by delaying the "enjoyment of rights is tantamount to their nullification . . . The bill imposes upon workers seeking protection of federal rights a prohibitive expense and allows those who deny them these rights the easy opportunity to defend their violations by obstructive and litigatious tactics."

In addition, it was pointed out, Attorney-General Jackson's Committee on Administrative Procedure, set up to study and make recommendations on the workings of Federal agencies, has yet to make its report, which is expected to answer many of the criticisms raised by backers of the bill.

Support Highlander Folk School

Washington, Nov. 30. — The program and aims of the Highlander Folk School at Monteagle, Tenn., were endorsed by the CIO convention, and efforts to discredit and defame the school were condemned as "an attack on the progressive labor movement of the South."

Highlander conducts a year around program of education, recreation and organization. In addition to six weeks' resident terms, it holds institutes, conferences and co-operates with unions in field work. These activities the convention declared, "have made the school a target for attacks of anti-labor forces."

Ohio Mine Disaster Spurs CIO Drive For Inspection Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The powerful United Mine Workers of America, stirred by the year's fifth major coal mine disaster, today renewed their campaign for Congressional approval of the Neely-Keller Federal Coal Mine Inspection Bill.

The Cadiz, Ohio, explosion, which snuffed out 31 miners' lives, would have been avoided had there been adequate federal inspection of coal mine properties, it was pointed out in a statement signed by UMW Pres. John L. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy.

Three days later Lewis sent a letter to all members of the House asking that in the name of "humanity and morality" they take favorable action on the legislation.

The bill has already been passed in the Senate, but an alliance between the coal operators' lobby and reactionary members of the House of Representatives has forestalled a vote in the lower House.

Newsmen Vote for CIO

St. Louis, Dec. 7 — Editorial employes of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, having voted for the CIO American Newspaper Guild as their bargaining agency, today looked forward to contract negotiations with the publishers.

The Guild polled 52 votes to 46 against. In May, 1939, the ANG won an election in six commercial departments but failed to get a majority in the editorial rooms.

Another Pact In Hague's Jersey City

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 7. — Another step in the process of converting Mayor Frank Hague's Jersey City into a union town was announced today by District 50, United Mine Workers of America.

The union announced that an agreement with the Charles B. Chrystal Co., which produces such products as talc, soapstone and abrasive, had increased wages between $7 and $14 a week.

Oregon's Biggest Plant Signs CIO Contract

New York, Dec. 7 — The largest single factory in the state of Oregon today is working under a CIO-closed shop contract.

Announcement of that fact was made here by Pres. Morris Muster of the United Furniture Workers, which has just concluded negotiating the agreement with the huge Doernbecher furniture plant in Portland, Oreg.

The agreement provides for a 5c hourly general wage increase and a week's vacation with pay, as well as other standard union clauses.

Doernbecher employes over 1,100 furniture workers and has the largest single payroll in the state. The firm's workers joined the UFWA early in November, when they voted overwhelmingly to switch their affiliation from the AFL Painters Union. The AFL group, they complained, had done nothing to help them and much to hurt their cause.

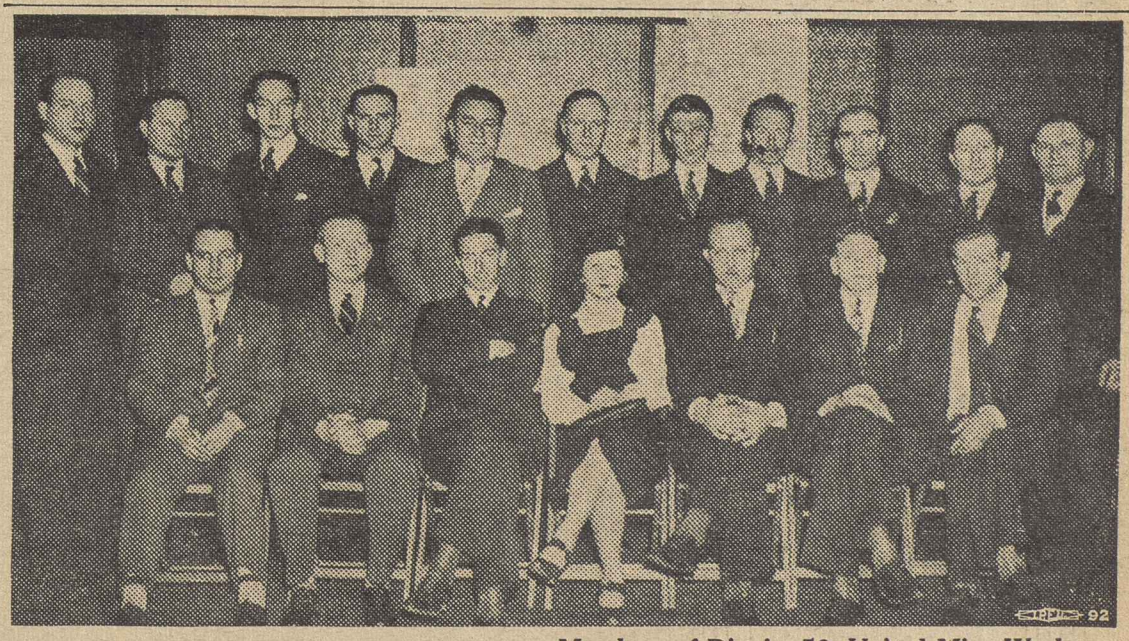
Textile Union Maps Big Drives In North, South

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—More pay for cotton textile workers in both the North and South and an intensified drive in worsted textiles are on the program of the renewed organizing campaign launched this week by the CIO's Textile Workers Union. Emil Rieve, TWU president, announced the opening of the drive following a conference here of more than 100 members of the union's staff in northeastern states.

A conference to bring the campaign directly to the South will be held in Atlanta, Ga., in January, Rieve said, and separate drives will be made to complete the organization of carpets and synthetic yarn, both now about 70 per cent organized.

A special effort will also be made to unionize the 15,000 unorganized textile workers in Philadelphia, one of the TWU's strongholds.

WORSTED DIVISION



The worsted division of the industry which employs some 90,000 workers concentrated in the New England states, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey with a scattering in the South, Middle West and far West, at the present time is the beneficiary of a great number of defense orders, Rieve said.

The worsted drive will cover a number of cities and towns in the Northeastern states. Contracts have already been signed with a number of mills in many of these towns.

CIO Wins At Swift Plant

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 — Workers at the Swift packing plant here rejected an "independent" union in favor of CIO by better than two to one, when they voted 273 for the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee to 134 for the "independent."

The workers are now preparing to take Swift up on its promise to sign agreements in any plant where the PWOC could show a majority.

Shipyard Union Gets Housing Projects in Two Cities, Defeats Tory Real Estate Groups

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Allotment of federal funds for defense housing programs in two shipbuilding communities—Camden, N. J., and Quincy, Mass.—was hailed today by labor and housing experts as a step towards curbing rent-gouging by landlords.

Both cities have been faced by acute housing shortages, and in both cities the CIO's Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers took the lead in the fight against super-high rents.

Under an order signed by Pres. Roosevelt this week, 500 housing units will be constructed in Camden and 1,000 near Quincy. The Camden project is unique in government housing plans, for commitments have been made to turn over the operation or management of the homes to a non-profit cooperative, in which the union will be the prevailing force.

RECOMMENDED BY GREEN

The plan follows out recommendations made by Pres. John Green of the Shipyard Workers to a Congressional Committee some months ago. At that time Green pointed out that many fully employed workers are less in need of government-subsidized housing than of adequate credit facilities.

In the Camden project there will be no opportunity for the homes to eventually slip into the hands of real estate speculators. Rent payments will build up an equity for the workers' cooperative in the project, somewhat along the lines of the Carl Mackley Houses in Philadelphia. That project was sponsored by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers in conjunction with the PWA and was opened for occupancy four or five years ago.

CAMDEN A 'SORE SPOT'

Camden is said by housing experts to be one of the worst spots in the country, with a large proportion of its homes of sub-standard quality and a larger number of old, decaying dwellings than any other industrial city of its size.

Because of the shortage of adequate housing in the city, many families have had to "double up," while rents are far out of line with those in other cities.

In Quincy, Mass., a similar situation exists. Large numbers of workers at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp. are forced to commute as much as 40 or 50 miles a day because there are not enough homes in the city to house them.

CROSSED UP REALTORS

The allotment of funds for the 1,000 housing units crossed up plans of local realtors and businessmen, who had formed themselves into a "city defense council"—primary job of which seems to be preventing the erection of more homes.

The businessmen's group traveled to Washington some time ago and sought assurances that no federal housing would be started in their city. Government officials were "assured" that the working population had a sufficient number of homes. The city "defense council" was apparently working on the theory that the tighter the housing squeeze, the higher rents could soar.

Describe Malnutrition As Danger to Defense

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Low incomes for millions of Americans, who are suffering from near-starvation as a result, is a major weakness in the United States' national defense program, Miss Harriet Elliott, consumer member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, declared today.

Addressing a regional meeting of restaurant men, she said:

"Malnutrition is an unfortified coastline of our human defenses. If America is to be strong, Americans must be adequately fed, properly nourished and physically fit."

Talking on the same theme was M. L. Wilson, director of the Dept. of Agriculture's extension service and an advisor to Miss Elliott.

"Our current national nutrition picture is not encouraging," Wilson warned. "An estimated 45,000,000 people are not getting the proper food.

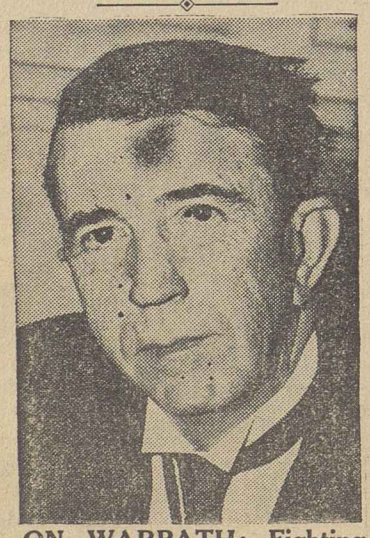
"It is impossible to measure the exact nutritional status of all these people, but we do know that diets such as they are consuming cannot promote optimum nutrition over long periods of time."

Electrical Union Wins Three More Elections

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 7.—Three important election victories were won by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers last week in the electrical industry of northern New Jersey.

In the largest of the polls held, among employes of the big Tung-Sol shop, the UE defeated a company union and won bargaining rights for about 1,200 employes.

Another election was won at Ediphone plant, a branch of the Thomas A. Edison Industries, at West Orange, where the employes voted 375 to 125 for the UE. The third poll, at the Babcock Wilcox plant was won by the UE 204 to 163.



"The union's triumph is the more noteworthy," a statement issued by the UE declared, "in that it was won not only against the usual opposition to union organization, but in a period of war hysteria and anti-union propaganda in which every effort is being made to smear the honest, progressive unions of the CIO and to prevent the further organization of the industry."

The UE announced that it would now start negotiations for a contract with the Ediphone plant shortly. A number of other Edison plants are already under agreement with the union.

$200,000 Pay Boost In Jersey

Perth Amboy, N. J., Dec. 7. — Over $200,000 a year in wage boosts were won for 1,300 American Smelting and Refining Co. workers by the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in renewing its contract here, according to Jess Gonzales, union board member.

The contract, fourth to be signed with the company, gives a flat five cent an hour increase retroactive to November 1. In addition, paid vacations, time and a half, seniority, etc., were won. Local 365 ratified the agreement, following its presentation by Board Member Gonzales and the negotiating committee, which consisted of Joe Pomykola, Peter Yaremko, Andy Jaco, Willie Williams, John Yaremko, Wm. K. Harms and Michael Kodan.

ON WARPATH: Fighting labor once again is Howard Smith, poll tax Congressman from Virginia. His latest brainchild is a bill to outlaw strikes in "defense industries."

Salerno Blasts Anti-Strike Bills

Boston, Mass., December 7. — Joseph Salerno, president of the Massachusetts State CIO Council, vigorously condemned proposed anti-strike legislation in a statement released at his Boston office.

"The Massachusetts State CIO vigorously opposes any such bills as those of Smith and Hoffmann that would destroy labor's rights. Salerno said, "Under our constitution, the right to strike is sacred. Labor will not surrender that right.

"The only means the workers have to share in the profits of industry and the general prosperity of the nation is through a union of their own choosing and the right to strike."

Pay Raise In Waterbury

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 7. — Pay increases for five classifications of employes in the City Street Department were incorporated in the draft budget here after a two-hour session between leaders of Waterbury Local 266 of the State, County & Municipal Workers and the Board of Finance.

McLarney hailed the meeting as "marking a further step in the development of cordial and business-like relations between the city administration and the organization of its employes."

CIO Head Urges Steps to Benefit Migrant Workers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Proposals for the relief of serious problems facing migratory workers were made by Philip Murray, president of the CIO, to the Tolan committee investigating the interstate migration of destitute citizens, in testimony read to the committee by Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director.

"In the last few years, migration of workers in this country has come to mean the endless search of destitute and stranded workers and farmers for job opportunities that do not exist," the Murray statement said.

"In a period of large unemployment, this migration becomes a menace to all labor standards and a nightmare to communities already overburdened with unemployed workers." Murray cited experience in the steel industry to show that migratory workers come in great numbers from industries where technological unemployment has thrown thousands permanently out of work.

This has been particularly marked in the "ghost towns" created by installation of automatic strip mills in the steel areas, he pointed out.

"The record of the steel industry during the past decade in abandoning entire plants, or large departments of plants in one knockout blow reveals an ignorance and disconcern of social conditions that defy description," he said, in listing 53 plants whose abandonment caused displacement of more than 38,000 workers.

"It seems clear that there will be no solution to the problem of the migration of destitute people until our nation's industry offers reasonably full employment opportunities," Murray declared, in reviewing CIO demands for "a national conference of the responsible leaders of labor, industry, agriculture and government to work out a solution to the problem of mass unemployment."

The CIO leader expressed doubt that national defense jobs would solve the unemployment problem, and warned of the dangers inherent in a post-war economic collapse. He urged extension of present social legislation to cover the large number of migrant workers.

Urge Aliens To Register By Dec. 26

Washington, Dec. 7 — Final day for non-citizens to register is December 26, officials of the Alien Registration Division of the U. S. Dept. of Justice warned here. After that date, all non-citizens who are not registered are subject to severe penalties under the Act.

Registration can be done at any U. S. Post Office, and is free of charge. Aliens were further warned that registration may be difficult if delayed too long before the final day, due to the Christmas mailing rush.

Alien workers should remember that there is nothing in the Act authorizing employers to discharge them simply because they are aliens, it was pointed out by CIO officials here.

Ninth Poll Victory In Delaware

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 7 — It's nine in a row for the Delaware CIO.

Don Harris, CIO regional director, announced that the ninth consecutive Labor Board election has been won by a CIO union, this time the United Bakelite & Fibre Workers Local Industrial Union 493.

More $ $ For Ford

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — Continuing its policy of ignoring labor's protests against awarding juicy government contracts to anti-union firms, the National Defense Advisory Commission last week cleared contract awards to the Ford Motor Company totalling more than two million dollars.

This is in addition to $122,323,020 formerly awarded to Ford for aircraft engines. The latest awards are $1,387,500 for trucks and $625,200 for five-passenger Sedan cars, for the Quartermaster Corps.

Press Campaign for Mine Safety Bill as 31 Die In Ohio; 267 Dead in Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Another appalling coal mine disaster, which snuffed out the lives of 31 more workers, today was blamed on the stubborn sitdown strike of the House of Representatives against the CIO-supported federal mine inspection bill.

The explosion, occurring at the Ohio & Pennsylvania Coal Co., Cadiz, Ohio, took place in a deep section of the mine, and trapped a group of men in a location beyond possible rescue or assistance.

High officials of the United Mine Workers and supporters of the Neely-Keller bill, which provides for federal, rather than state, inspection of coal mine safety precautions, renewed their demand for passage of the legislation.

UMW Pres. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Murray, Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy, Ohio District Pres. John Owens, Director John T. Jones, of Labor's Non-Partisan League; and Sec.-Treas. Ted Silvey of the Ohio CIO council, called attention to the constantly recurring disasters which are snuffing out the lives of American miners.

TEXT OF MESSAGE

Immediately after the disaster, the three international officers of the UMW sent the following telegram to Owens:

"The executive officers of the International Union are again profoundly shocked by the recurrence of another explosion which has perhaps killed more than thirty members of the United Mine Workers of America.

"These recurring disasters in the coal mining industry productive of constant heavy loss of life and profound grief and tragedy among the families and dependents of those who are lost are of course preventable and completely unnecessary. Our union has, as you are well aware, been urging the Federal Congress to enact a Federal Mine Inspection law which would operate to lessen the toll of lives in the industry. With this latest explosion as an object lesson we shall renew our efforts to secure the enactment of this meritorious legislation.

"In the meantime we are glad that you are on the grounds giving aid in every way that can be done and we ask that you express to the surviving members of our local union our profound sympathy with them and the dependent families of the deceased in the great loss which has come to them.

"We are hopeful that the American people will not much longer tolerate this continued unnecessary slaughter of coal miners and will demand that their representatives in the Federal Congress move toward the abatement of the situation which can have no justification in the mind of any thoughtful citizen.

63 Lives—$300 Fines

Today three mine officials were found guilty of laxity in enforcing safety rules at the property. They were fined $100 apiece!

Tapped on the wrist were the mine superintendent, the mine foreman and the assistant foreman.

In handing out the sentences Judge Charles C. Greer denounced the state mining laws as ineffective and pointed out that passage of the Neely-Keller federal mine safety bill might have prevented the accident.

Meanwhile a group of stubborn Congressmen refuse to take action on the bill, which has already been passed in the Senate.

House Tories Gang Up on Labor's Right to Strike

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — Congressional attacks on the right to strike, camouflaged with oratory about national defense, were pressed home in a series of moves by individual reactionary Congressmen and by the House Judiciary Committee this week.

First bill proposed was that of Rep. Howard Smith, anti-labor Congressman from the polltax state of Virginia, which would impose compulsory arbitration, make strikers guilty of "having deliberately jeopardized the national defense," make it unlawful to require persons either "to join or not join a labor organization" and as a final clincher, impose life imprisonment on anybody who "directly or indirectly obstructs, hinders or interferes" with defense industry.

Not to be outdone, Clare Hoffman, perhaps the most clamorous enemy of the Wagner Act in the House, put in a bill of his own that would require every defense worker to sign a no-strike agreement before employment. And in the Senate, newly-appointed Sen. Jos. H. Ball of Minnesota announced that he had a bill up his sleeve requiring lengthy notice before workers in any industry could take strike action.

COMMITTEE MOVES

Later in the week these three statesmen were joined by the House Judiciary Committee, whose chairman, Rep. Hatton W. Sumners (also a polltaxer, from Texas) recently referred to the Vultee strikers as "these rats" and "a bunch of cutthroats", set up a sub-committee to work out methods of "preserving industrial peace."

First indication of the line this study would take came when Committee members predicted that amendment to the conscription act would be sought, following the pattern laid down by Woodrow Wilson in dealing with a Remington Arms Co. strike in 1918.

"I desire that you return to work," Wilson wrote to the strikers in that year, "and abide by the award. If you refuse each of you will be barred from employment in any war industry in the community in which the

To Seek Improved Mine Pact

Atlantic City, Dec. 7.—"Definite improvements" in the Appalachian Wage Agreement covering bituminous coal miners should be made, according to an announcement by the Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers made at the close of their sessions here.

These improvements should be made in wage increases, "to enable mine workers and their families to secure more of the necessitties of life," in shortening of hours, "essential due to unemployment of a full and part time nature," in paid vacations, recognized in all industries except mining, uniformity of wage rates and abolition of differentials, and the like.

The Policy Committee postponed announcement of specific wage demands until it reconvenes in New York March 11, 1941, when the question of renewing the Appalachian agreement comes up.

Four CIO Affiliates Convene This Month

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Four CIO affiliates will hold conventions during the first half of December, according to information received at national headquarters:

United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, Dec. 4-7, Chicago.

International Fishermen & Allied Workers, Dec. 9, Seattle.

Murray Asks Veto of Logan-Walter Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Labor's objections to the Walter-Logan bill, designed to put a crimp in federal social agencies such as the Labor Board and the Social Security Board, were reiterated here in a letter from CIO Pres. Philip Murray to President Roosevelt in which Murray asked for a White House veto of the bill.

The measure, passed by a majority of two in a half-empty Senate session and rushed through an indifferent House, was described by Murray as introducing "unnecessary delays and red tape into the operations of administrative bodies" and as "most harmful to our people."

"It means that rights theoretically guaranteed by federal law, whether to collective bargaining or social security benefits, become fictitious because the slender resources of workers cannot support the burden of lengthy proceedings and consequent delay," Murray wrote.

"The deferment of enjoyment of rights is tantamount to their nullification. The Walter-Logan bill will have precisely this effect."

Murray's letter concluded by reminding President Roosevelt of the study of administrative problems now under way in the Attorney-General's office, and by urging him to veto the measure.

Full Text Of Murray's Letter

Full text of CIO President Murray's letter urging Presidential veto of the Walter-Logan bill:

I am writing to you on behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in opposition to the Walter-Logan bill recently passed by Congress.

Labor is deeply concerned with this measures because its provisions apply to such agencies as the Public Contracts Board, the Wage-Hour Division, the Social Security Board and the National Labor Relations Board, which administer laws of great importance to working men and women.

Any measure which would introduce unnecessary delays and red tape into the operations of administrative bodies is most harmful to our people. It means that rights theoretically guaranteed by federal law, whether to collective bargaining or social security benefits, become fictitious because the slender resources of workers cannot support the burden of lengthy proceedings and consequent delay.

NULLIFIES RIGHTS

The deferment of enjoyment of rights is tantamount to their nullification. The Walter-Logan bill will have precisely this effect. Its provisions subject the rules and regulations of federal government to interminable hearings and litigation. It subjects every branch of the government with few exceptions to uniform requirements, thus forcing applications for old age benefits to have the same formalities as a quasi-judicial proceeding before the Securities and Exchange Commission. By authorizing intra-departmental appeals at any stage in the proceedings in a particular case, it authorizes destructive and interminable delay.

PROHIBITIVE COSTS

The Walter-Logan bill imposes upon workers seeking protection of federal rights a prohibitive expense and allows those who deny them these rights the easy opportunity to defend their violations by obstructive and litigatious tactics.

We are mindful of the problems which must be solved in simplifying procedures of federal administrative agencies and in protecting the interests of citizens.

The Attorney General is now conducting a thorough study of these problems and we hope some constructive suggestions may be forthcoming. The Walter-Logan bill offers no solution and only makes matters worse.

We urge that this bill receive your veto.

Haywood To Administer Federal Union

Washington, Dec. 7.—CIO President Philip Murray today announced the appointment of Allan S. Haywood, CIO Director of Organization, to be Administrator of the United Federal Workers of America.

At the same time, Miss Eleanor Nelson was reappointed Secretary-treasurer of the United Federal Workers.

Haywood will take the place of Jacob Baker, who resigned as President of the United Federal Workers to take a position as consultant to Mr. John Carmody, Administrator of the Federal Works Agency.

Mourn Death Of CIO Official

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 7.—The executive board of the Iowa-Nebraska CIO Industrial Union Council passed a resolution at a recent meeting expressing sorrow at the death of Alf Hjort, vice-president of the Council. "His tact, personality and knowledge of modern labor problems made him an ideal vice president," the Council said in the resolution.

The Law's Delays

There is equal justice in the courts, we are assured, for both rich and poor. But the rich can eat three square meals a day, no matter how long their lawyers drag out proceedings; while the poor are liable to go hungry in waiting on the law's delays.

That is one reason why the Congress of Industrial Organizations opposed the Walter-Logan bill, and called for a veto when it was passed by Congress.

Pres. Philip Murray pointed out, in his letter to the President that the bill would obstruct the operation of the Labor Relations Act, the Social Security Act, the Wage-Hour Act and other labor laws, by interposing endless court delays.

"It means," he said, "that rights theoretically guaranteed by federal law, whether to collective bargaining or social security benefits, become fictitious because the slender resources of workers cannot support the burden of lengthy proceedings and consequent delay. The deferment of enjoyment of rights is tantamount to their nullification . .

"The Walter-Logan bill imposes upon workers seeking protection of federal rights a prohibitive expense, and allows those who deny them these rights the easy opportunity to defend their violations by obstructive and litigatious tactics."

And talking of delays, it might be a good idea to ask your Congressman why he was in such a hurry to pass the anti-labor Walter-Logan bill (if he voted for it) and so little hurried to pass the mine safety bill on which so many labor lives depend.

National Defense

Labor believes that national defense means the creation of a nation of strong, healthy and well-fed people employed at work at decent and substantial wages and dedicated to the belief that the democratic way is the best way of living.

Labor believes that national defense means the continued growth and expansion of powerful industrial unions which will protect and defend the interests and status of their members to achieve economic security.

Labor believes that national defense means the vigilant protection and constant safeguarding of the exercise by all of our cherished civil rights of speech, press, assembly and worship.

Labor believes that ignoring these fundamental principles and limiting our nation's activities to the building of mere armories of airplanes, tanks and guns will not serve but rather will defeat the basic interests of national defense.—CIO Convention Resolution.

Opposition

Like every great movement in the history of man that undertakes to change the status quo. . . . the success of this movement (the CIO) can be measured by the degree of opposition that has come to it.

There is no great opposition anywhere to an impotent organization, or any movement that lacks virility or force, because men don't need. . . . to oppose an organization of that character.

They oppose those organizations that have the strength and the vision and the enterprise and the courage to push forward in the fight against the exploiters of labor and of the human race.

Those are the kind of organizations that breed opposition. Those are the kind of organizations that are criticized and slandered and vilified. Those are the kind of organizations in which outside influences seek to breed internal dissension. —John L. Lewis.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE ancient Spartans were much given to warfare, according to Greek historians. The only thing that used to mar their zest for it was the fear that while hey were engaged in war, the Helots would rise against them.

The Helots were an enslaved people whom the Spartans used to do their work, while they themselves followed less laborious tasks.

So to meet this problem, the Spartans used to prepare for their wars by killing off all the sturdiest Helots in their own country and by drastically intimidating the rest.

Other ancient people has similarly ingratiating methods of enlisting the worker's cooperation in national defense. It was considered sound policy, for instance, to chain to their benches the oarsmen who propelled the war galleys; and to supply incentives for increased production with the business end of a cattle whip.

Ancient Attitudes

It is necessary to go back to the horse-and-chariot days like this, to trace the origin of some of the horse-and-chariot ideas that are finding expression in Congress today, to the detriment of current national defense.

Congressmen "Goober" Cox, Howard Smith and Clare Hoffman are not exactly Spartan in other respects, but they seem obsessed with the idea that the people who do the country's work must be bound with chains and driven with whips when a war approaches, if not sooner.

If one more reference to ancient history may be excused, it may also be noted that while the solons of old Greece and Rome argued and debated in their capitols, hundreds of workers perished in the mines under brutally unsafe conditions—and there are no records of any effective mine safety legislation having been passed.

Mine Safety

If the present Congress adjourns without enacting the Neely-Keller mine safety bill, it will have established a record for callousness that is hard to beat.

Since this bill was passed by the Senate in January of this year, no fewer than 267 coal miners have been killed in preventable mine disasters.

Yet the House has refused to take the action necessary to stop this slaughter. It has pigeonholed the mine safety bill, and every kind of pressure and parliamentary skullduggery has been used to prevent the bill from being brought on the floor for action.

Not that the members of Congress who suppressed this bill were indifferent to questions of safety—if they affected themselves.

The mere hint that the roof of the House chamber was unsafe brought speedy removal of its sessions to safer quarters. Meanwhile mine roofs continued to collapse as a result of explosions which the pigeonholed bill might have prevented.

Slaveowners' Fears

Behind all the hysterical demands for anti-strike legislation in the closing days of the present Congress, lies a type of slaveowners' fear that should be entirely out of place in a modern democracy.

And to feed the demand for suppressive legislation, every minor and legitimate strike for union demands is distorted by anti-labor propagandists, who try to give it the appearance of a plot or an uprising against the established order.

So anti-strike bills, like those of Congressmen Smith and Hoffman, are introduced, to bind free Americans to their jobs as if they were galley slaves working under the lash. And alleged anti-sabotage bills are proposed with clauses in them designed to break up all union organization.

Yet if the promoters of such bills want to know how loyal American unionists feel about sabotage, they have only to read the clauses in the recent Vultee agreement and in other union contracts in which the unions voluntarily offer their full cooperation for the detection and prevention of all sabotage.

Free Americans

American labor deeply resents the aspersions on its loyalty which are implicit in the present agitation for suppressive class legislation directed against it.

Representing millions of American workers, who consider themselves free and equal participants in a democracy which they of all people are most anxious to defend, the CIO stands for the extension of union organization as the best means of strengthening true national defense.

It has every reason to be suspicious of the motives of those who would destroy union rights at a time like this—for the purpose of protecting profiteering and denying to workers the fair treatment which assures uninterrupted production.

It expects of Congress that it give at least as much consideration to the internal welfare of the American people as to world politics; that it save American lives by passing the mine safety bill; and that it protect the liberties and social benefits which make a democracy worthy of defense by a free people.

Mine Union Renews Fight For U. S. Inspection Bill

months of 1940 have killed 267 miners.

"It would seem that the Honorable Members of the House of Representatives would desire to stop this butchery of Americans who work in coal mines," Lewis wrote.

"These explosions are preventable and the record reveals that the coal operators will not of themselves take necessary steps to prevent their recurrence."

'FOR HUMANITY'

Reminding the Congressmen that the Neely-Keller bill has been bottled up in the House Mines & Mining Committee for months, and that enemies of the legislation have succeeded in preventing its reaching the House floor via the petition route, Lewis asked:

"In the name of humanity and sound morality, is it not possible for those members of the House of Representatives of both parties, who have not yet signed this petition, to take a few moments and perform this humane act before the occurrence of another horrible disaster?"

KENNEDY'S COMMENT

Meanwhile in Hazelton, Pa., UMWA Sec.-Treas. Kennedy declared that the Cadiz explosion was a "terrible catastrophe which should cause those leaders and members of the House of Representatives responsible for blocking passage of the Neely-Keller federal mine inspection bill to hang their heads in shame.

Kennedy said 1,600 miners have lost their lives in the last couple of years and asked:

"How many more miners must give up their lives before the House leadership will give them the protection on which the Neely-Keller bill affords?"

In a letter to members of the Ohio Congressional delegation, State CIO Sec.-Treas. Silvey pointed out that "only a little effort is required to demonstrate that you have some appreciation for safety of miners working underground, some concern for their lives and some sympathy for their wives and children."

PASSED BY SENATE

The Neely-Keller bill, which would improve mine safety conditions by forcing U. S. Government inspection of coal properties, was introduced in Congress by Sen. Matthew Neely of West Virginia and Rep. Kent Keller of Illinois, both veteran friends of labor.

The bill, S. 2420, passed the Senate on January 23 of this year, but was then pigeonholed by the House Mines Committee. Despairing of its ever emerging from that group, liberal Congressmen circulated a petition, requiring 218 Congressional signatures, to bring the bill on to the House floor for debate and vote.

About the time the required number of signatures had been obtained, the coal operators' lobby persuaded some of the Congressmen to remove their names from the petition.

Text of Lewis' Letter On Mine Safety Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Following is the full text of the letter sent by Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers to all members of Congress urging House passage of the Neely-Keller federal mine inspection bill:

S. 2420, which passed the Senate on January 23, 1940, provides for a limited Federal inspection of coal mines and publication of findings. The bill is designed to reduce the fatalities of the coal mining industry by publication of the facts affecting dangerous conditions in mines.

During the first eleven months of 1940, five major explosions have occurred in coal mines, with a fatality list of 267 men. The latest of these explosions occurred at the mine of the Ohio and Pennsylvania Coal Company at Cadiz, Ohio, on November 29th, and resulted in the killing of 31 men.

TIME TO STOP BUTCHERY

It would seem that the Honorable Members of the House of Representatives would desire to stop this butchery of Americans who work in coal mines. These explosions are preventable, and the record reveals that the coal operators will not of themselves take necessary steps to prevent their recurrence.

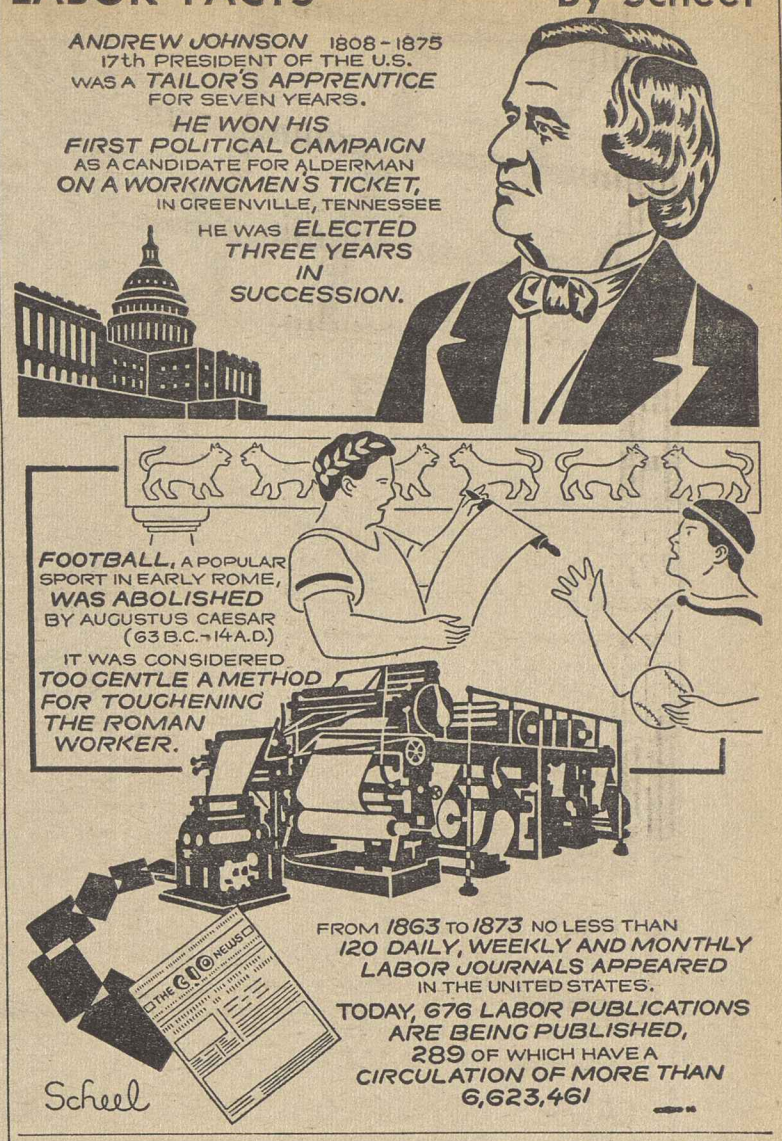
It would seem that each member of Congress would desire to rise above partisan considerations and take a few minutes to cast a vote that would save human life in the coal industry, and reduce the sum-total of the appalling grief and agony which inevitably follows this wastage of human values.

S. 2420 has been bottled up in the House Committee on Mines and Mining for many months. A petition has been on the Speaker's desk to bring the Bill to the floor of the House. Opponents of the Bill, working substantially in secret, have been successful in preventing the necessary number of signatures to the petition.

PREVENT REPETITION

In the name of humanity and sound morality, is it not possible for these members of the House of Representatives of both parties, who have not yet signed this petition, to take a few moments and perform this humane act, before the occurrence of another horrible disaster?

Assuredly, every normal thinking member of the House would of himself desire to make such a contribution.



The coal miners of America, and their families of dependents, would appreciate this consideration.

Very truly yours,

JOHN L. LEWIS.

LABOR FACTS By Scheel

To Discuss Farm, Labor Relations

Baltimore, Dec. 7. — Labor's relations with agriculture and industry will be discussed at a forum here on Dec. 11 by Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO.

The meeting will be held in conjunction with the 22nd annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and will examine the question of economic balance among the three groups and possibilities for attaining the greatest possible production and use of goods and services.

Justice Dept. Officials Sketch Forced Labor Plan

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Forced labor for American workers, with its necessary curtailments of "labor's hard-won rights" are the "harsh conclusions inevitably to be reached" from a study of the problem of wartime production, according to an article "Conscription of Labor" signed by three assistants to U. S. Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson and published in the November issue of The Harvard Law Review.

The article, signed by Francis Hoague, Russell M. Brown and Philip Marcus, comes to 11 conclusions and a peroration after an elaborate study of forced labor in the first World War and in the present one. All of them point to the need for labor conscription here in the event the U. S. is actively involved in the European war.

THREE MAIN POINTS

These conclusions, reached after more than 50 pages of legal phraseology, boil down to three main points:

1. Compulsory labor is not limited to dictatorships. It is essential to democracies as well.

2. Compulsory labor "certainly suspends traditional freedoms" and "results in the curtailment of a number of labor's hard-won rights."

3. The phrase "labor conscription" has "become an epithet rather than a definitive term. . . such phrases should not be allowed to becloud the issue."

HOW IT CAN BE DONE

The article is thorough. It cites the record of the war 1914-1918 and of the present one, to show the need for forced labor here. It lists the consequences to be expected. It shows how obstacles in the Constitution can be overcome. It tells how labor cooperation should be secured.

The answer to Constitutional objections (such as the bars on involuntary servitude, cruel and unusual punishments, etc.) is in a revival of the "Work or Fight" order of 1917-1918, by which workers who didn't like their jobs were given the choice of staying put or going into the Army. The means to revive this order are at hand, the authors show:

CITE DRAFT ACT

"The recently enacted Selective Training and Service Act (draft act) authorizes the President to provide for occupational deferments and is capable of use for Work or Fight orders among men of draft age," they write.

This section is quite long, citing court cases, statutes, etc., as precedents for disposing of the Constitution, but in any event discussion of the subject is "quixotic" at the present time, since:

"As the experience of the World War indicates, slight notice is given to constitutional technicalities in time of stress. Any further or more detailed discussion of the constitutional aspects of federal control of labor would seem especially quixotic at this time."

LABOR'S COOPERATION

Labor's cooperation is needed, the authors point out, though a "troublesome factor" in getting it is labor's "resentment of real or fancied war profiteering." However: "it is necessary to effect some sort of working arrangement with labor unions, or groups of employes, and perhaps even to utilize unions in the administrative machinery of control."

Ways of arriving at these arrangements are not given in detail, though propaganda will be used to bolster morale. Thus: "Propaganda, making the employe feel that the government is alive to his needs, and the initiation of a system rewarding the worker with some token of distinction are means of bolstering flagging morale."

THE CONSEQUENCES

The consequences of labor conscription, as discussed by the three authors, are chiefly at the expense of social laws and union contracts. Suspension of "closed shop agreements" is inevitable. "Minimum hour laws for women and children" and laws "relating to the time children are to spend in school and the duty of parents to provide an education" will have to be dropped. Wages will have to be regulated—"Some regulation of wages in wartime has been found necessary even in countries shunning direct labor control."

And finally, the authors sum up in their peroration:

"In the course of preparation, the distasteful realization of the harsh conclusions inevitably to be reached has been offset by the hope that this study will serve to bring to the light of public knowledge the importance of this problem."

30 YEARS OF UNIONISM:

Murray's Career Of Service A '1940 Model' Success Story

PHILIP MURRAY, the new president of the CIO, has dedicated his entire life to labor. His election as head of the nation's industrial union movement, is a fitting climax to 30 years of service, and a pleasing variation from the Horatio Alger theme of "from rags to corporation executive."

Murray's first vivid recollection goes back to Lanarkshire, Scotland, when as a boy of six years, his father, president of the Lanarkshire local of the coal miners' union, took him to a strike meeting. A settlement of the strike was announced, giving the miners an increase of twelve cents a day, which brought daily wages to $1.65. Four years later Murray went down in a mine as his father's helper, and his wages were about 80 cents a day.

Christmas morning, 1902, was a raw, bleak day. Out in New York harbor a ship waited for midnight to come so that a load of steerage passengers could be cleared through customs. The Murray family—father, mother and ten children—was on that boat.

Settled in Coal Town

Late the next night the family climbed down from a Pennsylvania railroad train at Irwin station, near Pittsburgh, Pa., and trudged six miles to the home of relatives. There was a howling storm that night, and, all in all, America was not in her party dress to greet the newcomers. Philip Murray was 16, the eldest of the four boys in the family.

Days he and his father went down in the mines and nights they studied together at home. Murray spent $60 on an International Correspondence School course in mathematics. It was an 18-month course, but it took Murray a flat six months to complete it. He learned all he could about mining, labor relations, and economics.

Two years of work and study, and then came the day of a fist fight, when he lost his temper and has never found a good reason for losing it again. Young Murray was employed in the Keystone shaft of the Keystone Coal and Coke Company in Westmoreland County. One night as he came out of the pit, he stopped at the weighmen's office to complain about the money he was losing every day by having his coal short-weighted.

Words led to a knock-down, drag-out fight, and the next morning, Murray, fired for "engaging in a brawl on company property," was surprised when the entire 600 miners in the town laid down their picks and walked out to join him in his fight for a checkweighman.

Honored Early

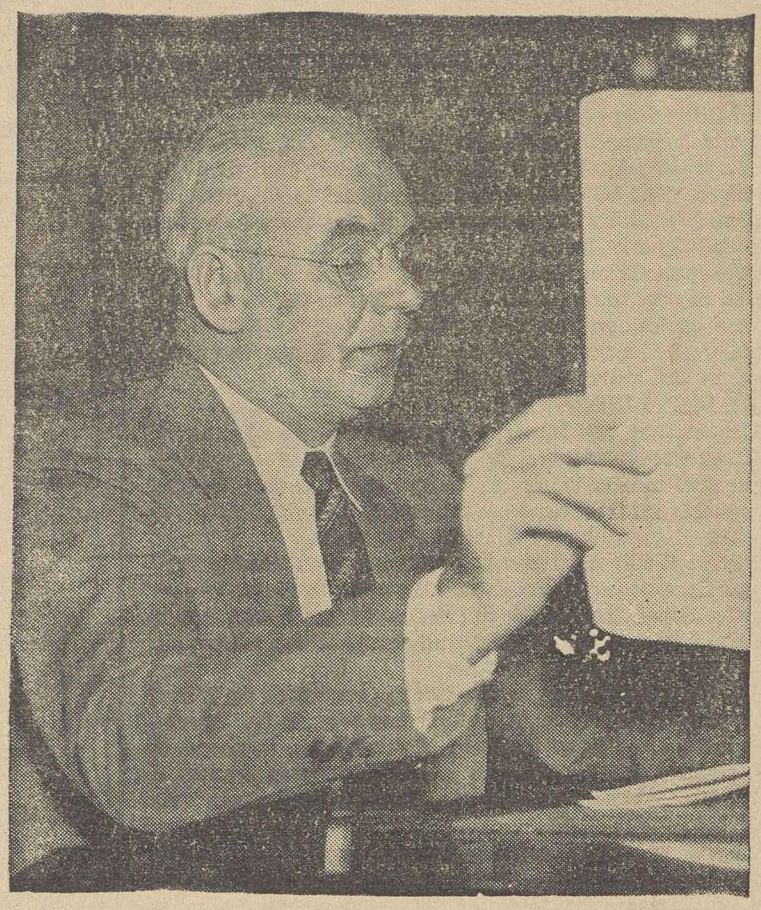
A checkweighman is a man whose wages are paid by the miners and who sits on the scales with a company employe to "check" the weight of coal mined and see that the miners get an honest weight.

A strike meeting was held, and Murray's father, William Francis Murray, who had joined in the walkout, helped elect the youth president of a local unit of the United Mine Workers of America.

Hunger ended the strike after four weeks, and Murray, surrounded by deputy sheriffs, was taken by train to Pittsburgh where he was turned loose with the suggestion that he not return.

"I've never had a doubt in my mind since then of what I wanted to do with my life," Murray said.

It's been a long way since that fight, but Murray will tell you the journey isn't over yet, and that his job of directing the drive to organize all steel-workers in one union is really the beginning of what he decided to do back in 1904.



Stayed with Labor

In 1912 two significant events took place in Murray's life. He was elected a member of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers and he threw $3,200 out the window.

One day the head of a coal company called him in and asked him how he would like to take a job as an assistant manager of $5,000 a year to start. Murray said he didn't think he would like it at all. He was earning about $1,800 a year as a miner at the time.

That is about as near as he ever has come to leaving the ideal he has set out to achieve—the unionization of American workmen so as to build a better America under the American system of government.

Murray was elected international vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America in 1920 and has been re-elected every two years since then.

CIO PRES. PHILIP MURRAY

On School Board

Since 1919 he has been a member of the Pittsburgh board of education. He has received many other honors but religiously refuses all political apointments, except in case of national emergency, such as the World War and the depression, when both Presidents Wilson and Roosevelt appointed him to important boards.

Murray drafted the original Davis-Kelly Coal Bill in 1930 which was the forerunner of the NRA coal code and the Guffey Coal Bill. It, like the later bills, sought to regulate the unregulated bituminous coal industry.

His capacities as a negotiator have been recognized by many branches of industry. He believes that most problems can be settled at round-table conferences, where his storehouse of facts covering the whole field of industry and economics is brought into play effectively.

On the platform Murray speaks quietly and earnestly. He seldom raises his voice. Murray convinces rather than overwhelms his audience, and he shines at open forums when questions are hurled from the floor.

He believes passionately in industrial unionism as the key to permanent economic security for the workers. He believes there is a place in the labor movement for the craft union principle, but it is not in the mass production industries.

Led Steel Drive

He assumed chairmanship of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in June, 1936. Since then the union has won signed contracts with 682 steel manufacturing, fabricating and processing firms.

Through the signing of the first contract, in March, 1937, wages were increased in the steel industry to the highest they have ever been — a $5-a-day minimum. The union contract also instituted the 40-hour work week, with time-and-a-half for overtime, vacations with pay, seniority rights, and the establishment of grievance machinery which provide, in the last step, the selection of an impartial umpire.

In the three years' existence of the SWOC there has been set up some 1,100 union lodges, manned by approximately 11,000 officers. Close to 8,000 grievance committee-men are carrying out the terms of the contracts.

The peaceful administration of union contracts in steel has won the commendation of management and the public. The SWOC is universally hailed as a truly responsible union, with a record for observance of contracts unsurpassed in the history of the American labor movement.

Basic Philosophy

This record might be traced to the underlying philosophy of Mr. Murray in dealing with the men he represents and in dealing with management:

"Never try to fool the men you represent. Tell them what it is possible and what it is impossible to do. And look upon a signed contract as something sacred—a pact to be observed; an agreement which is your bond of good faith."

The campaign to unionize the steel industry has been generally regarded as the most intelligent in the history of labor. With about 75 per cent of the steel industry organized and under union contract, the SWOC is now directing most of its attention to a drive in "little steel."

"Our task will not be completed until the entire steel industry is organized," Murray said. "We are not going to let up until that job is done."

Urge Labor Aid Youth Solve Economic Problem

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Full recognition of the problems of American youth and of the necessity for labor cooperation in solving them was contained in a resolution passed at the recent CIO convention.

Calling attention to the burden of unemployment on the younger generation and the need for extension of education and training programs, the CIO resolution called for:

"...support of a comprehensive youth program to provide not only full opportunity for education and training, but also to give substance to the fundamental right of everyone to a job."

The resolution also urged support of "such measures as the American Youth Act" and "continued cooperation between labor and the organization of youth."

In his closing speech to the convention John L. Lewis laid particular stress on the youth problem.

"One of the greatest contributions of CIO is the opportunity it has given to the young men and women of this country to become a part of this enterprise, taking a constructive place in the internal economy of this nation..."

Lewis contrasted the place of youth in the CIO with its virtual exclusion from the leadership of the AFL, and said:

"The CIO is training these young men and women by the thousands and thousands in the duties and the responsibilities of leadership. As the years go by they will be trained and qualified to assume greater responsibility and there will be room constantly at the bottom for the younger element to begin their task of apprenticeship in leadership."

"During that time the U. S. Employment Service will decline to obtain employment for you in any war industry elsewhere in the U. S. as well as under the War and Navy Departments, the Shipping Board, the Railroad Administration, and all other government agencies and the draft boards will be instructed to reject any claim of exemption based on your alleged usefulness in war production."

UNIONS PROTEST

CIO and AFL unions and other progressive groups took quick action to protest this flood of anti-union measures. The Textile Workers Union, CIO, said from New York headquarters: "The Textile Union is flatly opposed to the passage of this anti-labor measure." Joseph Selly, president of the American Communication Assn., CIO, described it as "a new high in un-American legislative repression."

A big AFL union in New York declared that "the measure should be bitterly fought by all sections of the American Labor movement." The New York CIO Council voted to "vigorously condemn all efforts from whatever source to undermine or abolish the right of American workers to organize, bargain collectively or strike in defense of their standards."

Cannery Union Parley Scores New Attack on Labor

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 7.—The labor movement is in a situation where its problems can be solved through organizational strength, rather than through reliance on governmental activities, Donald Henderson, president of the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union, reported to delegates from 15 states attending the third convention of the organization here.

CIO President Philip Murray, wiring his regret that he was unable to attend, wished the delegates success and declared: "I know the convention will write a real, constructive program that will enable it to continue its sound organizing work. Organization must be the keynote of the CIO. In this, I wish you all success."

HITS REPRESSION ATTEMPT

Henderson's report, feature of the convention's opening day, hit sharply at current attempts to outlaw strike action. "Over the country," he said, "more and more attempts are being and will be made to label a strike action as though it were un-American.

"Attempts will be made more and more under the guise of national defense to cease to see the real problems that affect the common people and the workers of America. More and more attempts will be made to protect those who make money out of this war under the guise of national defense and patriotism."

Delegates to the convention include cannery workers, fish canners, sharecroppers, tenant farmers, agricultural workers, nurserymen, migratory workers and the like from all sections of the nation. A large number of Negro men and women delegates are present.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Classes of workers needed for work in defense industries, including mechanics and crafsmen of many skills and professional workers, are listed by the U. S. Civil Service Commission in a series of releases recently issued.

Organize Cannery In Texas

Houston, Tex., Dec. 7 — Complete organization of the Marshall Canning Co. at Sugar Land, Tex., was announced today by Maurice J. Dineen, CIO regional director here.

Negotiations with the firm, which employs about 125 men, are to start soon.

Organization of the firm has made the town almost 100% CIO, since the only other major industrial plant is that of the Imperial Sugar Co., which operates under a union pact.

Dineen announced also that 12 members of Sugar Workers Local 917 have received $6,000 back wages from a firm which had violated the federal wage-hour act.

Peanuts' 'Big Three' Go CIO

Suffolk, Va., Dec. 7.—You can eat all the peanuts you want to now with a clear union conscience, for three of the biggest producers in the country have just signed with Local 110 of the CIO's Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union.

The contracts, marking the first major break-through in one of the worst dime an hour belts of the South, cover more than 500 Negro and white workers and put an end to a starvation wage scale that used to average as low as $3.00 a week.

The three companies, American Peanut, Pond Bros., and Lummis Peanut, signed after a 12-day picket line at the Lummis plant, maintained largely by Negro women workers. Mary Winston, 70-year-old shop chairman at Pond Bros., summed it up after the strike: "Yesterday the bosses used to lay awake nights figuring what they were going to do to us, today they lay awake nights worrying what the Negro workers are going to do to them."

The contract was signed for Local 110 by Frank Graham, president, and William Haber, UCAPAWA organizer. An election covering 150 more workers is scheduled at the Franklin Peanut Co., Franklin, Va.

MURRAY WRITES:

Nation Needs Democratic Defense Plan

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—America's defense program can succeed only with the full cooperation and participation of labor, CIO President Philip Murray declares in an article appearing in the December issue of Survey Graphic. Labor is carrying out its responsibilities magnificently, he says, where it is given a chance.

"But," Murray asks, "are powerful persons who are now, as always, bent on the destruction of democracy, going to be allowed to impede labor in assuming its full share in defense? For example, are we going to let the Bethlehem Steel Corporation continue its violations of the National Labor Relations Act?"

MUST CHANGE POLICY

Bethlehem Steel, Murray points out, was one of the firms which failed during the first World War, to produce armaments, fast enough and in sufficient quantities for the country's needs. Under its severe anti-union policies, labor turnover was enormous and strikes prevalent. It must not be allowed to repeat the story at this time, Murray declares.

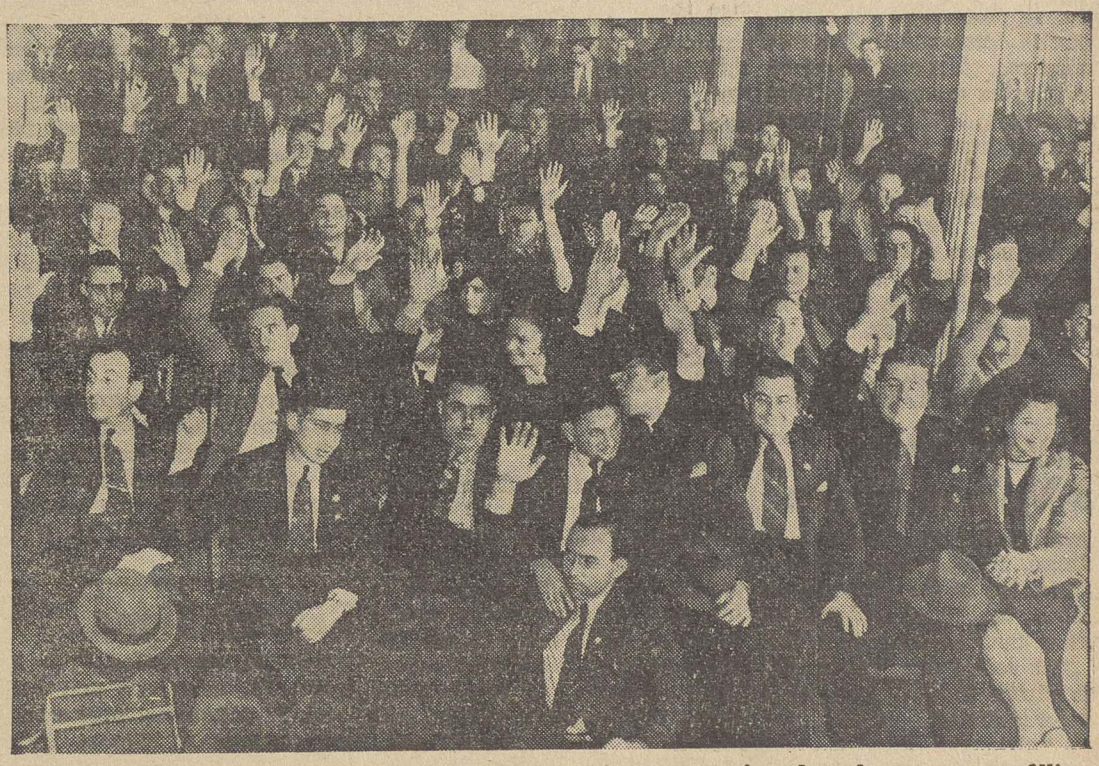
"Certainly we cannot defend our democratic society by fortifying industrial dictatorships. The preservation of democracy is a twofold task.

"First, we must encourage and extend the democratic way of life in government and in industry; second, we must develop adequate defenses against the enemies of democracy without. The one is not possible without the other; both must be prosecuted simultaneously."

Farmers Urge Cooperation With Labor

Denver, Colo., Dec. 7.—Resolutions calling for further cooperation with labor and for non-involvement in the European war featured the 36th convention of the Natl. Farmers Union, just concluded here.

"Organized labor," the convention wired to the CIO, meeting at the same time in Atlantic City, "may count on the Farmers Union for the fullest support of their fight for legislative justice to wage workers. We ask labor's support of our legislative programs."



In response, the CIO wired to the Farmers Union: "You may be assured of the fullest cooperation of the CIO for the aims and aspirations of the organization you represent."

WAR OPPOSITION

The convention's anti-war resolution reaffirmed "our historic opposition to sending of American boys to fight on foreign soil" and demanded that Congress "limit military action of the country to a strictly defensive policy, dedicated only to the preservation of our democracy."

Other resolutions urged abolition of the poll tax, expansion of benefit payments to cover small farms more adequately, called for protection of civil liberties, and demanded protection of family-sized farms.

Harold Rossman, editor of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union edition of THE CIO NEWS spoke for the CIO as representative of CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson, head of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union.

THEY ALL SAY 'YES': It's 4:30 in the morning, but these men are filling their union hall in New York to discuss a strike settlement. Members of Local 65, United Retail & Wholesale Employes, they're okaying a closed shop contract with S. Blechman & Sons. A one-week strike broke down the firm's long resistance to unionism.

Aircraft Industry 'Ripe' For Union—Smethurst

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The nation's booming, super-profit airplane industry is a "ripe plum" for CIO industrial union organization . . .

That is the feeling of Walter Smethurst, head of the joint CIO-auto union nationwide aircraft organizing campaign, who returned to Washington for a brief visit this week after supervising the recent victorious strike at Vultee Aircraft in Downey, Cal.

"The Vultee contract is the first milepost in what we expect to be a whirlwind organization drive," Smethurst said.

"Some government officials may have tried to paint the strike as red, but the settlement surely looked true blue to aircraft workers anywhere.

MANY INQUIRIES

"The same day that the settlement was announced, we had calls from workers in North American and Douglas in Los Angeles and Consolidated in San Diego. They want to get in to the union quick, they want their fellow workers in the union quick, and they want contracts as good as or better than the Vultee contract.

"And they're going to get them, too.

"The organizing campaign has already started in the Douglas plant, and we expect to see the workers flocking into the CIO."

ANGERED BY CHARGES

Smethurst was obviously angered by the gigantic smear campaign launched against the Vultee strikers by Cong. Dies and Atty.-Gen. Robert Jackson.

"Why even the Los Angeles papers — and everybody knows that most of them hate labor—didn't bring up the phony 'red' angle until the government took the lead," he said. "But the workers weren't fooled, and they stuck together until they won their demands."

The CIO official charged that the company could have avoided the strike entirely by taking a more conciliatory attitude towards the workers before the strike vote was taken.

NOT SATISFIED

"The workers in the aircraft industry just aren't satisfied with a 50c minimum pay rate," he said. "If the owners of the aircraft industry want to save themselves a lot of trouble, they'd better start thinking in terms of collective bargaining and substantial wage increases, instead of planning smear campaigns and propaganda."

The industry can well afford to pay higher wages, Smethurst said, pointing in proof to recent statistics of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. A survey issued by that employers' group showed that by January 1, 1941, the aircraft industry will have doubled its factory floor space, and will double it again by June of next year.

Employment has risen from 60,000 production workers in January, 1940, to 164,900 at present, and will probably reach 382,000 by the middle of next year.

Steel Union Gets 103 Pacts In 3 Months

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 7.—More than 25,000 employes are covered by 103 contracts signed in the three months from July through September 1940, the Steel Workers Organizing Committee announced this week.

The SWOC is recognized as sole bargaining agency in 72 of the agreements covering a total of 21,889 employes, and 18 covering 2,503 employes contain union shop provisions. Eleven of the agreements covering 2,844 workers provide for a check off of union dues.

Partial compensation of employes called into military service, is provided under the terms of the contract with one of the plants, according to Harold Ruttenberg, SWOC research director.

Cigar Chain Signs, Averts Walkout

New York, Dec 7—(FP) — A threatened strike of 410 workers, which would have shut down all 97 United Cigar Stores in the city, was averted when the firm agreed to restore a 10 per cent wage cut established a year ago.

Restoration of the cut, amounting to $64,000 annually, was embodied in a new contract by Local 906, United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO. Other gains include a 2- to 5-hour reduction in the work week and time and a half for overtime for all employes. New weekly minimum rates are $24 for clerks and $27 for managers.

The firm has abandoned attempts to put over a plan to make its employes "independent businessmen" and another scheme for payment on a commission basis.

Nova Scotia Miners Win $250,000 Award

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 7.—A bumper pre-Christmas pay will be received by 5,400 United Mine Workers of America employes in Nova Scotia who are to get $250,000 in back pay on December 21 under terms of a new contract just agreed upon.

The money will be paid mine workers in collieries of the Dominion Coal Company and Cumberland Railway and Coal Co. as the result of acceptance by both the men and the operators of the McTague conciliation board report.

Under the findings of the McTague report certain classes of datal-paid mine workers of the Dominion Coal Company were granted increases ranging from three to 19 cents a day retroactive to February 1st, 1940, and a number of men employed by Cumberland Railway and Coal Company received increases in contract rates retroactive for the same period.

DEBTS WIPED OUT

Outstanding debts owed by mine workers for rent and coal, contracted during slack periods of operation, are also wiped out up to the same date.

Back pay due the men is now being tabulated and it is planned to carry the arrears through to December 14th with actual payment being made December 21st.

The new contract has only two months to run, the expiration date being January 31st, 1941. Negotiations for another contract to become effective February 1, 1941, when further concessions will be sought are to commence almost immediately.

These negotiations are to be extended to include Acadia Coal Co. and Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co. collieries with a general wage contract covering the whole of Nova Scotia as the U. M. W. objective.

CIO Hosiery Union Board Meets Jan. 13

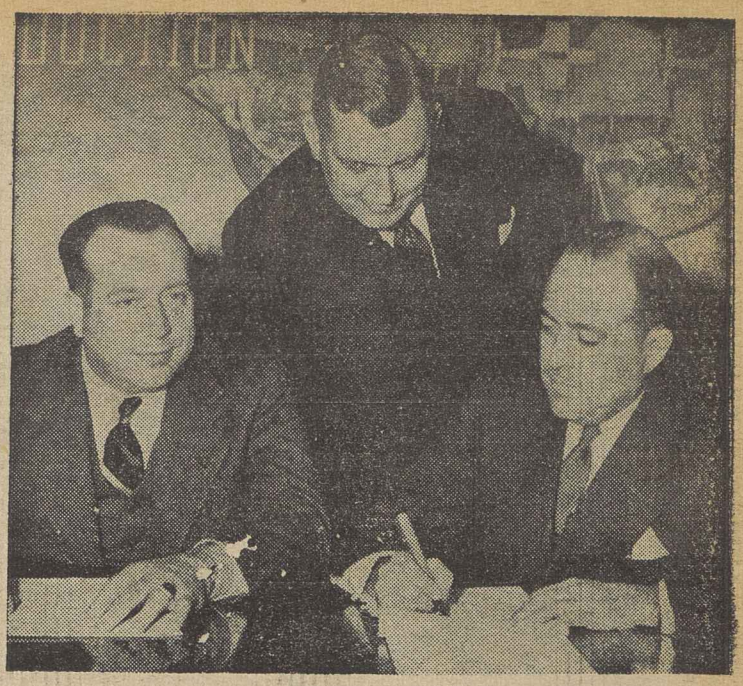
Reading, Pa., Dec. 7. — The national executive board of the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers will meet at the Berkshire Hotel here Jan. 13 to set the date for the 30th annual convention of the AFHW.

Pres. Alexander McKeown, who announced the meeting, said the convention will be held in Philadelphia late in April. The earlier date is being chosen this year because of the expiration in June of the union's 3-year industry-wide contract with the manufacturers association.

Steelman Denies Story of Slur On Vultee Strike

Washington, Dec. 7.—John R. Steelman, head of the conciliation Division of the Department of Labor, has issued a statement denying that he had said that the CIO called the Vultee Aircraft strike in California as a "publicity stunt."

His statement follows:



"I am astounded by a clipping received from a Los Angeles newspaper, based on an article appearing in a Chicago paper, in which I am quoted as saying the Vultee strike was called as a 'publicity stunt.'

"I have never made nor authorized such a statement. The statement must represent wishful thinking on the part of some person or persons unknown to me, who for some reason desire to harm the union. In my experience in handling thousands of labor disputes, I have never found men walking pickets lines merely as a 'publicity stunt.'

"Furthermore, any thinking person, familiar with labor and its problems would know that a conciliator would never make any such statement as was attributed to me."

Bakery Signs

Bellaire, Ohio, Dec. 7. — Pay increases, vacations and better working conditions were won for the workers of Nickles Bakery in Martins Ferry in the first CIO contract signed in baking industry in Ohio. The agreement was negotiated by the CIO sub-regional office here under the direction of Adolph Pacifico.

SIGN VULTEE PACT: Final step in the process of winning higher wages for workers at the Vultee aircraft plant in Downey, Calif., took place around the conference table. Shown signing the 16-month contract are Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, John R. Steelman of the Dept. of Labor and R. J. Millar of Vultee.

News Guild Official Answers Merry Go-Round 'Fable'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Having compiled a record-breaking number of factual errors in their long-distance reporting of the CIO's third convention, Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen — authors of the Washington Merry-Go-Round syndicated column — today had on file a stiff letter of protest from Milton Kaufman, executive vice-president of the American Newspaper Guild.

The columnists, in their Nov. 28 article, "informed" the public that the author of former Pres. John L. Lewis' report to the CIO convention was really Kaufman.

The ANG official's letter branded the story as "a canard and a slander against Mr. Lewis," who Kaufman said is "perfectly able to write his reports himself."

DIDN'T WRITE

"I did not write it. Much as I admire it, I can claim no credit for any part of its preparation. At the convention I served as one member of the committee which reported out on Pres. Lewis' report."

Kaufman also denied an assertion in the column that he had supported Willkie for president and pointed to a statement over his signature in the Guild paper for Nov. 1 to prove it.

"I was then, however, as I am now, a warm supporter of John L. Lewis and of his succesor as CIO president, Philip Murray," the letter declared.

Kaufman demanded that Pearson and Allen correct the story and called upon United Features Syndicate, which handles the column, to demand such a correction.

California Jury Frees 5 Unionists

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 7.—(FP)— Five women and two men, former State Relief Administration employes and most of them members of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers, have been acquitted of contempt of court charges.

They had been accused of refusing to give up union records to Assemblyman Sam Yorty's "little Dies Committee," which has been running a so-called investigation of unionism among state employes. The first trial resulted in a disagreement.

A former local president, financial secretary and a local organizer of the SCMWA were among the defendants.

$19,000 Pay Boost

Philadelphia, Dec. 7 — Wage increases of $19,000 for 100 employes of the Allen Iron & Steel Co. were gained in a contract here signed by Metal Assemblers Local 502, CIO.

Twenty-three workers received 13c hourly increases, while other employes received five and ten cent boosts.

The contract, according to Edward McCrone, CIO field representative, establishes full seniority rights, guarantees job protection for potential draftees under the conscription act, and provides for a reopening of wage rates if living costs jump.

Rubber Union Charters Five New Locals

Akron, Ohio, Dec. 7.—Chartering five new locals by the United Rubber Workers during the last month was reported by President S. H. Dalrymple upon his return here from the National CIO Convention, where he was re-elected a vice president.

The new locals are at the Lea Fabrics, Inc., Newark, N. J.; J. C. Dunn Co., Camden, N. J.; Hewitt Rubber Co., Buffalo, N. Y.; T. F. Butterfield, Inc., Naugstuck, Conn., and Goodyear Plant, Bowmanville, Ontario.

Since the beginning of the URW organiging drive last spring, 18 locals in good standing have been chartered, Dalrymple reported.

Win Major Gains In New Chrysler, Hudson Pacts

(See Story Page Three)

DETROIT, Dec. 14.—Major gains for 70,000 employes of the Chrysler and Hudson motor companies were won today by the CIO United Automobile Workers after weeks of contract renewal negotiations.

The Chrysler agreement lifted wages 2c an hour and provided for vacation allowance bonuses of $40 to all workers who on Nov. 30 had one year's seniority with the company. Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW and Richard Frankensteen, executive board member and head of the union's Chrysler department, said the increases lifted the Chrysler pay average to the highest in the industry.

First union shop with a major automobile manufacturer was provided by the agreement with the Hudson Motor Co., as well as payment of vacation allowance bonuses.

Some 60,000 workers in 11 plants are covered by the Chrysler pact, while 12,000 will benefit by the new Hudson union agreement.

700 Strike Michigan Store Chain

Detroit, Dec. 14.—(FP)—The strike of 700 workers against 16 local stores of Neisner Bros., Inc., will spread to all 41 Michigan stores, as well as other stores of the company throughout the country if the firm refuses to settle, State Director Tucker P. Smith of the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes, said today.

The strikers are demanding reinstatement of a number of girls fired for union activity, a $16 weekly minimum, the 48-hour week for men and 44-hours for girls, and four hours guaranteed pay for extras.

"At the present time the majority of the girls are working for an average of 25 cents an hour, with a few older employes getting 30 cents," Smith said.

Radiomen Win

New York, Dec. 14—Radio officers employed on tankships of the Gulf Oil Corp. voted strongly in favor of the CIO American Communications Assn. as their bargaining agency.

Sun Shipyard's Anti-Labor Squeeze Play Backfires

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 14.—John G. Pew, head of the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. here, who threatened to stage a sitdown strike on building ships for the U. S., hastily backwatered this week in the face of the furor he apparently had not expected to follow.

Hearings before the National Labor Relations Board filed against the company by the CIO's Marine & Shipbuilding Workers were scheduled to start last Monday, but were postponed a week by the Board.

ASKED DELAY

The company petitioned the NLRB to delay hearings for six months or longer, claiming that it was impossible to fill the Navy's order for ships if officials of the company had to give their time to the Board hearings.

"The Board in its judicial capacity," the petition stated, "is confronted by the necessity of deciding the answer to the question: 'Which is more important, that the national defense program go forward on schedule or that the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers be given an immediate hearing'?"

Later the NLRB, scorning Pew's attempted squeeze play, refused to postpone the hearings further, and ordered them to open Monday, Dec. 16.

In the charges filed against Sun, the CIO shipbuilding union accuses the company of spying on the union, firing members and backing a company union called the Sun Shipyard Employes Association.

Citing the company's dominance of the SSEA, the union charges that it:

1. Furnished the SSEA in 1937 and again in 1938 with the names and addresses of employes to be solicited for membership in the company union.
2. Contributed financial support to SSEA officials.
3. Provided extensive use of plant facilities including billboards for posting of notices.
4. Permitted unrestricted time at company expense for solicitation of company union membership.
5. Persuaded applicants for jobs as welders to join.
6. Entered into an agreement with SSEA.

STRIKE 16 STORES: Neisner Bros., Inc., big Michigan 5 & 10 chain, found its employes meant business when they asked for higher wages and shorter hours. The strike, called by the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes, crippled 16 units of the chain in Detroit and may spread to other cities unless a satisfactory contract is signed.

Admiral Scorched As Blast At Labor Laws Backfires

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—A Navy Dept. "landing party" seeking to establish a base from which to move against the Walsh-Healey Act and other labor legislation, today was effectively met by resisting "landlubbers" from the Labor Dept.'s Public Contracts Board.

After a fierce skirmish of words and press statements, neutral observers granted the first round decision to Metcalfe Walling, Public Contracts Board chief, and counted out Admiral Roy Spear, head of the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Making public his annual report, Spear claimed that the Walsh-Healey and Wage-Hour laws in particular were handicapping the Navy's purchasing efforts under the national defense program.

LISTS CLAIMS

The nasty old Walsh-Healey Act which forces government contractors to obey certain minimum standards of decency in their labor relations, practically made it impossible for the Navy to buy 2,000 clocks for airplanes, Spear claimed, and the purchase was completed only after months of delay.

"There are many manufacturers who will not bid and take a contract subject to the Walsh-Healey Act, and others who will accept all provisions of the act except the minimum wage determination," the Admiral lamented.

Calling for "the most careful consideration" of the Act's effects, Spear asserted that there had been "no large contracts made for steel since the minimum wages were restored" by the courts which supported government and CIO steel union demands for the setting of a 62½c minimum wage on all steel produced for Uncle Sam.

LABOR DEPT. REPLIES

Forty-eight hours later the Public Contractors Board Administrator not only answered the Admiral's contentions, but took the offensive by pointing out that delay on the aircraft clock purchase could be blamed only on the Admiral's own division.

Walling, head of the Labor Department bureau, challenged Spear's statement that the Walsh-Healey act could be blamed.

"I am sure that it was not your intention to imply this and perhaps you have been misquoted," Walling commented on the Admiral's formal report.

Going into the history of the aircraft clock order, Walling recalled that the matter was first brought to Labor Dept. attention on January 25, 1940. At that time the Sec. of the Navy wanted exemption for aircraft clocks because only two manufacturers had submitted bids, and one of them objected to time-and-a-half provisions of the law.

Five days later, Walling reminded the Admiral, he pointed out what the Navy might have learned in the first place—that the other bidder "was ready and anxious" to supply the products under Walsh-Healey standards.

Six weeks later, the Navy got around again to the subject of clocks. It asked once again for an exemption on the grounds that the second bidder, who would obey the Walsh-Healey act, might have to get some of his parts from foreign sources, and it might run into legal difficulties as a result.

DELAY WAS NAVY'S

Walling answered that one:

"I immediately advised you that under the law as it then read, you would be legally justified under Section 9 in awarding the contract without the Walsh-Healey stipulations if the company was in fact the sole source of supply.

"This was two days after you brought the matter to our attention, so that out of the four months which were involved in making this contract, the matter was pending with the Department only seven days."

If the Navy really feels that certain manufacturers or certain products need exemption from the Act, the least they could do is ask for them, the Labor Dept. official pointed out.

In 3½ years there have been only four such requests. One exemption, he said, "was granted at the Navy's request but not actually utilized by any of the bidders, all of whom were willing to comply despite the Navy's fear that they would not."

STEEL BUYING

Moving into the next battle sphere, Walling questioned the validity of Admiral Spear's charge that the steel wage determination had seriously hindered government purchases.

Spear had reported that since that determination, no large orders for steel had been placed. The reason, it was pointed out by the Public Contracts officials, was that the steel wage rate was set in mid-June; the Admiral's report closed at the end of the fiscal year, on June 30. In that short period, it so happened there were no large orders. Since that time, orders running into scores of million dollars have been placed, apparently without difficulty.

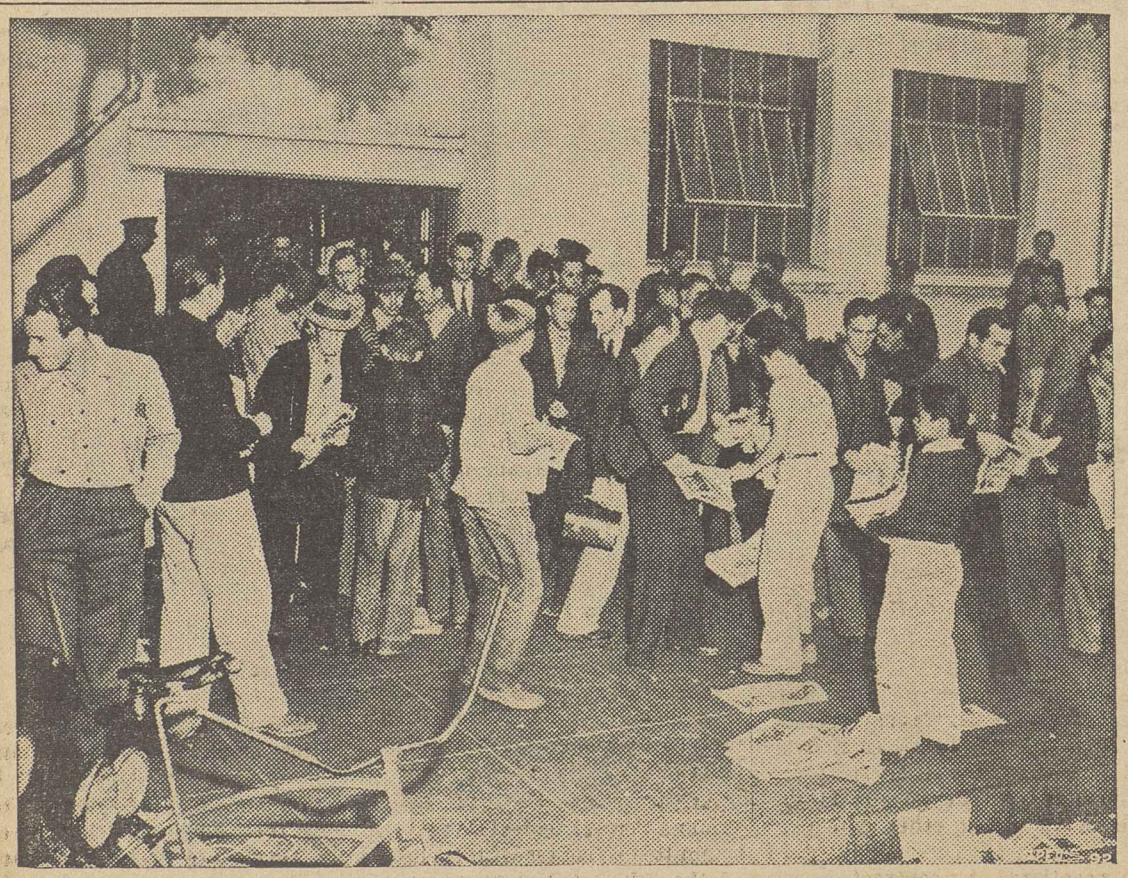
The exchange of statements left no doubt in observers' minds that the Admiral was talking through his cocked hat when he attacked the labor legislation, and that his anti-labor law expedition had been routed.

Confirmation that whatever delays exist in the national defense program should be blamed on industry and government, rather than on labor, came this week from the conservative U. S. News, published by columnist David Lawrence.

Lawrence's magazine declared:

"Strikes, to date, have been a minor factor in delaying production. Delays by government and by industry have been much more important."

Relatives



Admiral Roy Spear of the U. S. Navy, last week called for repeal of the Walsh-Healey Act and curtailment of other labor legislation.

A relative of Admiral Spear is L. Y. Spear, vice-president in charge of operation of the Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn., which makes submarines for the U. S. Navy.

The Electric Boat Co. has been one of the most notorious violators of the National Labor Relations Act.

L. Y. Spear of Electric Boat agrees with Admiral Roy Spear of the U. S. Navy that the Walsh-Healey Act ought to go.

Any connection?

AIRCRAFT DRIVE BOOMS: Workers at the huge Douglas Aircraft Co. plant in Los Angeles get union literature from the hands of CIO organizers. Spurred on by the Vultee victory, aircraft union leaders predicted speedy organization throughout the southwest.

'Only A Year Ago'

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 14 — "The Aircraft Organizer," official organ for the United Automobile Workers' aircraft division in the southwest, published a lively issue carrying details of the important Vultee strike victory settlement.

One article in particular gave the lie to Tory-inspired stories that the strike against 50c hourly minimum pay was a sudden burst of subversiveness on the part of the employes.

Entitled "Only A Year Ago," the story listed items in Volume 1, No. 1 of the paper, which appeared on Nov. 20, 1939. These were the stories:

An open letter to the manufacturers reminding them that an aircraft worker deserved more than 50 cents an hour for doing skilled work.

An article saying that the aircraft backlog had reached $150,000,000. Today it is close to a billion dollars.

A news item pointing out that for the first time in the history of aircraft a real industrial union was being offered workers.

An editorial claiming that Martin Dies was an enemy of the workers and that he deserved nothing better than a few horse-laughs. Prophecy enough: Look what Martin Dies tried to do in the recent Vultee strike.

Exposure of the aircraft school racket.

An article explaining why an international union is essential, rather than an isolated one-plant union. This answer was better demonstrated by the remarkable solidarity shown by other unions in the Vultee strike.

Golden Points Way To Union-Employer Cooperation Plan

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—If employers take an intelligent, liberal approach to the problems of their workers, they will find organized labor willing to cooperate in meeting production problems —

That was the message brought to the annual session of the American Society for the Advancement of Scientific Management last week by Clinton Golden, eastern regional director for the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Golden said that such cooperation must of course be based on acceptance by management of unions completely and in good faith. Management, he added, must discard its pretention of infallibility and instead grant labor an opportunity to participate fully in the productive process.

Management must stop blaming its own failures on labor or government and assume its own share of social responsibilities, the SWOC leader warned the management representative.

The depression, Golden added, has shattered the management infallibility myth, and it is time that labor was consulted on the mental, as well as the physical, aspects of the production process. On the other hand, he said, labor has discarded some of its earlier opposition to scientific management for cooperative action on production problems. He listed a number of instances of such working together by unions and employers.

Rhode Island CIO Meets

Providence, R. I., Dec. 14 — Delegates from city and county councils and locals affiliated with CIO national unions are gathering here for the third annual convention of the Rhode Island CIO Industrial Union Council which opens today at the Narragansett Hotel.

Philip Murray, the CIO's new president, sent the following message to the convention:

"Please convey my warmest greetings to the meeting of the Rhode Island Industrial Union Council. I wish you every success in your convention. The CIO looks to you to give that kind of leadership in Rhode Island that will enable the industrial labor movement to carry out the mandates of the convention for expanding the organizational activity of the organization."

The Rhode Island Council is headed by Adelard Gingras, president, and Anne Marsoli, secretary-treasurer.

Name Brophy To Supervise CIO Councils

JOHN BROPHY

Washington, Dec. 14.—Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO today announced the appointment of John Brophy to the post of Director of Industrial Union Councils.

Brophy, he said, will be "charged with the full responsibility of coordinating the work and affairs of all Industrial Union Councils, State and local, with a view to the development of the greatest possible harmony between that work and those affairs and the policies of the CIO as a whole.

"Director Brophy will rn himself with the activities .. the Councils in every phase, including their political work, such as that related to the local, state and national legislation. He will also be responsible for the growth and development of the Councils and their work, and the ironing out of such internal difficulties as may at any time require the attention of the National Office.

"The responsibilities in relation to Local Industrial Unions with which Brophy has been concerned in the past will be assumed by Allan S. Haywood, Director of Organization, and the position of Director of Local Industrial Unions will be eliminated."

Many Pay Increases Reported

Washington, Dec. 14.—CIO unions are successfully waging a campaign for wage increases in all parts of the country, reports reaching national headquarters reveal:

Cyanamid

Joliet, Ill., Dec. 14.—Some 165 members of District 50, United Mine Workers, returned to work after a seven-week strike at the American Cyanamid & Chemical Co. with a contract and 5½ cents hourly wage increases.

In addition to the increase, which brings the base pay to 73 cents an hour, workers won longer vacations, seniority and conscription provisions.

Nova Scotia

Trenton, N. S., Dec. 14.—Wage increases and improved working conditions have been secured for employes of the Trenton Steel plant and the Eastern Car plant here in contracts just signed by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The workers received a blanket wage increase of 12½ per cent. Six hundred steel plant employes received increases retroactive to last March, while 150 in the car plant get raises dating from August 5.

Virginia

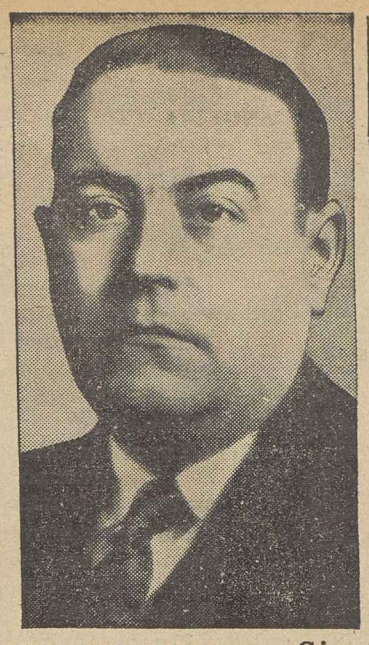
Richmond, Va., Dec. 14.—Employes of the Camp Manufacturing Co., Franklin, Va., have received a 10 per cent wage increase as the result of a new CIO local industrial union contract, it was revealed today by Ray Thomason, CIO regional director.

Steel Pacts

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 14. — Employes of the H. D. Hudson Manufacturing Co., newly chartered by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, struck for four hours and gained a 5 cent hourly increase and improved working conditions, H. A. Rasmussen, SWOC field representative announced.

At the Free Sewing Machine Co. plant, also located in Rockford, the SWOC won a secret ballot election 97-65 over a company union. Negotiations are now under way for pay increases and a contract.

Ask 10% Raise



New York, Dec. 14.—Wage increases of nearly 10 per cent in the hourly rate were asked yesterday by the National Maritime Union for 60 coal loaders employed by the North River Coal & Wharf Co., members of the union's Inland Boatmen's Division.

In addition, the union asked overtime pay for work on Sundays and holidays, preferential hiring, the eight-hour day and nine holidays a year instead of seven.

New Pamphlet For Aliens

New York, Dec. 14.—The Common Council for American Unity has issued a pamphlet entitled "Alien Registration," a manual for aliens and those advising them.

The Council, formerly known as the Foreign Language Information Service, is located at 222 Fourth Avenue, New York City. The pamphlet sells for 15c.

RAPS FORD: Circuit Court Judge James E. Chenot of Detroit, who sustained a ruling which declared that the Ford-inspired anti-handbill ordinance in Dearborn, Mich., is unconstitutional. His ruling paves the way for further organizational work at the big Ford plant.

Judge Kills Ford's Anti-Handbill Law

Detroit, Dec. 14. — Dearborn's anti-hand bill ordinance, originally requested by the Ford Motor Co., got its second knockout blow from the courts last week.

Circuit Judge James E. Celhnot of Wayne County (Detroit and Dearborn) sustained the earlier knockout delivered by Judge Lila Neuenfelt in Municipal court Oct. 31. Both decisions held the statute which prohibited literature distribution at the Ford Rouge plant gates, unconstitutional under both federal and state laws.

Dearborn city officials have asked for a 20-day period in which to consider a further appeal, first to the Michigan Supreme Court and then to the U. S. Supreme Court.

ARRESTED OFFICIALS

Arrested for leaflet distribution some time ago were pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, Sec.-Treas. George Addes and Regional Director R. T. Leonard.

Commenting on the decision, which, unless an appeal is taken will result in the dropping of the cases against them, UAW Counsel Maurice Sugar declared:

"The decisions . . . are in direct line with the law of the land and the constitution as interpreted in many recent U. S. supreme court decisions and opinions. It is to be hoped that the city of Dearborn will now be content to abide by the law and make no more fruitless appeals."

Hail Auto Union Gains At Chrysler, Hudson

DETROIT, Dec. 14.—Further progress in bettering the living standards and working conditions of automotive workers was made today by the CIO United Automobile Workers as it signed improved contract renewals with the the Chrysler and Hudson motor companies.

In contrast to last year, when the Chrysler plant was closed for 54 days during negotiations, the agreement this year was effected without a minute's loss of working time. The new agreement was praised by UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and Richard Frankensteen, UAW executive board member.

The firm's 60,000 employes won a 2 cent hourly wage increase and a $40 vacation allowance payment for all workers with at least one year's seniority on Nov. 30, 1940. Together with a provision that workers on a three-shift basis be paid for eight, rather than 7½ hours' work, the contract lifts Chrysler workers' income by an estimated $6,750,000 a year.

The vacation allowance payment, which will total about $2,500,000, will be given to the men before Christmas.

A new section of the agreement provides a guarantee of seniority, and the payment of group life insurance premiums for employes called for military service.

The Hudson pact, it was revealed, contains the first union shop clause yet negotiated with an automobile producer.

Like the Chrysler contract it includes a vacation allowance bonus for Hudson's 12,000 workers.

THOMAS' STATEMENT

Hailing the agreement, UAW Pres. Thomas declared: "The agreement reached between the UAW-CIO and Chrysler is a substantial contribution to the welfare of the Chrysler workers and to amicable labor relations in an industry which is a vital part of the defense program. The agreement and its consummation in short order is a complete answer to the hysterical demands of foes of labor who would use the defense program as a cloak for their efforts to deprive labor of its rights.

"Chrysler Corporation met our reasonable demands in a constructive manner. If other corporations in the automobile and aircraft industries will do likewise, there will be no need to worry about labor in defense industries.

"Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the union's Chrysler department, and his fellow negotiators deserve the warm thanks of the International Union as well as of the Chrysler workers for a fine piece of work."

Following are excerpts from

statement by R. T. Frankensteen, director, Chrysler Department, UAW-CIO: "The agreement reached between the UAW-CIO and Chrysler Corporation makes provisions for a total of approximately $6,744,000 in wage increases and bonus in lieu of vacation pay.

"The bonus, which all hourly workers with one year's seniority will share, will total $2,600,000. Each such hourly worker will receive $40 before Christmas. There will also be a general wage increase to run for one year of two cents per hour for all hourly rated employes. The total increase for the year will place an additional $2,500,000 in the Chrysler workers' pay envelopes.

"Another clause in the new agreement will grant eight hours pay to 16,000 workers in departments operating on a three-shift basis. Previously they received 7½ hours pay. This will mean additional pay of approximately $2.55 on the average, for each of these workers, or a total of $1,644,000 in the year ahead.

"The Corporation has agreed to meet the union's request for protection of the jobs of workers conscripted for military service. The Corporation has agreed to pay the pemiums of the life insurance policies of the drafted men. It has also agreed that drafted men are to suffer no loss in seniority and to be returned to their old jobs with additional seniority for the period of their military service.

"The agreement will be submitted to the membership of the

Auto Union Challenges Henry Ford

Detroit, Dec. 14.—The CIO today challenged Henry Ford, last of the automobile industry's open shop barons, to consent to a National Labor Relations Board election. A spokesman for Ford shortly afterwards turned down the bid.

The invitation to Ford was contained in a letter sent by Michael S. Widman, Jr., director of the Ford Organizing Committee, established jointly by the CIO and the United Automobile Workers.

At the same time he called upon Ford for suggestions relating to a "conference between a committee of your employes — members of our union—and the company, in order that we may avoid the difficulties which might arise should your company continue its illegal and un-American attitude towards members of our union."

FLOUT LABOR LAWS

Widman's letter pointed out that while the Ford Motor Co. enjoys large U. S. defense contracts, "specific and overt violations of the labor statutes of our nation have taken place at the Ford plant" since those government purchasing orders were handed out.

"Neither the CIO nor the UAW-CIO feels that it must accept un-Amerian and illegal practices at the hands of a corporation because that corporation has been favored with profitable defense work. . . .

Should you doubt that we represent a majority of your employes as their bargaining agents, I take this means of challenging you to agree to a consent election—permitting the free choice of these people as to whether they desire our organization to represent them as their bargaining agent."

DEMAND REDRESS

The letter, several hundred words long, demanded redress for Ford workers who were abused, threatened or fired as a result of having worn CIO union buttons in the plant on Dec. 9. Widman reminded Ford that Harry Bennett, Ford's personnel director, had only recently been quoted in newspapers as pledging to place no obstacles in the way of a union organization campaign.

Yet, he pointed out, "on Dec. 9, several Ford workers acting under their well - established rights, appeared for work in the Ford plant wearing UAW-CIO buttons. The buttons were forcibly removed from the clothes of some of these workers.

"Several were discharged from further employment. Rough and abusive language was used in forcing some of the workers to remove their buttons. In all cases, the removal of the buttons and the discharges were carried out by supervisory employes directly responsible to and acting for the company."

Labor Confab Hits Anti-Strike Bills

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The National Conference on Labor Legislation today voiced forthright opposition to the crop of anti-strike bills now sprouting in Tory quarters on Capitol Hill.

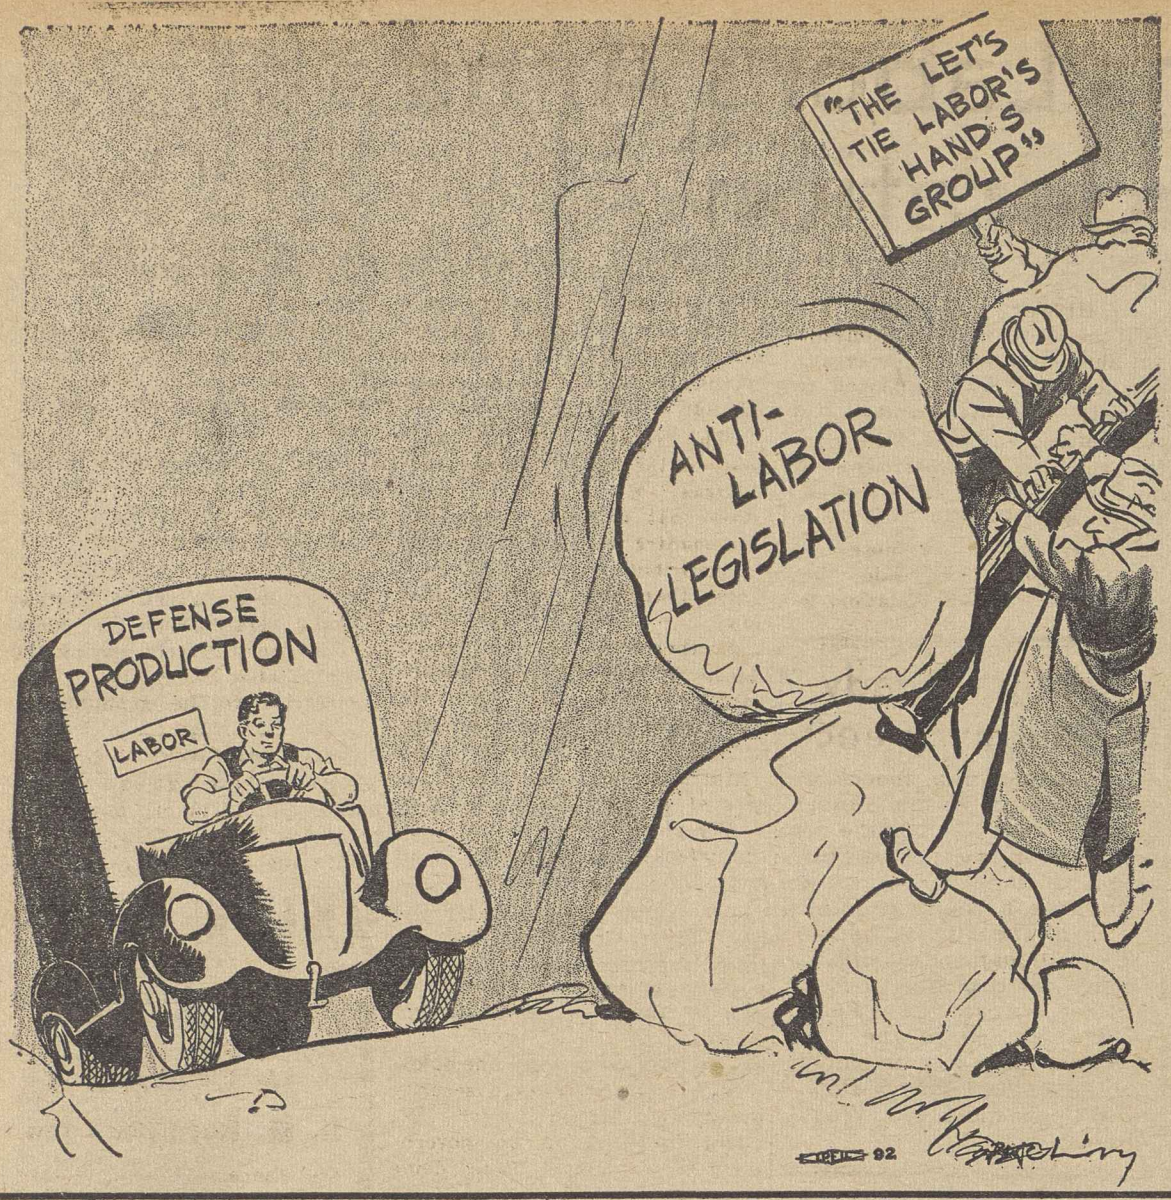
Taking action after listening to a number of speakers attack the new reactionary drive on labor's rights, the conference warned that compulsion in labor disputes would "introduce ill-will and suspicion in the place of cooperation."

The meeting, the seventh in a series of similar annual conferences, sponsored by the Dept. of Labor, brings together union leaders and state and federal labor officials.

Use of the conciliation services of federal and state labor departments was advocated as a method of ending labor disputes, and the use of arbitration set-ups under collective bargaining agreements won similar commendation.

CAREY ASKS ACTION

CIO Sec. James B. Carey proposed that the conference take action on two bills proposing establishment of home guard units and heavy penalties in case of damage to defense property—both of which Carey warned might be used as instruments to hamstring labor.



As a result, Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins named Carey to a committee to confer with sponsors of the bills. Other members of the group include Asst. Sec. of Labor Dan Tracy, Reuben Soderstrom and Thomas Morton.

CIO Gets First Utility Contract on Coast

MARTINEZ, Cal., Dec. 14 — The first public utility company to be successfully organized on the West Coast has signed a 100 per cent CIO union shop contract with the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, Secretary Maurice Travis of the Contra Costa County CIO Council, announced this week.

The agreement is with the California Water Service Co., subsidiary of the large national utility corporations. Terms include reduction in hours from 44 to 40; additional pay increases of five cents an hour, making 12 cents in all since negotiations started; overtime pay for work above eight hours in one day or 40 in one week; one and two weeks' paid vacations and other standard union conditions.

Local 134 of the UWOC, which negotiated the contract, is at present actively engaged in further organizing, particularly in the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., where many of the workers are already members, Travis said.

Justified Demands

Reactionary Congressmen and employer spokesmen have begun a violent attack against labor demands for adequate wages in defense industries. Some of them charge that a minimum of 65 cents an hour, for instance, would mean too great an increase in the cost of defense products.

But somehow these same gentlemen don't get at all excited about the huge increases in profits in the very same industries where labor is asking a living wage.

Profits of four aircraft companies, for instance, more than doubled in the first nine months of 1939, reaching a total of about $30,000,000. Which is far bigger money than was involved in the increase from 50c to 62½c an hour in the Vultee settlement, which touched off the Congressional fireworks.

Other corporations fattening on defense orders have increased their profits by as much as from 200% to 2,000%.

Well, let's look at this 65c an hour which so outrages labor's overfed critics. Even if the worker receiving such a wage is employed for fifty weeks during the year, which is seldom the case, this means only about $1,300 a year.

This is an amount which the WPA, after a nationwide investigation, found would barely maintain the health of a manual worker's family of four. It would provide no modern comforts of any sort.

Even wages of a dollar an hour, with 52 weeks employment a year, provide less than the nationally prominent Heller Committee considered necessary for a moderate health and decency standard of living for a small family.

There is nothing unreasonable or unpatriotic about labor demanding from the huge profits of defense contractors a wage that will at least maintain the health and efficiency of themselves and their families. On the contrary, it is the profiteers who insist on sweatshop wages that are the real saboteurs of national defense.

Ford Wages

The new agreement won by the CIO United Automobile Workers with the Chrysler Corp. raises the hourly average wage to $1.06, it is estimated.

This splendid achievement of peaceful collective bargaining is something for Ford employes, as well as other still unorganized workers, to think about.

Among other things, it puts another nail in the coffin of a long-dead Ford myth, whose ghost still haunts the public mind.

Ford has always claimed to be a high-wage employer. Yet the average Ford hourly rate is only 90 cents an hour, as compared with an average in the entire industry of 95½ cents and the Chrysler average of $1.06.

Actually Ford wages are now the lowest in the automobile industry, the UAW-CIO points out in "Ford Facts," because Ford is the one remaining big employer not yet signed up with the CIO.

Louder Than Words

Talking of Fords, there's a funny one in Congress. It's Leland M. Ford of California. In a wild and ranting attack on the CIO, which brought in every term of abuse he could think of, he called for the abolition of the CIO and the confinement of its leaders in concentration camps.

Then, opening his own bazoo to its considerable capacity, Ford described the CIO as "loud-mouthed." To which we can only whisper back, "Physician, heal thy-self!"

P. S.: This Ford has been in Congress since 1939. His first important vote was to slash relief for the unemployed. Since then he has consistently opposed legislation of benefit to labor, farmers, the unemployed and other low-income groups, including the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act, housing legislation, the food stamp plan, CCC and NYA appropriations and practically all important farm bills.

No matter how loud-mouthed we may be, we can't speak louder than a record like that.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE organized manufacturers have long taken an interest in labor questions and the sources of labor trouble. So it is only fair that labor should return the compliment and investigate some of the grievances that lead to employer trouble.

For manufacturers too are people, after all. Behind every stiff shirt there beats a human heart. And when we see some unfortunate person in silk hat and swallow-tail coat, it might do us good to say in all humility, "There, but for the grace of God and the lack of a few grand, go I."

The recent convention of the National Association of Manufacturers gives us our opportunity to see what's on the bosses' minds.

This is their union, even if it meets at the Waldorf-Astoria. Here they learn the simple lessons that in union there is strength, and that united we stand, divided we fall.

Far from the intimidating influences of their employes, the manufacturers here meet to express themselves freely and to be harangued by outside agitators to their hearts' content.

Deep Grievances

Let's listen to these men's grievances, before we study their resolutions.

From their conversations it is evident that they labor under a strong sense of injustice. Never sure where the next million is coming from, they find themselves ground between the upper and the nether millstones—between the wage demands of grasping employes on the one hand, and the cruel burden of surplus-profit taxation on the other.

If they shift uneasily from Maine in the summer to Florida in the winter, it is because they are driven from pillar to post by the CIO and know not where to turn.

But here for awhile, in the comradeship of fellow-sufferers they find surcease from their troubles. They listen to comforting speeches about the creativeness of capital, the patriotism of profit, the subversiveness of unionism, why taxes should come down, the fallacy of high wages and other inspiring topics.

Civic-Minded

Another evident grievance of the NAM is that it should be pictured as a money-bag with a dollar sign on it, or as the sleek spokesman of soulless corporations.

For every resolution and statement adopted is full of patriotic purpose and fervent civic-mindedness. Higher profits and lower taxes are not sought for any selfish reasons, it seems, but solely out of concern for national defense and for preserving the American way of life.

The concern of the NAM for labor's interests is also unlimited. This year's report is full of proposals for freeing the workers from union restrictions and from having higher wages or shorter hours forced upon them.

If increased wages cannot be avoided in some cases, it says, they should be "in the form of temporary wage bonuses rather than increases in the basic wage rates."

The NAM would also like to amend the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour law for similarly altruistic reasons.

Private Enterprise

"Private enterprise" is the favorite slogan of the NAM. Every worker should have the "right to work," it thinks, except during layoffs or periods of unemployment. He should be allowed to produce as much as he can; and when he has saved enough from his wages to buy a few factories of his own, he should be allowed to do as he darned pleases.

Finally, in order that the rising generation of workers may learn to be as patriotic and civic-minded as its own members, the NAM announces this year that it has undertaken a study of some 800 public school textbooks.

It urges manufacturers in every community to "co-operate wholeheartedly with their local educational authorities in analyzing sound means by which the concept of private enterprise and the details of its operation may be taught in the schools."

Quid Pro Quo

If the NAM is so concerned about solving labor's problems in these ways, why should not labor repay the compliment by trying to solve the problems of the organized manufacturers?

For instance, there is a sad division between the NAM and the Chamber of Commerce. How about a little governmental pressure to bring the two organizations together and to establish employer unity?

The members of these bodies are doubtless coerced into membership by threats of higher profits with less effort. How about labor making them free to join labor-controlled organizations which will see that profits are not increased to a point where they will interfere with higher wages?

As to the "right to work," even the biggest shot should be entitled to that, no matter how his hired managers holler about his butting in.

Then government subsidies and laws guaranteeing definite profits and plant amortization would seem to be a clear interference with "private enterprise."

Finally, labor might offer to co-operate with the private schools attended by the children of manufacturers, to see that no dangerous thoughts disturb their budding minds.

Murray Explains Labor's Aims To Farmers' Federation

BALTIMORE, Dec. 14.—A plea for understanding and cooperation between farmers, labor and other groups was voiced by CIO Pres. Philip Murray speaking before the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Reiterating his demand for a conference under government auspices, at which representatives of all such groups could get together to work out a solution for unemployment, Murray said:

"Management and industry have not given too much thought to the way new machinery has been throwing men out of work.

"There are nine million able-bodied men and women in America today unable to get jobs in private industry. This problem affects every group in the country and relates to the whole question of national defense.

INTERWOVEN INTERESTS

"Why in this great country of ours do we never get together, sit around the table, look each other in the eye and work out our problems together. Our interests are interwoven, and yet we see the different groups constantly tugging and pulling in different directions."

Murray took occasion to disabuse the minds of the farm delegates of much of the propaganda put out against labor.

Dealing with strikes in defense industries, he pointed out how few, how small and how short these have been.

VULTEE STRIKE

The Vultee aircraft strike, Murray said, was caused by the refusal of the company to raise exceptionally low wages at a time when it was making huge profits from defense business.

He described as "fantastic" the stories put out about subversive elements being involved.

"The management has not discharged anyone for Communism," he said. "In fact they communicated with me and told me they had never known of any Communists or subversive elements being at work in their plant."

HUMAN EQUATION

In the case of the New Kensington aluminum strike, Murray also described the stories about it as fantastic. He said the workers had just refused to work with what they considered a dangerous crazy man, and that the strike was settled in short order.

"It was just one of those human incidents," he said, "in which the human equation is involved—an incident such as is liable to happen in any one's home when anger and other passions are involved."

Yet on the basis of these incidents, Murray added, Congressmen like Cox, Smith and Hoffman got up in the House and demanded anti-strike compulsory arbitration laws. "They know no more about the Vultee and New Kensington strikes than a pig might know about heaven, yet have poured out to the press all the bigotry, hatred and passion at their command"

NATIONAL DEFENSE

The C. I. O. President declared that "no other labor organization is quite so vitally interested in national defense as the CIO". The majority of the CIO membership, he said, is employed in the major defense industries where the CIO has almost complete jurisdiction.

"The record of the CIO unions in the major defense industries," Murray added, "indicates that no other groups in the country have made a greater contribution to national defense than have the CIO unions.

"Furthermore, Thurman Arnold has never been able to find out anything crooked about them. We don't have racketeering in the CIO."

Murray ended his speech on a note of warning against the possibility of economic collapse when the defense program comes to an end. "I am wondering then," he said, "if America will be prepared to reabsorb her young men, to put them to work in peaceful orderly pursuits, or are there going to be nine or ten or twelve million unemployed?

"We have got to solve unemployment, or the safety and security of America are in danger. We ought to insist on the government of the United States doing something about it."

Pamphlet Ready On Murray Speech

The acceptance speech of Philip Murray at the Alantic City convention, upon the occasion of his election as President of the CIO, is now available in pamphlet form.

"Build The CIO" is the title of the eight-page pamphlet, which has a picture of Murray on its cover. It is Publication No. 50 in the CIO series. Orders may be placed with the CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

Vote Murray Pittsburgh's 'Man of Year'

A committee of representative Pittsburghers bestowed this honor on Murray "by a heavy majority vote," the Junior Chamber of Commerce announced.

Regretting his inability to attend the dinner and presentation arranged for the occasion, Pres. Murray wired his appreciation from Washington, declaring:

"It is always a source of great personal gratification to know that in constructively serving the cause of labor, one is also rendering services to the community."

Highlights of Address

Excerpts from the speech of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, delivered at the annual convention of the American Farm Bureau Federation:

There is much talk these days national unity. Unless we define national unity, however, in a clear and realistic sense, the idea carries in it the dangers of great abuse. The real question is whose national unity. There are some in the nation who demand national unity, but who will participate only if it is their own kind of unity. Upon all other kinds of national unity they look with disdain and turn away.

LABOR & FARMERS

The farm people of this nation have a great stake in the success of labor's program. The establishment of a stable farm economy in our nation depends upon the realization of labor's program of full employment. When the working man is well off, so is the farmer.

The Department of Agriculture has published charts showing how clearly the movement of cash farm income follows the income of industrial workers. The welfare of these two groups moves hand in hand.

The farmers of the nation are facing today a very serious period. The farm export market that once supported a large part of the price structure of American farm produce is now either cut off completely or rapidly withering away.

It seems to me that in this situation the farm people of this nation will find themselves looking to labor to join together in the proposition that the salvation of labor and the farm people lies in the establishment of a domestic market for our output, farm and industrial, sufficient to maintain full production.

There is a view long current among the farm people of this nation which I hold to be false. That view has been that as the real earnings of wage earners rise, there is a proportionate increase in the difference between what the farmer gets for his produce and its market price. The Department of Agriculture has on occasion published a chart which shows there to be a close parallel from 1913 to 1935 between these two figures. The conclusion was therefore established in the minds of the farm people of the country that the increase of real earnings by wage earners injured the interest of the farmer.

Since 1935, however, when the CIO was established and began its work of raising the wages of industrial workers, the real earnings of labor have gone up with considerable rapidity. While on the other hand the margin between what the farmer gets and what his product sells for in the market has continued to move downward. The fact is that with the rising real wages of wage earners the farmer benefits.

HORROR STORY: Members of Congress received this combination letter - pamphlet from Sec. - Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers. The pictures brought home the grim tragedies in scores of mining towns that have snuffed out hundreds of lives. Urging House passage of the mine safety bill, Kennedy reminded the Congressmen that the mine disasters have caused "a slaughter which is more inhuman than Hitler's mass murder from the air. You gentlemen have it within your power to bring this slaughter to an end."

Manufacturers On Warpath Plan Blitz on Labor's Rights

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Rights and duties of labor and management in the arms program were outlined by the Natl. Association of Manufacturers in its preliminary report presented to the 45th convention meeting in New York. Boiled down, the NAM's program is fairly simple—the bosses have the rights and the workers have the duties.

Congress has some duties, too, "to aid national defense by removal of unnecessary obstacles" — such as the Wagner Act, the Wage-Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act and anything else in the line of legislation that protects the workers.

The NAM is concerned about defense, and its report makes a major point that defense contracts must not be withheld from violators of the Wagner Act or other labor laws. These laws, the report says, should be enforced only through the courts, not "by withholding or threatening to withhold defense contracts from those whose policies are under criticism by government boards charged with administration of specific statutes."

The NAM is also concerned about the right to work — particularly when a strike is on. Here again government's "primary obligation is protection of the right to work" when strikes are in progress.

Unions must also recognize this principle, by avoiding "arbitrary interference" with management's right "to employ, retain and promote the most competent workers available." To make sure these workers will have a chance to show their competence, unions must also "abandon and suspend rules and practices which prevent maximum production by individual workers."

The NAM is still further concerned about wages, again because of national defense. To put it bluntly, the NAM doesn't think there should be any rise in the wage level, "Such increased earnings as are necessary and desirable during the armament period in individual cases should be made in the form of temporary wage bonuses rather than increases in the basic wage rates."

THE STATUS QUO

The really important thing in the mind of the NAM, however, is the maintenance of the status quo, with labor being content to waive any claims for changes and improvements. This was how it was done in the last World War, the report says, and though "We are not now at war . . . we believe that again in the interests of national defense the status quo in bargaining relationships should be maintained so long as the preparedness program is a major national policy."

And further: "Neither employers nor employes, nor their respective organizations, should use the national defense emergency as a means of bringing about changes in their bargaining relationships."

How this squares with amending the Wagner Act, etc., recommended earlier in the report, is not explained.

THE NAM'S RECORD

The record of the NAM on social legislation goes back quite a long way. In 1902, it was against the eight hour day, on the ground that it was in effect a "proposition to divide up all property." In 1916 it was against a ban on child labor, again in 1924. From 1930 on it was opposed to social security, relief, old age assistance, etc.

In 1933 the NAM was against Sec. 7a of the NRA, and in 1935 it opposed the Wagner Act, advising members to ignore it when it was passed.

And in 1938, the NAM teamed up with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to write the amendments to the Wagner Act that Green presented in the Walsh bill, S. 1000, as his very own.

John L. Lewis, then president of the CIO, exposed this conspiracy in testimony before the Senate Labor Committee in April, 1939. Neither Green nor the NAM ever refuted Lewis' charges.

"The contract completes a year of completely harmonious relations between the union and Chrysler Corporation. We have every expectation that it will also inaugurate a new year of mutually profitable and constructive collective bargaining.

"The UAW-CIO in these negotiations, has again demonstrated a combination of responsibility and effective presentation of the workers' needs. We have shown that, given a fair approach by ownership and management, the UAW-CIO is ready to reach fair agreements in a constructive manner."

NAM Plans Censorship Of School Text Books

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers today announced an ambitious program to make the nation's school textbooks 100 per cent safe for reaction.

Some 800 school books will be studied, the NAM announced. Prof. Ralph Robey of Columbia University has been engaged to do the job, which will consist of abstracting "all textbooks in the field of history, civics, sociology and economics in general use in the public school systems of the country."

Announced purpose of the plan is to acquaint manufacturers with textbooks which might be considered "prejudicial to our form of government, our society or our system of free enterprise." The NAM attitude on questions of this sort is well known, for the organization has a long reputation as one of the most reactionary forces in the country.

Bearing out fears that the plan is intended to bar any progressive textbooks from the schools was the NAM statement that Prof. Robey is a foremost critic of the "socialism of the New Deal."

Robey, according to the plan, will abstract quotations from the textbooks, which in turn will be sent out to NAM members for study.

If NAM members then decide certain books are objectionable, they will then "consult" with local school officials who might be expected to heed the powerful voice of employers in their district.

That the plan has been given considerable thought was indicated by the announcement that manufacturers should be encouraged "individually to accept the civic responsibility of acquainting themselves with education and its problems in their communities, and to cooperate towards the solution of such problems.

"The association plans to stimulate local businessmen to get in closer contact with school boards and individual teachers and to recommend local conferences for the discussion of mutual problems between manufacturers and educators in both the secondary and college levels."

Re-Affirm Defense Support

Washington, Dec. 14 — Labor reaffirms its complete loyalty to the government's national defense program, the Labor Advisory Council of the National Defense Advisory Commission declared in a formal statement issued this week.

The session was presided over by Sidney Hillman, chairman of the committee, and member of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

The statement follows:

In this time of world crisis, American labor is awake to the crucial need for a strong national defense program. Labor recognizes fully that if the democratic way of life is to be preserved, and enlarged, our country must prepare itself for total defense—morally and materially.

FOR ALL LABOR

Labor knows that it is the first to be trampled under the march of dictatorship. Labor knows that if workers are to remain free men, and keep their free choices, democracy—as a living faith, as a living reality —must be equipped to meet the threat of totalitarianism, within and without. Labor has been —and is — cooperating wholeheartedly throughout the entire defense effort. Until very recently no single serious interruption of production in defense industries had occurred; and then only two such work-stoppages took place — the first lasting six working days, and the second four days.

This record is ample evidence that labor recognizes the importance of continuous production to meet defense needs. Labor again re-affirms its assurance of cooperation with the national defense program and further pledges itself to take no action which may in any way impede production before all conciliation facilities of the Federal Government for resolving any existing controversy have been exhausted.

MUST BE READY

Mr. Hillman declared that "the point of view expressed by this committee, which speaks for all sections of organized labor, again confirms, and underscores, what has been and remains the serious determination of labor's leaders and its rank and file to give unstinted support to insure the success of the National Defense program."

Members of the group from the CIO are: Vice-Presidents Dalrymple, Rieve and Thomas; Van A. Bittner of the United Mine Workers; CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood; Clinton Golden of the Steel Workers; and S. J. Hogan of the Marine Engineers.

Union to Vote On CIO-AFL

Newark, N. J., Dec. 14.—Members of the Independent Association at the Electro Dynamic plant in Bayonne, N. J., have called a meeting to decide on affiliating with the CIO or the AFL. Previously the workers voted by a large majority against having the independent union negotiate a contract for them.

This dissatisfaction with the Independent can be traced to the CIO election victory at the Babcock and Wilson plant in Bayonne several weeks ago, said Neil Brant, international representative of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Cannery Union Hails CIO Policies

Chicago, Dec. 14.—The Third National Convention of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America ended its deliberations here as delegates from all parts of the country unanimously pledged themselves to carry out the CIO program under the leadership of Philip Murray.

Three major policies that dominated the recent CIO convention also dominated in UCAPAWA's streamlined program to organize the millions of unorganized within the International's jurisdiction.

These were:

1. Recognition that the government is developing a war economy in which no solution has been advanced to meet unemployment, insecurity and low living standards. The problem facing UCAPAWA and all CIO unions is to organize along industrial Union lines, especially in mass production industries.

2. UCAPAWA, with the CIO program as a guide, reaffirmed that the only sound program for National Defense must give labor official, effective and adequate representation on all policy and administrative boards so that existing labor legislation can be protected. Such a program has as its objective national security and peace, as expressed by Pres. Donald Henderson:

3. UCAPAWA, with the CIO, reaffirmed its program on labor unity and insisted that unity must be based on guarantees safeguarding the program and organizational gains made by CIO unions.

STREAMLINE DRIVE

In a plan to at least double UCAPAWA's membership during the next two years delegates voted for a policy of concentration in key cities and areas.

It was pointed out that achievements in Campbell's Soup, both in Camden and Chicago represented the most important steps forward that UCAPAWA had taken. Certain areas such as that covered by the canned salmon industry also stand out with equal importance as centers of concentration. It was agreed that only by working on big plants and in concentrated areas could rural canneries and agricultural workers be effectively organized.

President Henderson was re-elected by acclamation. General Secretary Michael Howard, in spite of a strong movement to draft him, refused to run again. Harold Lane, president of District 5 UCAPAWA, was unanimously elected the new Secretary-Treasurer.

Back-to-Work Move Fails

Newark, N. J., Dec. 16 — The workers of Spratts Patent Limited, members of Local 88, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers still continue to stand firm in their three weeks strike, despite an offer by the management of 32c an hour and an attempt to start a back-to-work movement through special delivery letters sent to all strikers by the Company.

The strike has won the support of the New Jersey labor movement and a special committee has been appointed by the Newark CIO Council to assist the strikers finacially and on the picket line.

A Good Book For Union Speakers

How to Speak Effectively, by Sy Marquit; Transport Workers Union of America, 153 West 64th Street, New York City. Single copies 15 cents each; 10 to 100 copies 12 cents each; 100 or more copies 10 cents each.

Rank and file union members who get in a panic at the thought of making a speech will find many valuable suggestions on how to overcome a handicap which prevents them from expressing themselves in public, in a pamphlet "How to Speak Effectively", just published by the Educational Department of the CIO's Transport Workers Union.

Written by Sy Marquit, speech specialist and public speaking instructor who teaches for the TWU, this handbook on public speaking for trade unions is a simple, practical and excellent guide based on the writer's seasoned experience with trade union groups.

"Does your head begin to swim and your heart pound when you rise to speak?" he asks. "Must you force your voice to get it out of your choked throat and shift your weight to prevent wobbling knees from unbalancing you completely?"

OVERCOMING STAGE FRIGHT

Anybody who wants to do so can overcome this awful feeling of stage fright and reach the stage where he can make a talk without fear, Marquit assures his reader.

"All you have to do is learn the technique used in developing and putting across a good convincing talk. To some people it seems impossible, but it is really not hard . . . if you know how."

The pamphlet tells briefly what are the essentials of every good speech and the procedure for making a good simple outline based on these essentials. Control of the voice, effective use of pauses, emphasis and how to speak with conviction are also explained.

New York CIO Hits PM's Attack on Lewis

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The smear campaign of the paper PM against former President John L. Lewis of the CIO was vigorously denounced by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council in a unanimously adopted resolution.

The resolution declares that "John L. Lewis is recognized by the trade union movement as the outstanding champion of the people's rights, needs and their desire to stay out of war." It calls upon the paper to "retract its misstatements" these were written by a Washington correspondent, Kenneth G. Crawford, who did not even attend the CIO convention.

At the same time the council approved a telegram from its officers to the paper declaring that the "lies and innuendoes" of the Crawford articles "cancel the basis for past indorsement and support of PM".

Describing the smear campaign as an "unwarranted, deliberate, unethical, and malicious attack on John L. Lewis and the CIO" the councils wire declared:

"It is most unfortunate that you have permitted personal venom to degrade PM's labor page, which in the past has been the only worthwhile section in an otherwise crazy-quilt publication."

The paper PM, which originally started with liberal pretensions, was recently purchased by Marshall Field, department store magnate.

Pres. Jones Reports Big CIO Gains In D. C., Maryland

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Dec. 14.—CIO unions in Maryland and the District of Columbia today "represent the strongest and most vigorous groups of working people" ever organized in this area, John T. Jones, president of the State CIO Council, declared today in opening the Council's fourth annual convention here.

Referring to the 1936 convention of the Maryland-D. C. AFL, when craft union officials tried to halt the march toward industrial unionism, Pres. Jones said:

"Our only crime four years ago was that we wanted to bring into the crusty, decrepit old AFL the new blood of millions of heretofore unorganized industrial workers. We wanted to show to thousands of textile workers, to the tens of thousands of Federal workers, to the thousands of steel workers that the method of liberating themselves from bad conditions of employment lay in the pattern of a strong labor organization based on industrial unionism."

150 DELEGATES

Pres. Jones brought the 150 CIO delegates to their feet with the declaration that the organization of the thousands of workers in Maryland's steel and aircraft industries was the most important item on the Council's agenda for the coming months.

Organized labor must devote itself to the problem of the "52,000,000 shrunken bellies" in order to justify its existence, Jones declared, "to the problem of improving the lot of these 52,000,000, not ten years hence, but now."

Pres. Jones's report, in addition to stressing organizational gains and opportunities, called attention to the need for labor action on both political and legislative problems affecting workers.

STRENGTHEN UNIONS

"Organized labor must look towards 1941," Jones wrote, "toward the strengthening of its organization and the establishment of such political action as will result in favorable returns in the forthcoming municipal and congressional campaigns.

JOHN T. JONES

"It is not too soon shortly after this convention to begin preparations in the state of Maryland for whatever political activity we expect to engage in 1941 and 1942. As we know from experience now, it takes time to organize politically and for us to effectively build an organization that will mean something on election day, it requires that a special political apparatus be organized long in advance and ably directed."

PERIOD OF STRAIN

The labor movement, and America's democratic institutions, are passing through a period of severe strain, Jones said in opening his report. Major change noted in this period, he said, was in the shift of U. S. economy from a peace basis to a wartime basis.

Urge Dorsey Avoid Unfair Club in Philly

Philadelphia, Dec. 14 — Striking CIO workers at the Penn Athletic Club today urged band leader Jimmy Dorsey, a member of the AFL's federation of musicians, not to appear in the unfair hotel on Christmas night.

Dorsey is scheduled to play at a fraternity dance. The strike was called several months ago when the management attempted to institute a 10% wage decrease.

Leaders of the union complain that refusal by members of the AFL teamsters, cab drivers and musicians unions to respect their picket lines is lending encouragement to the management of the hotel and its financial backers, the powerful Girard Trust Co.

The strikers are members of CIO Hotel & Restaurant Local Industrial Union 356.

JOINING THE AFL:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—An AFL business agent, testifying at congressional committee hearings here, today gave the final answer to charges that the federation's electrical union is forcing army camp employes to pay $300 initiation fees in cold cash.

"T'aint true," the official—C. F. Preller of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers—in effect told the Tolan committee investigating migratory workers.

A worker need only pay $50 in cash, and the balance in 250 $1-a-day payments, Preller then solemnly assured the committee.

BARES SCANDAL

The local official of the IBEW—whose board chairman is Asst. Sec. of Labor Dan Tracy — was called to the witness stand after Mrs. David Thomas, wife of an unemployed migrant worker, had related that her husband, arriving in the Washington area after a 6-year nationwide trek in search of steady employment, was barred from an electrical job at Fort Belvoir, Md., because of his inability to raise the necessary $50.

Thomas, it appeared, "lost all interest" in the job after hearing of the union's initiation fee.

The AFL union official explained that the high initiation fee was instituted, among other reasons, to bar membership to all except what he called "a high type of people".

REVEAL CONDITIONS

The revelations about the AFL union practices stole the spotlight in the committee's investigation of the problem of America's four million migrant workers who travel up and down the country in search of steady work.

Appearing on the witness stand this week was Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt — referred to by one of the committee members as the "Nation's No. 1 Migrant — who described some of the conditions she had seen in camps throughout the west and south.

FRIGHTFUL HOMES

With rare exceptions, the First Lady said, most of the places in which migrants are forced to live are unspeakably bad. She described in detail the living quarters in one Florida sugar camp, which is "the worst 'jungle' I've ever seen."

Scores of Negro and white families are huddled together in primitive, unsanitary shacks, she said, and a fire at night would destroy many lives.

"These people didn't have the remotest idea what it means to be a citizen in a democracy," Mrs. Roosevelt said, and called for our national planners to look ahead towards a solution of the migrant problem.

Other speakers at the final week's hearings were Sec. Frances Perkins and Isidor Lubin of the Dept. of Labor; Prof. Carter Goodrich of Columbia University; the Rt. Rev. John A. Ryan, noted Catholic sociologist; and a number of other government officials.

A statement by CIO Pres. Philip Murray was read to the Congressional Committee a week ago.

SHIPBOARD DISPUTE:

Pork Chops Vs. Tripe, 1st Cook Vs. 2nd Cook

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 — Democracy, on board American ships, is bread and butter.

The crew of the S. S. Exford, off on a six-months trip to the Orient, agreed this week to a "cooking contest" to determine whether the Chief Cook should keep his job or be replaced by the Second Cook. Each is to cook for one week. At the end of two weeks, the crew will vote on the winner.

The ship left New Orleans two weeks ago. After a few days, the crew complained that the chief served "too much tripe" and, anyway, he couldn't cook as well as the second, whom they wished to have appointed chief.

The chief objected that the stores had been thrown into the ice-box in such a way that tripe barred the way to the other meats. The crew informed the master that "we don't propose to eat our way through tripe to get to the pork chops" and prepared to leave the vessel when she should reach Honolulu.

A meeting was called in the master's cabin at which it was finally agreed that the two cooks should hold the cooking contest, the captain would appoint the winner chief cook, the loser second cook, and the crew would not leave the ship at Honolulu.

Also, the pork chops were to be dug out of the ice box.

NLRB Reopens Longshore Case

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14. — The Natl. Labor Relations Board has ordered reopening of the coastwise certification of the CIO Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, on petition of the AFL's Intl. Longshoremen's Assn., headed by Joseph P. Ryan.

The order was by a two-to-one decision, with Board Member Edwin S. Smith dissenting. The new Chairman, Harry A. Millis, voted with William Leiserson.

According to Harry Bridges, ILWU president and CIO regional director in California, the question of reopening the certification came up as a result of the AFL's consistent attempts to break the industry-wide contracts held by the ILWU on the west coast.

'STRIKE IN TACOMA'

Most recent attempt to do this, Bridges declared, was in the "so-called strike" of AFL longshoremen in Tacoma, Wash., which had two main purposes: "1. To force the NLRB to reverse its decision in certifying Pacific Coast longshoremen with ILWU as the collective bargaining unit for all Pacific Coast longshoremen; and 2. To enforce a contract secretly signed between the ILA and the port authorities of the Port of Hueneme, California."

In addition, Bridges cited the opinion of Dean Wayne Morse, longshore arbitrator, that the Tacoma strike was one "which has all the characteristics of a strike against the government," since it was an attempt to force the Board to change its decision.

1938 DECISION

The original Board decision was given in June, 1938, when the Board found that the history of bargaining on the west coast "led inevitably to the conclusion that the coastwide unit was the one most appropriate for purposes of collective bargaining." The certification was subsequently upheld in the U. S. Supreme Court in January of this year.

During the time of the Tacoma strike which precipitated the Board's new order, a news column syndicated out of Washington carried a story to the effect that Joe Ryan was promised that the Board would reopen the certification question and that he, in turn, agreed to call off the strike.

Union Leader Studies Plan To Speed Aircraft Production

DETROIT, Dec. 14.—A survey of the automobile industry as a possible source of mass production of aircraft for defense needs has been begun by Walter P. Reuther, director of the GM department of the UAW-CIO.

The survey, which it is expected, will be completed within two weeks, has been undertaken at the request of Philip Murray, president of the CIO, and R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO.

Immediately upon receipt of the assignment from President Murray, Reuther met in Detroit with a group of tool and die makers, designers, patternmakers and other UAW-CIO experts employed in GM. Chrysler, Briggs, Murray Body, Packard, Hudson and other plants.

DISCUSS PLANS

The group made an inspection of airplane motors, wings and fuselage and then engaged in exhaustive discussions as a result of which it was agreed that mass production in the auto industry of a single type of defense aircraft is possible.

Reuther was the first to propose use of the man-power, the skilled men and the unused facilities of the auto industry to bring about mass production of defense planes in comparatively short order.

Reuther's plan, roughly, proposes pooling of the facilities of the industry into a single aircraft-producing unit, each plant to make a separate part.

OBJECTIVES

One objective of the plan would be to take up the slack periods in the automobile industry and to provide steady work for skilled and production workers through the mass production of the single type of plane. Other types and special jobs would continue to be made in aircraft plants in California, the east and elsewhere.

Reuther has discussed the program with national defense and war department officials in Washington as well as with Presidents Murray and Thomas and numerous craftsmen in the ranks of the UAW-CIO. The government and CIO officers urged that he complete his survey as speedily as possible.

Point to Major Flaws In Phony Wright Pact

Newark, N. J. Dec. 14—Tricky company union contracts, once the joy of reactionary employers, are "out" in this year 1940, Pres. Irving Abramson of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council indicated today in a statement blasting a fake agreement signed by the Wright Aeronautical Co. and an "independent" union.

The company employs thousands of workers at its big Paterson, N. J., plant.

The contract suddenly signed by the firm and the "Wright Aeronautical Employes Assn." represents a defeat for Wright workers "insofar as it sets a minimum of at least 9c. an hour below the standard set by the CIO in the aircraft industry," Abramson declared.

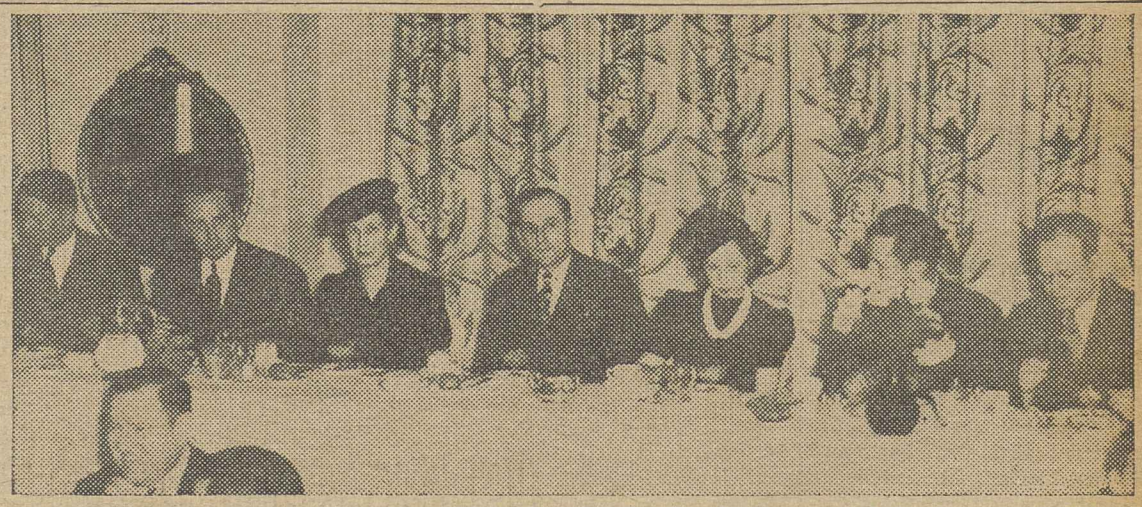
NEVER CERTIFIED

"The Wright Aeronautical Employes Assn. has never been certified by the Natl. Labor Relations Board, and the sudden signing of this contract is an attempt to thwart genuine organization by the CIO and genuine collective bargaining. This contract was signed suddenly and has never been presented to the employes for ratification.

"The company has piled up tremendous profits in recent years and today this company is receiving many millions of dollars worth of national defense contracts."

Seek Higher Minimum

New York, Dec. 14.—A drive to raise the hourly minimum for shirt workers from the 32½ cents fixed by the Wage-Hour law to 40 cents was announced this week by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Some 60,000 workers are employed in the industry.



Following a conference of shirt union leaders, the ACW voted to request the increase immediately. Representatives from New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland and the South attended the conference at which Alex Cohen, manager of the ACW shirt department, presided.

Showing Results!

NEW YORK, Dec. 14 — The organization drive of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers continues to move along at top speed, the quarterly report of Organization Director James Matles revealed today.

In the three months ending October 31, the UE rolled up this record:

1. Signed 21 new contracts covering 10,000 workers and renewed 42 others covering 17,000 workers.
2. Participated in 22 Labor Board elections involving 23,000 workers—and won every poll.
3. Chartered 17 new locals.
4. Received initiation payments from 12,161 new members—with 5,317 being received in October alone.

HONOR OFFICIAL: Unionists in St. Louis banqueted in honor of John Doherty, CIO regional director there for the past few years. Doherty has been moved to Chicago to assist Van A. Bittner in the direction of steel and packinghouse union affairs throughout the midwest. Shown at the speakers' table are: Alfred Kojetinsky, steel workers; Delmond Garst (auto workers) and Mrs. Garst; Doherty and Mrs. Doherty; Pres. Opel of the Missouri CIO Council; and Max Michelson of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Pres. Murray Proposes New Defense Structure

Ask Poll At Ford Motor Co.

Detroit, Dec. 21.—The notorious anti-labor practices of the Ford Motor Co. were under fire today from the CIO United Automobile Workers and the labor division of the National Defense Advisory Commission, headed by Sidney Hillman.

In Cleveland the UAW's executive board said it would file a petition with the Labor Board for an election at the Dearborn plant.

Michael Widman, Jr., director of the joint CIO-UAW Ford organizing drive predicted that "we would win by 75 per cent in a free election among Ford employes."

In a statement addressed to Pres. Roosevelt, Widman charged that "10 employes in the tire building at the Dearborn plant were fired for wearing union buttons," and that "union buttons were torn forcibly from the men's shirts."

He said the union desired no trouble with Ford, and asked for federal assistance to force Ford's compliance with the laws of the land. Shortly afterwards James Dewey, veteran U. S. Labor Conciliator, was sent to investigate the situation.

PROTEST CONTRACT

Meanwhile it was learned that the awarding of a defense contract to Ford involving $2,000,000 had brought a protest to the War Dept. from Sidney Hillman.

"Our protest was flat and unequivocal," an official of Hillman's division stated, "and we are now awaiting developments."

The protest was made on the grounds that the contract carried no provision requiring compliance with labor laws such as the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour law. Hillman was said to have urged the Defense Commission to hold up the award until Ford showed his willingness to observe the law.

An article by I. F. Stone in the "Nation" revealed that the contract called chiefly for the production of a new type of midget military truck, which not only could be produced elsewhere, but was actually planned and perfected by the Bantam Automobile Co. of Butler, Pa. Objections have also been raised, according to Stone, on the grounds the contract should have been given to Bantam.

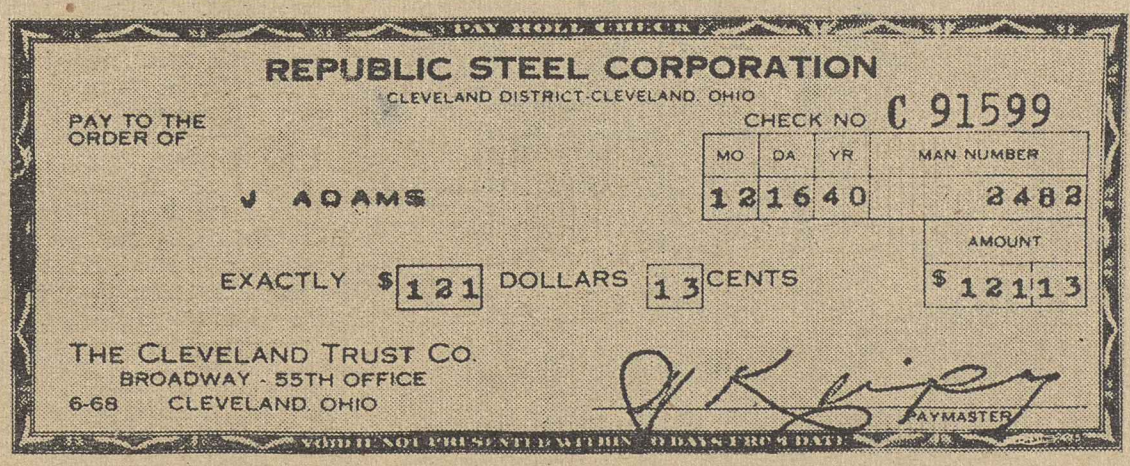
Urge Labor Voice On Industry Councils

(Text of Statements, Pages 3 & 5)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—CIO Pres. Philip Murray today proposed a thorough revamping of the United States' national defense structure.



Key factor in the Murray plan, which was presented to Pres. Roosevelt, members of the Cabinet and the National Defense Advisory Commission, is the establishment of councils for each of the nation's basic industries. These bodies would include equal representation from labor and management, with one government representative as chairman.

Purpose of the councils would be to ascertain production needs and facilities; put jobless workers back into employment in hundreds of factories now idle or partially idle; eliminate industrial bottlenecks through a wider distribution of defense orders; and preserve industrial peace through observance of basic labor and social laws.

In making public his plan, Murray said three months ago he and former CIO Pres. John L. Lewis had discussed it with Pres. Roosevelt.

The plan won the approval of the CIO's secretary and six vice-presidents, who met with Murray in Washington this week. The national officers also endorsed a statement issued by the CIO leader asserting that labor is not to blame for the "lag" in defense production cited by Defense Commissioner Knudsen last week.

"The record will show," Pres. Murray declared, that production is falling below quota because "a few of the larger companies have got almost all of the government contract business, whilst many of the smaller independent companies are still dawdling in the real of unemployment and economic business despair."

GIRDLER COMES ACROSS: Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. has finally been made to obey the law—and so this week a flood of checks for vacation pay in 1938, 1939 and 1940 are being mailed to some 7,000 workers who participated in the 1937 Little Steel strike. Payment was ordered by the Labor Board as a result of CIO steel union activity, and upheld by the U. S. Court. John Adams, a Cleveland steel worker, who got this check, also received two more for '38 and '39, bringing his total payment to $348.28. STORY PAGE TWO.

New York Store Signs CIO Pact

New York, Dec. 21. — The Stern Department Store here has signed an agreement with the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes, adding another to the growing list of big stores now under CIO contract.

The agreement was negotiated following a vote to strike taken among Stern employes, provides wage increase totaling $55,000 annually; paid vacations; seniority rights, check-off of union dues and other standard union terms.

Little Steel Strikers Get Vacation Pay

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 21. — Republic Steel Corporation is paying vacation money for the years 1938, 1939 and 1940 to some 5,000 to 7,000 strikers involved in the "little steel" strike of 1937, Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee revealed today.

"The amount of vacation money which these SWOC members are receiving is conservatively estimated at $350,000," Murray said. "The men received separate checks as they went to the pay windows in the Ohio plants of Republic Steel today —the mid-December pay day.

"These vacation-pay-checks were separate from their regular two-week pay; and we have photostatic copies of many of them. One check, for instance, paid at the Cleveland mill of Republic Steel, was in the amount of $348.28, and another was for $223.78. The two individuals to whom these checks were paid were out on strike in 1937."

COURT UPHELD SWOC

Murray recalled the decision of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, handed down on Sept. 30, 1940. This decision upheld the SWOC's contention that the men involved in the 1937 strike and later reinstated were entitled to vacation pay for the years 1938, 1939 and 1940.

Republic Steel in that case argued it did not have to pay vacation money. This particular decision was an outgrowth of the National Labor Relations Board decision of 1939 which ordered Republic Steel to reinstate some 6,000 to 7,000 strikers to their old jobs with back pay from October, 1938.

SENIORITY RIGHTS

That Labor Board decision also restored the men to their seniority rights. It was on that point that the SWOC carried the question of vacation-with-pay to the Circuit Court. Republic Steel contended that because of the 1937 strike the seniority record of the individuals was lost; that seniority began when they were reinstated.

In its decision of Sept. 30, the Circuit Court held the seniority record of the men was not broken because of the strike, and specifically ordered vacation-pay for the past three years.

"The payment of the $350,000 in vacation money is not to be confused with the millions of dollars due in back wages," declared Murray.

"This $350,000 is the first installment on the money due our members. We are awaiting a final determination by the National Labor Board of the amount due each of our members in back pay. This computation is being made by the Labor Board on the basis of questionaires filled out by some 6,000 to 7,000 men in the Ohio mills of Republic Steel."

Fishermen Fight Anti-Labor Laws

Astoria, Ore., Dec. 21.—Important action affecting thousands of workers in the fishing industry was taken at the second constitutional convention of the CIO's International Fishermen & Allied Workers, which opened here Dec. 9.

Delegates representing 17,000 fishermen, cannery and other workers employed in the various branches of the industry attended the convention.

Realizing the serious threat to organized labor of the present trend of anti-labor legislation in Congress, the convention took a firm stand demanding the enforcement and extension of all laws designed to protect the rights of labor and the welfare of the American people.

HIT PRACTICES

The delegates voted to condemn the action of the U. S. War Dept. for its practice of using soldiers in Ketchikan, Alaska, for work that deprived longshoremen of their livelihood, and to request an amendment to the discriminatory unemployment compensation law in Alaska which deprives seasonal workers of benefits.

In a resolution pointing out the close connection between the two major basic industries of the Northwest—lumber and fishing—the government was called upon to protect the forest of the country so vital to the preservation of fish stocks in streams upon which millions of workers in both industries are dependent for their living, and to extend public ownership of forest areas.

BACK CIO POLICY

The position taken at the national CIO convention on national defense was reaffirmed and the need for the protection of labor in the administration of the draft law was stressed.

A rising vote of appreciation and confidence in the retiring CIO President, John L. Lewis, brought all the delegates to their feet cheering.

Robeson, Noted Singer, Urges Negro Workers Join CIO

Detroit, Dec. 21 (FP) — "Join the CIO" was Paul Robeson's advice to the Negro workers in the big Dearborn Ford plant and to those employed in other local industries, as he gave an interview in Detroit to Ford Facts, the special organizing tabloid paper of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Talking in his hotel after a song recital, the eminent Negro singer made his points without reservation.

DOESN'T MINCE WORDS

"It would be unpardonable," he said, "for Negro workers to fail to join the CIO. I don't see how that can be argued. If Negroes fail to do that, they classify themselves as scab labor.

"Negroes cannot be a part of American democracy except through labor unions. Democracy can't exist without the labor movement."

PAUL ROBESON

Robeson speaks of Negro workers from personal experience. He was a bricklayer and waiter and iceman before he gained international fame as a singer.

BLASTS FORD

Because of the special effort the Ford Motor Co. is making to keep Negro employes from joining the UAW-CIO, Robeson's comment on its anti-union policy had additional weight. He said:

"It is astounding to me that a man like Ford and such a large industry as the Ford Motor Co. have been able to operate in a democracy and not to deal with the labor movement."

Possibly with Ford and other reactionary employers in mind, Robeson concluded:

"In the United States today there is a terrific effort going on to take away the all too few rights of labor. If that happens the Negroes, who have the fewest rights, will suffer most."

Seamen to Seek 25% Wage Increase

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Requests for a 25% wage increase for all seamen covered by contract with the American Merchant Marine Institute, will be sought by the National Maritime Union, Pres. Joseph Curran announced today.

The Institute represents the general passenger and freight trade on the Atlantic and Gulf contracts.

Under the present contract, the union has the right to reopen the wage clause at the end of every six-month period. The second such period will expire January 9, 1941.

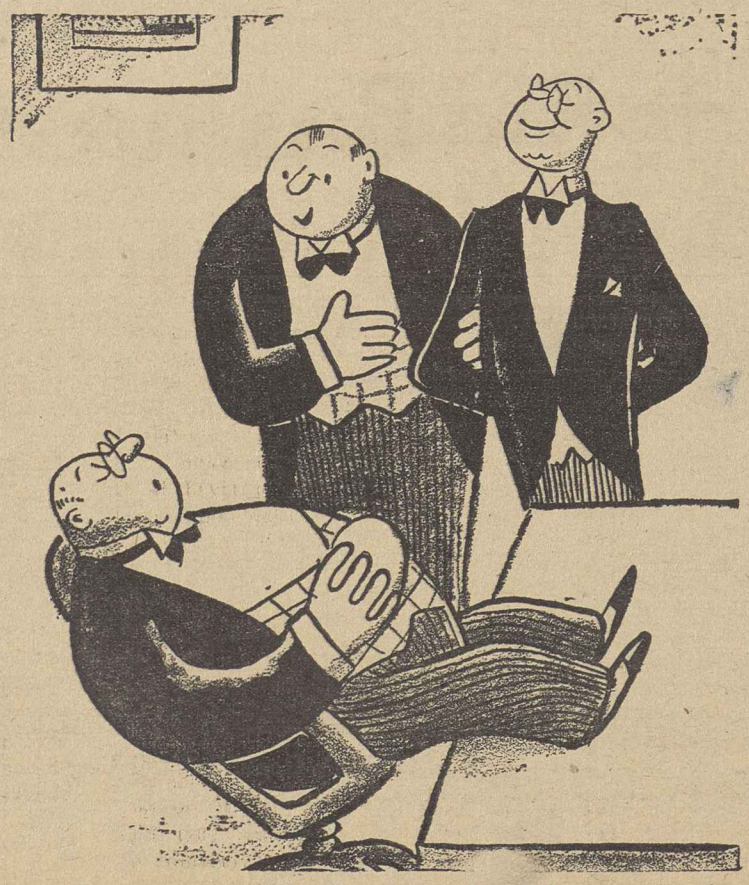
In making the announcement, Curran, who is a CIO vice-president, made public a resolution passed unanimously at an NMU membership meeting in New York last week which instructed the union's national officers to reopen the agreement and negotiate the wage increase.

OLD EXPERIENCE

"Our experience in the first world war shows that the longer the war continues, the higher the cost of living will go, even continuing for a period after the war is halted," the statement said.

"The present wages of American seamen, inadequate even in normal times, are now far too low to provide the necessaries of life and a decent standard of living for us and our families."

The shipowners are reaping unprecedented profits, Curran pointed out, as a result of the war abroad and the U. S. defense program.



Present wage scales run from $65 to $95 a month in the deck department, from $70 to $92.50 in the engine department and from $70 to $120 in the stewards department. At the depth of the depression prior to the formation of the NMU, seamen were working for as little as $25 a month.

Auto Union Files Strike Notice

Detroit, Dec. 21.— Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the UAW-CIO, announced he had filed a 5-day strike notice with the State Labor Mediation Board in connection with the labor dispute between the union and the Eaton Wilcox Rich Corp.

The strike notice, Addes said, affects the Detroit, Battle Creek and Marshall plants of the corporation which together employ some 2,000 workers.

"The Eaton Wilcox Rich Corporation has embarked on the policy of destruction of our organization. It has, for weeks, refused the reasonable and just demands of its striking employes in Saginaw who are members of our organization. This attack on the union constitutes a grave breach of good faith and of the contract which the corporation signed with our organization," Addes said.

Guild Strike Ends

Monroe, La., Dec. 21. — The first Newspaper Guild strike in the deep south ended this week in a settlement which provided $11,000 in full back pay for all striking newspaper workers after more than eight months on the picket line.

Improved wages, unqualified seniority of economy lay-offs and arbitration of dismissals for any others causes by the judge of the U. S. District Court, were also contained in the stipulation between the National Labor Relations Board and the struck Monroe News-Star and Morning World.

Described as "the best possible settlement under the circumstances" in a statement issued by the strikers, the stipulation which contained the commitments permitted the struck publications to evade formal recognition of the union.

Beals Resigns News Guild Editorship

New York, Dec. 21.—Resignation of Clyde Beals as editor of The Guild Reporter, official organ of the CIO American Newspaper Guild, was announced today. Beals, editor of the paper since its inception in 1935, will devote his time to writing.

An enthusiastic believer in the labor press, Beals sponsored annual meetings of labor press editors at which their problems could be discussed and steps taken towards improvement in labor journalism standards.

New editor of the Guild Reporter is Fred Mers, until now ANG international representative in New England. With the abolition of the post of Assistant Editor of the paper, John Dunn, who filled that position, becomes an international representative.

Murray Lists CIO Plan to End Defense Lags

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—A complete revision of the present defense setup designed to end "serious inadequacies rampant throughout the program" was outlined by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a statement issued here and in a memorandum presented to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Cabinet, and the Defense Advisory Commission.

Main basis of Pres. Murray's plan, which was approved by a conference of the six CIO vice-presidents and the national CIO Secretary, rests on a greatly expanded labor representation in the defense program. This would be achieved, the plan states, through a system of councils containing an equal number of labor and industrial representatives, with one government official serving as chairman.

PLACES BLAME

Murray's statement on defense problems, released a day before the CIO plan was announced, placed the blame for the present breakdown in the arms program squarely "upon the shoulders of industry to whom the defense program has been virtually turned over," and vigorously attacked efforts to make CIO the whipping boy for industry's failures.

Amplifying this, Murray told newsmen that out of 10,000 factories capable of defense production, only 30 per cent have been given defense orders. "We contend that there has been an unwarranted, unjustifiable, disproportionate allocation of this business and the letting of contracts in a fashion that has created this bottleneck in industry, and is respon-

CIO Dockmen Ratify Pact Two-to-One

Washington, Dec. 21. — West Coast longshoremen voted more than two to one to accept the general agreement negotiated with the shipowners by the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, President Harry Bridges of the ILWU, said here today.

The coastwide contract was ratified by a vote of approximately 6500 to 3200, Bridges stated, following 16 months of negotiations that were several times on the point of being deadlocked. It will cover about 12,000 workers.

The overwhelming vote in favor of ratification of the agreement is a triumph for the stand taken by Bridges who urged the longshoremen to accept it as holding the gains already won by the union and further strengthening the ILWU's bargaining power.

GAINS WON

Provisions won by the union in the old agreement including the six-hour day, closed shop, hiring through the union hall, safety code and limitation of amount of cargo carried in a load, are carried over in the new contract. Outstanding point in the new agreement, Bridges said, is the clause controlling the use of labor saving machinery, which guarantees that longshoremen will not have their pay or employment levels lowered by labor saving devices.

The old contract expired September 30, 1939. Since then the longshoremen have been working under an extension. Negotiations for the new agreement began in the summer of 1939. During the weeks which followed the newspapers were full of stories that the shipowners were going to put up "a fight to the finish" against the union.

Steel Union Rejects Offer From Youngstown Sheet; Calls Proposal Inadequate

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 21.—The CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee has rejected an offer made by the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. as a possible means of settlement of charges brought against the company by the union before the National Labor Relations Board. The charges were an outgrowth of the 1937 "Little Steel" strike.

Rejected by the union was a Sheet and Tube offer that 72 SWOC strikers be awarded $47,000 in back pay. The union, in its original charges, asserted more than 300 were entitled to back pay totaling more than $200,000.

In a letter to the Labor Board signed by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, the SWOC termed the offer "fundamentally inadequate and unsatisfactory," and asked that the Board immediately proceed with hearing of the union's charges.

"After a full analysis of all aspects of this matter," Pressman wrote, "we have come to the conclusion that the proposal is fundamentally inadequate and unsatisfactory and that we cannot accept it."

Youngstown Sheet & Tube's proposal, he asserted, "contemplates that those strikers who have not yet been returned to work since the strike will continue to be denied reinstatement." This group includes about 40 men.

COMPANY UNION ISSUE

"On the company union issue, the respondent has not offered to disestablish all of those organizations which are clearly company unions and which have been in existence in its plants," Pressman wrote to the Labor Board.

"It is not clear whether the respondent has agreed either in its proposal, or at the subsequent conference, that it would accept a consent decree in which full stipulation of facts would be incorporated.

"On the issue of the charges of refusal to bargain, we must again state our firm position that we feel that the complaint should issue and the case proceed to trial on these charges, just as on all the others, unless a satisfactory understanding can be reached as part of the settlement.

FALLS FAR SHORT

"In regard to the question of remedial wages for the strikers, we submit that the offer falls far short of fulfilling the rights of the men."

The Youngstown Sheet & Tube case is now about three and one-half years old. Charges of discrimination, refusal to bargain collectively, and fostering a company union were first filed with the Labor Board by the SWOC in the summer of 1937. The charges apply to the company's plants in Youngstown, O., South Chicago, Ill., and Indiana Harbor, Ind.

The Labor Board thereafter was instrumental in bringing the SWOC and company together to

Murray Demands Big Business Forget Super-Profits, Put Idle Men to Work

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. — Following is the full text of the statement on the national defense program issued by CIO Pres. Philip Murray with the approval of the organization's six vice-presidents and secretary:

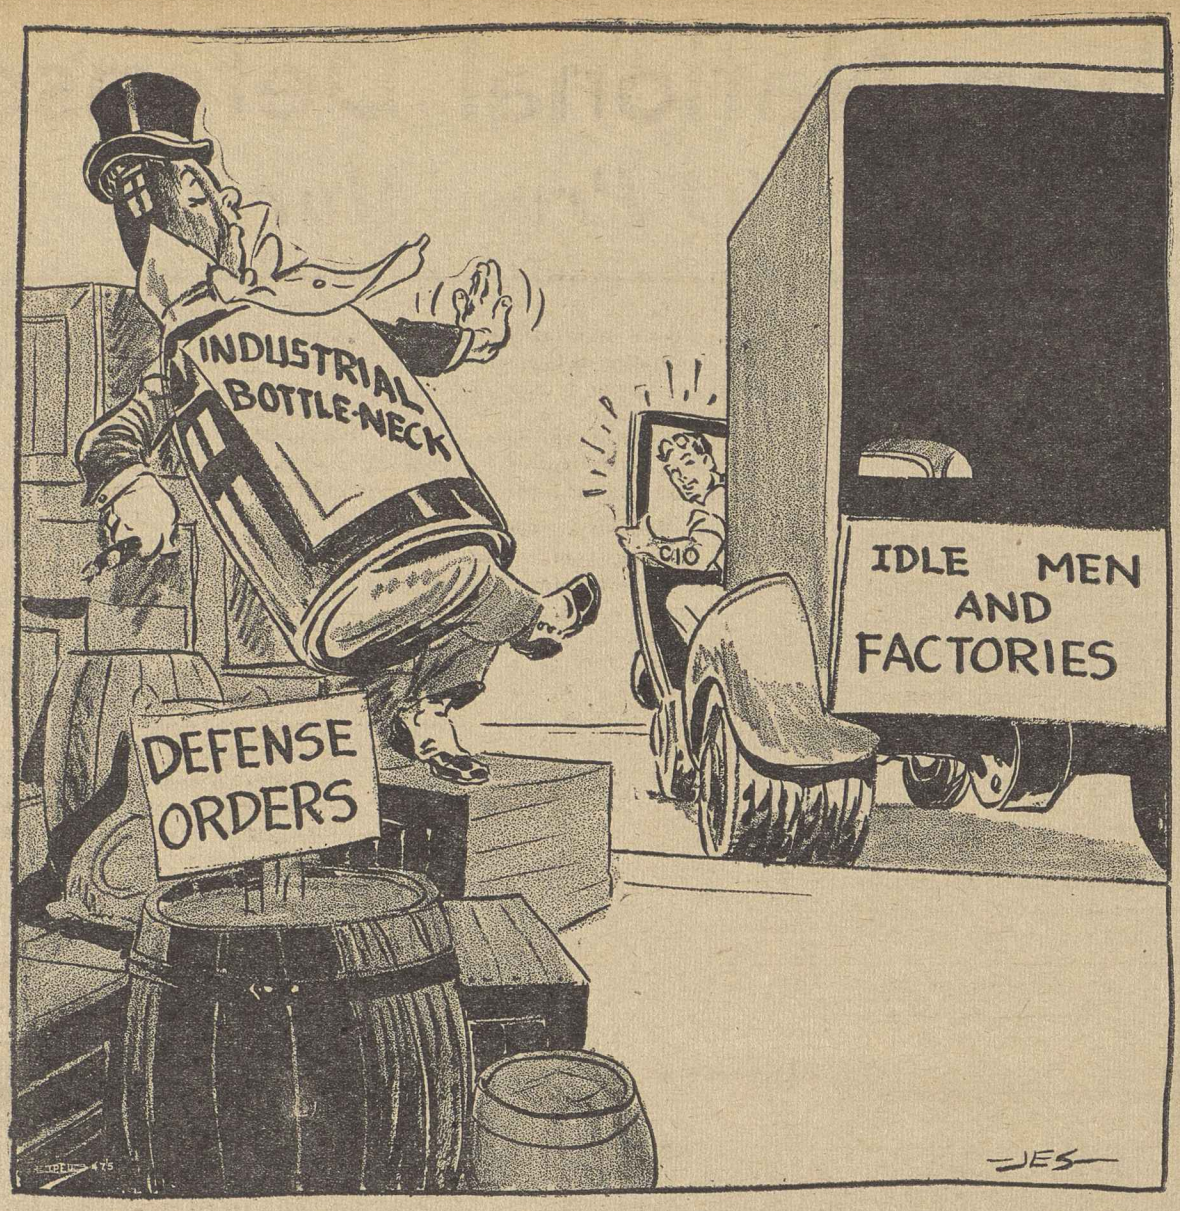
THE National Defense Program is lagging, and public confessions are being made about plane production falling thirty per cent below schedule, light tank production being only four a day, and other serious inadequacies rampant throughout the program.

Instead of facing the facts and assessing the blame where it belongs, squarely upon the shoulders of industry to whom the defense program has been virtually turned over, unfair efforts are being made to blame labor. It would be well for critics of the CIO to look into and try to understand the tremendous public service which the CIO-affiliated unions are rendering this country, before they start their wholly unwarranted and very ignorant sharp-shooting practices against CIO unions in America.

Labor Cooperates

Labor's cooperation in the promotion of the Nation's defense program has been established by its record in the major basic and defense industries of the country. Never before in the history of the United States has industrial peace been created to such a degree as it has been in those industries over which CIO assumes jurisdiction and in which its affiliated unions have collective bargaining agreements with employers.

Each one of these agreements provides orderly methods for the peaceable adjustment of disputes arising under them. The Nation should understand that the grievance adjustment machinery at each of the plants in the defense industries covered by these agreements is in operation every day throughout the year. The orderly adjudication of hundreds of grievances arising under these agreements is a daily happening. No better system for the peaceable efficient operation of industry has ever been contrived in the history of this or any other country. The greater efficiencies resulting therefrom have proved to be satisfactory to industry and labor.



It is not the intent nor has it ever been the purpose of our CIO organizations to impede, hamper or restrain the continuity of operation or the constant flow of production where such collective bargaining agreements are in existence. Nor has this been the result of CIO activities The facts are that CIO has stabilized the industrial relations of large portions of American industry, and will bring stability into the minority portion of the basic defense industries it is now organizing for the purpose of establishing constructive collective bargaining agreements.

Right to Improve

We naturally hope and intend to improve our conditions of employment and our wage standards. This we contend is a legitimate, constitutional and God-given right.

We will naturally refuse to yield to the greed and rapacity of certain vicious employers who have no regard for either the needs of their employes of the welfare of the country. The moral, economic and spiritual well-being of our country depends upon industry's willingness to work out with organized labor its ordinary, sensible collective bargaining procedures, wage and other standards, that will provide at least some semblance of decency and comfort to American work-

LABOR IS READY

CIO Defense Plan

The plan advanced by CIO President Philip Murray for strengthening the National Defense program deserves the careful study not only of the governmental authorities to whom it is addressed but also of all CIO members and the general public.

In the first place, the very fact that CIO should advance such a plan is in itself significant. It reveals the sense of public responsibility of the progressive labor movement; and its realization that labor must assume a leading role in national affairs, in its own as well as the country's interests.

The plan has the merits of clarity and simplicity in a confused situation. It calls for the establishment of industry councils, with equal management and labor participation, in each of the major defense industries; and for a National Defense Board, also with equal labor and management representation and with the President as Chairman.

A full description of the CIO defense plan will be found elsewhere in this issue. But certain important aspects of the plan cannot be stressed too much.

(1) Besides providing for efficient production of armaments, the CIO plan is also concerned with adequate production of domestic or consumers' goods. If production becomes lopsided at the expense of domestic or non-military goods, the result will be scarcity, higher prices, inflation and an actual lowering of American living standards.

(2) The CIO plan calls for more adequate labor representation in administration and determination of policy in regard to the whole defense program, as well as labor relations.

(3) Reemployment of the millions of unemployed is one of the basic purposes of the plan. One of the methods suggested for doing this is through the planned granting and re-allocation of defense contracts in such a way as to put idle factories and idle men to work—instead of creating bottlenecks, as at present, by awarding all contracts to a few specially favored big concerns.

(4) The CIO plan recognizes that the best way to preserve industrial peace and uninterrupted production is through sound collective bargaining, settling labor problems within the industry itself; and through insisting on the observance of all laws affecting the rights and welfare of labor.

(5) The plan is concerned not only with maintaining and improving the American standard of living at the present time, and with preserving the basic democratic rights of the American people, but it also calls for planning to prevent "a chaotic breakdown of our domestic economy when the National Defense program is completed."

All in all, it is a carefully drafted, constructive, public-spirited and far-sighted proposal, whose adoption would benefit not only labor but the whole American people.

How Much Longer?

While attention is directed to the constant air raid slaughter in Europe, "there is a wholesale slaughter of American men going on in this country," says a letter addressed to all members of Congress by Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, backing up repeated letters and demands from Pres. John L. Lewis.

Included with the letter are pictures of mine disaster scenes as tragic as any air raid pictures.

"Coal is a vital defense industry," the letter points out. "Yet faulty mine inspection is sabotaging this defense industry, and taking its toll not in wrecked machinery, but in dead American mine workers."

A total of 1,580 mine workers have been killed in the mines of this country since the Neely-Keller Federal Mine Inspection Bill (S.2420) was first introduced in Congress.

"How much longer are you going to permit this slaughter to continue?" the United Mine Workers ask the members of Congress, and all members of the CIO should also join in their demand for immediate action. Ask your Congressman what he is doing to secure passage of the mine safety bill.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN Snow White started to clean up the home of the Seven Dwarfs, the little men were both disturbed and angry. They misrepresented her activities and ascribed to her all sorts of base motives.

The CIO has met with similar reactions from dwarf minds in the United States. Because it has gone vigorously about its wholesome and constructive activities, it has broken through many mental cobwebs and disturbed many ancient and mildewed habits.

So CIO has been misrepresented as a wanton disturber and upsetter, intent on mischief.

Yet the actual practical purposes and achievements of the CIO are in complete contrast to such a picture—and notably so in relation to national defense at the present time.

After the most stunted dwarf minds in Congress and the press had been screaming about anti-strike laws, concentration camps and the like—to suppress the CIO for "interfering with national defense"—came the meeting of the CIO vice presidents and the statements and plans announced by Pres. Philip Murray.

It was like the cold, clear morning light of fact and reason piercing through the dirty windows of a crazy-house.

CIO Brings Peace

In the first place, Murray did not scream or even argue back. He just pointed calmly to the obvious facts—namely that CIO, so far from interfering with national defense production, has contributed more to its uninterrupted course than any other group in the country.

All of the major defense industries are under the jurisdiction of CIO unions. In the coal and metal mining, steel, automobiles and aircraft, electrical and machine manufacturing, rubber, textiles, clothing and maritime industries, to mention but a few, there are millions of workers covered by CIO union contracts.

In all of these industries there has been an almost 100 per cent record of industrial peace since the defense program was launched. In the Vultee and aluminum strikes, that were given so much publicity, only ten working days altogether were lost by a few thousand workers.

The AFL has had far more and longer strikes than has the CIO in this period.

The peaceful record of the CIO in all the major defense industries is also in sharp contrast to what has been happening in Great Britain, a country in the midst of war. There 844,000 working days were lost in 762 labor disputes in the first ten months of 1940, as compared with 1,164,000 working days lost in the same period of 1939.

The CIO has been able to keep the wheels of the defense industries turning without interruption thanks to the collective bargaining agreements it has won. Under these agreements hundreds of grievances are settled every day in an orderly and peaceful fashion, which might otherwise result in stoppages and other industrial troubles.

Another way in which the CIO has contributed greatly to industrial peace is in establishing fairer wages and conditions for defense workers, so that they may not be compelled to strike to win consideration from greedy profiteering employers.

Bottlenecks

In the second place, Murray answered the demand for a longer working week and relaxation of labor laws, not merely by pointing out that such changes were unnecessary and undesirable, but also by putting his finger on the real reason for the lag in defense production.

He noted that it is ridiculous to call for a longer work-week on the grounds that there is too much work to do, when nine millions of Americans are out of work.

Bottlenecks have arisen in certain plants, simply because a few large companies (many of them notorious labor law violators like Bethlehem Steel) have been given nearly all the defense business, while smaller companies, well equipped to produce, have been given none.

Out of some 10,000 manufacturing establishments capable of producing defense materials, Murray declared, only 30 per cent have as yet been given government defense contracts.

Until America's idle millions have been employed through the more equal distribution of defense work, he pointed out, it is foolish to propose lengthening the work-week of those already employed.

He also noted that it is absurd to blame the present labor laws for restricted production, when there was a far worse failure in defense production in 1917-18 before any of these laws pere passed.

Constructive Plan

Finally, Murray put forward a constructive plan for the more efficient organization of defense production, without impairing the production of consumers' goods to maintain American living standards.

His plan for industry councils provides for both more efficient production and more adequate labor representation, while maintaining social gains and civil rights. It also provides for careful planning to prevent economic collapse when the war boom ends.

To Strengthen National Defense

Plan Proposed by CIO Pres. Murray

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21. — The following plan for strengthening the National Defense program was submitted on Dec. 19 by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to President Roosevelt, to the members of the Cabinet and to the members of the National Defense Advisory Commission, with the approval of the Vice Presidents and Secretary of the CIO:

THE National Defense Program is beginning to advance beyond the contract awarding stage, and is now entering the stage of actual production. To avoid a repetition of the 1917-18 failure to produce armaments in needed quantities and on time it is necessary, without further delay, to redefine the aims of the Defense Program, broaden its scope, and assure its effective execution.

The aims of the Defense Program, now somewhat uncertain and confused, should be clearly set forth and redefined in certain essential aspects.

The scope of the Defense Program should be broadened to encompass the full production of armaments for the needs of the United States, and any eventuality that may arise, without disturbing the adequate production of domestic goods.

The full and complete cooperation of industry, organized labor, and government in the major basic and vital defense industries is essential to the successful execution of the Defense Program.

Industry Councils

This memorandum is concerned wit hbroadening the scope of the Defense Program, and providing the most effective machinery for its successful execution.

The President of the United States shall establish a council of an equal number of representatives of management and of the labor union in the industry, together with one Government representative, the latter to serve as Chairman. Each council shall be known as an Industry Council; for example, the Steel Industry Council, etc.

Each council shall promulgate the time and scope of the National Defense Program in its respective industry from time to time in consultation with the National Defense Board (hereinafter outlined), and shall be charged with the responsibility of expediting the Defense Program, and assuring the adequate production of domestic, or non-military goods, subject to the review of the National Defense Board.

Their Duties

To these ends, the duties of the councils shall be to

1. Ascertain the domestic and armament requirements of each prospective industry, coordinate the production facilities of each industry to meet these requirements speedily and accurately, and expand production facilities where they are inadequate to fulfill these requirements.

2. Reemploy unemployed workers in each respective industry and in the communities and regions in which the industry operates as quickly as the accelerated pace of the industry permits, fill the labor requirements of the industry from the available supply, and train workers for those occupations in which the council finds a shortage.

3. Achieve the greatest possible output as quickly as possible by bringing into full use all production facilities in each respective industry. This covers the granting and re-allocating of armament contracts, fulfilling in advance known domestic requirements so as to clear the way for the peak in armament production, and eliminating bottlenecks created by one concern having a disproportionate amount of armament contracts that it cannot complete within the necessary limit of time, and other bottlenecks caused either by contractual or technical factors.

4. Promote industrial peace through the perfection and extension of sound collective bargaining relations between management and organized labor, and the adherence to all laws affecting the rights and welfare of labor, such as the Social Security Law, the Wages and Hours Act, the National Labor Relations Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, and others. In this field of endeavor the statement of labor policy of the National Defense Advisory Commission shall be a guiding principle.

Each Industry Council shall be adequately staffed, all necessary government information shall be made available to it, and each member of an industry covered by a council shall make available to his respective council all information necessary for its work.

National Board

The President of the United States shall establish a National Defense Board consisting of equal numbers of representatives for industry and organized labor of which the President shall be the Chairman.

The Board shall assist the Industry Councils in the collection of pertinent data on the aims and scope of the Defense Program, and the granting and reallocating of armament contracts, facilitate the program's successful execution by acting as an appeals agency for the several Industry Councils, and coordinate the work of the councils by serving as a clearinghouse for inter-industry matters.

The authority and jurisdiction of the Industry Councils, subject to the review of the National Defense Board, to promulgate national policies relating to National Defense and to execute same for their respective industries shall be subject to all outstanding federal laws.

Objectives

The objectives of this plan of reorganization are

1. To guarantee the production of armaments in needed quantities and on time, by achieving the highest possible productive efficiency of American industry, through the full and complete cooperation of industry, organized labor, and government.

2. To guarantee the production of domestic, or non-military goods in adequate quantities so as to further improve and extend the American standard of living through a more equitable distribution of the national income, thereby improving the morale of the American people, and preventing a chaotic breakdown of our domestic economy when the National Defense Program is completed.

3. To preserve the basic democratic rights of the American people, namely, the freedom of speech, assembly, and worship, and the free right to organize into independent associations for lawful purposes, such as the right of labor to organize into unions of its own choosing for collective bargaining and other mutual protection.

Authority

The President of the United States is already in possession of the legal powers, through the National Defense Act of 1916 and oth er legislation, necessary to create the administrative machinery for the Defense Program proposed in this memorandum, to provide it with the necessary operating funds, and to keep it in operation.

ing men and women and their dependents.

This, we truly believe, is a part of America's scheme of total defense, and in the end means more to the well-being of the United States and the maintenance of its free institutions than any other thing.

CIO has a wholesome respect for its contractual obligations. We expect in the future, as we have done in the past, to live up to our obligations, fulfill our promises and carry out our wage agreements. A strike is not to be likened to an Act of God, but to the failure of industry to meet labor as an equal.

Every day has become a sad day for nine million of our workers and their families. They used to have work. How much longer can we afford to have them idle because private industry can not provide them with jobs? Can we not stop this idleness, this complete unproductiveness, from Monday morning of one week to Monday morning of the next week? When are we going to employ all this manpower in our defense program?

Under the existing circumstances such as these we see no need for lengthening the work week, particularly when the Nation is admittedly still confronting its major problem of unemployment.

I contend that our present defense machinery has not taken advantage of its manifold opportunities to accelerate production through making use of wholly or partially idle plant equipment, thereby easing the burden of unemployment, and making possible the attainment of our Nation's needs with relation to the acceleration of production.

Production is lagging, and the fault lies in the rather stupid method in which it has been distributed and is being administered. The record will show, I believe, that a few of the larger companies have got almost all of the government contract business, whilst many of the smaller independent companies are still dawdling in the realm of unemployment and economic business despair.

The foolhardy attempts of certain critics of CIO to place the blame for the lag in defense production with the Walsh-Healy Act, the Labor Relations Act, the Wages and Hours Act, etc., fail to take into account the dismal failure of industry to produce national defense in 1917-18 when none of these so-called restrictions existed.

The basic difficulty seems to be that we have not done a job yet in getting industry to have the proper understanding of what this defense job means to its future and the country's future. Too many heads of industry are approaching the national defense job as one great opportunity to roll up astounding profits—some going so far as to compel the government to buy them new plant equipment out of which they alone derive the excessive profits. Our production facilities should be coordinated to meet our armaments and domestic needs. Labor should talk to its employers —make them feel that it is their responsibility as well as labor's to cooperate in the defense program.

The national defense machinery must be perfected in order to achieve the re-employment of America's idle millions before foolhardy steps are proposed to lengthen the work-week of those already employed in American industry.

National defense should so function as to eliminate bottlenecks in production, by allocating the goods to be produced more equally amongst producers, most of whom are equipped to produce essentials for national defense. This would take up the lag in the defense program. It would accelerate the production of needed materials and give employment to hundreds of thousands of idle men and women, who are still walking the streets vainly searching for work.

The full and complete cooperation and participation of industry, labor and government in each industry as well as nationally are essential factors in the successful and maximum prosecution of national defense.

CIO Plan Would Aid Defense

sible for the lag in production," he said.

"There is ample room for greater labor participation in national defense," he added. "Labor is exceedingly willing to cooperate, to give of its genius and effort. All we ask is the chance to join with industry and government in the orderly, constructive development of national defense."

FOUR MAIN POINTS

The CIO memorandum presented to the White House outlined four main functions for the industry-labor councils:

1. Canvass the facilities and requirements of each armament and domestic industry, coordinating their operations and expanding facilities where necessary.

2. Re-employ jobless workers for these industries from the areas where they operate, training new workers where needed.

3. Bring into full use all production facilities in each industry, re-allocating contracts and filling domestic requirements in advance, thus clearing bottlenecks created by the mal-apportionment of orders now in practice.

4. Promote industrial peace through extension of collective bargaining, requiring strict compliance with labor laws such as the Wagner Act, the Walsh-Healy Act, the Wages and Hours Act, the Social Security Act, etc.

Objectives of the CIO plan, as outlined in the memo, are to: guarantee needed production of arms; guarantee continued and expanded production of domestic goods; preserve "basic democratic rights of the American people, the freedom of speech, asesmbly and worship, and the free right to organize into independent associations for lawful purposes, such as the right of labor to organize into unions of its own choosing for collective bargaining and other mutual protection."

A major point in the CIO statement was concerned with the need for maintaining and increasing domestic production along with arms production. On this point, the statement declared that such expansion was vitally needed to:

". . . further improve and extend the American standard of living through a more equitable distribution of the national income, thereby improving the morale of the American people, and preventing the chaotic breakdown of our domestic economy when the National Defense program is completed."

Turning again to answer labor-enemies who try to smear the CIO as respounsible for defense program breakdowns — breakdowns admitted by high Defense Commission officials in recent speeches —Murray said:

"It would be well for critics of the CIO to look into and try to understand the tremendous public service the CIO and its affiliated unions are rendering this country, before they start their wholly unwarranted and very ignorant sharpshooting practices against CIO unions in America."

More GM Plants Vote for CIO

DETROIT, Dec. 21. — Workers at the Inland Division of General Motors, Clark Township, New Jersey, recently voted overwhelmingly for the CIO United Automobile Workers in a NLRB poll. This makes the 65th GM plant to be represented by the UAW as sole bargaining agency. The vote was 223 for the UAW to 61 against.

Petitions for elections in a group of other GM plants to achieve the union's goal of a 100 per cent UAW organization in General Motors, were announced by Walter Reuther, UAW director of the GM department. They include:

Win 66th GM Poll

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 21.—The CIO United Automobile Workers won an election at the Ternstedt plant of General Motors here by a vote of more than three to one. This is the 66th GM plant in which the CIO Auto Union has won collective bargaining rights. The vote was 1872 in favor of the UAW to 586 for no union.

Canadian Union Wins Pay Increase

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 21. —An agreement providing a wage increase estimated at $400,000 for 4,000 Algoma steel workers was approved here by members of Lodge 2251. Steel Workers Organizing Committee. This is the second agreement negotiated this year by SWOC in basic Canadian steel plants. It covers a total of 7,500 workers.

Woolen, Electric Workers Seek Wage Boosts

Boston, Dec. 21.—Pay increases for the 90,000 worsted workers of the country will be demanded at once by the Textile Workers Union of America, President Emil Rieve said at a conference held here last Sunday to open an organizing drive in the worsted industry.

The demand is justified, Rieve said, by the present increase in production and profits and the likelihood of still greater profits. George Baldanzi, TWU executive vice-president and Joseph A. Salerno, TWU director in Massachusetts, who were appointed by Rieve to direct the worsted drive, spoke on a half-hour radio program broadcast from the conference room.

MILLS REOPEN

"Some of the worsted companies have opened mills that have been closed for some time," Rieve said at the conference. "The amount of wool consumed in October for clothing was the highest for any October on record, and it appears that the amount to be consumed for the entire year of 1940 will be more than 1939 and perhaps more than 1935.

"Manufacturers in woolens and worsteds have unfilled orders 66,000,000 yards of cloth at the beginning of November and the backlog of orders has increased since that time. The worsted industry is profitable and is becoming more profitable.

"The increased production must be shared with the workers. Our demand for an increase in worsteds at this time is entirely justified."

New York, Dec. 21 — A formal demand for a general wage increase of 10 cents an hour for all General Electric production employes has been announced by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The demand was made through the GE Conference Board which represents all GE locals and the International office of the union.

Preliminary negotiations, the union stated, "indicate that the company is planning to resist the demand of its employes for a fairer share of its rapidly increasing profits."

Although the electrical industry demands high skill from employes, the union pointed out, it pays wages lower than those paid in the oil, tire, auto and steel industries. Salaries for executives, on the other hand, are higher.

"The huge profits now being made by GE," the union stated, "are due to the high value added to materials by the wage earners, an amount higher in the electrical industry than any other except the petroleum industry."

Pres. Murray, Hillman Hail Chrysler Pact

Detroit, Dec. 21.—Wires of congratulations on the negotiating of a new Chrysler contract have been sent to Richard Frankensteen, director of the United Automobile Workers' Chrysler department, by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and National Defense Advisory Commissioner Sidney Hillman.

The CIO leader declared the negotiations and the consequent improved agreement covering 60,000 workers, are an example for all defense industry plants.

"Advances made by both you and your organization in these negotiations reflect splendid contributions to the welfare of the members of your organization and the nation as a whole."

Hillman wired "sincere congratulations to you on the substantial gains" achieved by the union and added that the achievment "is especially noteworthy in that it was swift and entailed no loss of time to your membership. This constitutes a distinct contribution not only to labor but to national defense as well."

attempt settlement by negotiations. These conferences, Mr. Pressman declared, "came to nothing, as the result of the company's recalcitrant attitude."

'WITHOUT RESULTS'

"A month or two later, we perfected our charges and again sought the issuance of a complaint," Pressman pointed out to the Board. "We allowed ourselves to be drawn into settlement negotiations again this fall, but without substantial results."

"We are now met with a proposed offer of settlement which is entirely inadequate, and which it would be utterly impossible for the union to accept. We wish to renew our request that the Board proceed to trial on this matter on the basis of a complaint covering all the charges and making possible by its allegations and by the theory of a trial a full recovery of back wages lost by the workers from the time of their application for reinstatement after the strike, or the time when such application became unnecessary."

New Explosion Kills Eight Miners

Beckley, W. Va., Dec. 21. —Sudden, unnecessary death this week snuffed out the lives of eight more coal miners.

The second explosion in three weeks—this time at the No. 4 mine of the Raleigh Coal & Coke Co. in this city —injured four others. Sixty men working in another section of the mine escaped without injury.

The disaster was the second in West Virginia this year, 91 miners having lost their lives at Bartley in an explosion last January.

Beckley is the home town of Rep. Joe Smith, head of the House Mines Committee, which for months has refused to act on the CIO-sponsored mine safety bill.

RENEW DEMANDS

Leaders of the United Mine Workers meanwhile renewed their demands on the House of Representatives for passage of the Neely-Keller federal mine safety bill, which would eliminate many of the mine accidents.

UMW Pres. John L. Lewis, in a telegram sent to Van A. Bittner, head of the union's West Virginia district, declared:

"Once again the international officers of the United Mine Workers of America are deeply grieved and shocked to learn of another mine disaster. . . .

"Will you please convey our profound sympathy to each of the bereaved families and to the members of the local union in the stark tragedy which has come to them, and express to the injured survivors my fervent hope that their condition will soon be improved.

UP TO CONGRESS

"We pray that the members of Congress will be moved in the not too distant future to give us some hope for the abatement of these dread explosions. For our part, we will continue to exercise every energy at our command in attempting to secure the passage of the Neely-Keller bill, which is designed to wipe out the unnecessary hazards of mining and thereby alleviate the horror and suffering which inevitably follow in the wake of disaster.

"Every member of the United Mine Workers of America, their dependents and every other citizen of the coal mining communities in our nation, I know, join with us in beseeching our countrymen to stand behind us in our fight to save human life and limb through the enactment of a just federal mine inspection law."

JONES' STATEMENT

John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, and a UMW district president, pointing to the fact that the disaster occurred in the home town of Rep. Joe Smith, head of the House Mining Committee, declared:

"Mr. Smith, who seeks coal miners' votes each election time is, we understand, at home today where he can hear the cries of the widows and children if he has ears to listen to his own constituents.

"How long must this senseless killing of miners go on before the Administration makes good its pre-election pledge to enact the Neely-Keller mine safety bill? This bill provides only for federal inspection so that miners may know when mines are unsafe.

"It is a shocking fact that while this bill has been bottled up in committee, a total of more than 1,600 miners have died in mine accidents that the law is intended to prevent."

Protest Naming Slugger To Head Home Guard Corps

DETROIT, Dec. 21.—Appointment of picket-slugging Heinrich Pickert, former Detroit police chief, to head the Eastern Michigan Home Guard corps, today brought protests from labor and from the Michigan Civil Rights Federation.

A letter from the federation to Murray Van Wagoner, labor-supported governor-elect of the state, charged that Pickert, who is an army brigadier general, was responsible for much of the police brutality and invasion of labor's rights that marked the regime of former Mayor Reading, who is now involved in criminal court proceedings.

"You undoubtedly know that under Pickert's reign, the police department became a national disgrace," the letter to Van Wagoner declared; "that there occurred a whole series of brutal beatings, unwarranted shootings, breaking up of peaceful picket lines and other unjustified interference with legitimate labor activities by the police; that the Negro people were particularly victimized."

Unity in Organizing Keynote of Jersey State CIO Meet

PASSAIC, N. J., Dec. 21.—Unity for organizing the unorganized was the keynote of the third annual convention of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council. Progress of the CIO in the state was reflected by the record attendance of more than 600 delegates, representing over 240,000 workers.

Irving Abramson of the Textile Workers Union was elected president, by a vote of 304 to 268 for Joseph G. Mitton of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. Upon motion of Mitton the election was later made unanimous.

Carl Holderman was reelected treasurer, and the following vice presidents were chosen: First, Thomas Gallagher; Second, Joseph W. Knapik; Third, Harry Wolsky; Fourth, John Spalana; Fifth, John Proto; Sixth, Fred Clark; Seventh, James D. Leonardi. An executive board of 21 members was also elected. They will name an executive secretary.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, urged the delegates to "put an end to bickering and remember that elections may come and go but the union must go on forever."

ATTACK UNION BAITERS

He attacked the so-called anti-sabotage bills now being prepared for presentation in state legislatures as a subterfuge to break up union organization, and declared that Congressman Ford's statement that the CIO was sabotaging defense was "a damnable lie."

The people who are demanding anti-union and anti-strike legislation, and talking about concentration camps for union leaders, "have lost faith in America," he said. "They want to lick Hitler by establishing Hitlerism in America."

Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers brought greetings from the Auto Workers of Detroit and described CIO organizing activity among Ford workers and elsewhere.

Len DeCaux, CIO publicity director, warned that the extremist anti-labor proposals of "wild men" like Congressmen Ford, Cox, Hoffman and Smith provide an excuse for professed friends of labor to promote legislation which may be almost as bad, under the guise of opposing the extremist bills.

HIT 'SABOTAGE TALK

A resolution was adopted noting that a number of fires and explosions in chemical plants were due to "carelessness, speed-up and criminal negligence of reactionary employers" rather than to sabotage. The convention demanded that New Jersey "investigate the conditions in these plants and make proper and strict provision to safeguard against any such future accidents."

Much interest was evidenced in the resolution adopted on political action, which declared that "labor must organize its political activities so that it may be able to assume its full and independent strength . . . uniting with all other liberal and progressive forces." The convention directed its officers to formulate a program "which would guarantee and assure an independent political role for organized labor."

Gov. Aiken Tells Farmers: 'Understand Labor's Aims'

BALTIMORE, Dec. 21.—Not only is Vermont in the union, but its chief executive, Republican Gov. George D. Aiken, had good words to say for labor unions, when he appeared before the American Farm Bureau Federation convention here. He declared:

"To deny labor the right to strike when we are not at war, to compel them by law or edict or threat to work for wages and on terms laid down by the government or manufacturing groups, is to take a step toward that collectivism which we would avoid."

'TRANSLATES' PROBLEMS

The governor, who has spent most of his life on a farm, translated labor's problems into phrases that his farm audience could easily grasp.

"Suppose we were compelled to produce milk or beef or wheat at a price which would give us an existence but not much more; had our work laid out for us day after day, season after season; and our produce shipped to the city distributor who would have a good profit guaranteed him by the government.

"Put ourselves in that position and we may get the viewpoint of the American labor men who see a new crop of millionaires in the making before our very eyes."

NOT ENEMIES

Until recently, the Vermont governor pointed out, "American farmers have been given to understand that labor unions are hereditary enemies of ours. We are beginning to find out differently now.

"We have our farm cooperatives. Those organizations are a powerful force in American agriculture.

"Labor has its unions. These unions are to workers what cooperatives are to us, simply a means whereby a group can secure benefits which all would go without, working as individuals."

Aiken asserted that sometimes control of labor gets into "evil hands" and sometimes honest labor leaders make mistakes. "So do we," he added.

DEMOCRACY'S STRENGTH

"The real strength of democracy consists in keeping its citizens free in the highest sense of the word," the governor said, and if labor has only jobs and nothing else, its people are not free men and women. . .

"They need the right to unite to sell their labor as we united to sell our milk or fruit. They need a just and a practicable social security program, so that the spectre of old age and unemployment cannot distress and discourage them. They want an honorable relief policy for depression years, a policy administered without humiliation. They want working conditions that will protect their children, keep them well dressed and enable them to grow strong and healthy . . .

FORTY-HOUR WEEK

"They want the protection of just and fair wage-hour legislation. A forty-hour week seems to us farmers like a pretty short time to work.

"But there can be no comparison between standing in one place operating a complex and noisy machine under the direction of a hard-boiled foreman, and working out in the open at a job that is changing almost hourly and at which we are our own boss."

VAN A. BITTNER

Van A. Bittner Declines Senate Post

Pittsburgh, Dec. 21.—Van A. Bittner, district president of the United Mine Workers in West Virginia and a leader in the CIO's steel and packinghouse unions, has declined an appointment to the United States Senate to succeed Sen. Matthew Neely, it was learned here.

The offer to Bittner followed the election of Neely as governor of West Virginia. He will retire from the Senate early next month with two years of his term still to run.

District 17 of the UMWA, of which Bittner is the president, is the largest single district of coal miners in the nation. At the present time he is directing the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee drive at Bethlehem Steel Co. and serves as chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee.

BITTNER'S STATEMENT

In declining the Senate seat, Bittner said:

"There is no political position in America that I care to accept. For the past 32 years, as an official of organized labor, I have devoted my life to improving the conditions of the men and women of labor and their dependents.

"I have no political ambitions. My only thought in engaging in political campaigns is to have people elected to public office who will do their part in giving the men and women of labor a fair deal in life.

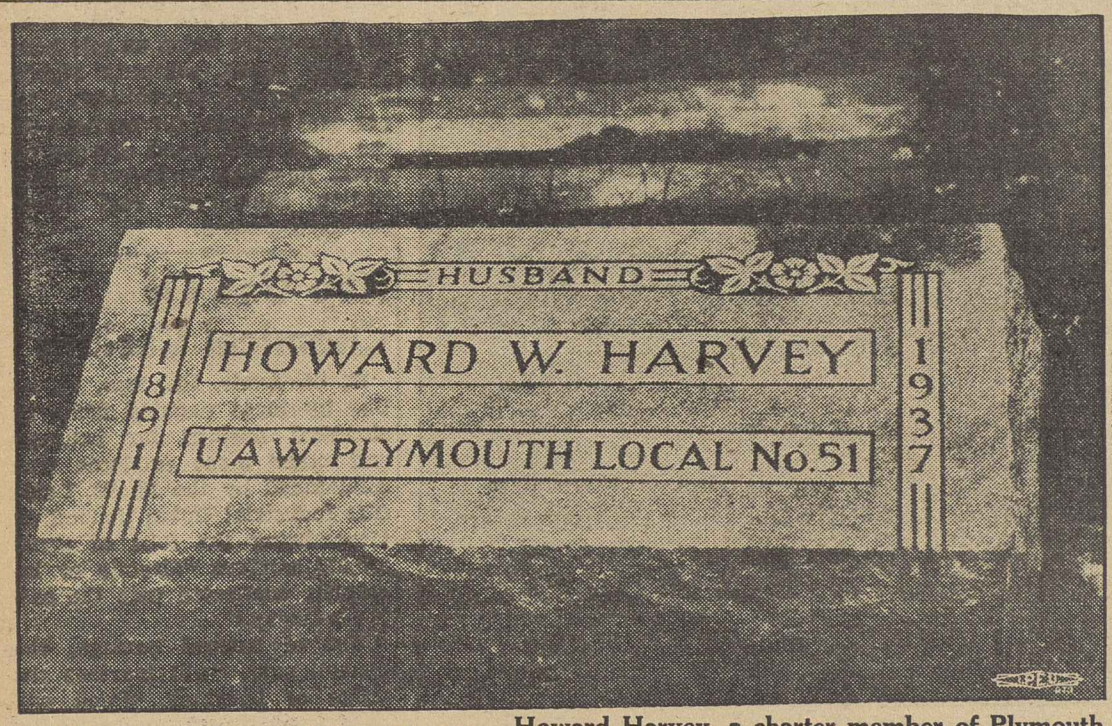
"In the future as in the past, I shall live to devote my life to the organized labor movement of our country."

Maryland-D. C. CIO Maps New Drives, Upholds Labor Gains

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Emphasis on organizing thousands of workers in Maryland's basic industries, and in the Federal government, on protection of civil rights against labor-baiting Congressional attacks, on staying out of Europe's war, plus a positive statement of CIO's faith in democratic American institutions, marked the close of the fourth annual convention of the Maryland - District of Columbia CIO Council after a three-day meeting in Hagerstown, Md.

The 150 delegates, representing CIO members in a dozen basic industries and in the U. S. government, unanimously re - elected Pres. John T. Jones and Sec.-Treas. Sidney R. Katz, and voted to work out a legislative program calling for maintenance of existing social gains and to extend them to workers now unprotected.

The delegates gave a standing ovation to Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director and administrator of the United Federal Workers, when he branded CIO-baiting Congressmen as "the real traitors to America and to the workers," and when he declared that Bethlehem, Ford and other firms that are sabotaging national defense through their anti-union policies would be organized by CIO.



Edwin S. Smith, Natl. Labor Relations Board member, was also cheered when he called on labor to resist "propaganda by business interests which in the name of patriotism or crushing of 'fifth columns' actually is directed at the crushing of the labor movement."

Important resolutions of the convention, on which united support was evident, included protection of rights of workers in defense industries, civil rights for Federal workers against a Civil Service Commission - FBI intimidation campaign, against entanglement in foreign war and steps leading to entanglement, including credits, loans, or gifts to belligerents, against Negro discrimination, demanding passage of the anti-lynching bill, and for more housing, relief, and other social needs of the workers.

Principal stress in organizing plans was laid on the 30,000 Bethlehem workers and the 20,000 Glenn Martin aircraft workers in Baltimore, and on the more than 100,000 unorganized Federal employes in Washington, in the report of the Organization Committee.

Biscuit Contract

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 21.— A contract between a CIO local Industrial union and the Burch Biscuit Company covering the entire plant employing some 200 workers when running full time, was announced here by Ben Henry, CIO district director.

UNION TO THE END: Howard Harvey, a charter member of Plymouth Local 51 of the United Automobile Workers, was loyal to the union in death as in life. His tombstone, in Detroit's Woodmere Cemetery, bears the name of his local.

CIO Marine Union Demands Halt to Sale of U. S. Ships

NEW YORK, Dec. 21.—Sale of American merchant ships abroad, causing American union seamen to lose jobs and any chance for jobs, while vessels of belligerent powers continue to carry on profitable trade not connected with war needs, was denounced by the Natl. Maritime Union here as a blow at U. S. defense and the welfare of U. S. workers.

The NMU statement, contained in an article in the union's official paper The Pilot, declared:

"Since the beginning of the war, almost 300 American vessels have been sold or transferred to foreign registry. This number includes passenger ships, freighters and tankers. For example, the Standard Oil Co. of N. J. alone transferred over 20 tankers to foreign flags at one clip.

"Under cover of the present war hysteria, the sale of American bottoms has been accelerated. We are now faced with a situation where, if this is permitted to continue at the present rate, we are faced with the possibility of having a union and no jobs."

CAMPAIGN OUTLINED

No attention has been paid by the U. S. Maritime Commission and other agencies to NMU protest, The Pilot article says, in outlining a campaign to rouse other unions throughout the country to the dangers not only to the seamen but to all workers in the situation.

"The other unions . . . have only begun to realize through the present newspaper headlines the significance of this situation, as a direct step, not only to smash the Maritime unions, but to plunge the country into war," it says.

The article cites a resolution of the New York CIO Council on this question, which demanded that "this sabotage of national defense" be stopped, and called for unemployment insurance and WPA projects for seamen, as well as use of Maritime Commission training centers for seamen only, as measures to alleviate present suffering among members of the NMU.

According to the article, the greater part of the huge amount of tonnage acquired by Great Britain from such nations as Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, is being used not to supply England's war needs but to maintain world trade routes in direct competition with those of the U. S. Of this tonnage, a large amount is being used to carry goods to Japan, a member of the axis, the article adds.

"How can those who scream for the sale of all our vessels justify their position by any standard of logic or honesty," the article asks. Logic and honesty would demand that these 6,000,000 tons of shipping, now engaged in competition with our own Merchant Marine and carrying the most vital war necessities to a military ally of Germany and Italy, be released.

"This would permit our own Merchant Marine to expand. This expansion would guarantee the strengthening of our own national defense and security. It would also provide more jobs for shoreside workers, as well as seamen.

"We call upon every trade union, every progressive organization and every honest public office holder to support and help us. Send wires of protest to the President of the U. S., the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission, and the U. S. Maritime Commission, demanding that this sabotage of our own national defense be stopped immediately."

Union Wins Personnel Board Seats

New York, Dec. 21 — Five candidates endorsed by Local 1 to the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers were elected to the personnel rating board of the Public Welfare Dept. here by overwhelming majorities in an election in which 6,500 employes participated.

The election is particularly significant, SCMWA leaders declared, since these officials pass on ratings of the work of about 7,500 Welfae Dept. workers. The union campaigned to obtain the election for the past year.

The platform on which the CIO candidates ran included elimination of abuses in personnel ratings, establishment of fair working and performance standards, more jobs to relieve overtime, and more collective bargaining.

The election marks the first time in public employment in the U. S. where employe representation has been granted in a large department.

New Pact For 3,000

SALEM, Mass., Dec. 21. — A new two-year contract, providing a preferential union shop and a checkoff, has been signed between the Textile Workers Union, CIO, and the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co.

The contract covers more than 3,000 workers.

Condemn Sabotage By Tories

New York, Dec. 21. — Effective defense production, despite big business talk of the need for "sacrifice"—on the part of workers—requires more collective bargaining, more social legislation, higher living standards, greater freedom for labor, rather than less, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, declared in a speech at the labor law conference of the Natl. Lawyers Guild meeting here.

Pressman vigorously attacked agencies that have directed their efforts "against the meager present day living standards of the American working men and women" rather than against "large monopolistic corporations" whose exorbitant demands for profits are in reality the cause of the delays in the defense program.

HITS TORIES

He also lashed out at reactionary Congressmen such as the two poll tax statesmen from Georgia and Virginia, Reps. Cox and Smith, and the venerable labor-baiter Hoffman of Michigan, who have introduced no-strike bills "aimed at eradicating from the U. S. any semblance of union organization."

"The danger of these bills should not be underestimated," Pressman said. "All too frequently Congressmen of the type of Cox, Hoffman and Smith are used as stalking horses. Already organized labor has been warned that unless its demands are eased so as to avoid strikes, the Hoffman and Smith bills will be enacted in Congress. In other words, unless labor commits harikari voluntarily, legislation will be enacted to perform the task."

MODEL BILLS

Turning to the "model bills" recommended for state legislatures to help in oppressing labor locally, Pressman asked: "Is this the type of government action that is going to further national defense or prevent sabotage?

"Isn't it clear to any reasonable mind that to unleash legislation of this kind is merely to establish a reign of terror during which the most hysterical and vicious forces will run rampant. . ."

MEMO TO SHOPPERS: "Whale bone corsets were tight, Gluckin is tighter," is the chant of these young members of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers striking against Gluckin Corp., makers of brassieres. They are urging New York Christmas shoppers not to buy Gluckin products.

Celebrate Two More Delaware Victories

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 21.—For three hours some 800 members of the CIO International Fur & Leather Workers Union marched singing through the industrial and business sections here in celebration of an election won among the employes of the Amalgamated Leather Co. The vote was 597 in favor of IFLWU Local 201 to 55 against.

Negotiations for an agreement with the company are now under way, the union announced.

Vote 4-1

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 21.—Employes of the Eastern Malleable Iron Co. here voted 410 to 110 for the United Automobile Workers in a NLRB election, Don Harris, CIO field representative, announced this week. This is the tenth CIO election victory won by the CIO in the state, Harris said.

Furniture Union Gets Pay Boost

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 21.— Wage increases totalling approximately $12,000 were won by Local 137 of the United Furniture Workers today in an agreement with the Hampden Parlor Furniture Co.

The contract, which covers about 120 employes of the company, was the final step in the local's drive to unionize the four big furniture houses in the Springfield area. It was the first the union has won without a strike.

600 BENEFIT

More than 600 employes of the four companies are now under contract.

Besides wage increases, the Hampden contract also provides for paid vacations in 1941, recognition of the union as sole bargaining agent, seniority rights in rehiring and promotions, a 10 per cent increase for workers on the night shift, equal division of work, no-strike no-lockout arbitration machinery and other standard clauses.

Rap Use Of Chemical Casings

E. St. Louis, Ill., Dec. 21. — Use by meat packing firms of chemical casings for sausage and other meat products was condemned by the E. St. Louis CIO Industrial Union Council as jeopardizing the jobs of some 100,000 workers "directly or indirectly connected with the casing industry."

Use of natural casings, the council said, "will increase the value of livestock, which will mean an increase in the price paid for the former." The resolution urged CIO members to ask their retail dealers for sausage stuffed in natural casing.

ARRESTED: This quintet of girl strikers at the Chicago Molded Products Co. faces arraignment on "disorderly conduct" charges—they picketed the suburban home of a company official. Members of Local 48, Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, they've been on strike since Nov. 7.

U. S. Officials Study CIO Plan For 500 Planes A Day

Recommends Use Of Idle Plant Capacity

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Five hundred fighting planes a day within six months is the objective of CIO's plan to push the defense program, presented here by Pres. Philip Murray to President Roosevelt.

The plan, drawn up by Walter Reuther, head of the General Motors Division of the CIO United Automobile Workers, would reach that total by using plant and equipment of the auto industry at present lying idle. Ample supplies of skilled labor are available, the CIO plan declared, and labor will cooperate fully, asking only that its rights be respected.

"We propose to transform the entire unused capacity of the automotive industry into one huge production unit," the CIO plan said. "Production under this plan would not replace the cutput of the aircraft industry proper, which would continue to construct the large bombers and planes of special design."

According to Reuther's analysis, the auto industry today is producing at about 50 per cent of total capacity. Six months of work in re-tooling basic machines would be all that was required for conversion of that unused plant to plane production. The present rate of auto production could be maintained.

Announcement of the CIO plan created wide interest in the nation, and earned praise and favorable comment from many quarters.

Pencil Maker Signs

Nitro, W. Va., Dec. 28. — Showing a militant, united spirit out of all proportion to their numbers, the forty workers of the Nitro Pencil Company deep in the hills of West Virginia today saw their management sign its first union contract, after six weeks of catch-as-catch-can negotiating.

Their hard-won contract includes sole collective bargaining rights, complete grievance machinery, salary increases for all workers retroactive to Dec. 1st.

AFL 'Splitters' Keep Busy

PORTLAND, Oreg., Dec. 28.—Employes in Oregon's largest plant have had a chance to see the AFL's widely-touted attitude of "friendship for industrial unionism" in action — and they don't like it.

Workers at the Doernbecher Furniture Co. were organized for a long time in the AFL. They swung over to the CIO by a near-unanimous vote and shortly after won a contract with substantial wage increases.

Now local AFL officials, apparently disturbed at the workers' success, are plotting to steal their gains.

They filed petitions with the local office of the Labor Board asking the creation of no less than four "craft units" at the plant.

The AFL Carpenters claim several hundred production workers.

The Teamsters would like to bargain for 20 men.

The Machinists represent another 10.

That would leave about 400 others whom the AFL doesn't seem to want.

According to CIO local officials, the workers aren't interested in being split asunder. But they are annoyed that the AFL's activities are hurting negotiating and grievance efforts at the plant.

Shipyard Union Grows Despite 'Handy Andys'

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 28.—"Handy andys" are sticks about nine inches long made of hard rubber tipped with lead. One was exhibited this week at hearings being held here by the National Labor Relations Board against the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., on charges filed by the CIO's Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

It was introduced as evidence of the kind of methods used by the union-hating firm to keep employes from joining the CIO shipyard workers. These murderous looking weapons were made by strong arm squads during working hours and were used to persuade workers that it was better to join the company union and stay away from the CIO than have a broken head.

This and other startling information was revealed in the testimony of Lewis A. Campbell who formerly was head of the strong arm squad. He recruited it, he said, from among the "toughest, hardest-hitting specimens in the yard."

Peter Campbell turned against his dirty job as a company stooge and joined the CIO union. He is now secretary of Local 2 of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Although he is a boilermaker and was paid boilermaker's wages of $7.36 a day, Campbell said he did nothing from Dec. 15, 1936, until Aug., 1939, except head the squad and serve as chairman of the grievance committee of the stooge union known as the Sun Ship Employes Association.

Murray Flays 'Model Bills' As Stab At Labor Rights

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—So-called "model bills" ostensibly aimed at sabotage and at setting up a state home guard system are actually aimed at labor's right to strike, picket and assemble, Philip Murray, CIO president, warned in a circular letter sent to all CIO affiliates today.

The bills were prepared by an organization calling itself the "Federal State Conference on Law Enforcement Problems of National Defense," Murray said, and would be presented to state legislatures early in the coming year.

Most threatening of the bills are the two dealing with sabotage and with the state home guard, Murray explained. Writing on the first, Murray declared:

"The sabotage provisions of the bill are of such a nature that they could readily be used to suppress strikes or other union activities to improve wages, hours or working conditions. Reactionary local authorities would try to invoke the penalties of this bill upon the ground that labor union action resulted in interference with national defense production."

WOULD CLOSE STREETS

The bill would allow state and local authorities to declare streets adjacent to industrial plants under military control, a provision that could be used to deny pickets, union organizers, leaflet distributors all access to the plant.

This would be a denial of elementary American rights that only recently were upheld in a series of recent Supreme Court decisions, he added.

Prevention and punishment of sabotage is necessary and desirable, Murray pointed out, and has the full endorsement of organized labor. Sabotage is amply covered by present Federal law, he pointed out, and the Attorney-General has announced that he will ask for amendments to tighten the law at the next session of Congress.

"In view of this Federal legislation," he wrote, "any proposed state legislation at the present time is entirely unnecessary and carries with it serious danger that it will do more harm than good. The experience in 1917-1921 showed that laws of this kind require centralized Federal enforcement to prevent abuses."

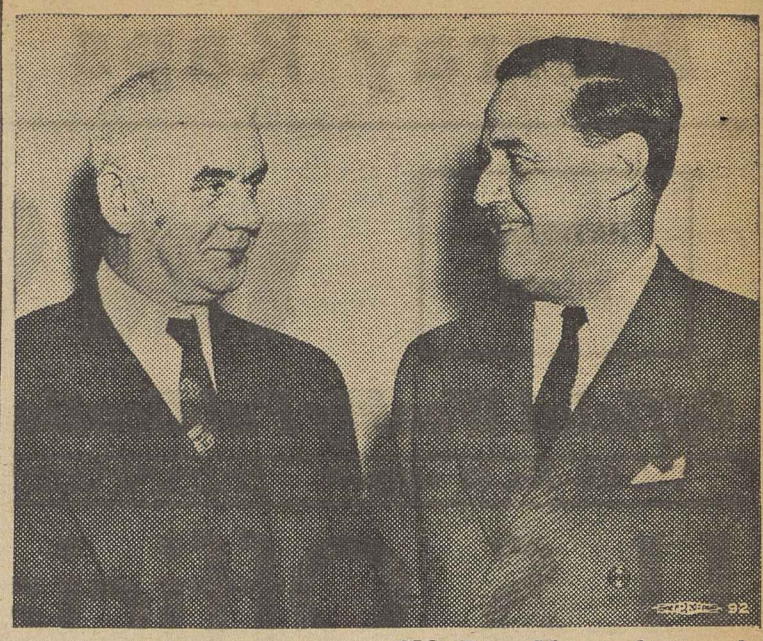
Home Guard Bill

The proposed "model" home guard bill contains equally serious threats to organized labor, Murray wrote, since it leaves these units "completely free from any civil responsibility for their acts by making them subject to military law only."

This means, Murray pointed out, that reactionary officers and local commanders would be absolutely unchecked and could exercise autocratic power in strikes or other union situations.

He urged amendments to this bill placing military authorities under civil control, requiring them to report on their activities, and prohibiting them from violating any constitutional and civil rights, or suspending habeas corpus, unless martial law is declared.

"It will require thorough vigilance to see to it that measures of this kind which readily lend themselves to suppression of the rights of labor and the freedom of the American people are not placed upon the statute books under any wave of hysteria," Murray concluded.



LEAGUE PROTESTS

John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, wrote to all League affiliates along similar lines, pointing out the need for alertness to protect labor's civil rights.

"Behind all this legislation are powerful forces who are planning to use the defense program as an excuse for depriving labor of the most elementary legal protections won in the past 20 years," Jones wrote.

"Indications are that two lines of attack will be used. One attack will have as its purpose the killing or weakening of existing labor laws, such as the Walsh-Healey, minimum wage and hour, and Labor acts. The other attack will be directed to forcing through new legislation which — in open or hidden ways—would deny labor the right to carry on even the most ordinary union activities."

"We must prepare to repel these attacks now," he added. "We must be ready for immediate action upon any infringement upon the rights of labor when it begins. Remember, it took many years to remove anti-labor laws after the World War, once they were forced through by reactionaries under the cloak of 'national emergency.'"

Anti-Paralysis Fight Gets Murray's Support

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—CIO Pres. Philip Murray today pledged active support to the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign.

Following a conference with Keith Morgan, national chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's Birthday, at CIO headquarters, Murray said:

"I am very happy indeed to accept the invitation to become a member of the Executive Committee of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday.

"This great cause dedicated to the improvement of the health of our young people is one worthy of every citizen's support.

"The strength of the nation in the future will be no greater than the health and strength of our boys and girls."

TO WORK OUT PLANS

Plans for participation of the vast industrial organizations embraced in the CIO, in the drive for funds during January, will be completed without delay.

As in former campaigns, one-half of the proceeds raised will remain in the communities for the aid of children and adults who have been stricken with the crippling disease. The other half will be turned over by the committee for the celebration of the President's Birthday to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to be used in the nation-wide attack on the disease.

Marine Engineers Warn Of New Anti-Labor 'Axis'

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—High ranking officers in the U. S. Navy have joined with ship owners, the Associated Farmers and other big business groups in a plan aimed to destroy one section of the maritime union movement, according to charges made by a West Coast local of the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, CIO.

In a four-page leaflet called "Associated Farmers Want to Plow the Seas," Local 97, MEBA, warns maritime labor that an organization known as the United States Merchant Marine Association, incorporated in California early in 1940, is a movement "to Hitlerize the American Merchant Marine and smash one section of the solid front of the maritime unions."

THREATENS GAINS

The main stated objective of the Association, the leaflet says, is "to institute legislation and executive action to officer and man our American Merchant Marine with Naval reservists under active Navy pay, promotion, selection . . ."

This means, the leaflet declares, that the marine engineers "would lose all the gains that have been made in wages, hours and working conditions."

The Association, the leaflet states, "is the brain child of one Captain James Warren Baldwin, an official of the Paraffine Companies, a corporation widely referred to because of its supposedly liberal labor relations policies."

Baldwin listed a number of prominent business men in San Francisco as sponsors, according to the leaflet, and claimed that a group of high ranking naval officers were doing undercover work for the Association until such time as the anti-labor legislation is introduced when they can come out in the open.

SECRET MEETING

Senator Styles Bridges held a closed meeting in his hotel room when he was in San Francisco in November 1939, the leaflet says, attended by a long list of "big-shot business executives including the president of the Associated Farmers. Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, who was also present, was reported to have told the meeting that "he thought the organization would help the Navy and that the Navy played an important part in the plan."

The MEBA leaflet charges that the Association is a pressure group formed "to lobby a bill through Congress to put the personnel of the Merchant Marine in the Naval Reserve so that wages can be lowered and larger profits accrue to the ship owners.

'SCRAPS OF PAPER'

"Once in the Naval Reserve, tens of thousands of workers will find that their working agreements are but scraps of paper. Members, who, because of their age or for some other reason, are not accepted in the Naval Reserve, will find that they are out of their jobs permanently . . .

"Those who are acceptable will have no voice in their future, their wages will be set by the government, their working conditions will be dictated by naval officers."

Walter-Logan Bill Veto Hurts Tory Interests

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Veto of the Walter-Logan Bill by Pres. Roosevelt with a sharply-worded message condemning it as a means of hamstringing government agencies, occurred last week, shortly after CIO Pres. Philip Murray had urged its rejection.

Roosevelt's veto was upheld in the House of Representatives, where tories failed to amass a sufficient bloc of votes for the necessary two-thirds rejection of the Presidential action.

"Today, in sustaining American ideals of justice, an ounce of action is worth more than a pound of argument," the President declared in warning that the bill would introduce "the utmost chaos and paralysis in the administration of the government. . ."

He indicated that the bill, while seeking worthy objectives, in actuality was nothing more than a "make-work" scheme for corporation lawyers.

DEFENDS REFORM MOVES

"The very heart of modern reform administration is the administrative tribunal," Roosevelt wrote to Congress. "A 'truth in securities' act without an administrative tribunal to enforce it or a labor relations act without an administrative tribunal to administer it . . . would be sterile and useless.

"Great interests, therefore, which desire to escape regulation rightly see that if they can strike at the heart of modern reform by sterilizing the administrative tribunals which administer them, they will have effectively destroyed the reform itself."

Certify MEBA

Washington, Dec. 28. — The Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, CIO, has been certified by the NLRB as sole bargaining agent for licensed marine engineers employed by the Isthmian Steamship Co., New York. The MEBA won an election conducted between Feb. 23 and Nov. 23, 1940, receiving 82 votes to two for the United Licensed Officers and 17 for neither.

Rhode Island CIO To Push Campaign

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 30.—The Rhode Island Industrial Union Council, meeting here for its third annual convention, served strong notice that labor will sacrifice none of its basic rights under the national defense program.

The convention, which brought together 150 delegates, heard Sec.-Treas. David McDonald of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee declare:

"We believe that if industry is to make tremendous profits in the defense boom, then the worker is entitled to a share of those profits."

WARNS TORIES

George Baldanzi, vice-president of the CIO Textile Workers Union, told the convention that labor will be ready to strike against manufacturers "who are not favorably inclined to share" their prosperity with employes.

"We are 100% in support of the national defense program," Baldanzi said, but tory groups are "trying to utilize the present period for the purpose of emasculating or setting aside all labor legislation enacted, including the Wage-Hour Act, the Wagner Act and the Walsh-Healey Law."

The parley was opened by CIO Regional Director Joseph Mayo, and in its opening session heard Pres. Adelard Gingras urge continuation of intensive organization efforts throughout Rhode Island.

Both Gingras and Sec.-Treas. Anne Marsoli were re-elected.

Resolutions called for maintenance of civil liberties, preservation of the Wagner Act, return of drafted workers to their jobs without loss of seniority and endorsement of Thomas F. McMahon, veteran textile union official, for the post of state director of labor.

Labor & 1941

PHILIP MURRAY
President of CIO

The Congress of Industrial Organizations looks forward in 1941 to a great expansion of organizational activity on behalf of labor and of the nation.

The millions of workers who make up the CIO come from the basic mass-producing industries. Upon their labor and their loyalty depends the production of all that is most essential to industrial stability and national defense.

As patriotic Americans, the workers in these basic industries desire to make their full contribution to the welfare of their country and the defense of its institutions.

The CIO is the instrumentality through which they seek to obtain fair treatment and adequate wages, so that unremedied grievances and tyrannical actions may not create industrial disturbance.

The CIO is also the instrumentality through which these workers seek to participate more fully and to be represented more adequately in the administration of national defense.

Firmly Established

In the past year, the CIO has established itself more firmly than ever before as the chosen representative of the workers in our basic industries. The results of Labor Board elections have revealed far more votes cast for CIO unions than for any other organization.

The CIO has also proved its value to labor and to the country by the collective bargaining agreements it has obtained and maintained.

These agreements have improved wages and working conditions in the industries concerned, and have contributed to national prosperity by the increased purchasing power they have given to millions of people.

More than that, they have preserved substantial industrial peace in the major basic defense industries, by providing orderly, peaceful and democratic means for the adjustment of differences.

Expect to Expand

In 1941, the CIO expects to continue and to expand its constructive efforts along these lines; to bring to more and more workers the opportunity to improve their lot through collective bargaining, and to contribute more fully to the national well-being.

At the same time the CIO will be vigilant against the enemies of democracy from within as well as from without. It will defend the right to organize and the labor and social legislation which has been so hardly won. And as a great democratic movement of the people, it will be constantly on guard against all attacks on our cherished civil rights of free speech, press, assembly and worship.

For while labor pledges itself to national defense, it also believes, as the recent convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations stated, that national defense includes "the creation of a nation of strong, healthy and well-fed people employed at work at decent and substantial wages and dedicated to the belief that the democratic way is the best way of living."

ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

To the Officers, Members of the CIO and Affiliated Unions and Staffs:

I take this opportunity to extend to all the best wishes for a Happy New Year. The year 1940 was a history making one. The CIO played an important role in all the events affecting our nation and its well-being. Our forces were held intact. Our unions became more and more stabilized and great gains were accomplished. The largest elections ever held by the NLRB were decisively won by the CIO. In the basic industries of the U. S. and Canada the CIO is established as the only organization representing the workers.

In the white collar fields, real, effective progress was made. We are entering the New Year with our basic structure on a sound basis and secure and entrenched in such a manner that the year 1941 will see the resistance of these citadels of reaction overcome proper collective bargaining established, a large increase in the membership of our affiliated unions.

Democracy For All

Democracy will be enjoyed by this greatly increased new membership, who were heretofore denied it, and as a result of these accomplishments a securer, happier and freer life for all Americans will result. Under the wise leadership of our president, Philip Murray, let us all re-dedicate ourselves to work faithfully and untiringly in this great crusade to organize.

All differences should be cast aside and the great united effort be to organize the unorganized. Let not the unfair and biased critics retard our efforts. With faith in our cause, and unity in purpose, nothing can prevent the attainment of our objectives, because our cause is right.

Gluckin Strike Ends

New York, Dec. 28.—The strike at the Gluckin Corp., which has been conducted since November 14, has been amicably settled, the United Office and Professional Workers of America announced today.

An agreement with the Union has been signed providing for Union recognition, two weeks' vacation with pay, ten days' sick leave, general increase of $2.00 and the establishment of $21.00 minimum.

CIO Offers New Plan For 500 Planes A Day

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Five hundred planes a day within six months is easily possible if present production facilities are fully used, CIO President Philip Murray declared in presenting a detailed plan to end delays in plane production to President Roosevelt here.

The plan, drawn up by Walter Reuther, General Motors director of the United Auto Workers, envisages adaptation of existing automobile machines and plants to produce an all-metal pursuit plane in quantities up to 500 daily.

"We propose to transform the entire unused capacity of the automotive industry into one huge plane production unit," the CIO plan said. "Production under this plan would not replace the output of the aircraft industry proper, which would continue to construct the large bombers and planes of special design."

MURRAY STATEMENT

Pres. Murray, in making public the Reuther plan, said that "following conferences with Mr. Reuther I asked him to make a survey of the possibiilty of producing planes in great number and with the least possible delay.

"I requested that Mr. Reuther make his survey because labor is anxious to participate wholeheartedly in national defense," Murray added.

"Out of the survey made by Mr. Reuther and his associates in the automobile industry, came this program which, I believe, will meet the nation's requirements for all metal pursuit ships. I have placed the Reuther plan before the President of the United States.

"This program shows that available skilled automobile labor is not being fully used nor on a planned basis; that available and complicated basic production machines and tools are lying idle many months of the year; that factory space is ready in the automobile industry, and that a surplus of labor is on hand to do the job."

According to Reuther's analysis, the auto industry today can produce 8,000,000 cars a year, is currently producing about half that number. "These unused plant reserves, as shown by the figures given in the Federal Trade Commission's report on the Motor Vehicle Industry, are greater than the total motor plant capacity of England, Germany, France, Italy, Russia and Japan combined. Adapted to plane production, this unused potential capacity would give us world supremacy in a short time."

SPREAD PRODUCTION

This would not involve cuts in auto production, the Reuther plan explains, since at the present

'Best Plane Pact' Brings Union Shop, $1,500,000 Raise

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—The best aircraft union contract in the country was signed this week with the Brewster Aircraft Co. near here.

The pact, a renewal of a previous agreement, brought $1,500,000 in wage increases to Brewster's 6,000 employes and provided a six cent flat raise in the minimum pay scale.

New to the nation's fastest growing industry was a provision for the union shop and the check-off of union dues.

Helping to bring the aircraft worker on an equal status with employes of older industries was a clause providing for vacations with pay. Seniority and standard grievance machinery are also included in the pact.

Walter Smethurst, director of the joint CIO-United Automobile Workers campaign in aircraft, said the agreement stipulated that its benefits would cover future plants of the corporation, some of which are already being constructed.

Signing contract for the UAW were Pres. R. J. Thomas, Smethurst, Regional Director Loren Houser and Organizer Thomas Lorenzo.

Pres. Thomas pointed out that

A. D. Lewis Demands U. S. Stop Dues Scandal

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28. — "Vigorous action" to halt a "collusive arrangement between officials of the WPA, the Associated General Contractors and the Building Trades Dept. of the AFL,"—as a result of which thousands of WPA workers are being mulcted of their hard-earned dollars—was demanded today by Chairman A. D. Lewis of the CIO United Construction Workers.

In a letter to Federal Works Administrator John Carmody, Lewis outlined the manner in which the "illegal program" operates.

"Workers on WPA," the letter said, "are ordered to report to the AFL with the statement that jobs in private industry are available.

"After being forced to pay a down payment on a fee presumably entitling the worker to employment on a defense construction project, the WPA workers are then sent by the AFL distances of 200 to 250 miles. No transportation is provided and only vague instructions on how to obtain this alleged work.

"At the site, the men experience great difficulty in finding the proper person and are, in most cases, required to pay another fee to the AFL before going to work. The work, if obtainable at all, in most cases lasts only a short period ranging from a few hours to a few days.

"The men are then set adrift and when they re-apply for assignment on WPA, are told they cannot return without satisfactory proof that their severance from private employment was involuntary on their part. This type of proof few of them are able to obtain."

The UCWOC official's letter declared that California appeared to be a center for this type of scheme, and that many WPA workers sent to work on Army cantonment projects had sent objections to local CIO leaders.

AROUSED BY ABUSES

"The CIO, the press and certain law-enforcing officials are keenly aroused by this abuse and are insisting on prompt corrective action," Lewis asserted.

"Another shocking angle," he added, is the fact that on these projects jobs are "absolutely denied" to UCWOC members and to anyone else who refuses "to pay tribute fees to the AFL."

N.Y. Chinese Laundry Signs CIO Contract

New York, Dec. 28.—The first labor agreement ever reached with a Chinese steam laundry in Greater New York was signed here between the New Sunlight Wet Wash Laundry and the Laundry Workers' Joint Board of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

The Chinese Consul General in New York, Lu Hsin-Yu, acted as intermediary in the labor situation in which a six months' strike was terminated in a closed-shop agreement.

The agreement, according to Hyman Blumberg, Joint Board manager, and Sam Kolodny, union organizer, calls for the reinstatement of all strikers with back pay, vacations with pay, six legal holidays, arbitration of disputes and the closed shop. It establishes a $15.20 weekly minimum for women employes for a 42-hour week, a $2 weekly increase for drivers and a reduction in hours for both driver and inside help.

Hillman On Defense SuperCouncil

Washington, Dec. 28. — Sidney Hillman, labor commissioner on the National Defense Advisory Commission, today had been named associate director of a new super-defense council — The Office for Production Management of Defense.

The Council, to be clothed with the maximum authority to direct and speed American rearmament, will be headed by William S. Knudsen, serving as director. Other members are Sec. of War Stimson and Sec. of Navy Knox.

Hillman, a former vice-president of the CIO, is on leave of absence as president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

In announcing creation of the new body, Pres. Roosevelt said the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission would continue to function, but that highest responsibility for production, purchasing and priority would be vested in the new four-man group.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

The Challenge of 1941

The members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and all its affiliated unions have a great opportunity in 1941.

It is an opportunity to advance the welfare and protect the interests of ourselves and our families. It is also an opportunity to contribute as patriotic Americans to the welfare and defense of our country and to the preservation and extension of its democratic liberties.

We have an opportunity and a duty to organize the unorganized and to strengthen the unions of the CIO. Upon our seizing this opporunity and performing this duty depends nearly everything else we may hope to do for ourselves and our country.

In 1940 the CIO established beyond question the solidity, permanence and effectiveness of its industrial unions.

It fought off anti-union legislation; won new and improved contracts, with many wage and other benefits; scored a big majority of the workers' votes in Labor Board elections; maintained its unity in face of many attempts to create dissension and division; and launched a number of big organizing campaigns in the aircraft, steel, automobile and other industries.

Starting from this solid base, as 1941 begins, the CIO has the biggest opportunity it has yet had to expand its organizational strength.

Employment is increasing, particularly in the major defense industries where the CIO unions are the almost unchallenged representatives of the workers. And the need and desire of the workers for organization is increasing more rapidly than employment.

They need union organization to achieve adequate wage standards, at a time when profits and living costs are soaring. They need it for protection against over-driving and over-work, and for the fair adjustment of grievances as they arise. They also need it to play their full constructive part in the present production program and to have a fair voice in its administration.

Grave dangers also confront the CIO and its members in 1941. Hysterical demands are heard in Congress for anti-strike and other anti-union laws that would deprive labor of its basic right to organize.

Existing labor and social legislation is threatened, and repeated efforts are made, under cover of war hysteria, to curtail or destroy our democratic civil rights and liberties.

Finally there is the dread and overshadowing danger of United States involvement in war, with all that that would mean in loss of life, liberty and happiness for the American people.

Against all these dangers, the surest protection lies in taking full advantage of the present opportunity to organize and to strengthen our unions—as a force for security, democracy and peace.

Do this, and all else will be added to us. Fail to do it, and we risk losing all that we have. That is the immediate challenge of 1941 to the CIO and to all working people.

A Broader Security

I look forward with you to the day when our country and its people may be able to enjoy a broader security, a security that encompasses the well-being of all of the people throughout the nation—a kind of security that will drive from the temples of finance and industry rapacity, greed and selfishness, and that will mete out to the lowly, the humble and the workers of this nation those things that God, in His infinite wisdom, decreed the masses of the universe should receive.

—Pres. Philip Murray.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

CIO was like the prow of a ship ploughing through stormy seas in 1940. Representing the most advanced, best organized and most purposeful of American workers, it was the first to feel the impact of new world-shaking events that affected all of labor and the whole country.

The world war began to dominate American economics and politics in 1940.

Despite a slight pickup in certain lines early in the year, due to foreign war orders, business doldrums and near-record unemployment continued until the fall, when huge government expenditures for war preparations began to act like a shot in the arm.

The CIO legislative program, adopted in December, 1939, called for an advance in social legislation to solve America's domestic problems of unemployment and insecurity.

It ran head-on into an opposite trend—a trend to retreat from the previously-begun social program, to weaken labor laws, to cut the budget for unemployment relief, security and other social purposes, while increasing expenditures for war purposes.

The CIO had therefore to battle through the year to defend laws like the Wagner Act and the Wage-Hour law, and to check destructive cutting of funds for social purposes, without being able to put through the big forward steps necessary to assure national well-being.

CIO Advances

While labor was thus held back legislatively, and compelled to fight defensive battle to hold its gains, the same was not true on the industrial field.

Organizationally, the CIO made some of its biggest forward strides in 1940. In a noteworthy series of Labor Board election victories, which included the huge General Motors poll, the CIO virtually eliminated its rivals in the automobile, electrical and machine manufacturing, steel packinghouse and most other mass-production industries.

New and improved contracts in nearly every industry testified to the permanence and increased strength of the CIO unions, and to their power to bring home the bacon.

As profits and living costs shot up toward the end of the year, substantial wage increases became a feature of nearly every new CIO contract.

Big new organizing campaigns were launched by CIO in 1940 in the aircraft industry, the Ford Motor Co., Bethlehem Steel Corp. and other sections of industry where business is swollen with defense orders.

Unity of Purpose

In 1940 the organized strength and bargaining power of labor increased greatly, at a time when war pressures were halting and threatening to destroy social advances, and when the whole economy of the country was changing from a peace to a war footing.

How did the CIO membership, the vanguard of the forces of labor, react to this situation?

Sentiment for increased political independence on the part of labor was in evidence, but was counteracted by the outside pressure of world events and resulting national unity demands.

The year's political campaigns brought much searching of minds, and some confusion and division—the growing pains of a labor movement that feels its increased powers and responsibilities but has not yet become accustomed to exercising them to the full extent.

The CIO convention in Atlantic City revealed the cohesiveness of the new labor movement and its basic unity of purpose.

There were sharp divisions and vigorous arguments on a number of issues, particularly where political repercussions of the war's impact were concerned. But on the basic importance of expanding union organization, defending labor's rights and social gains, and increasing labor participation in national affairs. there was complete unity and enthusiasm.

War and Defense

Throughout the year, the definition of the attitude of the CIO toward the war and national defense assumed increasing importance.

In June, 1940, the CIO executive board adopted a policy statement in which it reaffirmed its opposition to United States involvement in the foreign wars but declared its full support of national defense.

At the same time the board declared that national defense must include the preservation of labor's rights and civil liberties, re-employment of the country's idle millions, and planning to avert the economic collapse that usually follows in the wake of war booms.

Toward the end of the year, defense production was found to be lagging. Hysterical demands were heard in Congress for anti-strike and other union-busting legislation; and proposals were advanced for lengthening the work-week.

The CIO responded, at a meeting of its national officers, by pointing out to the industrial peace brought by CIO collective bargaining agreements in all major defense industries; by demanding that idle men and idle factories be put to work by a more equal distribution of defense contracts; and by advancing a constructive proposal for the more intelligent planning and administration of defense production.

time most motor manufacturers are using less than half their capacity. Thus, Chevrolet, which made 1,000,000 cars last year, "used less than 50 per cent of its potential productive capacity." The unused half could be quickly adapted to airplane production, leaving the present schedule of auto production undistrubed. Another illustration cited in the CIO plan is the Chevrolet Drop Forging plant in Detroit, which could easily produce all the drop forgings needed for the 500 planes and still supply Chevrolet's auto needs.

SAME MACHINERY

The ease with which auto machinery could be used for planes is shown in the fact that General Motors is making "the most difficult and precise parts of the Allison airplane engine" using retooled Cadillac machines, the plan points out.

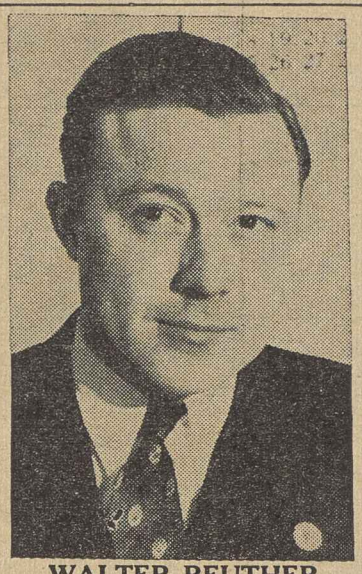
"The same basic machinery is utilized in the manufacture of these basic parts common to both motors," the plan says. "True, there are differences between the automobile and the airplane engine, as there are differences of a lesser degree betwen the engine of the Chevrolet and the engine of the Cadillac.

"These differences between engines are produced by adding certain tools, dies, jigs or fixtures to the basic machine in order to make a difference in the product. The same 'tooling' process adapts the same basic machinery to the production of the airplane engine."

DUPLICATION

Continuing to rely on expanding aircraft plant will result not only in long delays in plane production but in unnecessary and wasteful duplication of already existing machines and plant, the plan explains.

"In this process of duplicating basic machinery, lies the most serious delay," it says. "This lag, which from all indications may continue, may well defeat our national defense program. An additional burden is placed on the already overloaded machine tool industry. We propose to shortcut the process by building only the tools, dies, jigs and fixtures necessary to convert idle automotive machinery into plane engine machinery."



Plenty of labor of all needed skills is available to produce the 500 planes, the plan declares, pointing to the 100,000 auto workers now unemployed or on WPA who could be employed on plane production. All that would be necessary is a delay in the production of new auto models to allow from 12,000 to 15,000 highly skilled workers time to produce the jigs, dies, etc., for planes.

NEW BOARD

The CIO plan suggests creation of a new nine man board to have full charge of the 500 plane program, three members representing equally labor, industry and government.

First task of this board would be to organize a staff of production and tooling engineers and assign them to make a plant-by-plant survey of the auto industry to find out the capacity of each plant, and to check on how much of that capacity is now unused.

Following that, the board would break down the blueprint of the type of plane decided upon and allocate its parts to various plants, so that no one manufacturer would be required to make all the parts. This, the plan says, would avoid saddling one manufacturer with the multitude of special problems created when he is expected to make the complete plane.

WALTER REUTHER
UAU Official Offers 500-Planes-A-Day Plan.

CENTRAL ASSEMBLY

Finally, the board would set up a central motor assembly plant and other central plants for the different plane parts required, the completed plane to be assembled near the Detroit and Cleveland airports where they could be flown to the army or navy for delivery.

In conclusion, the CIO plan declares: "Labor offers its wholehearted cooperation. All that labor asks is intelligent planning, a voice in matters of policy and administration, recognition of its rights and maintenance of its established standards."

Reuther spoke to the nation on the NBC radio network Saturday, Dec. 28, to describe in detail the CIO plan for 500 planes a day.

Wagner Cites Need to Keep Social Laws

Washington, Dec. 28.—Weakening of progressive social legislation will undermine the national defense program, Senator Robert Wagner of New York told network radio audience this week.

Predicting that next session of Congress will have on its dockets many proposals for abolishing the right to strike and to impair collective bargaining, Wagner said:

"All such proposals should bring this fact to mind: Only the totalitarian nations are wholly free of labor strife in peace and in war. And they accomplish this at a price we think too high to pay—servitude, for labor and industry, reduced morale, and increased accidents and sabotage.

"In a contest between the Nazi system and our own, we cannot hope to succeed by adopting Hitler's methods."

Best Plane Pact Wins Union Shop

"our organization, in signing this contract, is demonstrating again that it is trying to cooperate in every way for the advancement of the national defense program, especially with manufacturers we consider to be fair to labor.

"This is one of the best contracts ever negotiated with an aviation manufacturer. It means approximately $165 added every year in each employe's envelope and an increase of about $1,500,000 in wages without the increases that will come through reclassification."

Meanwhile, Smethurst announced reaching of an agreement with the Breeze Corp. of Newark, N. J., which employs 300 aircraft workers.

That contract brings the workers a 10c hourly increase, vacations and grievance procedure.

Comments On 7-Day Week

New York, Dec. 28.—The attitude of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers on the use of factories for a seven-day week was expressed here today by UE Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak. He said:

"There are two things that badly need to be said about these proposals to 'put the nation on a 7-day week':

"The first is: there is neither any legal nor any union restriction whatever on working a plant clear around the clock seven days per week. Our own union agreements make it entirely possible for manufacturers to schedule their production on a 7-day-week, 24-hour-day basis. This can be done without working anyone more than 40 hours per week.

LOOK TO PROFITS

"The actual objection of employers is not to any limits on the work-week—which do not exist, legally or otherwise—but is their objection to paying overtime rates for overtime work.

"Overtime rates do not, in general, increase the costs of armaments to the nation—but they do lessen the already excessive profits of the manufacturers. That, and not patriotism, is the real basis of the manufacturers' objection.

"The second thing is that there are still millions of unemployed, many tens of thousands of them fully qualified to do skilled work at skilled rates of pay."

Ford on Defense As CIO Drive Picks Up Speed

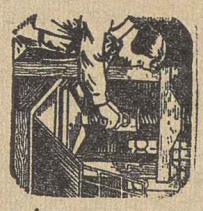
DETROIT, Dec. 28.—The Ford Motor Co. was on the defensive today as the CIO and the United Automobile Workers pushed forward their joint organization drive at top speed.

Action of the Ford Co. in agreeing to a U. S. conciliation plan for the reinstatement of 300 to 400 recently-fired workers was described by Michael F. Widman, chief of the organizing drive, as "the greatest union victory thus far in the campaign to organize Ford."

Union officials pointed out that Ford's acceptance of the conciliation plan, offered by James Dewey, veteran U. S. Labor Dept. mediator, marked the first occasion that he has agreed to any sort of arbitration with a union of his employes. In the past, Ford has officially pretended that unions don't exist among his workers.

"It is our understanding that the company will reinstate all men whom we can show were discharged for union activities," Widman said. The discharges occurred early this month when hundreds of Ford employes walked into the plant wearing union buttons.

In scores of instances they were roughly handled by members of the notorious "service squad"; buttons were ripped from their shirts and in some cases the men were forcibly ejected from the factory.



Widman said he had been informed by Conciliator Dewey that "Bennett (Harry Bennett, head of Ford's service squad) claims the layoffs were due to seasonal slack and had nothing to do with union membership, and that all men will be rehired after January 1 in due order.

DISPUTE BENNETT

"In view of statements in Thursday's papers that Ford production increased this week by 4,000 units, we dispute Bennett's claim but we nevertheless agreed to supply Mr. Dewey with all necessary information so that he may take up with Bennett the cases of those not rehired."

Obviously disturbed by the unexpected speed of the CIO drive, Ford placed large advertisements in Detroit newspapers to claim his wage rates were the highest in the motor industry. UAW officials, after reading the statements and comparing them with actual facts, called the Ford propaganda "cock-eyed."

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

The Legislative Year:

1940 Saw Labor Unions Defend Their Major Legislative Gains

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—Labor closed its year with few positive legislative gains, but with an impressive record of maintaining standards already won in the face of an almost intinuous tory offensive in Congress and outside it against progressive social laws and workers' rights.

The reactionary drive against labor protective laws, as pointed out in former President Lewis' report to the Atlantic City convention, took place under the mask of "national emergency" which union haters in Congress sought to exploit as a weapon to drive down wages and to chisel away the rights of workers to organize, assemble and take action to protect conditions.

As the President's report noted, most of the CIO's legislative work "has had to be in defense of existing legislation rather than in advance to new gains, because the government and Congress have not seen fit to put forward a real social and economic program, such as is advocated by the CIO, to cope with the continued problems of unemployment, insecurity and other domestic evils."

This program, as President Philip Murray said in his acceptance speech at the convention, involves "a broader security, a security that encompasses the well-being of all of the people throughout the nation, a kind of security that will drive from the temples of finance and industry rapacity, greed and selfishness, and that will mete out to the lowly, the humble and the workers of this nation those things that God, in His infinite wisdom, decreed the masses should receive."

THE RECORD

CIO's record in face of the continuous tory drive is all the more impressive when it is remembered that CIO and CIO alone, as stated in the report of the committee on officers' reports at Atlantic City, "has staved off the tory offensive against social legislation that marked the past year." No other organized group helped the CIO in this campaign. On the contrary, many AFL leaders played exactly the opposite role — joining with the labor movement's worst enemies to drive down labor and social standards.

Thus, on the Wagner Act, the AFL again teamed up with the Ntl. Association of Manufacturers and other labor enemies in the attempt to get the crippling Smith amendments through Congress. For the third successive year, the CIO was able to save the Act, and Congress recessed leaving it intact.

Similarly, amendments designed to hamstring the Wage-Hour Act by excluding hundreds of thousands of workers from its protections were defeated, though frequently weak administration of the law threatened to bring about much the same effect.

The Walter-Logan bill, designed to turn over government agencies, particularly those administering labor laws, to the mercies of the courts, thus preventing them from serving the workers, was vetoed by Pres. Roosevelt after more than a year's campaign against it led by CIO.

The bill to deport Harry Bridges, CIO California leader, failed to pass the Senate, though it went through the lower House on a tidal wave on anti-labor hysteria.

PROGRAM BLOCKED

These are a few of the high-spots in CIO's defense of labor laws during the past year. Not all CIO's action was defensive, however. The positive program extending and tightening social legislation was put forward vigorously and consistently—though Congress was in no mood to make concessions to labor's legitimate demands.

For example, even so simple and just a measure as the Coal Mine Safety bill, designed to cut down the appalling toll of miners' deaths was stymied when a minority of tories controlling the House Rules Committee would not allow it come to a vote on the floor.

Congress also refuses to take action on CIO's demand that government contractors obey the Wagner Act and other labor laws before receiving Federal contracts. This situation, whereby large anti-labor corporations are actually rewarded for violating U. S. laws took CIO's attention through the year, but to date nothing has been done to remedy it, either by Congress or by the government.

The federal tax program, under which those least able to pay have the heaviest burdens placed on them, also took a considerable portion of CIO's time, and though again Congress and the government have refused to take action on CIO's demands for tax revision to lighten the taxes on the poor and increase the share paid by holders of large incomes.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

CIO was active throughout the year in striving to protect the interests of workers in national defense. Making it clear that it recognizes the need for defense, CIO offered its full cooperation, demanding only that labor laws and workers rights be respected in the arms program.

Here again CIO insisted that large corporations working on defense orders obey U. S. laws, that workers keep their rights to organize, bargain collectively and take action to protect living and working conditions.

Throughout the year, Congressional labor-baiters and their anti-union employer backers used the defense program as a cover-up for the most vicious assault on workers' rights of minorities in recent times. As the Atlantic City conventions declared:

"Congress has indulged in an almost continuous debauch of attacks on civil rights, using a carefully whipped-up war hysteria as a cover. Current measures directed against aliens and other minorities, a proposal to legalize wire-tapping, a bill to permit employers to set up private armies under their sole control, continued stalling on the anti-lynch and anti-poll tax bills, are but examples of what happens to a nation's liberties in a war economy."

OTHER HIGHLIGHTS

Other highlights in the legislative year included CIO's campaigns for a national health bill, for improvements in social security to bring more benefits to greater groups of the population, for adequate housing, needed especially as the defense program crowds thousands of workers into industrial slum areas, for adequate WPA and relief to care for the millions of workers still unemployed, and for a fundamental program to end America's greatest problem — the problem of the 10,000,000 unemployed.

Earlier in the year, the CIO opposed the Conscription bill; after it passed, it has insisted on full protection of workers in the operation of the act, and has urged adequate labor representation on draft boards. Consistently, CIO has opposed any steps leading toward involvement in foreign wars.

Preparation of so-called "model" bills for state legislatures toward the close of the year — bills ostensibly aimed at sabotage and designed to set up state some guards — were opposed by CIO as actually aimed at labor, and all CIO affiliates urged to campaign against them in their state legislatures.

FUTURE ACTION

CIO's legislative year saw the successful defense of gains previously won, saw the staving off of the more violent assaults on democracy and on workers' rights. This defense was successful in direct ratio to the organized strength CIO was able to exert.

As the Atlantic City convention declared in adopting the report of the committee on officers' reports:

"The workers and the common people of this country can look for no solution of their fundamental problems that will be served them on a silver platter. They can look only to their own organized strength and the pressure that their leaders are able to exert to bring them the results they want.

"This important lesson has been clearly demonstrated by the CIO. When this lesson is realized by all workers, we shall have an even stronger CIO than we have today — and we shall have legislation and legislators that will be real contributors to the peace, security and well-being of our people."

Jones Urges:

'Guard Labor's Rights'

Washington, Dec. 28.—Labor must be on guard as never before during the coming session of Congress, John T. Jones, director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, warned League affiliates in a report on 1940 activities.

"Further attempts will be made to destroy existing legislation like the National Labor Relations Act, the Wage-Hour Act and other vitally important social and labor legislation," he declared.

"We can forsee now that further attempts to restrict, impede and destroy the rights of labor will be made. Bills are now being introduced in Congress which show what we can expect when Congress reconvenes in January.

DANGER SIGNALS

"The labor movement must heed the warnings and danger signals which are already clear. Only by constant vigilance and united determination can the members of organized labor protect their interests and defend the welfare of their families."

During 1940, Jones said, labor's legislative activities were concentrated on defending existing legis lation. The League, he said, served the labor movement by mobilizing its state organizations and other groups in defense of the labor laws which were under constant attack.

Along with Jones' report, the League made public its compilation of the voting record of every member of Congress on measures affecting labor upon which a vote was taken in the last session.

SMASHING BOTTLENECKS:

Unions Urge Work for Men, Machines in Beaver County

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Just west of Pittsburgh lies Beaver County—a land of factories and equipment and resources and men.

Beaver County, you might imagine, would be working at 100% capacity turning out the thousands of steel and other products needed for the country's national defense effort.

But it isn't.

At least 5,000 of its workers are unemployed. Well over a dozen of its largest plants are working only a couple of days a week, and one plant — fully equipped — is lying completely idle.

EXHIBIT A

Beaver County might well be considered as Exhibit A for CIO Pres. Philip Murray's recent charge that:

"Production is lagging, and the fault lies in the rather stupid method in which it has been distributed and is being administered. The record will show, I believe, that a few of the larger companies have got almost all of the government contract business, whilst many of the smaller independent companies are still dawdling in the realm of unemployment and economic business despair."

In Beaver County the great Jones & Laughlin steel plants which employ 11,000, are working at capacity. So is Spang & Chalfant, making shells. So is American Bridge, producing fabricated construction steel. So is Crucible Steel — now expanding plant capacity at Midland, where housing is already a desperate problem.

But next door lie plants, with the same machinery, similar staffs and equal conditions, which are partly or totally idle.

PROGRESSIVES ACT

Progressive groups in Beaver county decided, not long ago, to do something about this situation. And this week they laid on the desk of Morris L. Cooke, National Defense Advisory Commission expert, a plan which may well become a model for other localities facing similar conditions.

Primary sparkplug in the drive to help even out Beaver County's industrial inequality is young Clemons Roark, former CIO steel union member and now executive director of the county housing authority.

Working together with many of the manufacturers and leading union officials—among them Joseph Timko, SWOC sub-regional director, and Clifford Shorts, official of the SWOC local at Aliquippa—Roark called together a conference of the county's leading citizens.

RESULTS AMAZING

Out of that meeting came authorization for a survey of Beaver County's idle productive capacity, both men and machines. The results, now in the hands of the government, were amazing.

No less than 56 plants, the survey found have facilities for the manufacture of defense products over and above their present output, and every one of the 56 was "eager" to put their equipment to work.

Broken down into specific machinery, the survey smashes into smithereens at least one corner of the "bottleneck" about which government officials have been talking and which Tory industrialists have tried to blame on labor.

IDLE EQUIPMENT

The Central Tube Mill, for instance, is fully equipped with expensive and elaborate machinery. Early this year it shut down, throwing its 600 union workers out of their jobs—and since then not a single product has been shipped from its doors.

Five modern shops, with an inventory which reads like a "Who's Who" of the machine tool equipment the government is desperately seeking, are working only part time.

CLEMONS ROARK
Leads Fight for U. S. Orders

pletely idle, the other six working part-time.

There are seven pipe and tube mills in the county. Just one of them is working at capacity. A large glass factory is closed, and two others working at less than capacity. Seven factories in the county can manufacture refractory bricks and porcelain. Some of them can increase production by 25% to 50%; one of them is idle.

The 56 plants covered by the survey, could pour forth a whole stream of products essential to the national defense program—chemicals, steel products, glass, wood boxes, alloys, gas masks, hospital equipment, ship steel, electrical equipment.

The Beaver County labor leaders, manufacturers, and housing experts, are worried, however, by the trend in the county's industrial development.

As Roark pointed out in his letter to Morris L. Cooke:

"Many of the largest corporations are now planning huge plant expansions which will mean additional employment, expansion of local industry and other gains, which the county is indeed glad to see, though they will strain our housing facilities to a very critical point . . .

"But at the same time there are dozens of smaller plants with crews of skilled workers on the payrolls, but only working part time with machinery that is being used only one or two shifts, and with officials who are eager to make their unused capacities available to the defense program.

"We believe that the . . . proper coordination of these facilities . . . would not only offer real possibilities for defense production, but would point a real example of the possibilities of defense expansion without serious dislocations of labor and capital.

"In addition, the county has several thousand unskilled and semi-skilled unemployed or very slightly employed workmen, who can be rapidly trained for more skilled work in the defense program, through the proper kind of a vocational training program."

INDUSTRY COMMITTEES

Beaver County labor and business leaders are urging the establishment of a local Industry Committee, which—working under a set-up resembling a housing authority—could keep in contact with Washington and "dish out" orders to put the country's idle men and machinery to work.

The union leaders see a threefold gain if the active role they are playing in this campaign comes to a successful conclusion. The national defense program will benefit through increased production. Thousands of skilled and semi-skilled workers will be receiving bigger paychecks.

Last but not least, they point out, reactionary propaganda from the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, is going to fall flat in Beaver County when local employers come to realize that labor represents the wrist on the hand that feeds them.

Boatmen Get Wage Raise

New York, Dec. 28. — Wage increases of $5.50 a month, retroactive to December 16, and an additional increase of $5 to take effect September 1, 1941, have been secured by the National Maritime Union for 700 inland boatmen on five mid-west rivers, Howard McKenzie, NMU National Organizer, announced today.

Increases of .015 per hour immediately and additional .02 an hour in September for one thousad dock workers were rejected by the union negotiators pending further instructions from the membership.

Rap Band Leader's Strike-Breaking

Philadelphia, Dec. 28. — Officials of CIO Local Industrial Union 356 today criticized orchestra leader Jimmy Dorsey as a "strike breaker" after he played for a fraternity dance in the struck Pennsylvania Athletic Club.

The union had previously wired Dorsey — a member of the AFL's Federation of Musicians—describing the strike and urging that he not accept the engagement.

To enter the club, Dorsey and his band had to walk through the CIO picket line, which has been maintained for six months.

The strike was called when the management served notice on the employes that they must accept a 10 per cent wage cut. Close to three hundred answered the call to strike.

In their new role, as strike-breakers, Dorsey and his band were cheered to the echo by the dancers, some twenty-five hundred young persons, all from the fringe of the upper crust. It is reported that Dorsey's manager, Mr. Burton, did not bow to the wishes of the fraternity group responsible for the dance until he received the approval of the Musicians' national headquarters.

It is the intention of the officers and members of Local 356 to leave no stone unturned from Maine to California and from the Dakotas to Alabama to see that "Dorsey and his boys" are branded for what they are, namely, "strike-breakers."

Pact In Arabic

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. — What is believed to be the first trade union contract ever printed in Arabic in this country was made public today by the National Maritime Union, CIO.

It was signed last week with the Standard Fruit Company following a two day strike of 300 seamen and 14 radio operators in New Orleans.

In addition to Arabic, the contract was printed in Spanish and English. It brought wage increases of $5 to $12.50 a month, the eight-hour day, overtime and union recognition.

Labor Protests Mount Against Tory Bills

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Protests against anti-strike legislation and other labor gags planned for the coming session of Congress and the state legislatures are mounting as the news of bills introduced by polltax statesmen like Reps. Smith of Va. and Cox of Georgia and the grizzled labor-baiter Hoffman of Michigan gets around the labor movement.

In New York, the Greater N. Y. CIO Council has called on all affiliates to fight these proposed bills in a resolution that describes them as aimed at the destruction of all labor's rights.

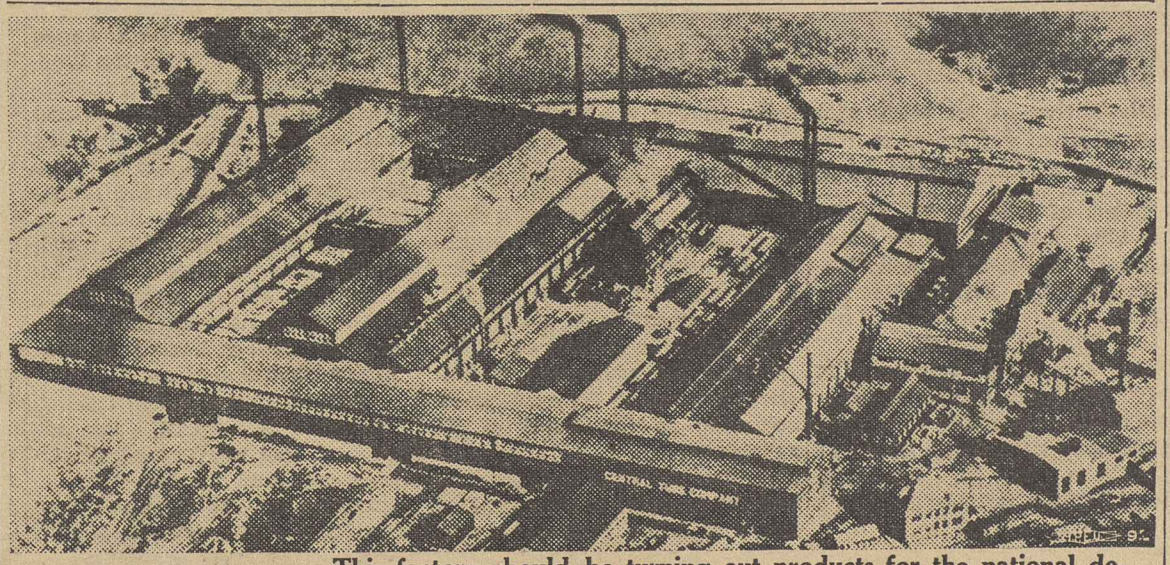
The Natl. Maritime Union, declaring such measures a "feint calculated to cover up an attempt to force compulsory arbitration on workers in defense industries," called on its membership to wire and write protests to Congress and to the President against any such proposals.

From Virginia Wm. Haber, writing in the name of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers District, has written to Rep. Smith denouncing his bill as "a most infamous, un-American piece of legislation, designed and directed against the interests of organized labor."

FIGHT STATE BILLS

Following warnings by Pres. Philip Murray to all CIO affiliates that so-called "model" sabotage and state guard bills were also an attack on fundamental rights of workers, the N. Y. Council urged members to be alert against such bills, which it said would be "used to hinder or prevent all organizational efforts." A similar warning came from Connecticut's Labor's Non-Partisan League, which declared the League "would fight to the limit" against such measures.

These organizations were joined by the United Christian Council for Democracy in a statement that read in part: "We must watch for and oppose the movement for anti-strike legislation. We warn against the dangers of compromise proposals such as the 30 day notice before striking, with or without compulsory arbitration." The Council specifically opposed the Smith bill, and called for witholding of government contracts from violators of the Wagner Act.



Labor Spy Convicted In Killing

New York, Dec. 28. — Not even the Dies Committee could save Jerome Madeiros, alias King, from conviction on a charge of first degree manslaughter in the killing of Bruce Cameron, Natl. Maritime Union member last September.

Cameron was brutally kicked to death on the street. Madeiros, who faces a 10 to 20 year term for his part in the killing, was once secretary-treasurer of the NMU, and was expelled when found to be a shipowners' spy.

The two witnesses from the Dies Committee who testified on Madeiros' behalf told the jury that he had been acting as a labor spy for the past seven years, that he had given the Dies Committee "valuable information" and that he was a "peaceful man."

Madeiros swore that the killing was a "red plot" by leaders of the Natl. Maritime Union to get him. Convicted with Madeiros were two others, Thomas Harmon and James Cottilo, alias Costello.

LYING IDLE: This factory should be turning out products for the national defense program. Instead it's lying idle in Beaver County, Pa. Labor and progressive groups are working to eliminate industrial bottlenecks, provide jobs and use all idle factory capacity for defense production.

CENSOR: Prof. Ralph Robey of Columbia, conservative economist, who has been hired by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers to read over 800 school textbooks and report on "subversive" passages. NAM wants to keep all liberal books out of the nation's schools.

CIO Wins Major Poll In Southwest Plant

TRONA, Calif., Dec. 28. — A five-year uphill organizing campaign at the American Potash & Chemical Corp. reached its climax today as the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers scored a 2-1 victory over the AFL and a company union.

The vote was 476 for the CIO, 102 for the AFL and 103 for the phony "independent" union.

Trona is isolated in the midst of the south Californian desert, and corporation officials have done their best to make the company town unhealthy for union organization.

As a result, the CIO victory was looked upon as a major blow for labor's civil rights in the entire area. Officials of the local announced they would press immediately for contract negotiations.

New Textile Pact Brings Closed Shop

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 28.—A modified closed shop contract has been signed with the Fitchburg Yarn Company covering 600 employes, it was announced here today by Joseph A. Salerno, Massachusetts State Director for the Textile Workers Union of America.

The workers, employed in the manufacture of cotton yarn, voted to accept the agreement at a special meeting on December 22.

The contract, which runs for a year, outlaws strikes or lockouts and sets up arbitration machinery to settle all disputes which cannot be adjusted in direct negotiations between the union and the company.

All workers employed for two years or more wil be given a week's vacation with pay under the terms of the agreement. Workers in underpaid departments will be given an immediate increase in wages.

All workers who are members or who join the union must maintain their membership, and the dues of members who sign authorization cards will be checked off. Work will be divided equally in slack times and time and a half will be paid for all work in excess of eight hours per day, 40 hours per week and for all Sunday or holiday work.

Jewels Lost

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 28.— Delegates to the CIO convention at Atlantic City last month were asked for assistance today in locating jewelry lost at the time of the convention by Mrs. Stella Simon, Apt. 1114, President Hotel, Atlantic City.

In a letter to Sec. James B. Carey, Mrs. Simon wrote:

"During the time that the CIO convention met down here, I lost some very valuable jewels—two diamond rings, a pearl necklace with diamond clasp and a diamond brooch pin—and I thought by some chance of luck one of the members of your organization might have found same. . . .

"The jewels were in a chamois bag and of very great value—both materially and sentimentally. To any person who might have found them I offer a substantial reward."

WIN NEW PACT

Milwaukee—Improved severance pay schedules have been won by the Milwaukee Newspaper Guild in a new two-year contract with the Milwaukee Sentinel.

AT COUNCIL PARLEYS: John T. Jones, president of the Maryland-D. C. CIO Council, shakes hands with CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood, principal speaker at the council's recent convention in Hagerstown, Md. Below: Irving Abramson, elected president of the New Jersey CIO Council. An official of the Textile Workers Union, Abramson succeeds the late William J. Carney as Jersey CIO head.

Furriers Win $450,000 Pay Boost

New York, Dec. 28.—Wage increases of approximately $450,000 are provided in the closed shop agreement renewed by negotiation with the world's largest dressing and dyeing concern, A. Hollander & Son, for workers in the Newark, Middletown and Mt. Vernon plants, it was announced by the International Fur & Leather Workers Union.

According to the terms of the new agreement the increases are retroactive as of September 1, 1940, and the accumulated back pay will be paid to each employe this week. The new contract runs until October 31, 1943, and is subject to ratification by the workers at meetings scheduled to be held during the next week.

Representing the union in the negotiations were IFLWU President Ben Gold, Vice-President Myer Klig and General Organizer Herman Paul. Michael Hollander and Albert Feldman represented the firm.

The total increase of $450,000 is divided up in varying proportions for each plant. In the Middletown plant, increases will average approximately 18 per cent.

Union Wins 10th Poll in Dayton

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 28 — The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, won its tenth NLRB poll of 1940 in Dayton, when employes of Chrysler Airtemp chose Local 753 as bargaining agent. Voting "yes" for the UE were 193, with 62 voting against.

The day before the election a general wage increase of 2 cents an hour was announced in an apparent move to discourage organization.

Canada Labor Gains By Representation

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—Proving beyond a shadow of doubt the absolute necessity for Labor representation on all Government War Boards, a policy advocated by CIO in the United States and by the Canadian Congress of Labor in Canada, labor representatives on Canada's Labor Supply Council have succeeded in thwarting a large-scale Manufacturers' Association drive to enforce coolie wages upon Canadian war workers, to enforce compulsory arbitration and to outlaw strikes.

The new Order-in-Council recently issued by the Canadian government bears unmistakable evidence of labor pressure and must be a real disappointment to the reactionary interests who have been seeking to peg wages at low levels and who have been seeking to have labor barred from wartime government councils.

The move to "freeze" wages at low levels had been "built up" by an extensive newspaper publicity campaign, using the argument that Canada could not afford to pay high prices for war materials and that high wages would undo the work of the War-time Price Control Board recently established, whose task it is to keep the price of consumer goods within the reach of the average purchaser. Evidently the Manufacturers' Association had hope for some sort of legislation which would outlaw strikes, strike arbitrary maximum wage levels above which it was impossible for Conciliation Boards to recommend increases.

ATTACKED BY LABOR

However it appears that this proposal was alertly and mercilessly attacked by labor representatives on the Supply Board who then counter-attacked with a proposal to leave the road open for the granting of high wages which would be industry-wide in character and that, as a result, the new Order-in-Council just issued leaves the road open for increases in the vast majority of Canadian plants and the establishment of collective bargaining.

The new Order states that, in its opinion, the entire subject of wages is one which is to be worked out between unions and employers through collective bargaining and that arbitrary rulings were unfair and ineffective. It recommends that Boards, however, use the 1926-1929 wage level as a good figure, provided that no future rate since that time has been higher. It further provides that should the 1926-1929 level be too low for adequacy, or any other high level for that matter, the Board should grant an increase which should not be more than 5 per cent above the high level.

From a union organization point of view the new Order eases the task of unions greatly. It is no longer necessary, for example, to have a majority strike vote before it is possible to secure a Board of Conciliation, and, through that Board, force negotiation with the employer. Now it is only necessary that the Board be applied for, claiming that wages or other provisions of the Order are not being adhered to by the company.

Nova Scotian Coal Miners Sign Pact to Avoid Strikes

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 28.—Elimination of all work stoppages in the coal-fields of the Maritime Provinces is hoped for as a result of an agreement by the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators to set up a Joint Board of Adjustment which would give a final and binding decision in all disputes arising out of coal-mining contracts within 45 days.

SETTLEMENTS

The agreement between the UMW and coal operators stipulates settlement within 45 days of all disputes by a Joint Board of Adjustment to be appointed, whose decision is to be final and binding upon all parties.

Three members will constitute the Board. One will be named from the District Executive of the UMW, another by the coal operators from the management of one of the companies and a chairman chosen jointly. A majority decision of the Board will be final in the event of a disagreement.

"No suspension of work shall take place by lockout or strike pending the adjucation of any matter taken up for adjustment" according to the terms of the agreement.

Announcement of the agreement and the proposal to set up a Joint Board of Adjustment was greeted with satisfaction throughout the district where delay in settlement of disputes—in the past dragged out as long as two years—was a major source of discontent.

High Court Upholds CIO In Apex Case

Decision Seen As Victory

(See Story Page 3; Labor and the Law, Page 8)

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Apex Hosiery Co. of Philadelphia has lost its two-year effort to collect some $700,000 from the American Federation of Hosiery Workers through application of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

The U. S. Supreme Court, in a 6-3 decision, upheld CIO arguments that the Sherman Act was in no way involved in the case.

Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, saw the verdict as "a substantial victory for organized labor in its long fight to free itself from the bonds of the anti-trust laws."

In Pittsburgh, meanwhile, Chairman Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee said that on the basis of the decision, he would ask for dismissal of the Republic Steel Co.'s $7,500,000 anti-trust suit against the CIO and the SWOC.

3rd Straight Win for CIO Steel Local

Indianapolis, Ind., June 1.—Workers at the Ingram-Richardson plant in Frankfort, defeated an AFL union for the third consecutive time at a Labor Board election, James Robb, CIO regional director, announced this week.

The election held last week was won by Local 1774, Steel Workers Organizing Committee by a vote of 177 to 87 for the AFL. Otis Downey is president of the local.

Construction Local In Canada

Glace Bay, June 1.—Construction workers here have organized under the CIO in the Industrial General Workers Union. Silby Barrett, CIO executive for Canada, aided the organization. Officers of the new union are Murdoch Clarke, president; Sydney Taylor, vice-president; Ernie Clarke, treasurer; Harry Wadden, financial secretary; Ralph Woodburn, secretary, and Emerson Rose, sergeant-at-arms.

LOTS OF SPIRIT—and plenty of goods looks—are in evidence on this Birmingham, Alabama, picket line. The girls, members of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, are showing Virgil Pierson, international representative of the union, how to get quick results. They're striking at the Melba Cafeteria, where wages have run to $4.05 a week, hours to 68½.

CIO FORD ORGANIZING DRIVE got under way in Dearborn, Mich., as three leaders of the United Automobile Workers distributed leaflets to Ford employes. Arrested after they had passed out 400 handbills, the trio—Pres. R. J. Thomas, Sec.-Treas. George Addes (shown above) and Regional Director R. T. Leonard—plan free speech test case in the courts. UAW officials pointed out that Ford had not dared to let loose his service squad goons. Story, Page 2.

Win Poll, 3-1

Franklin, Va., June 1.—Workers at the Camp Manufacturing Co. lumber mill here voted for the CIO 317 to 89 in a Labor Board election held last week.

Asks Wage Laws Be Protected

WASHINGTON, June 1.—CIO Pres. John L. Lewis led the fight to protect labor laws from attack in the defense program in a vigorous letter to Naval Affairs Chairman Sen. David I. Walsh, in which he insisted that the program be kept from becoming a "mad armaments race" by rejecting House attempts to weaken the Walsh-Healey and the Wage and Hour laws.

Formation of a National Defense Council under a 1916 statute was announced by President Roosevelt at a White House press conference, in which Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and leader of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be in charge of employment policies for the program.

In the Senate, a much revised LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices bill, originally designed to curb anti-union employers, was passed with anti-alien and other amendments, and with a proposal stricken out to deprive violators of government contracts.

In the House, early consideration of the crippling amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act contained in the Smith ripper bill was proposed.

Memo To Sen. Taft: Scabs Still Tote Guns

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 1.—Local hosiery workers think that Republican Sen. Taft of Ohio, who opposed the LaFollette-Thomas Bill to curb anti-labor spying and munitions, ought to hear this story:

Three bushel baskets full of assorted pistols and sawed-off shotguns were taken from scabs being escorted into the struck Nebel Knitting Co. here on May 24, resulting in an almost complete stoppage of work while pickets of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, maintained their lines. The strike has been in force since April 8.

Police Chief E. J. Nolan, whose men disarmed the strikebreakers, said guntoting would not be allowed. The disarmament program was carried out following protests by the union.

As each car of scabs came to the gates, it was searched. When weapons were found, the occupants were taken to the police station, where the guns were registered.

Cole Danenberg, AFHW representative, said the police action gave the strikers a lot of encouragement. The next day between 2,000 and 3,000 of them were on the picket lines. The strikes followed an attempted 20 per cent wage cut by the company.

BERLIN TO DEARBORN—:

Probe Ford's Nazi Ties Auto Union Asks U.S.

DETROIT, June 1.—Nazi Germany's fifth column can be traced directly to the huge non-union Ford Motor Co. in nearby Dearborn, the CIO United Automobile Workers intimated today in calling upon the U. S. War and Navy Departments to investigate the firm's policies with respect to policies of national defense.

Pledging full support of 400,000 auto workers covered by CIO contracts to the national defense program, Thomas brought to the government's attention four points in connection with Ford policy:

1. Ford gave employment to Fritz Kuhn, Hitler agent and head of the German-American Bund. The government should determine "whether Ford is still employing and harboring members of Hitler's Fifth Collumn in the United States."

2. Edsel Ford, president of Ford Motors, is a director in the American I. G. Chemical Corp., agent in this country for the German dye and chemical munitions trust—a firm "'dominated by Nazi Germany, and, naturally, one that contributes to the strength of Germany's military forces."

3. Henry Ford has declared through Harry Bennett, his spokesman, that he does not believe the Hitler government is responsible for persecutions in Germany, but rather that the "international bankers" are to blame; and that the elder Ford has accepted a decoration from Adolph Hitler.

4. The Ford Motor Co. has been found in five NLRB decisions to have violated the Wagner Act.

WORKERS PATRIOTIC

"The Ford workers are loyal and patriotic American citizens," Thomas wrote to Sec. of War Woodring and Sec. of the Navy Edison. "I am urging that they should be given the opportunity to work under self-respecting conditions and for a company whose loyalty to our government is not open to question. . . .

"The defense program is being pressed by our government for the stated purpose of guarding our democratic institutions and our national autonomy. Such a purpose cannot be served through an instrument that reeks of labor oppression and of organized violence to elementary civil rights.

"The War and Navy departments will be serving democracy at home, as well as our program of national defense, by insisting that the Ford Motor Co. be brought within the sphere of those corporations which have indicated a decent regard for the rights of labor and an unquestioned loyalty to the principles of American democracy."

Aviation Firm Signs With CIO

New York, June 1—CIO workers at the Fairchild Aviation Corp. in Jamaica, L. I., have won their month long strike with a contract carrying "the highest rates for skilled men in the entire industry," it was announced at headquarters of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here. The union is Local 1217 of the UERMW.

Wage increases of from five to 10 cents per hour, a three cent increase for apprentices, plus improved apprentice training, two weeks paid vacation, eignt paid holidays and generally higher minimum rates featured the contract.

Win Pact With Natl. Biscuit

Dayton, Ohio, June 1.—Workers at the Natl. Biscuit Co. here are protected by a closed shop contract recently won through the CIO United Bakery Workers' Union, Local Industrial Union No. 710, it was announced by Paul W. Fuller, CIO regional director in the area.

The contract includes the five-day, 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime and holidays. Pay base is upped to 45 cents per hour, with three cent an hour increases every three months until the maximum in each classification is reached.

In addition, the contract provides for paid vacations, seniority, grievance adjustment machinery, safety and health measures, etc.

Ask Uncle Sam, 'Don't Buy Fords'

Milwaukee, June 1.—Requests that all purchasers of automobiles and auto equipment for the use of government agencies bar Fords until the company recognizes the United Automobile Workers and stops violating the Wagner Act, were sent to Pres. Roosevelt and Congress today by District 1 of the UAW. The local said:

"Many governmental purchasing departments, recognizing the anti-social and anti-democratic policies of the Ford Co., are courageously refusing to accept bids submitted on Ford automobiles."

From Hitler to Ford

'LET ME ALONE'—meaning, 'keep the union away,—is Henry Ford's plea to the government as defense program gets under way. But, the United Automobile Workers, CIO, starting an organization drive at the Ford Co., pointed out that the Flivver King has been awarded Hitler's highest decoration. The union wants an investigation. Shown above is Ford receiving the decoration from German Consul Karl Kapp of Cleveland on July 30, 1938.

Ford Organizing Drive Under Way; Union Tests Anti-Handbill Law

DETROIT, June 1.—A test case to determine labor's rights to constitutionality-guaranteed free speech in Henry Ford's city of Dearborn was under way today as leaders of the CIO United Automobile Workers claimed that "Ford's grip of fear" over the community has been broken.

Arrested after they had distributed 500 leaflets describing workers' rights under the Wagner Act were Pres. R. J. Thomas, Sec.-Treas. George Addes and Regional Director R. T. Leonard of the UAW-CIO.

Two striking by-products of the free speech and free press case were the friendly, even cordial attitude, of the Ford workers, and the fact that Ford's infamous service department did not attempt to repeat the violence that characterized previous CIO leaflet distribution at the plant gates in other years. More than 400 leaflets were given out by the trio of union officials before they were arrested. With a few rare exceptions, Ford employes accepted the leaflets, many of them rushing forward to request copies.

4,000 WATCH

More than 4,000 workers clustered around Miller Road, where the plant gates are located, and they hung from overpasses and crowded the sidewalks to shout encouragement to the CIO.

SNAPPED 'GRIP OF FEAR'

The fact that the CIO leaders went right to the gates, defying both the illegal Ford ordinance and the always-possible brutality of the service men, has snapped the grip of fear in which the benign-pictured Ford, and Harry Bennett, chief of his storm troopers, have always held Dearborn and the workers in the huge River Rouge plant.

The ordinance which will be challenged by the union lists the entrance to the Ford property as a "congested area" and prohibits leaflet distribution in the area. An early anti-handbill law affecting the entire community was thrown out after the Supreme Court's upholding of the right to distribute leaflets.

FORD MUST ANSWER

Pres. Thomas of the UAW-CIO said that the Ford company, "which is the real government of Dearborn, will have to answer for this in the courts.

"Although we have been arrested and deprived of elementary civil rights, today's incidents, from one aspect, indicate progress in Dearborn. The Ford Service Department, Henry Ford's storm troopers, were nowhere in sight.

"Three years ago these Service Men attacked and injured our handbill distributors. The growing awareness throughout the nation of the terroristic character of Ford's private police was such that the company did not dare let them loose.

"The Ford grip of fear is breaking. Before many months have passed, Ford will be under contract with the CIO."

Distribution of the leaflets in Dearborn constituted one of the first steps in a concentrated effort to organize the Ford property, only remaining non-union holdout in the automobile manufacturing industry. A new Ford Organizing Committee has been set up, and numerous unions throughout the state of Michigan have volunteered the services of organizers to assist the campaign.

Union Wins Rehiring Of Negro

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 1.—Militant support of a Negro union committeeman fired for active interest in behalf of his fellow colored workers, shut down the R. E. Loughney plant here for an hour and a half last week, when employes affiliated with the CIO United Automobile Workers went on strike for his re-instatement.

After the committeeman was discharged by the management on the flimsy excuse of a technical violation of a company rule, members of the union held a special meeting and voted unanimously to strike.

Company officials who had previously refused to reinstate him, called for a meeting with the union committee when they saw the solidarity of the workers, and agreed to put him back to work with pay for all time lost.

Technicians' Union Honors Dr. Carver

New York, May 31.—A specially designed plaque will be presented to Professor George Washington Carver, outstanding Negro scientist, at the fifth annual convention of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, to be held here May 31 through June 2.

Acquit Philly Seaman; Frame-Up Try Fails

PHILADELPHIA, June 1.—Acquital of John Murray, Natl. Maritime Union business agent here, on a charge of allegedly beating up of a Standard Oil Co. employe was described by the NMU "as one of its greatest victories" and as a "vindication of the union's organizing policy and a clear defeat for Standard Oil."

The charge grew out of the NMU strike on Standard tankers some time ago, and involved testimony by two non-union members that Murray had ordered them to get Ramsey, the Standard employe in whose name the charge was made.

Testimony of the two witnesses against Murray collapsed when defense witnesses proved he had never been near any of the places mentioned by the prosecution, and was finally knocked over when the prosecution witness placed Murray's home in an apartment, though he actually lived in a one family frame house.

When the defense called for character witnesses, practically the entire courtroom stepped up to the bar to testify. Even the police who arrested Murray had to testify that the "evidence" against him was phony.

Reprints of excerpts from CIO Pres. John L. Lewis' discussion of labor unity and of war at the Amalgamated Clothing Workers convention, are now available. Address orders and inquiries to the CIO Publicity Department, 1106 Connecticut Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.

Apex Decision Hailed As CIO Victory

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The decision of the U. S. Supreme Court setting aside the $700,000 "anti-trust" verdict against the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers was described by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, as "a notable victory for the CIO," and by Hosiery Workers officials as removing "the threat of the Sherman anti-trust act against labor unions in strike cases."

Commenting on the Court's order, which voided an adverse decision by a lower court, Pressman said:

"The decision of the Supreme Court in the Apex case represents a notable victory for the CIO. In this case the Court held that a sitdown strike which put a complete stop to the production of goods and their delivery in interstate commerce was not subject to the anti-trust laws.

"The Court based its decision on the broad ground that union activity, whether in the form of strikes, agreements, or otherwise, to establish uniform labor standards is not the concern of the anti-trust laws."

CLEARS CONFUSION

The Court's order also "sets at rest the confused thinking of those individuals and corporations who saw in the Sherman anti-trust act a vehicle with which they could wreck labor unions for strike activity," according to Isadore Katz, Hosiery Workers counsel.

"This decision means that the threat of the Sherman Act against labor unions in strike cases has been removed. Were the law otherwise, the right of collective bargaining would be an empty one for the right is meaningless if it cannot be implemented by the strike."

One result of the Court's verdict will establish "once and for all that strikes to organize a particular plant or an industry" in order to improve working conditions are not subject to the anti-trust law," Pressman pointed out.

"According to the Court these laws were passed for the sole purpose of restraining the business and commercial activities which result in a monopoly of the market, the fixing of prices or the discrimination between purchasers of competing products," he said.

The decision, reached by a six to three vote, was also taken to indicate that Tom Girdler's Republic Steel Corp. suit for $7,500,000 against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee "should be dismissed."

Steel Union Asks Dismissal Of Republic Steel Suit

PITTSBURGH, June 1. — Dismissal of the suit filed by Republic Steel Corporation against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and the CIO will be sought, as a result of the U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Apex case, Philip Murray, chairman of the SWOC, said today.

"The decision of the Supreme Court in the Apex case completely upholds the position of the SWOC in the suit which Republic Steel has initiated against the union under the anti-trust laws," Mr. Murray said.

"The Supreme Court in the Apex case specifically determined that a strike on the part of a union to organize the employes of any plant or company or even an entire industry does not come within the anti-trust laws.

VINDICATION

"Under this opinion the SWOC, therefore, anticipates complete vindication and victory in the suit brought by Republic Steel and will seek a dismissal of the suit on the basis of the Supreme Court decision."

Last June, Republic Steel filed suit in the Federal Court in Cleveland charging restraint of trade in the so-called "Little Steel" strikes of 1937. The company alleged it suffered damages to the amount of $2,500,000 and asked triple damages under the anti-trust act.

CIO Sweeps 2nd Poll At Cudahy in Fortnight

KANSAS CITY, Kan., June 1. — Following up an overwhelming CIO vote at Cudahy Packing Co.'s Los Angeles plant last week, more than 800 workers here voted for the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee against 19 for the AFL craft unit.

The CIO vote, which works out at a ratio of 400 to one, was piled up despite strenuous opposition from the AFL splinter group and from the company, which has consistently fought PWOC for two and a half years.

"The Cudahy Packing Co.," according to Art Kampfert, PWOC director, "is the defendant in more unfair labor practice charges before the Labor Board than any other packer. These two elections show clearly that the Cudahy workers will choose the CIO by overwhelming majorities whenever they get a fair chance."

Lewis Hits Anti-Labor Proposals; Hillman On Defense Council

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be in charge of employment policies on the President's Advisory Defense Council, President Roosevelt announced here.

The Advisory Council consists of seven members, whose duty will be to coordinate economic and social activities important to the President's defense program.

Hillman's main task in his new place will be, according to President Roosevelt, to supervise employment policies in plants and mills, to supervise apprentice training, training of CCC enrollees for non-combatant work, cooks for the Army and Navy, ground crews for airplanes, radio and communications men, etc.

ACT OF 1916

The Council was set up under an Act of 1916, the President explained, and though six Cabinet officers will also be members, the chief responsibility will fall on the seven representatives of business and labor.

Other members of the Council include Edward Stettinius, chairman of U. S. Steel; Wm. S. Knudsen, president, General Motors; Ralph Budd, chairman, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad; Chester C. Davis, Federal Reserve Board; Leon Henderson, Securities Exchange Commission head; and Harriet Elliott, dean of women, University of North Carolina.

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Organized labor will take its part in national defense, but insists that "we must maintain national labor standards achieved through democratic institutions" if the defense program is "to be distinguished from the mad armaments race that has plunged Europe into a devil's cauldron of horror," CIO Pres. John L. Lewis told Congress here in a letter sent to Senator David Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

Lewis' letter sharply reminded the Committee that attempts to scuttle labor laws in the Vinson arms bill (HR 9822) just passed by the House "are in direct violation of the policy laid down by President Roosevelt that there shall be no relaxation of labor standards in the national defense program."

WIDE EXEMPTIONS

The Vinson bill as passed by the House contains sections weakening two major labor laws, the Walsh-Healy and Wage and Hour acts, Lewis pointed out, in exempting large groups of workers from the 40 hour week and in authorizing naval contracts without advertising for bids. This provision, he declared, would exempt such contracts entirely from the Walsh-Healey law. The bill, he wrote, "contains provisions which constitute a direct attack" on these two measures.

As Pres. Lewis led the CIO fight to preserve labor's gains in the "emergency" legislation being rapidly ground out by Congress, the Smith amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act, repeatedly described as a "ripper bill" and condemned by two of the five members of the Committee, were scheduled for early consideration in the House. CIO members and friends of labor have joined in urging defeat of the Smith bill and all other attempts to amend the Act at this time, pointing out that all proposals are intended to weaken the right of labor to collective bargaining.

DEFENSE COUNCIL

Acting under a 1916 statute, Pres. Roosevelt appointed a National Defense Council consisting of leaders of business, government and labor to coordinate industry and employment in the defense program. Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and leader of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was appointed in charge of employment for the program.

And in the Senate, a 47 to 20 vote passed the LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Practices bill, originally intended to curb anti-union policies by employers as revealed by the three years' work of the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee. The bill, with two of its most important sections removed and anti-alien and other amendments put in, went to the House for consideration.

Full Text Of Lewis Letter

May 29, 1940

Hon. David I. Walsh
United States Senate
Washington, D. C.
Dear Senator Walsh:

On behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I am writing you with regard to the Vinson Bill, H. R. 9822. Organized labor will be called upon to make its contribution to necessary measures for our national defense, and we are prepared to answer that call.

But if our defense preparations are to be distinguished from the mad armaments race that has plunged Europe into a devil's cauldron of horrors, then we must maintain national labor standards achieved through democratic institutions. Two of the most important of such labor standards are the Public Contracts Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The Vinson Bill contains provisions which constitute a direct attack upon both of these laws. Section 2 of this bill, by authorizating the letting of naval contracts without advertising for bids, excepts such contracts from the Public Contracts Act. Section 6 of this bill, while purporting to safeguard the 40 hour week, is limited to specified groups of workers.

It omits workers paid on a piece rate basis, salaried employes and clerical staffs, all of whom are now protected by both the Public Contracts Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act. Ironically, the same section grants overtime pay to professional and supervisory employes, who have not in normal times received such protection.

Both these sections of the Vinson Bill are in direct violation of the policy laid down by President Roosevelt that there shall be no relaxation of labor standards in the prosecution of the national defense program. I urge that these sections be amended to protect and maintain the labor standards of the Public Contracts Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act.

LaFollette Bill Gets Drastic Amendments

Washington, June 1.—A much-amended LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices bill, originally designed to curb use of industrial spies, strikebreakers, private arsenals, company guards and other anti-union techniques was passed by a 47 to 20 vote in the Senate here, and the bill forwarded for House consideration.

The original bill was based on the four years of exhaustive study of anti-union practices by the LaFollette Senate Civil Liberties Committee, whose revelations of employer espionage, use of thugs, arms, tear gas, etc., against unions shocked the nation.

AMENDMENTS

As amended and passed by the Senate the bill excludes a section to withhold government contracts from employers using such anti-union weapons, which would have deprived violators of Federal government orders. The amended bill also threw out a section forbidding employers to investigate "political and economic" beliefs of workers

An amendment proposed by Senator Reynolds of North Carolina provides a fine of $10,000 for employers employing Communists or members of Nazi organizations. These two groups were not defined in the bill. Another amendment, also by Sen. Reynolds, would not allow an employer to hire more than 10 per cent alien labor. This was modified on request of Senator Adams of Colorado to exclude Mexicans in the suga beet fields.

WIN ELECTIONS

CIO WINS

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 1.—Sole bargaining rights for 93 warehousemen employed at the Archbilt Corrugated Products Co. here were won by Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Employes, CIO, as the result of an election conducted recently by the Labor Board.

Vol. III June 3, 1940 No. 23

Maintaining American Standards

Calling for the protection of American labor standards by amendment of the Vinson bill, President John L. Lewis of the CIO declared in a letter to Chairman David I. Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee:

"If our defense preparations are to be distinguished from the mad armaments race that has plunged Europe into a devil's cauldron of horrors, then we must maintain national labor standards achieved through democratic institutions."

Specifically the CIO calls for amendment of this bill so that the protection of labor standards provided by the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act and the Fair Labor Standards (Wage-Hour) Acts may apply.

Labor has fought long and hard to win the degree of protection of living and working standards and the other rights embodied in these bills, in the Wagner Act and in other social legislation.

These laws and these standards achieved through the processes of American democracy, are part and parcel of the American way of living which labor is eager to defend from foreign attack.

But at the same time labor will be alert to defend American standards and American liberties from selfish interests within the country, who may seek to grind down and enslave the workers under cover of war hysteria.

In answering the call for national defense, organized labor includes as worthy of defense the living standards, the liberties and the democratic procedures which we associate with the phrase, "this country and its institutions."

The Apex Decision

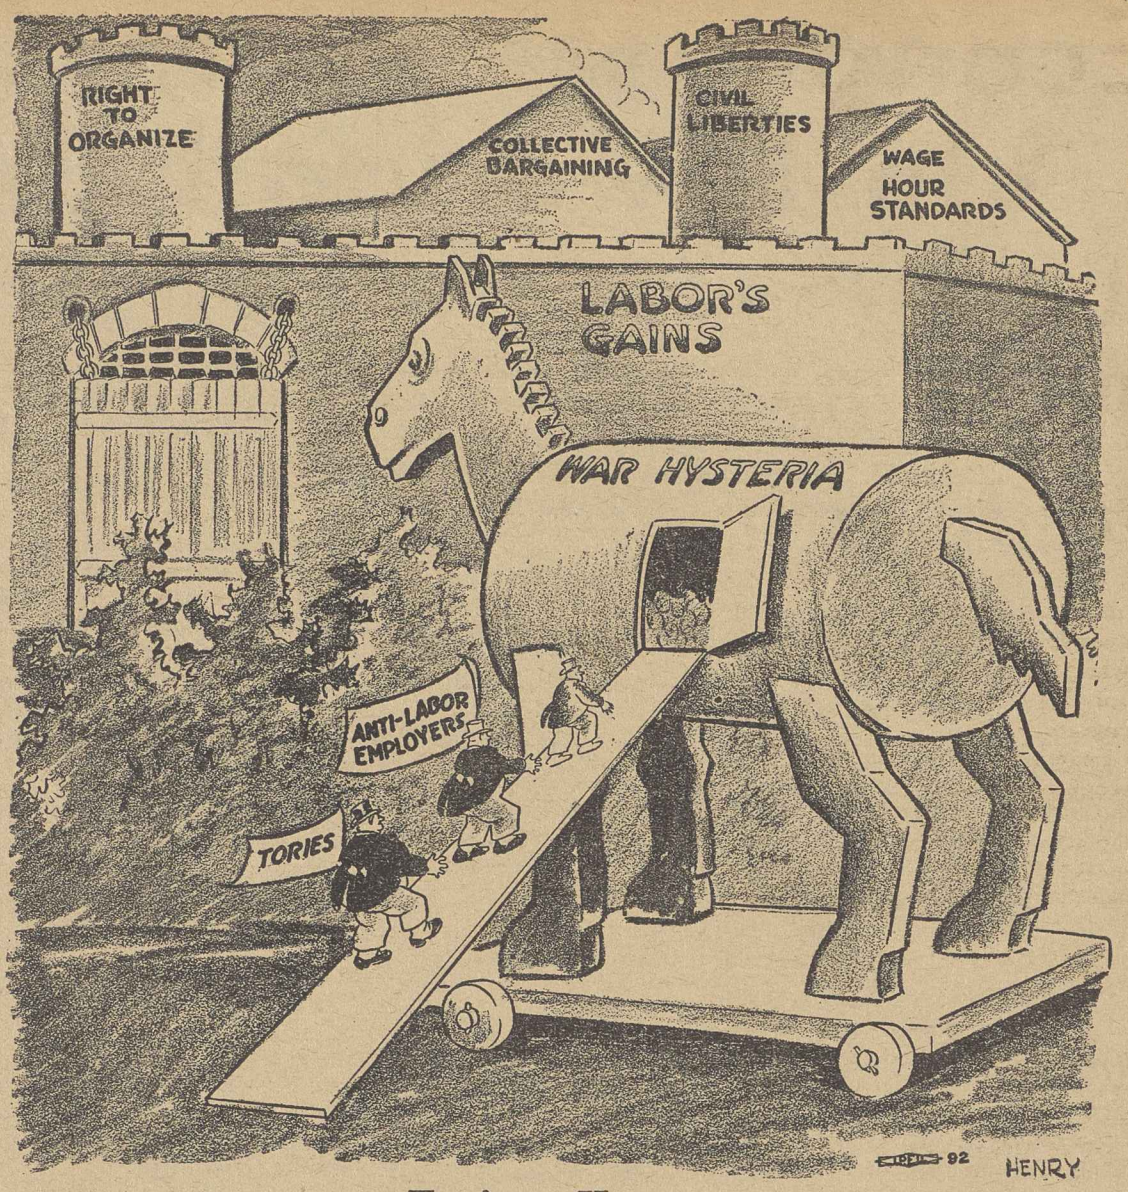
The anti-trust laws, as the very name applies, were passed to restrain business monopoly, when price-fixing and other such practices run counter to the public interest.

They were never intended as a weapon against strikes and other union organizing activities, though they have been distorted for this purpose in some recent court decisions.

The ruling of the United States Supreme Court in the Apex case is a victory for the CIO, not only because it frees a CIO union from an unjust fine, but because it also establishes once and for all that union activity to bring about uniform labor conditions is not subject to the anti-trust laws.

It should also knock out the $7,500,000 suit which Reyublic Steel has brought against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee under the anti-trust laws.

No Time for Hysterics



The warning of Senator George W. Norris against the "hysteria that leads to war" comes from one who can speak with authority. A sterling patriot, he was himself the target of this type of hysteria in the last war.

The Senator warned that present hysterics about alleged "fifth column" activities may cause "one half of loyal America to suspect the other half and in the end lead to war."

It may whip up, he said, "an uncontrollable mob spirit capable of turning this country into another Germany."

Labor has most to lose from this war hysteria, as it has most to lose from war itself.

Patriotism calls for "calm dispassionate thinking" at a time like this, as John L. Lewis puts it. Scaremongering and hysteria lead to the destruction of labor's rights and the people's liberties. They demoralize, not strengthen the nation, in this time of world crisis.

Trojan Horse

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

C.O Growth

IN FACE of all the present attempts of scaremongers and warmongers to create an anti-labor hysteria, the CIO is growing steadily and substantially. The workers are voting for it in increasing numbers. They feel all the greater need, in times like these, for the most modern, clean and effective type of union protection.

Latest Labor Board figures, for a six-week period, show the CIO winning 72 elections, as against 43 won by the AFL and but a handful by independent unions.

More significantly, CIO victories were in the bigger plants and those of the AFL mostly in small shops. While the CIO was nearly two to one ahead of the AFL in number of plants won, about 15 times as many workers' votes were cast for the CIO as for the AFL.

Coming into CIO headquarters are a stream of reports which rate little space in the daily papers. No one of them may be a world-shaking event by itself. But together they reflect a trend of great significance. Here are a few of them, picked at random from the last few issues of THE CIO NEWS:

Following its victories at Armour's, the CIO Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee is proceeding to mop up the rest of the Big Four packers.

Latest elections won: A thumping victory at Cudahy's big Los Angeles plant; and at Cudahy's, Kansas City, Kan., 813 votes for the CIO to 19 for the AFL.

Remember the Maytag strike at Newton, Iowa? It lasted more than three months and attracted national attention when troops were sent in. Strike leaders were prosecuted.

Today's sequel: The CIO union (United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers), has won an agreement providing wage protection, union seniority and grievance handling conditions, and preferential hiring for union members.

Echo of another famous strike (this time an AFL one) is the recent decision of the AFL federal union at Remington-Rand, Tonawanda, N. Y., to switch over to the CIO.

The AFL radio local in New York City also decided in favor of one strong union for the industry by joining the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

These are but two instances of the way the UE (as the UERMW is popularly called), has been quietly taking its AFL craft rivals to the cleaners for some time.

Of 47 elections in the past two years, the UE won 38, with 21,929 workers voting CIO. In the nine lost, only 4,129 workers voted for the AFL.

Equally successful against so-called "independent," the UE has just won the General Electric plant at Philadelphia, by 784 to 625 for an "independent" union.

This brings to 14 the number of General Electric plants in which the CIO union is now sole bargaining agency. Its GE contract covers 40,000 workers.

Anyone recall hearing of a big-mouthed little man who was always slaying the CIO (he thought)? Clare Hoffman was the same. The CIO has just won a contract with Blood Bros. Machine Co., right in Hoffman's home town of Allegan, Mich. The workers get substantial wage increases, seniority rights and other benefits. They want to know what is so terrible about that.

A nice big duck's egg was awarded the AFL in the election at the Meyer & Stark Manufacturing Co. in Detroit. The AFL union had had a closed shop contract there for three years, with lousy conditions. When the CIO Fur & Leather Workers' Union went to bat, the score was CIO, 102; AFL, 0.

As far away as Hawaii, the CIO Quarry Workers' Union has just won an election, 131 to 18, at the Ready-Mix Concrete Co., Honolulu.

Down south at Franklin, Va., at the Camp Manufacturing Co. lumber mill, it is 317 to 89 for the CIO.

The UE wins again, this time at Westinghouse. The company's lamp works here went more than two to one for the CIO union. This makes the 17th Westinghouse plant that has gone CIO.

Sequel to the big General Motors election. The GM plant at Hyattsville, wasn't on the ballot then. So it has just had an election by its lonesome. The vote was 976 to 318 in favor of the CIO—making the 53rd GM plant to go CIO.

In nearly every other industry as well, the trend is away from the AFL to the modern, clean industrial unionism of the CIO. At Gustine, Calif., employes of the Bald Eagle Magnesite Mine decided two years in the AFL was more than enough. They voted by five to one to switch to the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

* * *

The above are just a few instances that have occurred in the past few weeks, picked at random from the news, with no attempt at completeness. Straws, if you like, which show the way the wind is blowing.

Economists Warn Of Danger In Lowering Labor Standards

Agree Production Won't Be Lifted By Longer Hours

By Federated Press

NEW YORK, June 1.—In the face of a powerful drive by newspapers and employers to wipe out labor legislation in the "war emergency," leading economists and industrial engineers cooly warn that such a step would endanger the defense program.

Federated Press telegraphed this question to a score of recognized experts: "In your opinion would the productive efficiency of American labor be increased or decreased by lowering standards now protected by wage-hour law and national labor relations act?"

That question has been dodged by the daily press, which has seized upon the defense program as an excuse for redoubling efforts to lengthen hours, slash wages and hogtie labor. But the experts haven't succumbed to the jitters.

Out of 11 who replied, only one favored modification of the Wagner act. Three saw a possible gain in extension of hours but not one advocated lower wages. Most significant, six authorities declared that weakening of labor laws would be harmful to the nation.

'DISASTROUS'

"To wipe out this legislation or even to stop its effectiveness through amendment might prove disastrous," said Morris Llewellyn Cooke, consulting engineer, of Philadelphia. "A free people can win, but not by dictators."

"There is a close and positive connection betwen man-hour efficiency and high wage and work standards," said Dr. Robert A. Brady, California economist. "The existing minima are perilously low. Under no circumstances should they be relaxed—rather, they should be expanded and strengthened."

"The wage-hour law and national labor relations act have increased productive efficiency," declared Dr. Walter Rautenstrauch of Columbia University. "Lowering standards would decrease efficiency and undermine the purchasing power needed to operate the national plant."

Dean Wayne L. Morse of the University of Oregon law school, Pacific coast maritime arbitrator, said efficiency would "not be increased" by lower standards.

PROTECT LABOR LAWS

Prof. Colston E. Warne of Amherst College commented: "America should be on guard lest excuse of emergency be employed to lower living and work standards. For maintenance of productive efficiency it is essential that this protective legislation be continued, unweakened."

Prof. Walton Hamilton of Yale University law school, co-author of "The Control of Wages" and other authoritative studies, pointed out: "Labor protection, like civil rights, is an essential aspect of the American standard of life. A defense program which began by giving up the very heritage it is intended to preserve would be sheer surrender."

Even among the qualified answers there was little to comfort those who are utilizing the defense program for a drive against labor. Thus Harlow S. Person. New York consultant in business economics and management, said there are "substantial ways of increasing output without lowering standards through a high degree of cooperation between labor and management."

BARUCH AGREES

Bernard M. Baruch, who headed the War Industries Board in the last war, said: "I do not think the present program calls for any change in existing laws. I am averse to having fear of war or war itself used as an excuse to violate labor's just deserts."

H. A. Millis, former president of the American Economic Assn., foresaw a "short run" gain in production with a longer work week but reduced efficiency if hours went beyond 48. The Wagner act, he said, "should not be repealed or relaxed." Prof. A. D. H. Kaplan of the University of Denver disagreed, arguing that "denial of managerial control under labor relations act is a deterrent to private enterprise expansion." The floor for hourly wages should be retained, said Kaplan, although hours might well be lengthened.

Professor Calvin B. Hoover of the graduate school of arts and sciences, Duke University, said that "lowering standards . . . would probably lower the per hour productivity of labor" but "might increase total productivity." He emphasized, however, that "so long as we have millions of unemployed, only in the most commanding emergency cases should labor standards be lowered."

Hold Label Convention

Dover, N. J., June 1.—Delegates from the Northern New Jersey district of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers held a Union Label convention here recently at the hosiery union headquarters. William Neill, Paterson Branch 7, was unanimously elected chairman.

Plans were made to promote the Union Label campaign throughout the state. The next convention will be held June 8 at the Boonton Branch union office at 3 p. m. All N. J. branches are invited to take part.

Newark—(FP)—Hearings have ended here on a proposed 35c hourly minimum for women and children in light industry throughout New Jersey.

No Shortage Of Skilled Workers Seen

Washington, June 1.—There is no real shortage of skilled workers in America today, Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, revealed that she had told President Roosevelt in discussing the subject.

The Federal job service, she said, had more than 6,000,000 unemployed workers on its rolls, among whom were workers of all skills and occupations.

"I cannot think of any process in the whole defense program for which there are no men available," she declared in a press conference here.

BACKS CIO CLAIMS

The CIO has consistently pointed out that talk of a "shortage" of workers is false, designed to persuade the nation that "it does not have to provide for the unemployed."

"Those who want to wipe out WPA, public works and housing use the propaganda of a false shortage of labor to try to convince the country that no legislation and appropriation for the unemployed are needed," the CIO pointed out in its recent leaflet, "Shortage of Labor?—Don't Be Fooled."

START INSPECTIONS

New York (FP)—The Wage-Hour administration will soon start a system of "systematic inspection," Administrator Philip B. Fleming said at a dinner here. Budgetary limitations and shortage of skilled personnel were the reasons given by Fleming for not undertaking the project earlier.

Correction

THE CIO NEWS is informed that last week's story on the election at Consolidated Film Industries in N. Y. was in error in not mentioning three departments in the company that are still signed up with the AFL. THE CIO NEWS story gave the impression that all 700 employes had voted for the CIO union, whereas no election was conducted in the three AFL departments.

Green and Baker Flay Talk of 48-Hour Week

Camden, N. J., June 1.—In an open letter to Secretary of the Navy Edison, President John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, took issue with proposals for a 48-hour week in the nation's shipyards.

"We are keenly aware of the almost universal desire to perfect as rapidly as possible the defenses of the United States," Green wrote, "and we have no intention of impeding such a program.

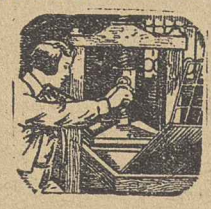
"At the same time we believe that the working conditions and standards that have been won by the organized shipyard workers over the course of the past six years should not be sacrificed thoughtlessly and to no constructive purpose."

Before any man is put on a 48-hour week, Green continued, "it must be shown that there are no unemployed mechanics of equal ability who could be put to work in the shipyards. This is elementary common sense in view of the army of eleven and one half million unemployed in this country at the present time."

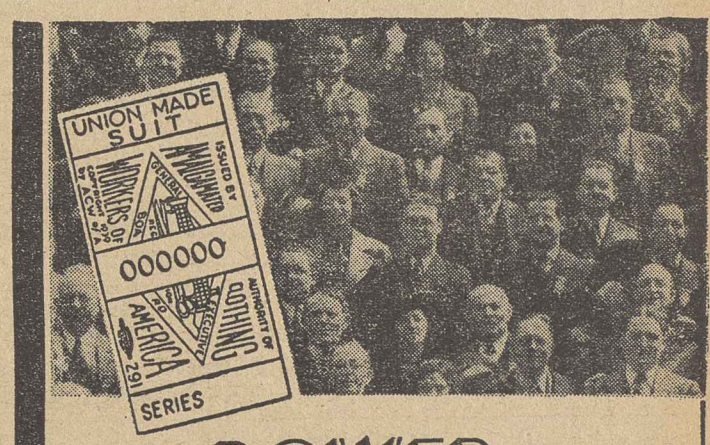
The union leader urged adoption of coordinated planning of shipyard work on a national scale in order to avoid layoffs in one section while work is proceeding at rush pace in others.

Washington, June 1.—On the basis of an inquiry conducted in several of the important naval locations, President Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers, CIO, protested to the Secretary of the Navy against suggested lengthening of the work week in the shore establishments of the Navy.

In a letter to the Secretary, Baker stated that the preliminary results of the inquiry indicated that there were many skilled men in the construction and metal trades industries still available who, upon a very brief period of breaking in, could perform satisfactory work in the Navy Yards.



ARMY OF JOBLESS



"With the great mass of unemployed people still in the United States," Baker went on, "and with the tremendous number of those unemployed who have had competence at a trade that can be used in the Navy establishments, we feel it would be highly questionable public policy suddenly and recklessly to expand the hours of labor without taking every necessary step toward employing additional men instead."

Issues Of The Day — —

And What CIO Leaders Think About Them

The war emergency is bringing grave new problems to the organized workers of the nation. National defense, fifth columns, protection of labor and civil rights, war hysteria—all these are very much on the public mind. Printed here are excerpts from the speeches made by three CIO vice-presidents to the recent convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Hillman, head of the ACWA, has just been appointed to the U. S. Advisory Defense Council. Robinson is head of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and Thomas is president of the United Automobile Workers, now conducting an organization drive at Ford.

Defense — Program Must Not Be a Cloak For Anti-Labor Drive—Hillman

Of course, you appreciate that the Walsh-Healey Act benefits accruing to labor are very, very important from the viewpoint of the interest of the labor movement.

However, I should ilke to draw the attention of the delegates to something that they will have to watch for and be ready to meet in the months to come. That is the organization of the same elements who opposed the New Deal in the past, the anti-labor groups, anti-New Deal groups. They are now gathering their forces to defeat the reform legislation under the pretense of the great emergency facing the nation because of what is going on in Europe.

Now, we here, and I am sure labor everywhere, will make our voice heard effectively. Our position is that we yield to no one in our support of a proper program for national defense. We want the country to be prepared to meet any kind of an eventuality, but we will oppose these elements who, under the mask of national defense, will try to emasculate and destroy progressive legislation.

In years past we have already heard that the Wages and Hours law interferes with national defense. Think of it, millions of workers unemployed, looking for an opportunity for employment — and there are some who dare raise their voices to abolish the law which sets a ceiling for hours, because it might interfere with production.

We know the motives of these gentlemen.

LABOR'S POSITION

Now, it is important for labor to make its position clear. We will do our share, and more than others who raise their voices at this time, to cooperate with the program for national defense. But we will oppose these vicious moves.

Fortunately for the country in this great crisis, there are 8,000,000 organized workers and they have power. They have the power to meet the enemies of labor. Yes, I say, the enemies of the nation.

Part of national defense, probably the major part of our national defense, is a vital, a well-protected, a contented population in our country. And they who are trying to undermine the welfare of labor are no friends of national defense . . .

NATION WANTS PEACE

I am sure that it is the wish of every member of our organization that we be permitted to remain at peace and make our contribution as a nation at peace.

But we also express our determination to do everything within our power to support the President in a program of defense that will not permit surprises by those gangster leaders.

I hope that there will be none among us or in the country who will permit themselves to be lulled into a false sense of security, which unfortunately democratic countries abroad allowed themselves to do.

We cannot afford to be niggardly and count pennies or dollars. The first thing today is to defend ourselves and put ourselves in a position where we will not even be challenged because they know how well we are prepared.

I take this opportunity to say these things because we as well as others have held what we believed to be true, that engaging in the ways of peace is enough to keep ourselves out of war. Today we know better.

I believe that we want this message from this convention to Congress without any partisanship. This organization is going to support a proper, adequate national defense program. But we will not permit ourselves to be engaged in partisanship.

Fifth Column — Robinson Urges: Keep An Eye On Democracy's Tory Foes

Today the world finds itself in a very troubled condition. We find that the working men of one nation are pitted against the working men of another nation, fighting for they know not what, fighting for people who want to make themselves dictators over the various nations of the world, who do not think in terms of human suffering and who do not care whether the working class of the world have any benefits or rights.

At this time it gives us cause for grave concern. We must consider the situation as it exists in Europe today and wonder how it is going to affect our great nation on this continent. We must realize that if those things have happened in other countries, they can happen here. We are going through a period now when the rights of the working people of America are in danger, in serious danger.

We feel that the civil rights of the American people are at stake today, more than they have ever been in the history of this great nation. We know that the situation in Europe, the war situation, is going to give added zest to those reactionaries in this country to try to deprive us of our civil rights and our liberties.

We are going to hear much in the coming months, yes, in the coming years, of a fifth column. It is a new term that is being used extensively in Europe. With it go serious implications.

Just the other day in the city of Washington, that famous or should we say, infamous, Congressman Dies of Texas, stood in the House of Representatives and said that the first signs of the entrance of the fifth column in America would be strikes in the various industries which produce wartime materials.

This is the first indication of what we face, we especially who work in the wartime industries. We know that if this type of propaganda is carried on throughout the length and breadth of America, that the rights of organized labor are going to be throttled and organized labor will not be able to function effectively.

I say that there has been a fifth column working in America for the past ten or twelve years. That fifth column is opposed to our democratic institutions, and is made up of the group that believes that they can keep American people in the rolls of the unemployed, that they can use machines to throw people out of work and make more profits for themselves.

WHO THEY ARE

We know that these people are not interested in the welfare and democracy that we hold so dear in America today. We feel that those people who want to perpetuate unemployment, who seek to deprive labor of its rights such as we enjoy under the Wage and Hour Administration, under the National Labor Relations Board—those rights that are inherent in the Constitution of this country, that those people who wish to deprive us of those rights comprise the fifth column who are threatening the democracy in America.

Let us not be fooled by the radios that blat and newspapers that wheeze about the threat of a foreign invasion, when the same people believe in keeping us unemployed in this country and depriving us of our rights as American citizens. Let us not be fooled by that type of propaganda.

We in America realize that there is only one way for the American working people to be able to realize the democracy that was established by the founding fathers of this great nation, and that is through our democratic trade unions, and especially through the trade unions as represented in the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The Ford Myth — Auto Union Head Explodes Some Fancy Fairy Tales

I can tell you this with assurance: that before another 12 months have passed, Henry Ford will be organized, and under contract with the CIO.

We consider it an obligation not only to the auto workers, but to American democracy and fair play to bring the Ford Motor Company within the sphere of Americanized corporations.

I could tell you of the brutality with which the Ford Motor Company has sought to deprive its workers of the right to organize. I could tell you of scores of beatings by Ford Service Department thugs; of intimidation, ranging all the way from discharge to incitation to murder; and, as is charged in one damage suit in Dallas, Texas, I could tell you of actual murder by the service department of the Ford Motor Company.

HONORED BY HITLER

The Ford myth is wearing out. People no longer think of Henry Ford as a pioneer who was the first to pay $5 a day wage. Among workingmen and all thinking men, the name of Ford no longer means enlightenment. It means repression and dictatorship. It means a man who on the one hand defies the laws of the United States and, on the other hand, wears a decoration from Adolph Hitler. It means a man who poses as a lover of the simple life, but whose employment agents do not hesitate to beat the brains out of men who desire only the simple necessities of bread and jobs as free Americans.

Ford high-wage stories are a complete myth. Ford pays at least 10 cents an hour less than General Motors and Chrysler: and 7 cents less than the 92 cents an hour which is the average for all American plants.

FORD WAGES

The average wage for all Ford workers, including the highly skilled, is between 83 cents and 85 cents an hour. Ford pays 85 cents an hour at top, and the average in the industry, according to the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, is 92 cents. For skilled men, Ford pays $2 a day less than other companies.

Those are the facts on Ford. They mark him as the most backward employer in the automobile industry.

The Ford Motor Company is tough. It is hardboiled when it comes to dealing with its employes and with organized labor. We have had plenty of proof of that. But others, more powerful than Ford, have been brought to heel by the CIO. The unions we have built in auto, in steel, in textile and the other industries have met obstacles similar to those Ford has erected. They have overcome those obstacles. Ford's dictatorship will fall in the same way.

We in the auto industry know what Ford is waiting for. We know that he has defied the Wagner Act at every turn; that he has used every legal subterfuge to support his illegal violence and intimidation. But the Labor Board will soon catch up with him. And meanwhile we shall press our organization work.

WPA Bill Moves To Senate

Washington, June 1. — The 1940-41 WPA bill moved to the Senate this week, with liberal Sen. Murray of Montana preparing to offer amendments guaranteeing three million jobs for unemployed workers.

The Murray amendment, calling for a half-billion dollar increase over the $975,000,000 bill passed in the House of Representatives, aims to give work to a million people now eking out a bare existence on relief or facing complete starvation.

The WPA appropriation, as approved by the House, allots $975,000,000 for an eight-month period. This will provide for an estimated 1,950,000 jobs—slightly less than at present.

Ralph Hetzel, CIO unemployment director, is expected to testify before the Senate Appropriations Committee to present the CIO viewpoint, which supports Sen. Murray's position.

CIO Leaders At Social Work Parley

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 1 —Highlights of current political and social issues and problems relating to organization of social workers into trade unions were taken up at the National Conference of Social Work which opened here May 26.

The Joint Committee of Trade Unions in Social Work, representing two CIO unions—the State, County and Municipal Workers and the United Office & Professional Workers, an associate group of the conference, presented a group of featured CIO speakers on the union program.

Ralph Hetzel, unemployment director for the CIO, spoke at a round table discussion on the needs of the people in 1940 and how these needs are to be met, at the May 27th session, and William Spahn, regional representative of the SCMW spoke on organizational problems of the union.

Publishers' Ears Burnt By Strike Story

Mineral Wells, Tex., June 1.—Members of the Southern Newspaper Pubishers Assn., assembling in this resort town for their annual convention, were given an unexpected greeting.

Striking American Newspaper Guild members on the Monroe, La. News-Star and World, were on the scene with a sound truck, to the considerable embarassment of Publisher John D. Ewing.

Two of the strikers drove the sound truck, which saw service in the Chicago Hearst strike, drove the 400 miles from Monroe to Mineral Wells to broadcast the story of low pay and repeated violations of the Wagner and Wage-Hour Acts.

For more than an hour the sound barrage was concentrated on the two big hotels of the town while publishers and their wives crowded the wide front porches to hear the broadcast.

Nudism's Swell, But Wagner Act Not So Hot, According To Promoters Of New Outfit

WASHINGTON, June 1.—There are two laws on the U. S. statute books that Mr. Elton Raymond Shaw, M. A., head of the Shaw Publishing Co., promoter of nudism, and for nine years an employe of the Chamber of Commerce, doesn't like. One of them is the Comstock law, that forbids transportation of obscene literature. The other is the Wagner Act, that upholds the right to collective bargaining.

Mr. Elton Raymond Shaw is out to repeal them both, he told your reporter in a personal interview, and there are committees for that very purpose sharing the same quarters with the Shaw Publishing Co. The latter, apparently, exists chiefly to publish Mr. Shaw's books, which come out under such titles as "The Body Taboo, Its Origin, Effect and Modern Denial," "The Love Affairs of Washington and Lincoln," etc.

The "Committee for Repeal of Natl. Labor Relations Act" is Mr. Shaw's most serious undertaking at the moment, he revealed, in describing how it had been set up two or three months ago to "give business the same kind of deal that labor's been getting" and to get rid of an Act that has been "rotten from the very beginning, rotten all through, dominated by the CIO and Harry Bridges, who names its officers"—as he described it.

WORKING ON THE HILL

The Committee, Mr. Shaw revealed, is even now working very hard on Capitol Hill to influence members of Congress to vote for total repeal, or failing that, to vote for the Smith amendments when they come up. The Smith amendments, Mr. Shaw realistically explained, would do the same job on the Wagner Act that total repeal would do, if passed.

Like all people, the officers of the Committee for Repeal of Natl. Labor Relations Act have to have money for their work, and Mr. Shaw and his four fellow officers don't hesitate to ask for funds from interested businessmen. Two of the three pieces of literature the Committee has so far put out ask for money. The third, just run off the press, is a card for the name and address of people anxious to see the Act repealed.

THE FLOWER BEDS

Talking to your reporter, Mr. Shaw gave out his opinion that the "greatest American tragedy" was the upholding by the U. S. Supreme Court of the right to picket in a recent decision. "That's the end of American liberty," he declared.

"Why, I remember when I worked in Toledo how hundreds of pickets paraded in front of a plant for weeks at a time. The plant had beautiful flower beds, lawns and so on in front of it. You know what those strikers did? They trampled down every single flower and every blade of grass in front of that plant, and the employer was helpless. Every single flower and blade of grass."

Nudism, according to the foreword in one of Mr. Shaw's books, is regarded by him "as possibly the greatest movement for social progress in many centuries."

And repeal of the Wagner Act would be the greatest move for putting business back on its feet in a generation, Mr. Shaw told your reporter.

Murray Speaks At Inter-Faith Conference

Washington, June 1.—An inter-faith conference on unemployment sponsored by the Federal Council of Churches, the National Catholic Welfare Conference and committees of the American Rabbis and Rabbinical Assembly of America, will be held here June 4-6.

Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, will speak at the June 6th session on "Labor's Interest in Democratic Planning."

Gotham Cab Drivers End Strike, Rap Firms

NEW YORK, June 1. — Six thousand CIO taxi drivers, members of the Transport Workers Union who struck five weeks against starvation conditions in the Parmelee and Terminal companies here have gone back to work, "In consideration of assurances that definite measures to remedy the miserable working conditions in the taxicab industry will be initiated very shortly by the city administration," it was announced by TWU officials here.

The strike was called when the companies refused to negotiate on demands for a 2.5 per cent increase in commissions and a 10 per cent pay boost for maintenance men. The companies refused flatly to discuss the taxi drivers' problems, and turned down an appeal by Mayor LaGuardia to arbitrate the dispute.

"This leaves them in a position of maintaining a strike status and refusing to settle the strike according to law, after an election had been held by the State Labor Relations Board and the results of that election certified," LaGuardia said.

The mayor also pointed out that the two companies had spent $40,000 a year ago in bribing a New York state assemblyman to block taxi reform bills in Albany. Taxi drivers in the two firms average from $12 to $18 a week.

Strikers Put Out Fire; Rewarded by Evictions!

SOMERS, Conn., June 1.—Fair-minded citizens of this little little northern Connecticut industrial community were up in arms today at the latest move in a campaign of terror and intimidation being waged by the Somersville Manufacturing company against Local 57 of the Textile Workers' Union of America.

For more than two years the labor-hating officers of the company have tried by every means at their disposal to smash the union and get rid of its most active members.

Last fall the company announced it was going to close its spinning department. With but one exception, every man employed in the department was an officer in the union. The 250 members of the union struck immediately. There was violence when the company brought in strikebreakers.

STRIKERS AIDED FIREMEN

In the midst of the strike, a fire broke out in the plant. Scores of union men rushed into the plant from the picket line to help extinguish the flames. The town fire chief later said that without their help the damage undoubtedly would have been serious.

The company's answer to this display of loyalty was eviction of several strikers from their homes. After 13 weeks on the picket line, the union members voted to return to work with the understanding that their grievances would be submitted to arbitration. The company refused to arbitrate and closed the spinning department permanently, throwing about 100 men out of work, including the union's shop officers.

The union recently filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board, charging the company with intimidation and discrimination and asking the return of the discharged workers with full back pay.

The company, emulating the infamous Mohawk valley formula, enlisted the aid of a "volunteer citizens' committee" from the town to circulate a petition asking the NLRB to consider the company's "precarious" financial position before taking up the matter of reinstatement and back pay.

Union Defies Threats

Salamanca, N. Y., June 1—Refusal of Salamanca businessmen to let the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers, CIO, hire a hall for meeting here is not stopping the union's drive to organize the town's one industry, a tannery that pays around $12 a week.

Halls and even churches were denied to the union—one church, which they succeeded in hiring, withdrew the contract 24 hours before the meeting.

The union finally got a small back room in a secondhand clothing store owned by a former member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who stood up to the threats of the local tycoons.

Three cops and 10 tough-looking loungers, including a deputy sheriff, counted the workers as they went in, took seats in back of the room when the meeting started. Despite this intimidation, the meeting was well attended and scores of workers heard the CIO message.

Tennessee CIO Hits Tory Drive On Labor

By CARL THOMPSON

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 1.—The constitutional convention of the Tennessee CIO Industrial Union Council at a two-day meeting held here last week blasted at 'industrial fifth columnists' who are trying to take advantage of the war hysteria to destroy gains won by labor, set as its chief aim the organizing of unorganized workers of Tennessee, and elected William Turnblazer, president of District 19, United Mine Workers, as president of the Council.

Formation of the Tennessee Council, brings the list of CIO state bodies up to 31.

Declaring that labor "wants no war or any part of it," speakers at the convention stressed the point that labor's job is to protect American democratic principles and to see that labor has a loud voice in determining defense policies.

SMETHURST SPEAKS

"The record shows that the patriotism of workers cannot be questioned," Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO President John L. Lewis, told the delegates. "The fifth columnists that worry me are the Henry Fords, the Tom Girdlers, Douglas Aircraft and other employers who flagrantly flaunt the laws of America and refuse to be governed by such laws as the Wagner Act.

"These are the ones to watch, for they will be trying to take advantage of the hysteria arising from the conflagration in Europe to deny labor's rights."

ASSAIL POLL TAX

The poll tax was bitterly condemned as a restriction on basic American principles of freedom of the ballot, and its abolition in Tennessee and other Southern states where it is imposed as a prerequisite for voting was urged.

The Council also adopted a resolution on unemployment, asking President Roosevelt to convene a conference of business, labor, farm and government leaders to devise a program to deal with this problem.

Taking up the serious situation faced by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers at Ducktown, Tenn., where a number of union members have been indicted on charges of blasting TVA power lines by unidentified persons, a resolution was passed declaring that FBI agents used strongarm methods in an unjustified attempt to pin the charges on union men, and asking for financial aid in fighting the case.

CIO Leader Gets Appointment

Lynn, Mass., June 1.—In response to the wishes of organized and unorganized food workers John G. Poulos has been appointed to the Hotel & Restaurant Wage Board, the North Shore CIO Industrial Union Council announced this week. Poulos is a vice-president of the Council.

An organizing drive in the hotel and restaurant industry throughout the state is being planned with the aid of the State CIO Council and the CIO regional office. With the exception of the bartenders in Boston, there is very little organization in the industry, according to Eugene R. Lurchin, chairman of the organizing committee.

Avoid War, Michigan CIO Urges Nation

BAY CITY, Mich., June 1. — The 400 delegates to the Michigan State Industrial Union convention representing 400,000 CIO members in the state, meeting here last week, served notice to the nation that:

1. America shall not engage in any foreign war if they can prevent it.

2. There shall be no breakdown of labor standards or weakening of labor legislation in the execution of the arms program.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO national director of organization, in his speech to the convention, told the delegates that the CIO believed in adequate national defense and would support the representatives of government in preparing our country to resist aggressor nations, but that it called upon President Roosevelt to give labor proper recognition on all boards involving labor.

"Labor is loyal to our governmental institutions," he declared, "and as in the past will live and die if necessary for the preservation of the ideals of democracy and liberty."

CIO IS AMERICAN

He called upon the delegates to keep all 'isms' and factions out of their deliberations and to think only of the interests of the union. "The CIO is an American institution, born out of American conditions by and for American working men and women," he said, "and accepts no alien ideology. It stands for the rights of all, regardless of race, creed or nationality."

Walter Smethurst, executive assistant to CIO President John L. Lewis, in his speech before the convention, denied that a shortage of labor was threatening defense.

He also discussed the breach with the American Federation of Labor, declaring that "to those who feel that merging the four million in the AFL with the four and a half million in the CIO would magnify power and influence, I want to say that the power and influence of the CIO today is far greater alone than would be the combined power under AFL leadership."

DESCRIBES FORD DRIVE

President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers told the delegates that renewal of the Ford organizing drive was the major aim now of the UAW and had the backing of the national CIO. George F. Addes, UAW Secretary-Treasurer, and Eli Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan League, also addressed the convention.

Any war-mongers or war profiteers who might have hoped recent events in Europe had provoked a more warlike spirit among the workers of Michigan, making them more ready to die for the foreign investments of American financiers, were sadly disappointed.

Every statement in opposition to our participation in the war, whether in resolutions or from the speakers, brought a resounding cheer. The demand of the CIO that labor standards be protected in carrying out the national defense program was warmly approved by the convention.

COUNCIL GROWING

The 400 delegates at this convention represented twice as many local unions and a membership increased by one-third since last year's convention. At that time there were about 300,000 members in the state and only 82 locals affiliated to the Council. This year 159 locals were affiliated at the time of the convention.

CIO Regional Director August Scholle was elected president of the Michigan Council and John W. Gibson was re-elected secretary-treasurer. An executive board of 13 vice presidents representing eight different unions and seven different cities was also elected.

Bus Company Signs With CIO

Win Big Gains In Huntington

Huntington, W. Va., June 1— A new contract between the Ohio Valley Bus Co. and the Huntington Local of the Transport Workers Union of America, CIO affiliate, was signed yesterday, it was jointly announced by Colonel J. H. Long, president of the company, and William Gandall of New York, international representative of the union.

Both Colonel Long and Gandall said they were "pleased" with the agreement which had been reached after negotiations lasting three weeks.

$15,000 PAY INCREASE

Gandall revealed that employes of the company have gained increases in pay representing about $15,000 a year.

The union spokesman said the contract also specifies a 100 per cent closed shop beginning September 1; the checkoff system; seniority for both drivers and maintenance men; question of vacations with pay will be considered April 1, 1941.

LABOR AND THE LAW:

The Apex Decision

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Apex case represents a substantial victory for organized labor in its long fight to free itself from the bonds of the anti-trust laws. Ever since the notorious Danbury Hatters case in 1908, when a labor union was crushed under the weight of the anti-trust laws, labor has contended that it was a perversion of justice to apply the anti-trust laws to the activities of workers seeking to establish collective bargaining and protect labor standards.

Now in its opinion, the Court has ruled that the anti-trust laws had their origin and are concerned, not with the activities of labor organizations, but rather with the evils flowing out of commercial combinations, price-fixing and monopolies. Therefore, the Court ruled that, although a strike undoubtedly interferes with the interstate business of an employer and hinders his competition with others, it is not subject to the Sherman Law.

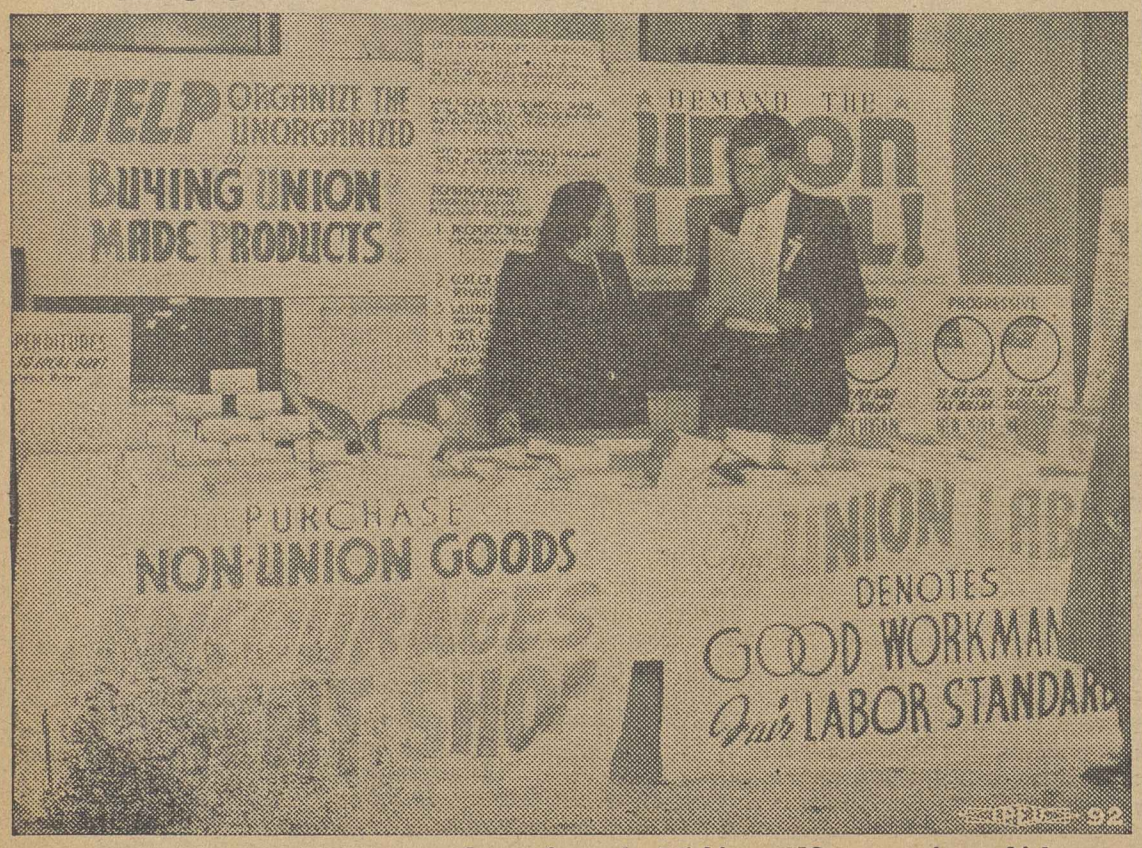
HEART OF DECISION

The heart of the Court's decision is found in the following language in the opinion:

"Strikes or agreements not to work, entered into by laborers to compel employers to yield to their demands, may restrict to some extent the power of employers who are parties to the dispute to compete in the market with those not subject to such demands. But under the doctrine applied to non-labor cases, the mere fact of such restrictions on competition does not in itself bring the parties to the agreement within the condemnation of the Sherman Act. Furthermore, successful union activity, as for example consummation of a wage agreement with employers, may have some influence on price competition by eliminating that part of such competition which is based on differences in labor standards.

"Since, in order to render a labor combination effective it must eliminate the competition from non-union made goods, an elimination of price competition based on differences in labor standards is the objective of any national labor organization. But this effect on competition has not been considered to be the kind of curtailment of price competition prohibited by the Sherman Act. And in any case, the restraint here is, as we have seen, on a different kind and has not been shown to have any actual or intended effect on price or price competition."

In other words, the Court holds that the efforts of labor unions to establish industry-wide standards and to eliminate competition based upon non-union labor standards is not directed at price-fixing which is forbidden by the anti-trust laws. The Court supported this conclusion by reference to the recent federal labor legislation such as the Norris-LaGuardia Act, the Railway Labor Act, the National Labor Relations Act, the Public Contracts Act and the Wage-Hour Law.



FAVORED POLICY

These federal labor laws, the court said, showed that "combinations of workers eliminating competition among themselves and restricting competition among their employers based on wage cutting" is favored by federal policy and protected against the application of the Sherman Act. The Court made it perfectly clear that if any unlawful acts were committed by the strikers, these were to be punished by the appropriate criminal laws and not by the Sherman Act.

The effect of the Court's ruling comes down to this: that the kind of restraint upon interstate commerce prohibited by the Sherman Act are not committed by labor unions attempting to establish national, uniform and industry-wide labor standards through collective bargaining.

As a result of the Court's opinion, the decision of the trial court assessing damages of over $700,000 in the Apex case, was reversed. It likewise means that the anti-trust suit of the Republic Steel Corporation against the SWOC and the CIO for 7½ million dollars damages is without merit.

Boost Union Label Drive

UNION MADE PRODUCTS got a boost from the Michigan CIO convention, which met in Bay City last week. Picture shows exhibit in the convention hall lobby calling delegates' attention to need for buying, as well as working, union.

CIO BACKS DEFENSE PROGRAM, DEMANDS RESPECT OF RIGHTS

UAW Hits Terms of GM Offer

DETROIT, June 8.—United Automobile Workers, CIO, speaking through its General Motors Council, which represents 135,000 of the corporation's workers, has rejected contract proposals of the corporation as "not acceptable" and "far short of the economic needs of the employes."

The action, taken by unanimous vote of the GM Council, calls for further negotiations with the management, for conciliation by the U. S. Labor Dept., and for full authorization from GM locals to take further steps the Council may deem necessary.

Authorization for such action is already coming in from GM locals as rapidly as they could be queried, the UAW said.

During 1939 the company made $830 clear profit from the labor of each of its 220,000 employes, and for the first three months of this year its earnings were up 27½ per cent over the same period last year.

Nevertheless, the UAW points out, GM workers get less than $1,000 a year, which is only a little more than the company's profits per worker.

CIO PRESIDENT JOHN L. LEWIS

The Executive Board unanimously endorsed his leadership.

The CIO will cooperate to defend American freedom, but it demands that labor's rights and social gains be protected in any defense program. Read the statement of the CIO Executive Board on this important problem in the newest CIO leaflet, "The CIO and National Defense." Executive Board Calls For Renewed Organizing Drives

Complete Reports of the Decisions of the Executive Board Meeting, Held June 3-5, Will Be Found On Inside Pages.

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Organized labor is America's first line of defense, the CIO Executive Board declared in voting support at its semi-annual meeting to a defense program that will protect American institutions; and labor demands that its gains be preserved in any program to keep the nation secure and at peace.

The Board warned of the increasing attacks on labor's rights taking place under cover of defense, called attention to the dangers of supposed anti-alien and other repressive bills that are really aimed at labor, and called for a program to defend the Wagner Act, Walsh-Healey Act, and similar progressive laws.

It also warned against the economic crisis that will come when the European war and the U. S. arms program end, demanding steps to end unemployment and to bring social security to the workers.

The Board left the question of unity with the AFL in the hands of Pres. Lewis and Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman, after commending their efforts to bring about unity in the past and their actions in negotiating with AFL leaders.

The Board voted for an intensive drive to organize aircraft workers, to aid the CIO Construction Workers, and to carry on the basic task of organizing the unorganized, at the same time noting the achievements of the CIO since October in building stronger industrial unions in all fields.

Ask U.S. Plan Ahead To Aid Unemployed

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Unemployment continues to be the nation's No. 1 domestic problem, and the "war boom" will make no fundamental change in the job situation, the CIO Executive Board was advised by the Committee on Unemployment.

Submitted on behalf of the committee by its chairman, Sec. James B. Carey; and its executive secretary, Ralph Hetzel, CIO Unemployment Director, the report warned that:

"The present internal economy of the nation is becoming fundamentally dependent upon expenditures for armaments, both by the government of the United States and by foreign governments.

FEAR CRISIS

"If the European war should end, our national economy would receive a very serious shock. When, further, our own expenditures on armaments cease, the country will face one of the most serious crises in its history."

To meet this situation, the committee recommended immediate preparation for adjustment to future employment possibilities.

"Provision should be made now so that not only would some two million of the unemployed be put to work due to arms expenditures, but that most of the nine million other unemployed shall be absorbed in productive work."

Reviewing the past year's legislative action concerning WPA and unemployment, the report found much to criticize. Though joblessness increased from 9,704,000 in September last to 11,927,000 in January, 1940, government expenditures for work relief have failed to approach the need of the people.

MORE WPA FUNDS

"The WPA appropriation passed in the summer of 1939 in the false hope of an extensive recovery was utterly inadequate," the committee commented, and a number of "vicious amendments"—among them the 18-month lay-off provision—helped to make matters worse than they might otherwise have been. The President's budget for the 1941 fiscal year, the report added, contains a similar "shockingly low" estimate for public works, with WPA to get only a billion dollars and PWA's public works program being junked completely.

SEC. JAMES B. CAREY
Chairman of the CIO Committee on Unemployment

The report called for support of the WPA bill sonsored by Sen. Murray of Montana, which would provide 3,000,000 WPA jobs during the next month.

MACHINES VS. MEN

Technological unemployment ranks as an increasingly serious problem, the committee said in discussing testimony of various CIO representatives before the U. S. Temporary Natl. Emergency Committee.

Increasing efficiency of machines has led to a cut in the number of workers employed in mass production industries, and in most cases machines have been introduced "with little regard for the consequent human tragedies and the destruction of cities and towns.

"In most of the industries considered, the products of increased efficiency have not been passed on either to workers or to consumers in any substantial measure. If it had not been for the extensive reduction of hours and increase in hourly wage rates, brought about in the main by organized labor, the consequences of technological change would have been even more devastating.

"In most cases, the new machines have not induced new employment in new industries or old industries sufficient to absorb the originally displaced workers."

WON'T SOLVE PROBLEMS

Taking a look into the future, the committee warned against undue optimism that expenditures on armaments will substantially reduce unemployment. Such spending, it advised, is a "drain upon the national wealth and the welfare of the people as a whole.

"The prospect provides no justification to slacken the measures instituted for providing for the

Urge U. S. Cooperate On Jobs

Washington, June 8.—Proposals for fitting as many workers as possible into the government's national defense program received endorsement from the CIO executive board.

Pointing out that 11,000,000 people are without work, and that several hundred thousand work only at certain seasons, the board declared "there is an extensive reservoir of available work time among the workers" in the basic industries. In addition, depression and technological changes have forced many workers out of their skilled trades, the board said, and their knowledge can well be utilized by the defense program.

PLANNING NEEDED

"It would be a tremendous waste to prepare vast numbers of workers for jobs that may not materialize," the statement continued, and urged that the government, through the federal employment service, cooperate with the unions in determining the number and types of workers available for possible work opportunities under the defense program.

Board Sends Miss Lewis, Curran to Mexico Parley

WASHINGTON, June 8. — The CIO Executive Board this week voted to send two fraternal delegates to the coming meeting of the Latin-American Federation of Labor at Mexico City.

Named by the board as CIO representatives at the meeting are Miss Kathryn Lewis, secretary of the CIO Committee on Latin American Affairs, and Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union, whose organization maintains close and friendly relations with a number of labor organizations throughout Central and South America.

The Mexico meeting is scheduled to start on June 10, and will bring together union representatives from a number of nations.

Pres. Lewis, in commenting on the board's action, said the sending of fraternal delegates is in line with the government's "Good Neighbor" policy towards the republics of the western hemisphere.

Earlier in the meeting the board had approved the CIO Maritime Committee's cooperation with the Pan-American Maritime Federation, an organization with headquarters in Havana, Cuba. The federation numbers among its affiliates all seamen's unions in Latin America.

Bridges Ouster Bill Attacked By CIO

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The CIO Executive Board went to bat for Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, whom reactionary groups are once again attempting to deport from the country.

Taking its cue from a report of the Legislative Committee which discussed H. R. 9766, a bill to deport the CIO union leader, the board went on record "as firmly opposed to this bill and similar attempts to harass leaders of CIO organizations."

"The bill," the board resolution declared, "is clearly an attempt to over-ride judicial procedure which has already ruled that Harry Bridges is not subject to deportation on the grounds alleged in the bill. . . . is a violation of American democratic institutions, and is a bill of attainder of the kind expressly forbidden in the Constitution of the United States."

Its purpose, the statement charged, is to "damage the CIO in California, and ultimately throughout the West Coast, and as such is an attack on the entire CIO."

Seamen Criticize Bill

New York, June 8. — Attacking the bill introduced in the House to deport Harry Bridges, as "a flank attack on marine labor" aimed to smash the unions, Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union declared that the target of the bill was not Bridges but the "marine workers who look to him for leadership."

Curran, whose union has a membership of 65,000 seamen and inland boatmen, declared in a statement issued from the NMU headquarters here: "The bill would return us to the practices of 300 years ago when political exiles were common. This attempt at deportation, or exile, is purely a political move.

"It is an attempt to remove a militant, progressive trade union leader from the scene preparatory to further attacks on the marine trade union movement. It is not Bridges that this bill is aimed at primarily. It is aimed at all marine labor."

CIO's 7-Point Program For WPA Jobs

Washington, June 8.—Predicting that armaments expenditures will not "substantially fill the need of those who are eligible for WPA," the CIO executive board passed a 7-point resolution for improvement of WPA.

The board endorsed proposals to:

1. Increase WPA jobs to 3,000,000.
2. Eliminate the WPA's 18-month layoff provision.
3. Restore hourly wages to prevailing levels.
4. Increase monthly security wage levels.
5. Eliminate the 25 per cent sponsorship contribution.
6. Restore the federal theatre project.
7. Wipe out "vicious discriminatory clauses" in the present WPA bill.

Board Moves To Protect Union Rights

Washington, June 8. — A Tory attempt to prevent organization of federal workers to organize in Navy Department properties came in for attack from the CIO Executive Board.

Pres. Jacob Baker of the United Federal Workers, was designated by CIO Pres. Lewis to represent the CIO at Senate Naval Affairs Committee hearings and to call for elimination of the proposed ban.

The bill in question is H. R. 9822, to expedite naval shipbuilding, and it carries a provision that the navy workers' organizational rights — guaranteed by the Lloyd-LaFollette Act of 1912—may be waived at the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy.

The Board, in calling for deletion of the section of the shipbuilding bill on that subject, pointed out that the right of organization "has become inalienable to all workers of the United States and its denial to Navy Dept. employes would be an intolerable justice."

Lewis Urges LaFollette Bill Be Passed, Hits Amendments

Washington, June 8.—Passage of the Oppressive Labor Practices Bill, with certain reactionary amendments deleted, was urged on Chairman Mary Norton of the House Labor Committee today by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis. The bill, with the amendments included, has already been approved by the Senate.

"The proposed legislation," Lewis said, "would outlaw labor spies, professional strikebreakers, irresponsible private armies, and private arsenals which anti-labor corporations have used to prevent collective bargaining It is difficult to understand why such a measure, which would outlaw practices that cannot be condoned by any legal or moral basis, should not be enacted by Congress.

"Certain amendments were made to the measure in the Senate which may weaken the administration of the National Labor Relations Act. Adequate protection should be afforded against such interpretation.

"I would therefore appreciate it if the House Labor Committee could give early and favorable consideration to this bill, with proper revision as indicated, in order that it may receive the approval of the House of Representatives before Congress adjourns."

Naming Of Hillman Endorsed

Washington, June 8.—The CIO Executive Board called upon "all labor organizations fully to cooperate with Sidney Hillman as labor member of the National Defense Commission, and in this manner to make labor's contribution to the national defense program effective, constructive and adequate to the requirement of the national emergency."

Vice-Pres. SIDNEY HILLMAN

The resolution expressed regrets that illness had prevented Vice-President Hillman from attending the board meeting, and hoped his recovery would be speedy.

It continued:

"The executive board takes appreciative notice of the high distinction accorded by the President of the United States to Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman by his appointment to serve as labor member of the National Defense Commission.

"We commend this action of Pres. Roosevelt as a recognition of labor's significant part in the program of national defense."

CIO Offers Defense Cooperation Demands Protection Of Rights

Domestic Needs Seen Urgent

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The CIO will support defense of American institutions from all threat of attack, demanding in return that labor's rights and social gains be protected in the arms program, the CIO Executive Board meeting here decided by unanimous vote of the Board, representing more than 4,000,000 CIO members.

The CIO is "unalterably opposed to any movement or activity of subversive character, Trojan horses, or fifth columns, which are aimed against our nation and government, or the basic free and democratic institutions upon which our republic was founded," the Board also declared.

RIGHTS OF LABOR

First line of defense in any emergency is organized labor, it pointed out, and the aims and objectives of the CIO "are an essential part of national policy. They are inherent in our democratic society.

"They are predicated upon the maintenance and preservation of labor's rights, so clearly set forth in the Constitution of the U. S., in Congresionasl statutes, and in Supreme Court decisions validating such statutes."

The basic labor rights that must be protected in any adequate defense program are the right to organize in unions of the workers' own choice, the right to bargain collectively, and the right of workers to freedom of speech,

Ask Social Gains Be Protected

Washington, June 8. — Protection of workers' rights and social gains from attacks made under the mask of national emergency featured the report of the Legislative Committee unanimously adopted by the CIO Executive Board at its meeting here.

Heaviest drives against labor are taking place in Congress now on such labor laws as the Wagner Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, the Wage and Hour Act, and a flood of anti-alien and similar oppressive bills put out in the name of defense but actually designed to hamstring labor, the report indicated.

On proposals to junk the Walsh-Healey Act, the report declared: "There is no justification for this proposal because the act does not in any way impede or hamper the procurement of material," as claimed by Navy Dept. and other officials.

Similar attempts to set aside the Wage and Hour Act in defense legislation are met by a demand for amendments in such bills "to make it clear that employes cov ered under the Wage Hour and the Walsh-Healey Act should continue to receive such protection and should not be deprived of their rights."

The report criticized the pro

The CIO Position On Natl. Defense

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Following is the full text of the "Declaration of the Executive Board of the CIO on National Defense," unanimously adopted at the Board meeting in Washington on June 4:

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, its officers, constituent unions and membership are fully prepared to discharge our responsibilities in the approaching national emergency, to the best interests of the United States of America.

At the outset let us state most unequivocally that we are, and always shall be, unalterably opposed to any movement or activity of subversive character, Trojan horses, or Fifth Columns, which are aimed against our nation and government, or the basic free and democratic institutions upon which our Republic has been founded.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is the labor movement in our first line of defense—the mass producing industries of mines, mills, factories and workshops. By the strength and discipline of our organizations, the affiliates of the Congress of Industrial Organizations have substituted industrial peace and stability for industrial warfare, in these first lines of defense.

OFFER COOPERATION

We are prepared to lend practical, wholesome and feasible cooperation in any undertaking to protect this nation and prepare for national defense.

The ideals and objectives of the Congress of Industrial Organizations are an essential part of national policy. They are inherent in our democratic society. They are predicated upon the maintenance and preservation of labor's rights, so clearly set forth in the Constitution of the United States; in Congressional statutes, and in Supreme Court decisions validating such statutes.

Throughout any national emergency, labor's rights, as embodied in the National Labor Relations Act, the Wage and Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, the Guffey Coal Stabilization Act, the Social Security Act and other legislation must be preserved.

These rights are:

1. The right of wage earners to organize into unions of their own choosing.
2. The right of organized wage earners to bargain collectively with their employers.
3. The right of wage earners to freedom of speech, assembly, action and worship.

This declaration of labor's rights is designed to stabilize industrial relations and promote industrial peace. It does not contemplate industrial strife. It seeks to improve the relationship between wage earners and their employers; to increase the productive efficiency of industry; to maintain labor's existing wage and hour standards, and to improve these standards with changing economic conditions.

Any national defense program must contemplate this kind of cooperation.

UNEMPLOYMENT

It is imperative for the national welfare that steps be taken to end unemployment.

It is recognized that large numbers of idle workers will be reemployed through the impetus given our economy by the present situation. But it must also be recognized that industry generally, especially the mass producing industries, is capable of turning out maximum production with a much smaller working force than ever before, due to tremendous strides in technology.

This means that large numbers of able-bodied and willing workers will not find places in private employment; and sight must not be lost of the necessity of providing for them.

And after the current war-stimulated recovery has run its course, what then?

When war orders stop, as stop they will, millions who will have been employed in the armament and related industries will be cast out of their jobs. For them, their families and for millions of others like them, provision must be made, lest misery and suffering, the like of which no civilized country has seen before, trail in the wake of "war boom" dislocations.

Our industrial unions constitute a great reservoir of productive, technical and administrative skill and resourcefulness. The brains of labor should be utilized to serve the nation in its national defense undertaking. Organized labor must be given adequate representation on boards, agencies, administrative bodies and policy-making groups concerned with the execution and administration of any national defense program.

Finally, we the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, meeting this 4th day of June, 1940, in the nation's Capital, declare in unequivocal terms that we will defend the free institutions of this Republic, under which the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution gives us the greatest democracy on earth—a government of the people, for the people, and by the people.

We offer this program in a sincere endeavor to make our contribution toward achieving the goal which is in the heart of every true American—to assure the security of our nation, to preserve the peace for our people, and not to become involved in the present horrible war raging in Europe.

Executive Board Discusses Major Issues At Parley

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Defense of labor's rights as a major step in defending America, a strong demand for protection of social gains, and a determination to keep America secure, free and at peace marked the three-day meeting of the CIO Executive Board here in regular semi-annual session.

The same note was struck in reports of CIO national office departments, which told of substantial increases in CIO organizing and growth and in CIO actions to defend labor's gains from reactionary attacks being pushed in Congress under cover of national defense preparations.

From the opening speech to the Board members, in which Pres. John L. Lewis declared that the CIO had grown in strength and authority since the October convention, the general tone of the meeting was one of confidence in CIO policies and achievements, with sharp watchfulness to protect the workers of America from the effects of the war hysteria of the past few weeks.

The 4,000,000 members of the CIO, speaking through their elected officers at the meeting, reaffirmed their willingness to defend their country, demanding only that they be defended in turn from invasion of their hard won social and legislative gains.

The CIO does not harbor or encourage any "Trojan horses," "fifth columns" or the like, the Board declared in a unanimous statement on defense policy, and will fight with every other group to defend American institutions — chief of which are the right to organize, to bargain collectively, to freedom of speech and assembly.

At the same time, the Board

'Don't Tamper With Labor Laws'--Murray

Washington, June 8.—CIO opposition to tampering with labor laws under the guise of defense, declared emphatically at the CIO board meeting, was reaffirmed in testimony by Vice-President Philip Murray on the Vinson arms bill delivered at the Senate Naval Affairs Committee here.

Murray pointed out that the Walsh-Healey Act, which protects labor standards on government contracts, is regarded by labor as "one of the most important pieces of legislation enacted by Congress in recent times," in making the CIO demand that it be left untouched in the arms bill.

Haywood Reports Big Union Gains by CIO

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Substantial organizing progress since the 1939 San Francisco convention was reported to the CIO executive board by Allan S. Haywood, Director of Organization.

Reviewing his first six months in his present position, Haywood urged intensified organizing work in the months ahead.

To help in the organizing drive, the CIO now has a total of 287 people on its full-time service list. Included in the total are 21 regional directors, 76 CIO field representatives and 79 field representatives working under the direction of affiliated unions.

Since last November three state industrial union councils have been formed in Virginia, Kansas and Tennessee. Ten city and county councils have been established, the largest two being located in Greater Boston, Mass., and Mahoning County, (Youngstown), Ohio.

Haywood paid high tribute to Michael S. Widman, Jr., and Walter Smethurst, his two assistants, who have spent a large portion of their time in recent months directly supervising situations in the field. Smethurst has been in Michigan working with the union at the state-wide Consumers Power Co., while Widman has been active in the Consolidated Edison election campaign in New York, and more recently has been assisting the woodworkers and the shipbuilders in Washington and California.

A conference of southern CIO officials late last year has resulted in coordinated organizing drives in various sections of that region, Haywood reported, notably in Atlanta and New Orleans.

Haywood revealed that he has been assisting a number of national affiliates to solve particularly troublesome problems and has been of direct service to unions participating in major Labor Board elections.

The report received high praise from the executive board and was unanimously accepted.

Council For New York City

Washington, June 8.—Officers of the CIO were instructed by the executive board during its meeting here to make immediate plans for formation of an Industrial Union Council for the City of New York.

An estimated 500,000 CIO members live in the city.

The CIO Announces Its Stand

There should be no doubt in anyone's mind as to just where the CIO stands on any public issue of importance.

As a democratic movement of millions of American working people, it makes no secret of its plans and purposes. On the contrary, it is proud to announce them from the house-tops.

If doubt exists in anyone's mind, it is due to failure to read or listen to the public pronouncements of the CIO—or more likely to deliberate propaganda and misrepresentation maliciously purveyed by enemies of labor.

In the present national emergency, the CIO once more seeks to make plain and positive, for everyone who has eyes to see or ears to hear, just where the CIO stands.

Its executive board has adopted, by a unanimous vote of the representatives of every affiliated national and international union, a declaration of policy on national defense. It seeks to give this statement the widest possible publicity.

The CIO declaration on national defense reiterates the opposition of labor to involvement of the United States in the European war.

It reaffirms the loyalty of the CIO and its members to "the basic free and democratic institutions upon which our republic has been founded" and its opposition to any movement that would subvert them.

It offers practical cooperation in the protection and defense of this nation.

It demonstrates the concern of the CIO for free and democratic institutions by insisting on the preservation of labor's rights to organize, bargain collectively and enjoy freedom of speech, assembly, action and worship; and on the preservation of social legislation.

It declares that the CIO seeks to stabilize industrial relations and promote industrial peace, not industrial strife.

It warns that unemployment will continue even through a so-called war boom; that when such a boom collapses, millions will be thrown out of work; and that unless provision is made for them, there will be misery and suffering "the like of which no civilized country has seen before."

It calls for adequate representation for labor on all boards and agencies concerned with national defense.

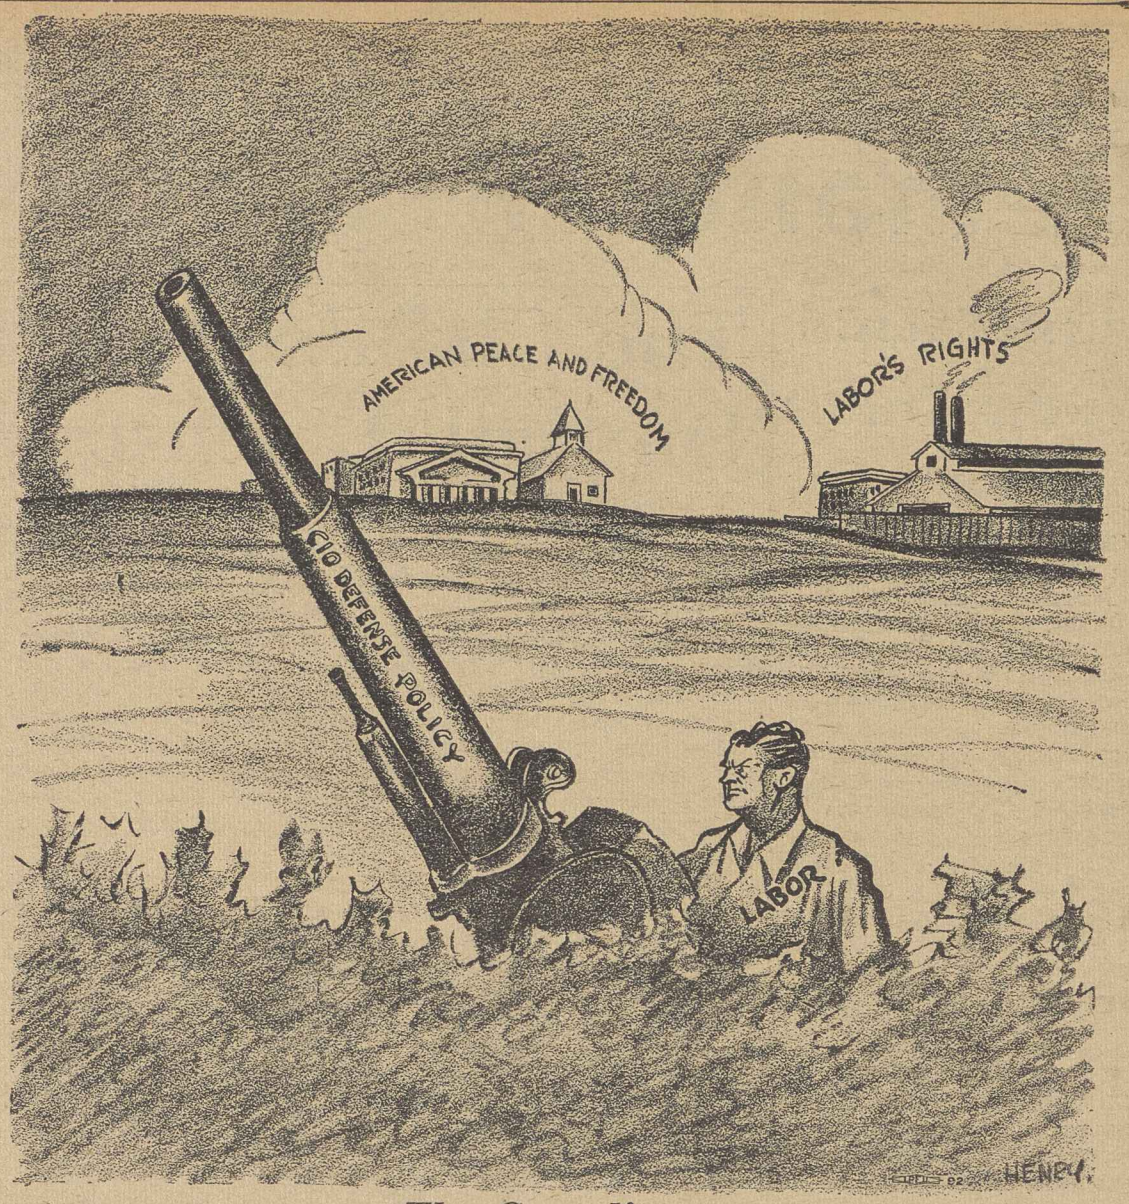
The whole declaration expresses in the clearest possible terms the patriotic concern of the CIO and its members to defend the free institutions, the security and the peace of the United States.

Let no one have any more doubt as to where the CIO stands.

Mourn Loss of Broun

Washington, June 8.—A solemn expression of "its deep sense of loss over the death of Heywood Broun, founder and president of the American Newspaper Guild," was issued by the CIO Executive Board meeting.

"His inspired leadership extended beyond the union he founded," the statement added. "Heywood Broun was an eloquent spokesman for labor and an ardent defender of the liberal life and the freedoms that have built this great country of ours. We are proud that he was one of us."



Resolution On Unity

WASHINGTON, June 8. — The following resolution on unity mous standing vote of the CIO Executive Board, all members of the Board voting. of the Board voting.

RESOLVED: That the Executive Board of the CIO approve the report of the Peace Committee, that we commend the Committee for its logical, courageous position, and

That the Committee be continued with the full authorization of this Board to use its discretion in any future phases of negotiating a peace agreement with the American Federation of Labor, and

That President Lewis present to the nation through the press the position and attitude of the Congress of Industrial Organizations on this matter.

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

The C.O Board Meets

IT IS TOO BAD that every member of the CIO—and of the general public for that matter—cannot sit in at a meeting of the CIO executive board.

In the discussion and action on labor and public issues they would see new standards being set in representative, democratic and responsible labor leadership.

A meeting of the AFL executive council is like a caucus of "the boys in the back room." A small clique of the more powerful bosses gather together to connive on how to manipulate the general organization, and by a process of horse-trading, dispose of the interests of those unions which are not represented.

A meeting of the CIO executive board, on the other hand, is as representative as a small convention. Every union has a member on the board and can protect its own interests to the full.

The voting system, under which each union has as many votes on a roll-call as it has members, also enhances the democratic character of CIO board meetings.

While the number attending such meetings is small enough to insure thorough and intimate discussion, it is not so small as to permit such narrow clique rule as disgraces the AFL.

Let's look in on the last CIO board meeting. Some fifty people are gathered in the board room. The heat is intense. But there is hardly an absentee for more than a few minutes at any one of the three-day sessions. Nor are there any afternoon adjournments to attend the races, as at AFL council meetings.

CIO leaders take their responsibilities seriously. And the degree of their close and continuous attention to an agenda covering almost as wide a range of subjects as a convention is something to marvel at—particularly considering the degrees which Washington summer temperature can reach.

As first order of business, the executive officers, committees and department heads give an account of their stewardship since the San Francisco convention.

These reports cover organizing progress, finances, local industrial unions, publicity, legal work, legislative activities, and special reports on unemployment housing and social security.

Just to mention the titles of these reports gives little idea of their wide scope. The legislative committee's report, for instance, covers every piece of legislation before Congress that affects labor's interests. It describes policies followed, actions taken and current trends, and makes recommendations in each instance.

Through these reports, every union representative present is given a detailed and comprehensive accounting of the multifarious activities carried on by CIO headquarters on behalf of the whole movement.

At the same time he has full opportunity after each report to criticize, approve or make suggestions both as to general policies and their specific application.

Once the reports—and the discussions and actions that follow them—are out of the way, the board gets down to policy-making on the major issues of the day.

Interspersed between these major issues are numerous matters of a routine administrative character, appointments of representatives to various gatherings, appeals, and resolutions on the special problems of individual affiliated unions.

The major issues of general concern at this board meeting revolve around national defense, labor unity, unemployment, labor and social legislation and expansion of organizing activities.

On every major issue there is considerable debate. The level of this debate as to objectivity, pointedness, logic and knowledge of the subject is probably higher than you will find in any other existing deliberative assembly. It is certainly far above that revealed in the Congressional Record.

Where necessary, subcommittees are appointed to draft statements, and by the time a final decision is reached there is substantial unanimity on nearly every issue.

The declaration on national defense, for instance, expressing the patriotism and Americanism of the CIO; its concern for preserving labor's rights, social legislation and civil liberties; its warning in regard to unemployment and economic dislocation; its demand for adequate labor representation, and its opposition to any involvement in the European war was adopted by a unanimous standing vote, as representing the considered opinion and policy of the whole movement.

Similar unanimity was in evidence, after thorough discussion of relations with the AFL, in the resolution of confidence in President Lewis and the peace committee. This approved and commended the committees report, authorized it to continue to use its discretion in regard to negotiations, and gave President Lewis full authority to present the position and attitude of the CIO on this matter.

Press predictions of dissension were made to look supremely silly by this board meeting. For the democratic processes and procedures of the CIO provide for the fairest possible adjustment of differences as they may arise. And the loyalty and enthusiasm inspired by an advancing labor movement make it comparatively easy to arrive at a formula and a policy on which all can willingly unite.

CIO Extends Helping Hand To AFL Founder's Widow

WASHINGTON, June 8.—An elderly lady, haunted by unemployment and starvation, today received a helping hand from the CIO after her pleas to the American Federation of Labor had been continuously refused.

The woman is Mrs. Samuel Gompers, widow of the founder and long-time president of the AFL.

Acting quickly after Pres. Lewis had called to their attention Mrs. Gompers' plight, the CIO executive board members unanimously voted to send her $500, and to provide her with work until such time as the Secretary of Labor may be prevailed upon to give her a permanent job in the government department.

CAUSTIC ABOUT AFL

Lewis referred in caustic terms to the attitude of certain AFL executives, who had "fawned" upon Mrs. Gompers when her husband was the leading figure in the American labor movement but who blandly tied up her appeals for assistance in a mass of AFL red tape.

Lewis read from a letter sent to Mrs. Gompers by Pres. Green of the AFL, informing her that the federation's executive council could suggest only that she "confer again" with William Collins, the AFL director in New York City.

Collins, it developed, advised her to try to get back on WPA—from which she had been let out during one of the WPA's periodic purges—and failing that, to ask for home relief.

Characteristic of the AFL's attitude towards the widow of its founder was a communication from former Sec. Frank Morrison in the spring of 1932, when Mrs. Gompers had mentioned her predicament and said "if there is any way in which I could be of service to labor movement, I should be glad of the opportunity, if only to the memory of my husband."

Morrison replied:

"Only members of affiliated unions are eligible to appointment to work for the American Federation of Labor. . . ."

Board Takes Stand On Major Issues

warned that a crisis "the like of which no civilized country has seen before" will come to the nation's workers when the war in Europe stops and arms programs come to an end, unless steps are taken at once to provide work for the already unemployed and for those who will be jobless again when war is over.

The stream of anti-alien and other oppressive bills, supposedly aimed at subversive groups in reality marks an attempt to wreck labor organizations, the Board declared in approving the Legislative Committee report, and must be stopped if democracy in America is to survive. Similarly, proposed amendments to the Wagner Act, the Wage Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act and other labor laws in the name of defense simply mask an attempt to junk progressive legislation.

LABOR UNITY

Negotiations between the CIO and the AFL, the Board declared in a unanimous rising vote, with all members voting, should be left to the discretion of the CIO peace committee, whose work and policies were commended.

This committee, composed of Pres. Lewis and Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman, was authorized to "use its discretion in any future phases of negotiating a peace agreement with the AFL." Pres. Lewis was authorized to present the CIO attitude on the matter to the nation.

MAP CAMPAIGNS

In line with CIO basic policy of organizing the unorganized, the Board voted for an intensive drive in the rapidly expanding aircraft industry; for full aid to the Construction Workers Organizing Committee, newest CIO affiliate; for rapid establishment of a CIO Council in New York City, where 500,000 CIO members are now without such a body; and for continuance of the work of close to 300 CIO organizers and other officials working out of national headquarters.

The Board departed for a moment from strictly CIO business to lend a hand to Mrs. Samuel Gompers, widow of the founder of the AFL, who had appealed to Pres. Lewis for financial help after getting a cold refusal from the AFL Council.

HAILS NAMING OF HILLMAN

In addition, the Board voted its regret that Vice-President Sidney Hillman, leader of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was prevented by illness from attending, and its approval of his appointment to the Advisory Commission of the Natl. Defense Council.

It also set up a Coordinating Committee of National Director Allan S. Haywood and General Counsel Lee Pressman to advise CIO officials on requests by the Government for cooperation or for participation in agencies and Government commissions.

The Board voted to leave time and place of the 1940 CIO Convention to the executive officers of the CIO, stipulating that it be held sometime after the 1940 Presidential election.

Ask Social Gains Be Protected

posal to finance defense costs through taxes on consumers, pointing out that "the burden of the new tax levies will be borne by consumers in that 66 per cent of the new revenue will come from indirect taxes. On the other hand, the tax on corporate income will be raised by only 1.8 per cent."

A considerable section of the report dealt with anti-alien and other such bills now pouring through Congress, declaring: "Under the hue and cry of exterminating fifth columns and combatting Trojan horses, several repressive bills have been introduced in Congress.

"It is difficult to watch the development of the proposed legisislation affecting aliens and the activities of the executive department relating to the same problem without grave apprehension.

"There is no reason why aliens, particularly among workers, should be segregated as a group and marked as anti-American. To the contrary, this type of hysteria is usually conducted with the primary purpose of attacking labor organizations and subsequently attacking all citizens who may entertain progressive or liberal views."

The CIO has carried "the major burden" of sucessfully defending the Wagner Act and other labor laws to date, the report said. but the task of continuing the defense is growing constantly heavier.

"Concentration of the executive and legislative branches of the government on national defense preparations has relegated to the background interest in social and labor legislation," the report said. "In addition, under the guise of national defense preparations reactionaries have sought to weaken and destroy existing legislation."

CIO Offers Defense Aid, Demands Labor Rights Be Guaranteed

assembly, action and worship, the Board said.

These rights must be protected, the Board said, if labor is to cooperate in a program to meet the emergency brought about by the present war in Europe, and if America is to avoid involvement. The Wagner Act, the Wage and Hour Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, the Social Security Act, and all labor legislation achieved in recent years must be left untouched.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The Board also demanded an end to unemployment as another necessary step to American security. In addition, the Board warned of the crisis that will come when the war ends and arms programs are brought to a halt, unless steps are taken now to provide work for the millions of new jobless workers that will result.

"When war orders stop, as stop they will, millions who will have been employed in the armament and related industries will be cast out of their jobs," the Board declared. "For them, their families and for millions of others like them, provision must be made, lest misery and suffering, the like of which no civilized country has seen, trail in the wake of war boom dislocations."

Vice-Pres. PHILIP MURRAY Discussed Defense Program

LEWIS, MURRAY SPEAK

Speaking on the declaration, Pres. John L. Lewis described it as "illuminating and comprehensive," in reiterating the determination of the CIO that labor's gains must be preserved. Labor is willing and anxious to protect American institutions, he said, but "labor wants a seat at the council table, labor wants to maintain its dignity, it wants to maintain its rights."

Both Lewis and Vice-President Philip Murray reaffirmed labor's opposition to American entry into the European war, pointing out that the war was not of labor's creation, that its struggle to maintain labor's rights was not only a contribution to defense of democracy but also a major contribution to keeping America out of Europe's war.

Lewis and Murray were joined by Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, in praising the declaration and in emphasizing the determination of labor to defend American democracy of which workers' rights are the most basic part.

Green Backs 'Ripper' Bill

Washington, June 8 — William Green, president of the AFL whose own set of amendments to the Wagner Act were proved by John L. Lewis to have been written by the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, has come out in the open in support of the Smith ripper bill in a letter to Congressman Howard W. Smith, Virginia polltax reactionary who fathered the bill.

The letter, which astonished Washington observers accustomed to Green's attacks on progressive laws, took exception only to the most extreme of the Smith amendments, declaring that the bill "will remedy in a large measure the difficulties and abuses of the administration of the Act of which we have heretofore complained . . . we ask for your support and vote for the bill as a whole."

The Smith Bill, product of a year's intensive witch-hunt by the Smith Committee probe into the Labor Board, has been described as an attempt to turn the Wagner Act into "an instrument for the oppression of labor." Originally Green and the entire AFL leadership opposed it, hoping to get their own NAM written amendments passed.

Up to the time THE CIO NEWS went to press, no action had been taken by Congress on the Smith amendments, beyond putting them on the floor of the House.

Labor's Stand On Defense

Excerpts from the addresses of Pres. John L. Lewis and Vice-Pres. Philip Murray at the meeting of the CIO Executive Board in Washington on June 5.

Labor's Partnership In National Defense

I merely wish to add my own word of concurrence to the report of the special committee on national defense policy. I think it is illuminating and comprehensive, and portrays the position of the CIO with precise exactitude.

I personally have no illusions upon the subject of war. Upon some occasions during the past two years in our executive conferences and group meetings I have taken occasion to warn our own people that the tide was running, and that there was a drift towards war that could conceivably, under certain circumstances, engulf our own nation. That opinion was based upon at least a small understanding of the influences and the equations that motivate men and nations, based to some degree upon a small understanding of the nature of the economic problems that affect not alone America but the populations of each civilized country.

We are living in a miracle age insofar as material sciences are concerned, and the genius of man, expressed in his material and scientific advances, has brought an impact upon the customary mode of living in every country that produces and superinduces a malignant crop of social, economic and political questions.

CHARACTER OF THE WAR

The fact is that the present war in Europe is economic in character, and the political policies and the military performances of the aggressor nations run from the economic factors and questions which beset the populations of those countries. When this war is finished, be it finished by negotiations or exhaustion, capitulation or otherwise, the effect upon our own country and our own people is going to be the most violent in the history of our nation or any other nation in modern time.

We cannot stop the progress of this war. We did not cause this war. Our own country for decades past has followed enunciated policies that led towards the pathway of peace as between nations, and it is but a few years since our own government led in the attempt to effectuate a limitation of armament upon the part of the major nations of the earth.

It is but a few years since our nation participated in a great struggle to preserve democracy and to end war. It was the dream of many people that the Treaty of Versailles, sanctioned and ratified by the several participating nations, had accomplished that result. Too soon we are disillusioned, and the disillusionment comes primarily from the economic distress of the nations of the world under that peace effort.

THE FACTS REMAIN

I might talk at great length about my concept of the policies of this or that nation or government; I might analyze to my heart's content the errors made by this group of diplomats, or the good fortune that might have attended the world's affairs had certain governments followed certain policies, but it would not change the existing facts.

Since the formation of our own movement we have from time to time consistently expressed the desire that our nation remain at peace and not become involved in the world's military contests, begotten by circumstances entirely beyond the control of the American people. We have always proclaimed our willingness and our eagerness to assist in the protection of our own form of government and all the free institutions that flourish within the confines of our nation. Our position is the same today.

The Committee has chronicled those positions in words that must carry conviction to him who stops sufficiently long to read. At the same time we express a hope and a determination to maintain the progress that has been made by the labor movement, by the Congress, by the peoples, and by the Government. We must not permit those who undertake to individually profit out of the distress of nations or selfishly enrich their purse at the expense of struggling and fighting millions, to set aside idly these liberties, these privileges, these reforms that a great people have achieved, merely for the purpose of enriching their own coffers or adding to the sum total of their own profits.

It is proper that America should undertake to place itself in a position where it is not defenseless; it is, however, unnecessary for a nation to lose its sense of values and proportion with relation to this problem, because the overwhelming majority of Americans want to protect their government, want to make a contribution to the preservation of its liberties and its institutions, and want a chance merely to demonstrate they are willing and anxious to cooperate in the processes of making this nation and these liberties and privileges safe.

Labor can and will play its part in that great enterprise, asking only that cooperation be extended to labor, and that it be privileged to participate on the same basis and with the same privileges and the same freedom of action and the same good faith as any other segment of the population who might own a newspaper, or a steel plant, or a gun factory.

LABOR'S DEMAND

Labor is not looking merely to the man who owns a gun plant to defend this country; labor is not merely looking to the War Department or the Naval Department or the Cabinet or the President of the United States to do this job. Labor is willing to do the work of making this country safe and keeping this country safe, but labor wants a seat at the council table, labor wants to maintain its dignity.

It wants to maintain its rights, it wants to cooperate and not be driven to the work bench or the factory by violent action, repressive legislation, nor the rantings of men who are merely interested in the entire proposition from the standpoint of enhancing their political prestige.

Labor as represented in the CIO wants a partnership in this enterprise. This report of the Committee offers a cooperative partnership, and if this country, if this government, if American citizens accept labor on its own good-faith representations, therein will lie the future security for Americans and for American institutions.

NOT A 'ONE-MAN JOB'

This war is not a one-man war. The building up of a defense for America is not a one-man job. It is a job for Americans. And the men and women who are members of our affiliated organizations and who work in the factories of this country and its industrial establishments are after all Americans. They only ask the same participation and the same privileges as other Americans in contributing their part in making their home safe, their job safe and their country safe.

I think that the Committee is to be commended for its splendid report. I think the report when it is adopted by this meeting should be publicized to the highest possible degree by the several branches of our organization.

This is a policy upon which every member of our movement can stand erect, without fear, looking his fellow citizens squarely in the eye, and say, "I am an American, and the part I intend to play, if you will permit me and will accept my cooperation, is the part that every American wants to play in any emergency, either now or in the future, that may affect our country and ourselves."

PHILIP MURRAY

Recent Social Gains Must Be Protected

We have all contended since the origin of this organization that there has been no institution brought into being within the life of any of us in this country that has served a more useful purpose to society and good government in maintaining for ourselves free institutions and adding to the welfare of the workers of this nation than has CIO.

THE CIO'S RECORD

It has an unimpeachable record of human service that no one can successfully deny; the kind of a service that runs into the firesides and hearthstones of every family, every working family in the United States of America; the elevation of standards, the promotion of social gains, the improvement of conditions of employment, reductions in the hours of labor, and kindred services which reflect themselves into the lives of every American throughout this country of ours.

So your Committee is giving consideration to those factors was prompted by a desire to place before the people of this country the attitude of this great labor organization in the present defense program of the Government of the United States. We suggest here the protection of those gains, the maintenance of those standards that we have made possible during the past five years.

MAINTAIN STANDARDS

We insist in this program that this great labor organization of ours be given adequate representation on all boards, policy-making or otherwise, having to do with the administering of the program of our government's national defense.

We say to the Government of the United States, to the Congress of the United States, to the American people, "Thou shalt not interfere with the National Labor Relations Act; thou shalt not emasculate it or seek to destroy any of the standards set up in that Act";—that labor shall continue to enjoy the right of self-organization, join unions of their own choosing, enjoy the blessings of collective bargaining, true collective bargaining, for which these organizations stand. We insist that the standards set up by the Walsh-Healey Board, and validated by the Supreme Court of the United States, be maintained so that proper minimum unions be created in all of these major industries having to do with the promotion of our Government's national defense program.

INDUSTRIAL STRIFE

We say the program has not been presented to this Committee for the purpose of promoting industrial strife, but that rather we offer peaceful, practical cooperation to the Federal Government upon the basis of the Government's willingness to cooperate with labor during this great national emergency. We say to the people of the United States through the medium of this declaration that we are not interested in strikes, that we never have been interested in strikes, that strikes have only taken place in these great industries because of the obstinacy of the employers to recognize labor's rights, the right of labor to improve its lot through the orderly processes of true, legitimate, constructive collective bargaining.

We continue to bring again to the attention of this nation the repercussion that may ensue following the end of the present war program of the United States Government. What then? The inevitable dislocation of millions of workers taken out of these munitions and armament industries, no longer needed, to be pushed into the orderly, peaceable vocational pursuits of life in peace-time industry.

LABOR'S INTERESTS

Then there is another factor which we bring to the attention of the Committee, and that is this question having to do with subversive elements, the newly termed Trojan Horses and the so-called Fifth Columnists. We want to make it apparent to the people of the United States, that this is strictly an American institution, inherently dedicated towards the pursuit of American ideals and American objectives; that we have no interest in Tojan Horses, subversive movements, or Fifth Columns; that we are interested in the maintenance of our organizations, our civil rights, our civil liberties in this country; that we are not going to be led on a lot of mysterious bypaths about international dominations, or totalitarian governments, or subversive influences anywhere in the United States of America; that we are strictly, purely and unadulteratedly, without equivocation, an American institution devoted towards the promotion of American ideals and American objectives.

That is plain, that is understandable, that is not subject to any misunderstanding or misinterpretation. We are interested in building American unions to pursue the ideals and objectives of American working men and women in behalf of Americans. There is nothing wrong about it, there is nothing mysterious about it, there is nothing hidden under the table about that; that is straight, that is clean cut, that is factual, that is not distorted, that is not subject, as I have said before, to misinterpretation.

Then the Committee's report in closing deals again with the factor of this organization of ours making a declaration against America's participation in the European war. There again we are faithful to our trust, following out the pronouncements of CIO in its national conventions and in its Executive Board meetings.

AMERICAN NEUTRALITY

We say that this Committee's report follows the policy of American neutrality, without taking any position upon the merits or demerits of the respective belligerents now engaged in the European war. We say this program is offered through the medium of this Board to the members of our organization, and to the American people, in the hope that our country will stay out of the European conflict, — stay out. And that is not subject to any misinterpretaition.

This report was not framed by people who had become engulfed or overcome by a feeling of hysteria; it was thought out carefully, calmly, deliberately, thinking only in terms of our national welfare, no segment of our national population being given any special consideration.

HOUSING:

Board Raps 'Stall' On USHA Funds

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Deploring the delay which has tied up legislation in Congress aimed to increase the effectiveness of the United States Housing Authority, the CIO Executive Board unanimously passed a resolution calling upon committees holding up the legislation to report it out immediately to the House.

The resolution was passed following a report presented by the CIO Committee on Housing headed by Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, as chairman, and Anthony Wayne Smith, assistant CIO counsel, as executive secretary.

Legislation intended to enlarge the power of the USHA to borrow and lend money for municipal slum clearance and low rent housing programs and to grant related annual subsidies, the CIO committee reported, was passed last year by the Senate and reported out of the House committee, only to receive an adverse vote in the House, returning it to the Rules Committee.

"Since the beginning of the present session, efforts have been made to dislodge this legislation once again from committee," the report declared. "A number of amendments have been proposed, some of them desirable and others of dubious wisdom, designed to facilitate passage."

LAUCK APPOINTED

Appointment of W. Jett Lauck to the staff of the USHA as consultant was reported. Lauck who has been consultant to the United Mine Workers and other labor unions for many years, will concern himself with problems of importance to the CIO.

In accordance with the legislative program of the CIO, the committee reported that it had discussed legislation to lower the interest rates under Federal Housing Administration operations and other measures intended to expand combined public and private housing construction to a total of one million homes a year by the end of four or five years.

Pressing demands made upon the CIO in connection with the Wagner Labor Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, and other labor legislation, the report declared, had made it necessary to hold in abeyance activity on housing legislation for the time being.

"Local political activity in support of municipal projects," however, the report continued, has continued, "and some very effective work is being done by CIO organizations in the field. Educational work also continues, through the medium of the housing column, 'New Homes for Old,' through the provision of speakers from government agencies, and through the distribution of literature."

Chairman of the CIO Committee on Housing

Brophy Tells Status Of Local Unions

Washington, June 8.—Some 55 local industrial unions have been chartered by the CIO since September, 1939, John Brophy, Director of Local Industrial Unions, reported to the CIO executive board.

During the same period, 60 of the directly-chartered local unions have been transferred to national or international unions.

At the present time, Brophy announced, there are 455 local industrial unions throughout the country. A measure of their activities was shown in figures that of this group, 110 have a total of 230 contracts with employers.

Of 320 locals transferred to national unions since 1937, the largest number have gone into the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, the Barbers & Beauty Culturists, the Construction Workers, the Furniture Workers, Dist. 50 of the United Mine Workers, the Plaything & Novelty Workers, and the United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

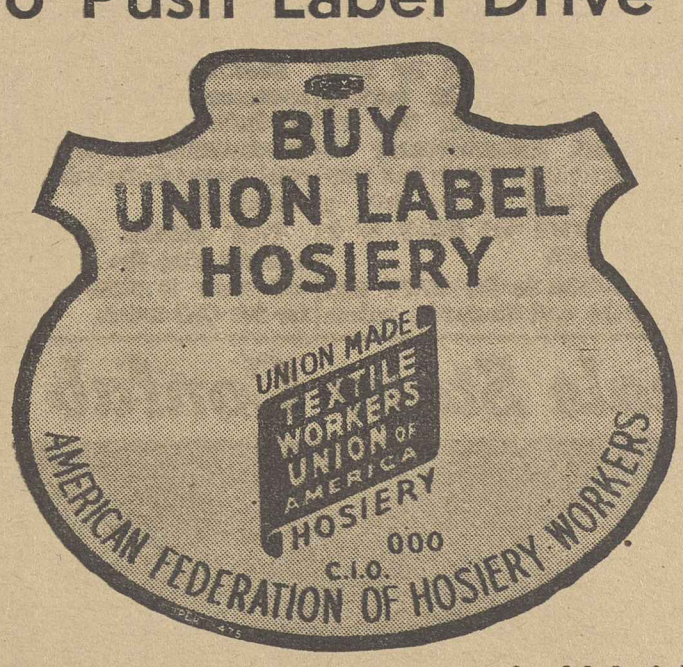
Urge Aid To Building Campaign

Washington, June 8.—By unanimous vote the Executive Board of the CIO approved the work of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and called upon its affiliated unions to help wherever possible.

The Committee, which has made great forward strides since its inception last year, is bringing industrial unionism to an industry "in which more than 2,000,000 workers have been deprived of the protection of labor unions because of the failure and impossibility of organization under the outworn craft unions," the Board declared.

ASK COOPERATION

"International unions affiliated with the CIO are hereby called upon to request their local unions to provide active coperation in this program by having their membership require that contractors and home-builders with whom they have influence or whom they patronize, employ members of the UCWOC.



"State and local Industrial Union Councils are also called upon to assist organizing efforts in the construction industry by publicizing fair and unfair contractors, asking their membership to buy homes built by the CIO, making organizing services available and doing all possible to speed the sucess of this drive."

$100,000 Raise At Timken Axle

Detroit, June 8.—When the CIO United Automobile Workers "applied the heat" to the Timken-Detroit Axle Co. here, the management loosened up after 16 weeks of stalling, and granted wage raises totalling $100,000 a year.

A vacation bonus sums up to $50,000 more.

Jersey Hosiery Workers To Push Label Drive

This is a new poster to advertise the union label of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Watch for the label when you buy socks and stockings.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., June 8.—Branch 11, American Federation of Hosiery Workers will take part in the "Know Your Town Exhibit" to be held at the new junior high school here June 10 to 14. It will be the only trade union exhibit in 32 industrial displays, including General Motors, Bell Telephone, Westinghouse and other giant corporations.

Members of the union will be present every evening to give information on the hosiery federation, the union label drive and on the manufacture of stockings. Souvenir mending kits will be given away. The union label exhibit is directed by Stephen Schmidt, chairman of the committee.

SOCIAL SECURITY:

Seek Improvements In Act, Enforcement

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Major efforts of the Social Security Committee in recent months have been devoted to the administration of the federal law and to the support of amendments to the entire social security system, the Committee reported at the meeting of the CIO Executive Board.

Among the important amendments advocated by the CIO is one introduced in the House as Bill HR 9798, providing for a federal system of unemployment compensation for seamen, now excluded from the Social Security Act. A resolution giving full support to this bill was passed unanimously by the board following the report of the Committee.

Vice-Pres. S. H. DALRYMPLE
Chairman of the CIO Committee on Social Security

SIZEABLE PAYMENTS

In the section dealing with administration of the present law, the Committee reported that between 75 and 100 million dollars will be paid out to some 500,000 aged persons and 200,000 dependents during the current year, with the payments rising to 200 to 300 million dollars covering more than one million during the next year.

Representatives of the Committee, the report stated, appeared before the Social Security Board and urged that the Board adopt specific measures which would guarantee effective labor participation in the administration of the law, simplicity and speed in the settlement of claims, and full cooperation with union representatives of claimants.

"The Board was also requested to issue a handbook explaining in detail the operation of the Federal Old Age Insurance plan," the report pointed out, "for the use of union officials who would be in a position to assist union members or their relatives."

SEEK UNIFORMITY

In a section dealing with pending legislation, the Committee reported that the movement to establish uniform federal systems of old age, health and unemployment benefits "which will provide security to our people against the unpredictable hazards of illness, unemployment and poverty-stricken old age, was the most important aspect of the development of social security in this country."

Bills supported by the CIO, the report stated, include: S.3365, aimed to liberalize benefits and simplify administration; S.3461 on industrial hygiene; S.3230, for the construction of hospitals in rural areas S.3924, the Wagner bill for permanent total disability benefits; and S. Con. Res. 34 to set up an advisory council on unemployment compensation.

Publicity:

Report On Publicity, Radio Work

Washington, June 8. — Radio speeches made by CIO leaders over national hook-ups, the latest activity undertaken by the CIO Publicity Department, has met with wide response, Len DeCaux, director, reported at the CIO executive board meeting held here this week.

"These speeches have dealt with such subjects as the CIO legislative program; CIO organizing plans; technological unemployment; what the CIO means to business; labor's social outlook; jobs made in America; the CIO program on social security; responsible unionism; the CIO and the Negro workers; labor and civil liberties and the Wagner Act," DeCaux reported.

MANY PUBLICATIONS

A notable increase in publication and circulation of pamphlet and leaflet literature and in the distribution of the CIO News and its adaptation to the needs of different unions and localities since the last convention was also reported by DeCaux.

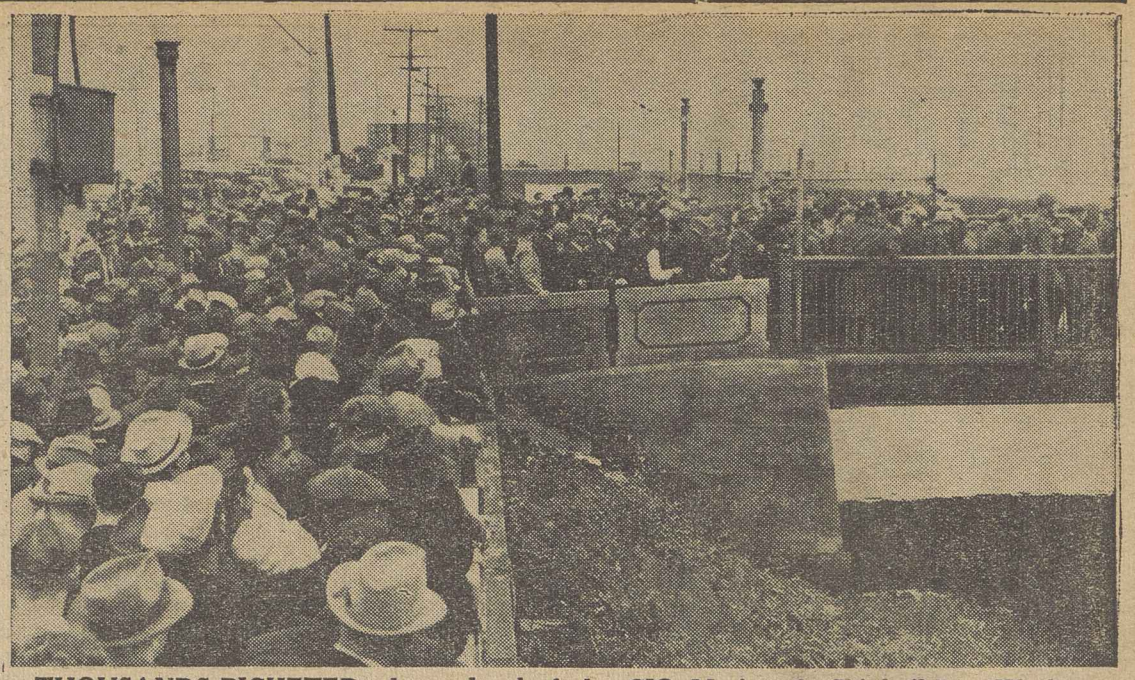
An increase during the last few months of The CIO News, now published in 18 different editions with two more planned for the near future, was reported by DeCaux who explained that these editions are the official organs of some dozen different international unions and organizing committees and the rest are organs of state and Local Industrial Union Councils.

Rap Pension Chiseling By Corporations

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The CIO Executive Board today had criticized chiseling by corporations in the handling of old age pensions for retired workers.

"Certain employers," it was pointed out, "who have established company pension systems which were paid for by their workers through wage deductions are now refusing to pay the full amount due to the eligible workers who receive federal old age insurance benefits."

The Board went on record as condemning the "practice of employers who take advantage of the federal old age insurance plan to deprive their workers of the full amount of the private pensions which they have paid for, by deducting the amounts received by such workers under the federal old age insurance plan."



CIO Union Wins 2-1 At General Electric In Massachusetts

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 8.—A two-to-one victory for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at two General Electric Co. plants today raised to 16 the number of the corporation's units to come under the master contract with the union.

The UERMWA polled 2,723 votes in the election, more than twice the 1,322 cast for "no union."

Under the GE contract between union and company, additional, GE plants are brought under the sphere of the agreement as soon as the UERMW has been certified by the Labor Board as sole collective bargaining agency.

The number of plants so covered now stands at 16, leaving only one sizeable factory and a few minor branches to be "mopped up" in coming months. The two plants in Pittsfield manufacture transformers and plastics.

THOUSANDS PICKETED when a local of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers at Kearney, N. J., struck for wage increases at the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. Workers won gains, called off the strike at the end of the second day.

Plan Drive In Ohio

Portsmouth, Ohio, June 8.—CIO organizing plans in this area moved into full gear at a coordinating conference held here with representatives of all local CIO affiliates in attendance.

Called by Paul W. Fuller, regional director, the plan as outlined calls for the reopening of a CIO office in Portsmouth under the direction of a sub-regional director, and streamlined union campaigns among the shoe and rubber workers.

The report of the Organizing Committee, besides laying plans for a coordinated drive by already established locals, recommended unionization in several open-shop plants and discussed formation of a local for Portsmouth construction workers in order to prepare for the work on a new $800,000 federal housing project soon to be built in the city.

Resolutions adopted by the meeting called for passage of the LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices Bill without crippling amendments, supported the CIO legislative program and called for removal of the poll tax in eleven southern states.

Unions represented at the meeting included steel, shoes, coal, brick and clay, ice and produce and the Workers Alliance.

U. S. Again Slaps Bata

Belcamp, Md., June 8 — The Nazi-controlled Bata Shoe Co., object of a CIO shoe workers' campaign to force its observance of American working standards, today received another in the series of ear-cuffings that it has been getting from the U. S. Government.

The firm, whose headquarters are in Zlinn, Germany, has been permanently enjoined from further violations of the child-labor sections of the Wage-Hour Act, it was announced in Washington by Katherine Lanroot, head of the U. S. Dept. of Labor's Children's Division.

EMPLOYED MINORS

The judgment, signed by Federal Judge Galvin Chestnut, followed complaints that the Bata outfit had employed 17 minors less than 16 years of age between Sept. 26, 1939, and April 19, 1940. In addition, work illegally produced by these minors was shipped in interstate commerce in violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Frank McGrath, president of the CIO United Shoe Workers, which has waged a vigorous campaign to direct public attention to the Nazi firm's law violation, hailed the government's actions as another step in forcing the company to keep in line with American labor policies.

Hawaiian CIO Asks Wage Act for Islands

HONOLULU, T. H., June 8.—Passage of a wage-hour act covering all Hawaiian workers and other legislation to benefit labor was demanded at a three-day territorial CIO conference held here in May.

Representatives from a group of CIO national unions with affiliated locals in the territory attended the conference which drew up a program to guide CIO political and organizational activity. Delegates passed a resolution condemning the decision of the public utility commisson granting a "virtual monopoly" to the Honolulu Rapid Transit Co., and urging that the city and county acquire the franchise if the commission's ruling is not reversed by the Supreme Court.

ASK WORK FOR JOBLESS

Congress was urged to concern itself with providing jobs for the youth and the unemployed, obtaining pensions for the aged and medical care for the ill instead of "playing chess with the lives of Americans by encouraging loans to warring nations and further involving the United States in the barbarous conflicts of European nations."

All CIO groups and other labor groups were urged to pledge financial and moral support to the Marine Cooks & Stewards Union, if they were forced to strike to protect their fundamental rights, and the obtaining of a CIO attorney paid by joint contributions from the various unions was approved. The International Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union had previously offered to pay $100 a month toward the salary of a labor lawyer.

In addition to the ILWU and the Cooks and Stewards, unions represented at the conference included the Quarry Workers International Union; United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers; United Transport Workers, the Garage Workers and the Teamsters.

Trade union membership in Hawaii has increased from a few hundred five years ago to nearly 10,000 today, according to estimates.

Predict Auto Victory At Baltimore

Baltimore, June 8 — Predictions that the CIO United Automobile Workers will be soon official sole bargaining agent in its 54th General Motors plant were made here today by Lawrence Smith, regional director for the union.

Smith's statement followed announcement by the National Labor Relations Board that the run-off election in the Baltimore Chevrolet plant will be held before the end of June.

UAW officials are confident, however, that the second election will show a clear-cut majority for the CIO union.

Shipyard Agrees To Negotiate

Kearny, N. J., June 8 — An agreement to negotiate the union's demands ended a two-day strike of 7,000 workers at the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers announced this week.

Union demands were for a 10 cent hourly increase, one week's vacation after a year's service, seniority rights and a union shop. The company had offered wage increases ranging from 2½ to 4 cents an hour and to continue negotiations on the union's demands.

John Green, president of the IUMSW, headed a committee of six who went to Washington to explain the dispute to government agencies.

ANSWER CHARGES

The two-day shut-down halted work on four naval vessels and five merchant ships. Answering charges hurled by anti-labor congressmen and the press against the union that the strike was "treason", the executive board of the union declared:

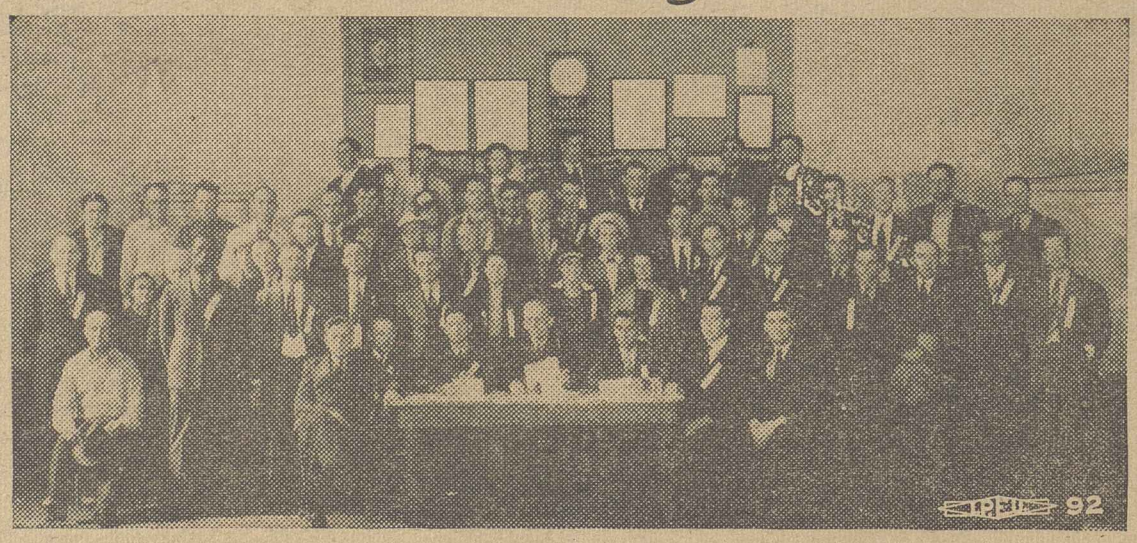
"The only action which might possibly be construed as 'treason' was the action of the company in taking advantage of the national defense situation to deny the workers their earnest and just demands."

The CIO National Maritime Union defended the Kearny shipworkers in an editorial in the union's official organ, the Pilot, warning their members of what might be in store for them if war breaks out. "It was a simple strike for simple trade union demands. The strikers wanted 10c an hour increases and annual vacations of one week for men employed by the company one year," the editorial declared.

"The strike was not called on acount of the present European war; it did not come as a result of the war, and it had nothing whatever to do with the war. Nevertheless the strike had no sooner been called than the press, the radio, the employers, government officials, newspaper columnists (whether in the pay of the manufacturers or not) and other propagandists began to tie it up with the war."

Rubber Union Launches Campaign at Goodyear

AKRON, Ohio, June 8.—Opening of an organizing drive at the Goodyear plant here was announced today by President S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers.



He declared that under a joint campaign planned by the CIO and the rubber workers, "we expect to make Goodyear a really union plant before many months are over."

Dalrymple also announced that nine new locals had been chartered by the URW, in rubber centers scattered from the Deep South to New England and the Midwest.

"We are sinking roots for the first time in many non-union centers," he said. "In the Goodyear plant at Jackson, Mich., for instance, we have been able to sign a substantial group of loyal members."

An intensive campaign is also being on at the anti-union Gates Rubber Co. plant in Denver, Colo., Dalrymple declared. The new locals are in Atlanta, Ga.; Wilmington, Del.; Garrettsville, Dayton and Cleveland, Ohio; Waterloo, Ia.; Bridgeport, Conn.; Long Island City, N. Y., and Rock Island, Ill.

Ohio Locals Stage Confab

CIO UNIONS in the Portsmouth district got together for a coordinating conference and made plans for organization of mass production industries in southeastern Ohio and northern West Virginia. The meeting was called by Paul W. Fuller, CIO regional director.

Rap Green for 'Trojan Horsetrade'

Man Bites Dog Dept:

Paper Apologizes For Anti-CIO Story

PITTSBURGH, June 15.—Big chain newspapers don't often apologize to the labor movement for unjustified attacks, even when they are clearly shown to be in the wrong, but the "Pittsburgh Press", part of the Scripps-Howard chain, has done it here.

The attack was made on the Steel Workers Organizing Committee for adopting a resolution against certain aspects of the Justice Dept.'s "anti-trust" drive against unions, in which it implied that SWOC was critical of the government drive "to break up restraints, collusion and racketeering in the building industry."

The Press, in its editorial apology, is glad to note that SWOC's position is exactly the opposite—that SWOC has no more intention of upholding collusion with employers, racketeering, etc., as practiced by AFL building trades and other unions than any other honest organization or person in the country.

Crooning Mayor Croons For Hosiery Union

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 15. — Crooning Carl Zeidler, newly elected mayor of Milwaukee, and Dan Hoan, the veteran socialist mayor he defeated, will appear as special guests when the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, opens its twenty-ninth annual convention in the Hotel Schroeder here June 17.

More than 200 delegates have been elected to the convention, which will continue through June 24, according to William Smith, general secretary-treasurer.

Milwaukee's Branch 16, of which Alfred Marriott is president, will be host to the visiting hosiery workers from 87 branches in Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Indiana, North Carolina, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama, Maryland, Illinois, California, Michigan and Missouri.

RIEVE TO SPEAK

Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers' Union, CIO, and former president of the AFHW, will attend the sessions as will a number of other personages in the labor movement.

The only officials to be elected at this convention will be a president and first vice-president. Alexander McKeown is president, filling an unexpired term of Pres. Rieve, and Alfred Hoffmann, research director, is first vice-president, filling Mc-eown's unexpired term.

Problems expected to come before the convention include the introduction of nylon yarn, the third shift and the co-operative hosiery mill development.

Courtesy Drive Gets Union OK

New York, June 15.—"Organized courtesy by organized labor" took its place today as a major slogan of the CIO Transport Workers Union, representing 50,000 workers on public and private transit lines throughout New York City.

Pointing out that TWU members will be in contact with thousands of out-of-town visitors to the World's Fair, the TWU executive board declared that "to most of the city's visitors, our members have become a symbol not alone of the city's hospitality but of organized labor itself.

"To them and to our fellow New Yorkers we again must prove that unionization of workers in a public service industry is a genuine guarantee of responsible and safe operation of that service."

To give added zip to the courtesy-safety campaign, the union set aside the weeks from June 17 to July 31 for special emphasis on the program, planned distribution of some three million pieces of literature and the use of radio and billboard advertisements.

Congressmen, AFL Leader Hit Sell-Out Move

WASHINGTON, June 15. — Crippling amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act moved into the Senate legislative hopper today after a Tory-minded House, cheerfully supported by Pres. William Green of the AFL, had passed the Smith bill.

Congressman Mary Norton of New Jersey, head of the House Labor Committee, and Pres. George Lynch of the AFL Pattern Makers League were among those who caustically condemned Green's doublecross on organized labor.

After having previously criticized the Smith bill, Green closed a deal whereby his support was swapped for inclusion in the bill of the vicious craft union amendment, aimed at smashing industrial unionism.

The CIO made immediate plans for a campaign to convince the Senate that the Wagner Act should not be amended.

Other developments in the fast-moving political situation included CIO opposition to defense taxation provisions which would bear down most heavily on the low income groups; and an appeal to Congress to defeat as an anti-labor move a bill to permit police officers to gather evidence by wire-tapping.

SAVE OUR HOMES: To Washington from New York went bus loads of small home owners to urge amendment of the Home Owners Loan Corp. Act. They ask passage of the Mead-Barbour Bills, which would put a 2-year moratorium on principal payments to the HOLC and cut interest rates to 3 per cent. The delegation was organized by Labor's Non-Partisan League, which is supporting the campaign.

2,000-1 Dislike Poll Tax

Washington, June 15.—Popular sentiment in this country is 2,000 to 1 in favor of doing away with the poll tax that Southern reactionaries use to disfranchise millions of white and Negro workers, according to a survey just completed here.

The survey, which asked people to vote for or against the Geyer bill to outlaw the poll tax, showed more than 4,000,000 for, 236,000 against, with about 250,000 with no opinion.

The survey was sent to organizations in 35 states with the request that the question be discussed at meetings and the results tabulated. It was put up by the Natl. Conference for Democratic Rights of New York.

PAY FOR REST

Washington, June 15. — Employes covered by the Wage-Hour Act must be paid for short rest periods, Administrator Col. Philip B. Fleming announced this week. A short rest period is defined as including periods up to and including 20 minutes.

ON THE MARCH: Los Angeles CIO heads parade through downtown streets to fight passage by Congress of a bill to deport President Harry Bridges of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. Also marching were members of the Hollywood Peace Forum and the California Youth Legislature.

Survey Helps Hush Wail Of 'No Skilled Workers'

NEW YORK, June 15.—Who says there's a shortage of skilled workers?

First and partial tabulation of results of a "supply of skilled craftsmen" survey launched last week for the electrical and machine manufacturing industry by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America (CIO), made public today (June 10) by the union's Director of Organization, James J. Matles, shows that in 13 of the union's 214 local unions, there are available "on 15 days' notice" 2,879 skilled hands who are either unemployed or employed at jobs below their skills.

As of today, only the 13 locals had reported, but Mr. Matles said "the whole national picture in the electrical and machine manufacturing industry" would be available within a few weeks.

"If the percentage established by this very incomplete preliminary return holds up, weighting each local according to membership," he said, "the final report will show an available supply of 47,294 skilled hands in this field.

"We cannot be sure, of course, whether the average established by this small sampling will be either greater or smaller than the average established when complete results are in hand."

The same 13 locals reporting also stated they had 6,520 part-time skilled workers, that is, workers employed at present for fewer than 40 hours per week.

To Form Council In Georgia

ATLANTA, Ga., June 15.—CIO unions in Georgia will hold a State constitutional convention and rally here June 22 and 23 to set up a CIO State Industrial Union Council.

Michael Widman, assistant national director of organization will represent the CIO national office at the convention and give the keynote speech.

Representatives from locals of the Textile Workers Union will make up the largest group among the delegates who will come from all CIO unions in industries throughout the state.

The Atlanta Industrial Council will be host to the visiting delegates. The rally will begin at one o'clock Saturday afternoon with an affair at Lakewood Park, which will feature a jalopy race of battered old automobiles, an athletic contest between the various locals and a barbecue.

Widman and others will speak in the afternoon, and in the evening a dance will be held. The business meeting opens at ten o'clock Sunday morning.

Auxiliary Elects

Astoria, Ore., June 15 — New officers of the Columbia River District Council of Women's Auxiliaries were installed at a meeting of the Council held at Seaside Ore., early this month. President Grace Mann of the Federated Auxiliaries and other speakers addressed the delegates at a noon dinner on Saturday, and Sunday morning Ralph Peoples, secretary-treasurer of the Oregon CIO State Council spoke to the women.

Long Anti-Labor Fight Stopped by U. S. Court

BOSTON, June 15.—After close to two and a half years of Labor Board hearings and Court litigation, the Somerset Shoe Co. of Skowhegan and Auburn, Me., scene of a bitter lockout and strike in 1937, has found out it has to obey the law of the land and bargain collectively with the United Shoe Workers, CIO.

The company, one of New England's leading anti-union shoe firms, was told in a two-to-one Federal Court decision here that it has to comply with a Labor Relations Board order to bargain with the CIO union, to stop supporting a company stooge outfit, stop intimidating CIO members, and post notice of compliance.

The Court found that the Board description of company activities in building up phony "citizens' committees," trying to stampede "back-to-work" movements, making mass layoffs, etc. was correct and that the company had consistently violated the Wagner Act.

'Negotiate', Shipowners Are Told by Coast Marine Unions

ASTORIA, Ore., June 15.—The Maritime Federation of the Pacific, representing 45,000 West Coast maritime workers, hammered out a legislative, political and organizational program at its sixth annual convention held here, and called upon the shipowners to get down to brass tacks in negotiations with the CIO Longshoremen and Marine Cooks.

Delegates voted unanimously to reaffirm the CIO stand that labor wants no part of the war and opposes all efforts to involve the United States in the "barbaric orgies of conquest and aggression."

The resolution demanded that Congress "concern itself with providing jobs for the youth and able-bodied, pensions for the aged, medical care for the ill, instead of playing chess with the lives of Americans by encouraging loans to warring nations and further involving the United States in the barbarous conflicts of the European nations."

A national defense program adopted by the delegates declared that the first line of defense is protection of labor's rights, including the right to strike, the continuation of social and labor legislative gains and strict observance of the Bill of Rights.

'DEMOCRACY CAN WORK'

"We know that Democracy can be made to work by providing such high standards of living for all the people that any threat to our democratic liberties will rally all true Americans to the protection of our shores in the revolutionary traditions of 1776," the resolution on national defense declared.

Listed as important points in the line of defense were:

Protection and continuation of the National Labor Relations Board.

Strict enforcement of the Wage-Hour Act and the Walsh-Healey Bill.

Continuation and extension of the social and labor legislation, including application of the Social Security Act to seamen.

Universal application of the six-hour day as a means of solving unemployment and poverty,

PLEA TO CONGRESS

"Therefore, we demand," the resolution on national defense concluded, "that our congressmen and senators weigh the value of any national defense program in the light of these standards."

Earlier in the convention delegates voted to suspend rules to take immediate action on a resolution denouncing a bill to deport Harry Bridges, introduced recently in Congress.

A resolution was passed to petition the Federal government to grant citizenship to Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union, "in view of the great work he has done in protecting one of the best traditions of America—the American standard of living."

'Women's Voice' Now on Paper!

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 15 — A new CIO publication called "The Voice of CIO Women" made its bow here this week. Its program calls upon the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of CIO members to exercise their "concerted strength as consumers, as citizens and as a section of labor for the rapid and complete achievement of the program of the CIO."

The paper is issued by the Cincinnati Women's Auxiliary Council.

Construction Locals Pass 150 Mark

Washington, June 15.—Ten new local unions, bringing the total to more than 150, were chartered by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee in the period since May 15, Chairman A. D. Lewis announced today.

Pennsylvania led the list with three new locals, while Illinois was second with two. States in which one new local were chartered in the past month are: New York, Connecticut, Wyoming, Ohio, and Utah.

New wage agreements signed by the UCWOC with builders included three in Cincinnati covering heavy construction, 35 in New York City covering building construction, 13 in Chicago, 4 in Detroit, and several elsewhere.

Several thousand construction workers are embraced within the terms of these new wage agreements,

Tax, Don't Gouge, CIO Asks

Washington, June 15.—The CIO is opposed to making workers and other low income groups pay most of the cost of national defense, as proposed in the tax bill now before the Senate Finance Committee, Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, told Committee Chairman Pat Harrison. It proposes instead that an effort be made to tax huge incomes and corporation profits.

Nearly half the proposed revenue for arms will come from taxes on consumers and on low income people, the CIO pointed out, since excise taxes on cigarettes, gasoline and beverages, as well as cutting down exemptions on low incomes, are main features of the bill.

The bill also fails to eliminate tax exemptions for holders of government bonds, Pressman said, and instead proposes to use revenue from workers and low income groups to pay interest to such individuals and corporations that hold government securities.

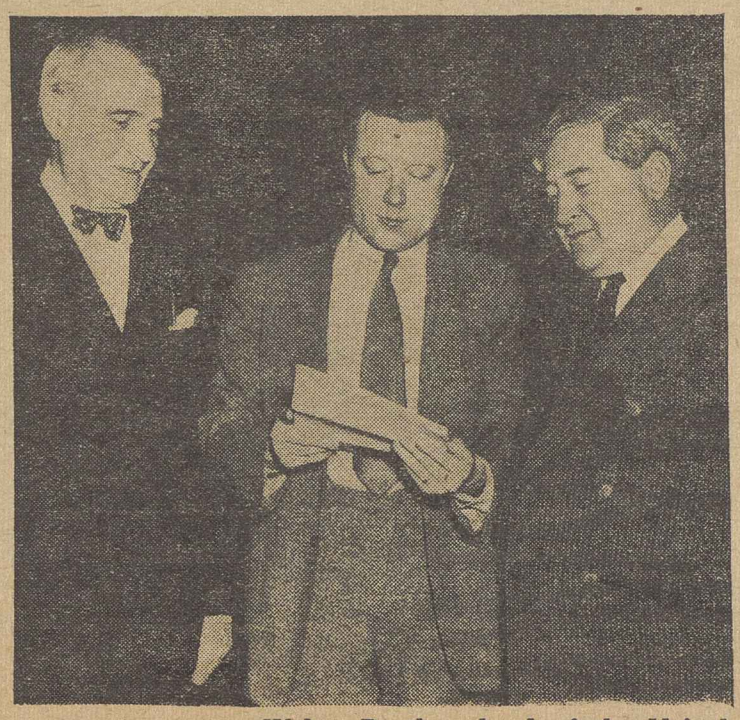
Pressman's letter cited the CIO tax program adopted at the San Francisco convention, which called for a halt in increasing consumer and worker taxation and for a serious attempt to make those who can best afford it pay their share.

10% Wage Boost Won In Akron

Akron, Ohio, June 15.—Signing of a new agreement between the Akron Transportation Company and Local 1 of the CIO Transport Workers Union, covering all public transit employes in the city, was announced here by the union at the culmination of several weeks of negotiations.

The contract succeeds another which expired April 1 last. Improvements include wage increases from 4 to 10 per cent for maintenance employes, extension of vacations to two weeks for operating and maintenance employes of greater seniority and arbitration of dismissals.

First contract between the union and the company was signed in 1937. The new agreement runs to March 31, 1941.



Colored People to Hear Pres. Lewis on June 18

PHILADELPHIA, June 15. — CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will address the 31st annual conference of the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People here on Tuesday, June 18.

The meeting, which is the national get-together of the organization, will be held at the Tindley Temple, Broad and Fitzwater Streets. Lewis is scheduled to speak at 8:30 P. M.

Other speakers will include Arthur B. Spingarn, head of the Association, a nationally-known liberal leader.

Pres. Lewis' address will be the third in recent months that he has delivered to progressive pro-labor organizations. In February he spoke at the convention of the American Youth Congress, and a month later he appeared at the National Negro Congress meeting in Washington.

No Wire-Tap Power For Cops, Is Plea

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Wiretapping, which a bill now before Congress, would make legal, will be used to repress unions and to persecute people "whose economic and political views and activities may be obnoxious to the present incumbents of law enforcement offices," Lee Pressman, CIO counsel, warned the House Judiciary Committee in hearings on the bill here.

Pressman quoted from last week's CIO Executive Board resolution, which described the bill as a "basis for establishing a weapon for repressing elementary and basic civil rights" and from anti-wiretapping opinions of three U. S. Supreme Court Justices in his testimony.

WORKERS' RIGHTS AT STAKE

The CIO stands solidly behind a program for national defense. Pressman reminded the Committee, but is equally determined to protect workers from arbitrary invasions of their constitutional rights.

"We must not permit any form of tyranny or oppression to seep into our daily lives under the guise of protection of national defense," he said. "Such procedure, if it were to occur, would mean the destruction of the very things the people of this nation are striving to protect.

"It is our judgment . . . that wiretapping permitted in the hands of any one individual, regardless of how his integrity might be, is a step in this direction."

Fed Up With AFL, Local Votes CIO By 3-1

DAYTON, Ohio, June 15.—Fed up by two years' experience in the AFL Intl. Moulders Union, employes at the G. H. & R. Foundry voted 425-127 to be represented in the future by the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Organization Director James Matles of the UERMW said the local group is the third AFL union which has swung into the CIO affiliate's ranks in recent weeks. Earlier Local B-1010 of the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in New York City, and the federal local at the Remington-Rand plant in North Tonawanda, N. Y., had kissed the federation goodbye.

The 127 votes cast against the CIO in the local NLRB poll were not for the AFL organization but for "no union." Two years under a Moulders' Union contract left the AFL with so little support among the company's employes that it could not even get a place on the ballot.

The Big Parade

NEW YORK, June 15.—Some 47 employes of the Lewis Steel Co. in Brooklyn, after two years as a federally-chartered AFL local and after two years under an AFL contract, today had joined the swing to the CIO.

In a Natl. Labor Relations Board election they cast 47 votes for the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Nobody voted for the AFL.

Closed Shop In Ohio Plant

Cincinnati, June 15—Check-off, closed shop, higher wages and shorter hours mark the contract just won by Lincoln Local Industrial Union 531, CIO, with the Chemical Products Corp. here, it is reported by Paul W. Fuller, CIO regional director in this area.

The contract also secures sole collective bargaining recognition for the CIO union, as well as guarantees of no coercion or intimidation of union members, seniority, grievance adjustment machinery and paid vacations.

Doublecross Gets Smith Bill by House

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, June 15. — Passage of the Smith ripper amendments to the Wagner Act in the lower House in Congress is credited by labor and Congressional observers here to the last-minute endorsement of the bill by William Green, AFL president, whose own employer-written amendments have been blocked by organized labor and liberal protest.

Green's action, which was described as "a new low in treachery in American labor history" was received first with amaze-ment and then with sharp condemnation from leaders in his own organization and on the floor of Congress.

Others who recalled John L. Lewis' exposure of the original AFL amendments as having been written by agents of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and other reactionary employer groups saw it as "final proof" of Lewis' testimony before the U. S. Senate earlier this year.

The most biting attack on Green's latest betrayal came from George Q. Lynch, president of the AFL-affiliated Pattern Makers League — on organization long known for its anti-CIO policies. Lynch's statement, after describing Green as an anti-labor "Trojan horse" and a leader of "blitzkriegs" against unions, had this to say:

'HAMSTRING LABOR'

"All of the Smith amendments were designed for one single purpose: to hamstring the legitimate efforts of organized labor. They are so bad they never could have passed the lower nouse without AFL endorsement to serve as camouflage for their real intent and purpose.

"June 7, 1940 (the day Green endorsed the Smith Bill) will be remembered as a dark day in American labor history. Let the record show that the Pattern Makers League was not even a silent or indifferent partner to the intrigue."

From CIO headquarters, Pres. John L. Lewis issued a call for immediate action by all CIO organizations and members to block passage of the Smith ripper bill in the Senate, where the bill now goes after House passage. Lewis urged an immediate nationwide campaign of letters, resolutions, etc., from CIO members to the Senate Labor Committee and to Senators from their own states, as well as a renewed campaign to warn labor and liberal groups of the dangers in the bill.

"I cannot impress you too strongly with the need of initiat-

Lewis Asks Defeat Of Amendments

WASHINGTON, June 15. — Anti-labor amendments to the Wagner Act in the Smith bill, passed by the lower House of Congress after personal endorsement by Wm. Green, president of the AFL, were analyzed by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis in an appeal for action by CIO affiliates to block the bill in the Senate.

According to Lewis' analysis, the Smith bill "threatens the destruction of all our industrial unions and industrial union contracts," through eight provisions designed to hamstring labor organizations.

These provisions, as analyzed by Lewis, are:

1. Forced certification of craft units, no matter how small, at the whim of "any conceivable group of craft workers in any industrial plant." This section, put in at Green's request, was seen as the reason for his endorsement and motivated by his desire to crush industrail unionism at any cost.

2. Full license to employers to agitate and propagandize against unions, which "under the guise of freedom of expression, would give back to employers their license to destroy all unions."

3. All orders of the old Labor Board may be revoked which would "permit anti-labor corporations to further delay their compliance on all outstanding orders which now protect our unions."

4. Limitation of back pay awards to 12 months and a time limit of six months on filing complaints. Under this section, according to Lewis; "Labor is treated as a Pariah with the short statute of limitations, with property rights on the other hand receiving full protection."

5. Excluding workers guilty of petty law violations from the benefits of the act. "This is nothing short of an attempt to sentence to economic death peaceful pickets who would be at the mercy of labor spies, provocateurs, and hired thugs of the employers", he said.

WORKERS LOSE

6. Exclusion of agricultural processing workers from the act, which would cut out many thousands of workers now protected.

7. Drastic reorganization of the Administrative machinery of the Act, described in the Smith Committee minority report of Reps. Murdock and Healy as "The Ripper Amendments."

8. License to the courts to retry virtually every case handled by the Board, which would "make the Board impotent through strait-jacket rules and permit the courts, with their reactionary tendencies, to scuttle the entire Wagner Act."

Lewis' analysis of the Smith Bill was accompanied by an urgent appeal to CIO affiliates to rush protests to the Senate Labor Committee and their own Senators.

Time to Save the Wagner Act

There is still time to save the Wagner labor relations act.

The House has passed the Smith amendments by a vote of 258 to 129. These represent the most extreme proposals of the anti-union manufacturers for the emasculation of the act and the destruction of labor's collective bargaining rights.

The Smith amendments were denounced by Senator Wagner and every other friend of the Labor Act. Even Pres. Green of the AFL declared not long ago that "the amendments offered by the Smith committee as a whole strike in a destructive way at vital, fundamental principles of the Labor Act."

Only an amazing last-minute reversal of position by Green made possible the passage of the Smith amendments. Without this, even the most reactionary members of Congress might have hesitated to incur labor's wrath by voting for such a barefaced destruction of labor's rights.

The craft amendment embodied in the Smith bill threatens the very existence of all industrial unions. It would subject them to immediate raids and division, even in the face of existing contracts. It would also destroy company-wide or region-wide collective bargaining by permitting division of all workers into the smallest possible units for election purposes.

But the amendments passed by the House go much further than this attack on industrial unionism. They include numerous other assaults on the organizing and bargaining rights of all labor unionists.

In a letter to all CIO affiliates, Pres. John L. Lewis has urged that the following steps be taken:

(1) That letters be written to all Senators, particularly the members of the Senate Education and Labor Committee and Senator Wagner, expressing opposition to the Smith amendments that have been brought before Congress.

(2) That CIO unions should enlist the support of AFL unions and progressive organizations of all kinds in making representations to the Senate against the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act. All reports indicate that the AFL membership is as much outraged as is that of the CIO at what has happened.

(3) That employers enjoying stable collective bargaining relations should be warned of the industrial chaos which will result from adoption of the craft amendment and other changes proposed in the Smith bill, and urged to make their own protests to the Senate.

In other words, the present threat to the Wagner Act is a threat to all labor unions, to all fair employers and to all good Americans who desire to see industrial peace preserved on the basis of industrial democracy in the present national emergency.

If all who have labor's and the country's welfare at heart will act at once, to impress their wishes on the United States Senate, the Wagner Act can be saved. But the time is short. There must be no delay!

Looking Ahead — By LEN DE CAUX

Bill Green - Fifth Columnist

WHEN Franco's four columns attacked Madrid, their boast was that they had a fifth column of pretended Loyalists within the city who would betray it at the critical moment.

When the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers made its plans for attacking labor by breaking through the protecting walls of the Wagner Act, it too counted on a fifth column within labor.

Franco's fifth column consisted of strategically placed people who professed the most ardent devotion to the Loyalist cause.

The N.A.M.'s fifth column, it now turns out, was led by an individual named William Green, high placed in labor's ranks, who claimed to be a defender of the Wagner Act until the right moment came to betray it.

* * * *

"It is the opinion of the American Federation of Labor that the amendments offered by the Smith Committee as a whole strike in a destructive way at vital, fundamental principles of the Labor Act," declared Fifth Columnist Bill before the time came to show his true colors.

"I want to make clear the position taken by the AFL with regard to certain amendments proposed and sponsored by some employers' associations," he said on another occasion. "We are against them. We will oppose them with our full strength."

* * * *

Then came The Day. After two years of valiant labor resistance, the N.A.M., the Chamber of Commerce and all the other forces of anti-labor reaction brought up their big guns for what they hoped would be the final assault on labor's citadel.

* * * *

Trustfully the AFL unions looked to their leader, Bill Green, to use his "full strength" to beat off the assault of the Smith committee and the employers' associations.

And boldly Fifth Columnist Bill went into action—with a white flag in his hand! His great moment had come.

If the terms of surrender would include the splitting up and extermination of the industrial unions of the CIO, said Brother Bill, and a few minor sops he could claim as concessions, he would open up the gates of labor's citadel.

* * * *

With a great hurrah, that echoed through the furthest ranks of the embattled anti-union manufacturers. Generals Smith, Cox, Hoffman and the rest accepted all the "terms" of Fifth Columnist Bill.

At his invitation, as each tory Congressman was careful to explain, they marched triumphantly through the House end of labor's defenses. The Smith amendments were adopted by the House of Representatives by a vote of 258 to 129.

* * * *

There is one difficulty, however, that a fifth columnist confronts after he has performed one of his great acts of betrayal.

It is a little hard, after that, to repeat the same performance on another sector of the front. People will talk, you know; and it must be admitted that some harsh things have been said about Fifth Columnist Bill, since his great moment came.

* * * *

"The blitzkrieg pulled by the top command of the AFL by joining forces with recognized reactionaries to destroy labor's front line defenses established by the Natl. Labor Relations Act."

"The right to organize and bargain collectively under these amendments becomes a sham."

"All of the Smith amendments were designed for one single purpose, to hamstring the legitimate efforts of organized labor. They are so bad they never could have passed the lower house without AFL endorsement to serve as camouflage for their real intent and purpose."

These are just a few of the more polite remarks made by liberal Congressmen and an anti-CIO president of an AFL craft union, as they watched Fifth Columnist Bill doing his stuff. CIO comments are less polite.

* * * *

The Smith amendments were passed by the House, Congressman Mary Norton points out, "in response to the request of the president of the AFL, the Manufacturers' Association and the National Chamber of Commerce."

For his reward Green got a craft amendment in the House that would divide industrial unions into infinitesmal fragments, craft by craft, plant by plant, employer unit by employer unit.

In return he agreed to amendments that will give employers all possible powers to prevent union organization; destroy Board power to protect labor's rights; upset existing Board orders; promote evasion and delay; limit or abolish protection for countless workers; and tie up all Board orders with endless court review.

Quite a day's work for any fifth columnist, Bill! But don't blame labor, AFL or CIO, if it wants no repeat performance in the Senate!

What They Say About Doublecrossing Labor

Washington, June 15. — AFL President Wm. Green's endorsement of the Smith ripper amendments to the Wagner Act brought some pretty harsh comments from his own organization and from Congress when it was published. Here are a few of the more pungent ones.

From George Q. Lynch, head of the AFL Pattern Makers League:

"That all 'Trojan horses' do not carry the colors of one stable is evidenced in the 'blitzkrieg' pulled by the top command of the AFL by joining forces with recognized reactionaries to destroy labor's front line defenses established by the Natl. Labor Relations Act."

"The record now shows that with a few unimportant exceptions, which will cause no chagrin to the smug satisfaction of Congressman Smith and the Interests he represents, the AFL top leaders have endorsed the Smith program cap-a-pie."

"However, under another Smith amendment, endorsed by the AFL, a violation of law by employers is not a violation of law unless it is a 'preponderant' violation. Slapping around one union man at a time in an industry employing 5,000 would hardly be construed as preponderant opposition to unionism. The defense here could be the one entered by the less than discreet young lady who pleaded extenuation of her sin on the ground that the baby was such a little one."

* * *

"We have repeatedly said that opening the NLRA for amendments in this Congress would lead to emasculation of the rights of labor under the Act. We said this, however, without knowledge or thought that our own parent body would become an accessory before the fact."

And from Rep. Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, speaking on the floor of Congress:

"What sort of combination or trade is responsible for the change of heart of my friend Mr. Green is beyond me. . . . What you are doing today you are doing in response to the request of the president of the AFL, the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. That is a beautiful group.

"If the Smith amendments are adopted, the workers of this country will be sold down the river, and those voting for this bill will have to do the explaining.

* * *

"When the president of the AFL asks for labor legislation next year, I hope he will succeed in getting his friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Rep. Smith), to cast his very first vote in the interest of labor legislation."

Doublecrossing Helps Pass Smith Bill

ing the campaign with the utmost dispatch and the need of obtaining the maximum degree of support from all of our local unions throughout the country in order to stop the Smith amendments," he wrote.

MRS. NORTON BITTER

Lynch's condemnation of the president of his own parent body was echoed in Congress by Rep. Abe Murdock of Utah, who had signed a scorching minority statement on the Smith committee report; and by Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, who bitterly described the Green-employer tieup as responsible for House passage of the bill.

"What you are doing today you are doing in response to the request of the president of the AFL, the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. That is a beautiful group," she said.

"If the Smith amendments are adopted, the workers of the country will have been sold down the river, and those voting for this bill will have to do the explaining."

Rep. Murdock, speaking on the floor of the House, declared "I am rather shocked this morning at the smoothly-working machinery that appears to have been constructed and evolved between the majority of the Smith Committee and apparently the president of the AFL.

"My position on labor is not, nor is my mind, so versatile that I can keep up with the fast moving changes of the president of the AFL and the majority of the Smith Committee. I do not believe that the laboring man approves of such tactics.

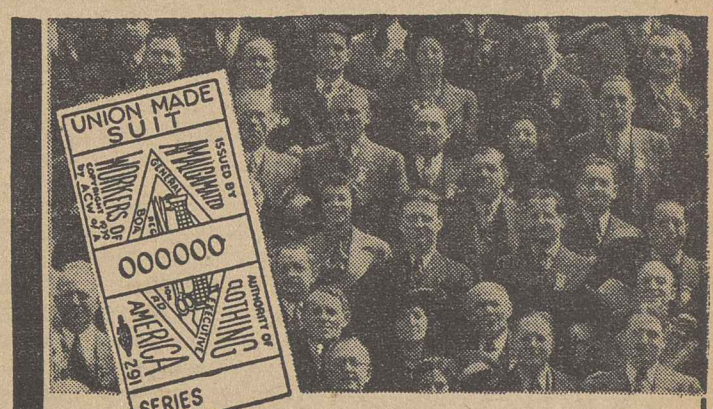
"In my opinion it just will not work. It is not the type of procedure that is conducive to labor peace here in the U. S."

Further confirmation of Lewis' earlier charges of Green-NAM plotting against the Act was made by Lynch in another section of his blast against Green, where he said:

"It is not denied, but admitted, that representatives of employer groups were consulted by (AFL) committee counsel and even contributed suggestions for improving the Act from the viewpoint of their clients."

A 'RIPPER BILL'

The Smith amendments, as passed by the lower House, go before the Senate Labor Committee for consideration early this week. In their present form, they contain almost all of the labor-busting features that caused two of the five members of the Smith Committee to describe them as a "ripper bill" and to urge Congress to refuse to pass them.



The CIO policy on national defense is out in leaflet form for mass distribution. It calls for protection of labor's rights as a first step to protecting America. It costs $3.25 per 1,000. Write CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C., for your orders.

People Don't Want War, Wheeler Tells Congress

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The overwhelming majority of the people of the U. S. are opposed to our entry into the European war, and "we should serve notice that the great majority of the members of the Senate are not going to vote for war," Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana told his colleagues in a strongly worded speech here that bristled with warnings against the current pro-war drive.

"American mothers ought to wake up," Sen. Wheeler said. "American youth ought to wake up; American workingmen ought to wake up—because everybody who has any sense at all knows what is happening. We know the propoganda that is going on, and every member of the Senate knows that every move is being made to lead us, if you please, down the road to war.

". . . we do not want to fool Great Britain or France into thinking that we are going to send American boys across the water again to be shot to pieces on the battlefields of Europe. We are not going to see them come back home with their legs off and their arms off, blind and deaf—and for what?" he added.

WARNS PARTY

Sen. Wheeler's speech, which came during a debate on current defense measures, and was accompanied by anti-war declarations from other Senators, contained a caution to the Democrats against the dangers of becoming known as a "war party."

"I do not want to have to oppose the Democratic Party," he said, "but if it becomes necessary to break with the Democratic party, I shall break with it if it becomes a war party. I want everyone who is interested to know that I am not going to support any candidate for President of the U. S.—no matter who he may be—who is going to try to get us into this war."

Conventions

Kentucky

Ashland, Ky., June 15.—Allan S. Haywood, national CIO director of organization, will speak at the annual convention of the Kentucky State Industrial Union Council which opens here today at the Henry Clay Hotel.

Indiana

Indianapolis, Ind., June 15.—Conflict with the date of another convention and inability to obtain hotel facilities has forced the Indiana State Industrial Union Council to postpone the date of its convention to August 23 to 25. It was previously scheduled to open August 14, John Bartee, secretary-treasurer of the Council, said in announcing the new date.

Technicians Ask U. S. Stay at Peace

NEW YORK, June 15.—Strong opposition to U. S. entry into the present European war, plus a determination to protect labor's rights in the present defense program and a campaign of organizing unorganized workers featured the fourth convention of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians just concluded here.

The convention was also featured by the presentation of an FAECT award to Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro scientist famous for his work in agricultural chemistry at Tuskegee Institute, who was described as a model of progressive science.

The FAECT, headed by Pres. Lewis Alan Berne, reported steady growth among technical and engineering workers, long thought difficult if not impossible to organize in the union movement. Greetings were sent to the convention from CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, from R. J. Thomas, with whose organization, the United Automobile Workers, the Federation has cooperated closely, and other CIO leaders.

Accuse John Bull Of 'Meddling'

New York, June 15. — Charges that the British government is attempting to interfere with the composition of steamship crews on the New York-Bermuda run were made by the Natl. Maritime Union today in a wire to President Roosevelt.

Frederick Myers, NMU field organizer, said British authorities in Bermuda were attempting to get 40 German-born American citizens—most of them in the stewards department—transferred from the S. S. President Roosevelt.

Myers added that the U. S. Lines, operators of the ship, had told the stewards that they are to be transferred to the S. S. Manhattan. Because the latter vessel is soon to be laid up, the men are receiving a form of dismissal, he charged.

"That is nothing more than a ruse to fire good union members," Myers declared. "The union cannot permit a foreign government to dictate the discharge of any of its members for political reasons.

"If we permit the firing of men because they happened to be born in a foreign country, we are opening the door for all sorts of discriminatory practices."

Stock Broker Bargains; Market Doesn't Break!

CHICAGO, June 15.—Negotiations for a contract between the United Office & Professional Workers of America and the New York Stock Exchange firm of J. S. Bache & Co. were scheduled to be resumed here this week.

The conferences are the first in which a labor union has sought an agreement covering the entire personnel of a brokerage firm on La Salle Street or Wall Street. The UOPWA has a majority of the employes of the Bache concern, largest private wire brokerage firm in Chicago.

The company recognized the UOPWA as bargaining agent for its employes at preliminary discussions between union and company officials the latter part of May.

On the eve of the first conference, a 10 per cent wage increase for all employes of the company was announced by the New York home office. The increase will affect neary 1,000 brokerage workers in the firm's 38 offices. In addition to a majority membership in the Chicago office, the UOPWA has substantial membership in the New York and a score of other offices.

'Enlist or Starve' Edict Stirs Storm In Jersey

NEWARK, N. J., June 15.—New Jersey, birth-site of more than its share of reactionary relief schemes, came through with another one today as officials of the state CIO council offered vigorous protests.

The idea, hatched by State Relief Director Arthur Mudd, called for the dropping of all single men from the relief rolls who have not volunteered for military service. Intended as a "confidential memorandum" to his staff, the news leaked out almost immediately.

Leonard Goldsmith, executive secretary of the New Jersey Industrial Union Council, described the proposal as "un-American", adding that the "state CIO is unalterably opposed to Mudd's proposal to conscript our unemployed into the army by threatening them with starvation.

SEE DECEPTION

"Under our American system, peacetime conscription has always been repugnant to the American people, and Mudd's proposal is thinly-disguised conscription."

The CIO state board will be asked to go into the courts if necessary, to secure Mudd's removal from office, Goldsmith declared.

David Wilentz, state attorney-general, commented that the Legislature, rather than the relief director, was authorized to determine eligibility for the state assistance rolls.

CIO has a new leaflet on the Wagner Act just about ready to come off the press, dealing with Bill Green's treachery in endorsing the Smith ripper amendments. It will be ready early this week. Write to the Publicity Dept., CIO, Washington, D. C., for your copies.

Mandate for Social Progress Seen in Election Results

By I. MUFSON
Labor's Non-Partisan Leagu

Results of primary elections held during the past three months must act as a stimulant to progressive and labor forces throughout the nation.

While returns are far from complete, enough of them are known to represent a fairly good sampling of the temper of the American voters. This sampling shows a trend that the people want continued progress in our economic and social life. Those who attempt to represent public opinion as being opposed to further labor and social advances do not speak the minds of the voters as expressed in the primaries.

Voters even from the deep South have shown a remarkably progressive outlook, if their choice of candidates is a good basis for judgment. In practically every state where primaries were held pro-labor and progressive candidates, for local, state and Federal offices have been victorious.

REACTION UNPOPULAR

This result shows plainly that the voices of reaction represent no broad opinion among the citizens. What is needed to make this progressive trend stronger and more definite is thorough and effective organization among labor and progressive elements in preparation for the forthcoming election next fall.

The primaries are not only an encouragement to labor unions and Labor's Non-Partisan League units but an order to perfect their political machinery to make the utmost out of the opportunity that awaits them.

Following is an outline summary of what labor unions and liberals, working through Labor's Non-Partisan League, have achieved in the primaries as far as the facts could be collected:

Alabama—Nominated Judge A. E. Hawkins for the House of Representatives.

Connecticut — Elected Geo. J. Coyle, Democrat, mayor of New Britain.

Florida — Renominated Charles O. Andrews for the U. S. Senate on the Republican ticket; nominated Spessard Holland, Democrat, for governor against the opposition of reactionaries and conservative labor officials. Labor also won out in several local elections. In Jacksonville two labor candidates were nominated for the school board, Ted Dewitt, member of the Building Trades Council, and James Ross, railway unionist. W. Daniel Boyd dismissed for his membership in the American Federation of Teachers, young pro-labor attorney, defeated a Ku Kluxer for state legislature.

Illinois — Renominated Frank Fries and Kent E. Keller for Congress and nominated Raymond S. McKeough against strong conservative opposition for Congress, all Democrats running on the Democratic ticket. Labor defeated Vice-President Garner for Presidential nominee.

Indiana — In addition to the nomination of Representatives Wm. H. Larrabee and Louis Ludlow for Congress, Labor's Non-Partisan League of Indiana was successful in nominating a number of state representatives and electing numerous candidates for county offices. The candidate receiving the highest vote for state Senator on either ticket was Chublinski, member of the Steel Workers Union of Gary. Andrew Chandler led the entire field for state representative. Walter Truman of the Hosiery Workers was another successful labor candidate for the legislature.

Maryland — The outstanding achievement in Maryland was the nomination of Thomas D'Alesandro for Congress on the Democratic ticket. Two years ago he was elected by barely 100 votes while this year he won by a 1500 majority.

Maine — Margaret Chase H. Smith was elected to Congress.

Minnesota—Elected John J. McDonough and three pro-labor councilmen.

Ohio — Tom Burke, financial secretary of Local 12, Autoworkers, was nominated for state representative on the Democratic ticket.

Oregon — Progressive forces in Oregon achieved a triumph in the state's primaries. They were successful in nominating 72 per cent of their slate on the Democratic ticket. Included among them was Congressional nominee Nan Wood Honeyman; two candidates for the state legislature, John Sullivan of the IWA and Hugh Adams of the CIO Longshoremen; and four delegates to the Democratic convention, S. Stephenson Smith, Louis Langley, Clarence Hyde and David Epps.

Labor, working through the Commonwealth Federation which is affiliated with Labor's Non-Partisan League, also was successful in defeating former anti-labor governor Charles H. Martin in his attempt to represent his state at the Democratic national convention.

Pennsylvania — Against practically the united opposition of the Democratic state machine, U. S. Senator Joseph E. Guffey came out victorious in the primaries due completely to support of labor. Clair F. Ross, endorsed by Labor's Non-Partisan League, was the Democratic choice for state Auditor-General.

All the pro-labor members of the House of Representatives, including Michael J. Bradley, Leon Sacks, and Patrick J. Boland, were renominated on the Democratic ticket.

So. Carolina — Labor won sweeping victories in precinct elections for poll officials, delegates to county conventions and for executive committeemen. Most of those elected were members of unions and mill workers.

West Virginia — Nominated Harley M. Kilgore for the U. S. Senate and U. S. Senator H. M. Neely for governor. Defeated U. S. Senator Rush M. Holt, bitter anti-labor member of Congress.

New Homes for Old

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing.

Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

By CECIL OWEN, Publicity Director
United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee

Of the 1,000,000 homes a year demanded by the CIO legislative program, 700,000 are to be built by private industry. In England and Wales private building was speeded by the post-war housing drive. Here it has lagged.

In our own country neither government nor private industry are building the thousands and thousands of homes desired by the 87 per cent of the population whose incomes are below $2,500 a year. The low-cost housing market is one place where the law of supply and demand just doesn't seem to operate.

Certain problems in building homes are common to both government and industry and it would seem the part of wisdom for them to cooperate in their solution. These include cost of money, land, materials and construction.

Granted that there will always be a housing problem so long as too many of the people are forced to live on mere subsistence incomes, yet there would still be a serious problem today even if all incomes were automatically raised to a decent level. That is because the way of building houses, the structure of the industry, and the financing of homes, are badly in need of improvement.

'HORSE & BUGGY' BUILDING

The startling fact that 94 per cent of U. S. home builders put up less than 10 houses a year is striking proof of the absence of modern large-scale industrial operation in this industry. House building has still to emerge from the handicraft stage into the mechanized era of big-time industry. It is a chaotic mess of thousands of small speculative builders, hundreds of supply yards and middle men, land profiteers and real estate brokers, bankers, and craft unions each pursuing its separate ends without regard to the whole.

However, these are all well-known facts and any informed "houser" can talk your ear off on any single aspect. The question remains: What can labor do about it?

One of the biggest things labor can do is what it has been doing: ORGANIZE. Let labor organize for housing just as it organizes for collective bargaining. The supply side of the market may be disorganized, but the demand side is already organized to a large extent. The membership of the CIO unions in the mass industries offers the largest single potential housing market ever offered.

GROUP ACTION

Group action by labor is the key that can unlock the housing riddle. Most CIO unions already have housing committees and these can readily be expanded into effective instruments. One of their first jobs would be to survey the housing market within the union membership in their own community. In the Nation's Capitol this is being done by the United Federal Workers, CIO, through circulation of a questionnaire in the government departments. It is going not alone to union members but to all employes in the agencies canvassed.

Once there is a known market the biggest hurdle to housing is overcome. In most cities there are a few reputable large-scale builders ready and able to build planned communities for a known market. The economies in large-scale operation are obvious and home buyers will get far more for their housing dollar when they pool purchasing power of several hundred, or several thousand, union members. By organizing the market first, also, housing committees of CIO unions can exert considerable influence on construction and labor standards in this industry.

LOWER COSTS POSSIBLE

Technical problems of building the $2,500 home are solved, and the FHA has begun a drive to push these low-cost houses. Prefabrication, though over-rated by enthusiasts, is no longer an idle dream and mechanization for lower costs is now possible. What is needed is new machinery to bring the buyer and seller together. The CIO faces a great opportunity to acquire homes for its members and win friends widely by taking the leadership in housing.

The first task is organization of the market. Then comes negotiation with builders and other factors in the industry. The result is better homes for less cost.

BEFORE AND AFTER: Mrs. Ciampoli had a hard time managing in a New York flat that was dark, ill-ventilated and unfit for use. Now Mrs. Ciampoli does her housework in the Queensbridge Project, built by the New York Housing Authority with USHA assistance.

Feathers Fly as Union Balks At Skimpy Chicken Wings

"Five hundred pounds of chicken."

So read the inventory of the commissary department of a great West Coast hospital. It certainly looked as if the hospital staff — nurses, maintenance men, attendants, laboratory technicians, clerks, etc., were in for some swell eating. Why then did the local union of the State, County & Municipal Workers of America (CIO) raise such a squawk?

Simply this: although the invoice read "500 pounds of chicken," it did not reveal that the chicken in question consisted solely of skimpy wings and bony backs. The real meaty parts of the chicken, the breasts and legs, had been sold to someone else.

The leavings were good enough for the hospital employes — or so the administration thought, till the SCMWA got busy and exposed the cheat to the staff.

This kind of thing is typical of the miserable living conditions of hospital workers, most of whom are forced to "live in" and accept miserable food and dark, often damp, cheerless lodging space.

The working conditions are no better. The 12-hour day is the rule in most private and public hospitals, and frequently the staff has to work 14 hours. Needless to say, the public health is not served best under these conditions. And pay, in unorganized hospitals, ranges from $25 to $50 a month.

All in all, living, working, and pay conditions of hospitals today approximate those which obtained among seamen generations back before the unions began to change the picture.

PICTURE CHANGING

Now the picture is being changed in hospitals, thanks again to unionization. In October the CIO convention granted jurisdiction in the private hospital field to the State, County & Municipal Workers, which already had jurisdiction in the public hospital field.

Thereupon the SCMWA launched a drive which at the end of May saw the union rooted in some 60 hospitals throughout the country. More than half of these are private hospitals, despite the fact that this jurisdiction was granted only last October. As this is written, negotiations are under way for a signed contract with some twenty-six private hospitals which are members of the Allegheny County, Pa. Hospital Council. Sensational 8-hour day victories plus pay increases have just been won in the Woodville and Mayview public hospitals in the Pittsburgh area.

More than $52,000 in pay increases for the employes of the Meyer Memorial Hospital in Buffalo was won recently by SCMWA Local 252 when, after the union's vigorous public campaign, the City Council overrode Mayor Holling's veto of an increase in the hospital budget.

This victory raised the minimum pay in this hospital by 50 per cent! And it showed that when the public is really informed about the terrible conditions existing in hospitals, it will side with the union in ending them.

Petty tyranny is a special evil suffered by hospital workers. An Administrator in a Midwest hospital, for example, declared that he considered himself the proper guardian of the private lives of his employes. This bluenose issued an order that all maids and nurses were to be back in the hospital at a certain hour every evening.

At that hour the doors were locked. He even had the fire-escape coated with heavy grease so that the girls could not climb in the back way!

The SCMWA blasted this paternalism, and got the hilarious story of the administrator's prejudices onto the front pages of newspapers all over the country. When the administrator insisted on his iron "discipline," the union won his removal. Now every employe in the hospital has the right to "live out," in a home of his or her own choosing.

13 NEW LOCALS

When President Flaxer of the SCMWA asked the CIO last October for private hospital jurisdiction, and got it, he predicted that hospital workers would flock to unionism. Several thousand workers, in 13 new local unions, in some 40 hospitals hitherto unorganized, have joined the union's ranks in the past eight months to prove that prediction up to the hilt.

Organizing drives are now going forward in Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan, and California, supplementing solid organization already existing in those states as well as in Wisconsin and Minnesota. Sick leave, paid vacations and optional maintenance have been won for the first time. Leading the drive are former rank and file hospital workers.

Wilson-Jones Gives OK to Closed Shop

Chicago, June 15.—Pay increases for 125 employes of the Western News Company, distributors of magazines and papers, are provided in a contract signed last week by CIO Local Industrial Union 148. A few days earlier the same union signed a contract with the Wilson-Jones Co., covering 1100 employes in two of the company's plants at Chicago and Elizabeth, N. J.

The agreement with Wilson-Jones, manufacturers of loose-leaf note books and office record equipment, provides for a closed shop and paid vacations of one week after one year's service and two weeks after three years.

Ernest B. Pugh, CIO regional director in the Chicago area, said the company was the only one in this line of business operating a 100 per cent union shop, and urged that unions back the use of the company's supplies.

The pay increases won for the Western News employes, ranging from $6 to $1 a week, will mean a total of $14,716 more money for the workers. The contract also provides an automatic increase of five cents an hour after each 12 months of additional service. It will be effective for two years.

Natl. Lead Co. Must Rehire 20, Pay $27,000

KANSAS CITY, June 15.—Return of 20 union men to their former jobs with full seniority and the payment of $27,500 in back wages to these and other claimants was agreed to this week by the St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co., subsidiary of National Lead, in a stipulated settlement of a long-pending Labor Board case filed in 1936 by five Tri-State locals of the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

The company has agreed to put the 20 union men back in their jobs even though the men presently employed may have to be discharged. In addition the company will post a notice assuring all its empoyes of their right to join a union of their own choice without fear of reprisals from the company.

The settlement brings to the Tri-State area its second distribution of back pay through the National Labor Relations Board, the first being the payment of $3,600 in back pay to 12 employes of the Oronogo Mutual Mining Co. and the reinstatement of eight of them in their former jobs.

Now on its way to the Circuit Court of Appeals is the Labor Board's precedent-making decision ordering the Eagle-Picher Co. to reinstate 175 Tri-State union men and to pay to 207 unionists back pay estimated variously to total between $200,000 and $800,000.

Launch Lumber Drive

WASHINGTON, June 15—An intensive drive to organize unorganized lumber workers will be undertaken by the CIO in the immediate future, it was announced here. Main concentration points will be in the Pacific northwest, where the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, has its headquarters and main base.

The drive will be coordinated by a representative from the national office of the CIO, who will have charge of a number of new organizers to be added to the present staff and who will work out plans with the officers of the Woodworkers union. Adolph Germer, CIO regional director in New York City, will be given a six months leave from his present post to undertake this work.

CIO SURVEY

The new drive among the lumber workers is being undertaken as a result of a 30-day tour of the Pacific northwest regions by Michael F. Widman, Jr., assistant director of organization of the CIO, and was based on his recommendations to CIO executive officers after his return from the coast.

Asst. Director Widman reports that such a drive, if carried on intensively over a period of months, should bring a doubling of the present membership of the Intl. Woodworkers by January 1, 1941. He also reports a high degree of enthusiasm and loyalty for the CIO throughout the areas he visited, which should make the task of organizing the thousands of unorganized workers easier.

Appeal Sentence In Key Case

Stockton, Calif., June 15.—A case involving an all-important issue—the right of a hostile government group to demand a union's membership lists—reached a climax here when three members of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers were fined $500 and sentenced to one year in jail.

The sentence—the hardest permitted under the law—followed refusal of the union leaders to turn over to the Yorty ("little Dies") Committee lists of local members. It will be appealed.

TORIES WANTED LISTS

The trio was found guilty of "contempt of the legislature." During their trial they pointed out that their decision not to hand over the lists was based on the state committees refusal to assure them that the lists would not be used for further mass dismissals on the staff of the State Relief Administration, where most known union members have already been fired.

Trials of 15 other defendants charged with the same offense are continuing two at a time following dismissal of a union motion that all be tried together.

KLAN BUSY

At a trial in Visalia of B. J. Zukas, another SCMWA officer arrested on the same issue, the Ku Klux Klan whipped up a terror atmosphere to such an extent that A. L. Wirin, his attorney, was compelled to hire bodyguards for self-protection.

Start Campaign In Chinese Laundries

NEW YORK, June 15.—A drive to organize the Chinese-owned steam and hand laundries in Greater New York has been launched by the Laundry Workers' Joint Board, affiliated with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The drive opened with a strike against the New Sunlight Wet Wash Laundry and the campaign is expected to spread to 11 other Chinese-owned steam laundries in the city.

The strike against New Sunlight was called last week following the discharge of a white worker and discrimination against other employes for union activity, according to Franz Daniel, union organizer, who said that the firm violates the five-day week recently inaugurated among New York City laundries and pays wages below those established in the collective agreements.

None of the employes of the Chinese laundries are Chinese, all of them being of American, Italian, Spanish or Negro extraction.

The Sunlight laundry agreed to a card check by the State Labor Relations Board on May 6, to determine the union agency desired by its employes, but before the Board could hand down a decision, the management fired a worker and began discriminating against other union employes.

Union officials declared that the strike had stopped work completely at the plant.

21-Year Fight Ends in Pact

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 15.—A contract covering 650 workers of the Equitable Meter Co., signed by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers has ended a 21-year fight for union recognition. The first strike was called in 1919 when the firm was a part of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

150 Strike In duPont Duchy

Wilmington, Del., June 15. — Some 150 workers at the Edge Moor Iron Works near here were on strike today for improved working conditions.

Don Harris, CIO field representative, said the strike is 100% effective and is aimed at bringing higher wages, closed shop, job security, vacations with pay and improved working conditions.

Picketing is being worked on a 24-hour shift, with six groups of strikers taking four-hour turns on the picket line.

Win Vacations With Pay

Detroit, Mich., June 15.—Vacations for all employes with seniority have been negotiated with the management of the Precision Spring Corp., President Michael Manning of the West Side Local, United Automobile Workers, announced today.

Workers with 1,000 hours to their credit will get a vacation bonus of 2½ per cent of annual earnings, not exceeding $50. The rest will get smaller amounts. Manning said.

Sue Coast Shipyard $50,000

LOS ANGELES, June 15.—Damages of $50,000 against the Consolidated Steel Company are being asked by Local 9, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in a suit filed here in the Superior Court.

The CIO union charges the company with breaking an oral agreement covering the firm's shipyard in Long Beach where four vessels are being constructed for the U. S. Government.

The suit charges that the management of Consolidated has damaged the union and its membership to the extent of at least $50,000 by signing a collusive contract with the AFL despite the fact that it had already made binding commitments to Local 9.

STRUCK TWO WEEKS AGO

The Consolidated shipyard workers were called on strike about two weeks ago after the company had suddenly announced that it had signed a closed shop contract with the AFL. Local 9 accuses the company of making this agreement with the AFL in spite of the fact that it has no steel shipbuilders in the harbor now and never has had.

"The vast majority of men with whom the AFL hopes to build these four ships will have to be imported from outside this community, from outside Los Angeles, from outside the state," a statement issued by the union to the citizens of the community declared.

"Our union has appealed to the mayors of Long Beach and Los Angeles to help bring this dispute to an end. We think that all citizens of this harbor area will agree with us that local citizens, taxpayers, men who have lived here for many years, should build these ships."

'FLOATING' PICKETS

Powers Hapgood, national CIO field representative, who was sent here to aid the local in its fight for a settlement of the strike, said this week that a strong picket line was being maintained by Local 9, and that he and other union speakers were addressing the small number of men working in the yard from a boat equipped with a loud speaker, which pulled up along the waterside of the yard.

Construction work at the yard has been seriously curtailed by the strike, Hapgood said, and a number of AFL men refused to scab after hearing the facts of the case.

Clothing Union Leader Gets U. S. Defense Post

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Dorothy J. Bellanca, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, has been appointed by Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, as a member of the department's Advisory Committee on Labor to aid in the promotion of standards for employment of women in the national defense program.

Mrs. Bellanca's appointment followed the designation of Sidney Hillman, Amalgamated president, as a member of President Roosevelt's Council of National Defense to co-ordinate employment policies in the so-called war industries.

In a statement announcing the appointment of Mrs. Bellanca, the Amalgamated said that she had an outstanding record in government and social service, and is rated as one of the union's best organizers.

She is a member of the U. S. Labor Department's General Advisory Committee on Maternal and Child Welfare, and has participate in the National Health Conference called by President Roosevelt to sponsor and promote adequate medical facilities, and also in the President's Conference on Children in Democracy.

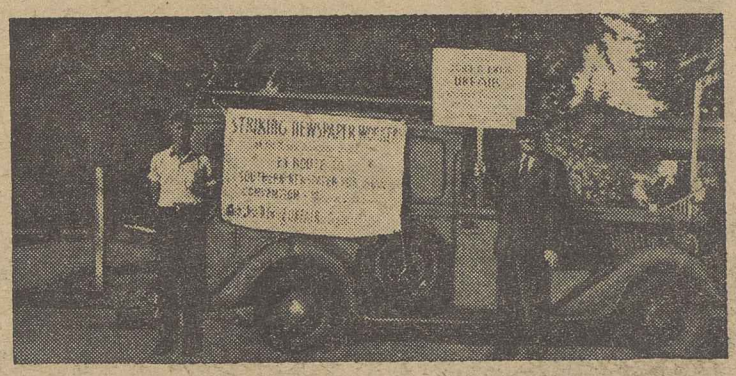
REPUBLICANS HEAR DEMANDS OF LABOR

Love Nests 'Unfair'

San Francisco, June 22.—Charging that manufacturers of "Love Nest" candy bars are chiseling on the Golden Rule, the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union kept up its picket line at the Euclid Candy Co. here and urged all unions to place the firm's products on the "unfair" list.



The company makes Chock Full O' Almonds, Red Cap and Best Pal candy bars, in addition to Love Nests.

The union's fight against the Euclid outfit was in the court seeking to defeat an employer-AFL court order which would bar many forms of union activity at the plant. Some 120 production workers and warehousemen have been locked out.

Strike4Hours, Lift Pay 12%

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 22—Dates and figs put out by the Dromedary Co., already packed under CIO contract to the Cannery and Agricultural Workers here, will bring even greater gains to the workers under terms of a renewed contract that upped wages 12% and brought other union benefits to the 800 workers involved.

Originally the comany offered an eight per cent raise, but a one day strike brought the four per cent added boost, the closed shop, a weeks paid vacations, and other benefits.

LEST HE FORGET: While Publisher John Ewing of the struck Monroe, La., Morning World & News-Star was attending a southern newspaper publishers' convention, striking members of the American Newspaper Guild parked outside the meeting hall to remind him that the strike still goes on.

Protest Anti-Union Policies

Hamilton, Ont., June 22.—Continued discrimination by industries against workers for trade union activity was brought to the attention of Premier King and Labor Minister McLarty by C. H. Millard, secretary of the Canadian Committee of the CIO at a conference of heads of labor organizations and government officials this week.

Millard pointed out that industries were discharging workers for joining unions at the same time as the government was exercising strong pressure on the unions to cooperate to the fullest extent in the prosecution of the war even to the relaxation of some of labor's rights.

'Ho-Hum!' Say Croppers As Police Attack Fails

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., June 22.—CIO sharecroppers and farm workers, holding their state convention here, had no more than the "usual" difficulty with police and vigilante gangs when 2,500 members of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers gathered on union owned land.

"The usual trouble from the landlords and police materialized, but did not succeed in breaking up the meeting," the CIO union reported.

"The police of Jefferson County assisted by the State Highway patrol blocked the highway at Sikeston and began turning back delegates and union members. After one bus, two trucks and 40 cars loaded with members had been turned back, the union leaders finally succeeded in getting the highway opened, after which there was no more trouble in getting to the camp."

Their leader, union vice-president Owen H. Whitfield, said the CIO group had saved more than 900 workers from eviction last year, and reported that government aid programs, though backed up by "countless surveys" showing the desperate need, "seem now to be shadowboxing and getting nowhere."

Lewis Speaks Bluntly to GOP Committee

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—In a hard-hitting talk to the Republican Party's resolutions committee, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis told the G. O. P. that it had forfeited labor's votes and would be able to regain them only by adoption of a clear-cut progressive platform.

"The time has come for a straightforward declaration, not weasel words that seek to allure but only deceive," Lewis told the GOP leaders at their pre-convention meeting.

"And what I say applies to both the Democratic and the Republican platforms. For some day the people will tire of being deceived and neglected by the major political parties."

If the Republicans are ever to receive labor votes, the CIO official announced, their platform must include a complete support for a labor bill of rights.

Fundamental in such a platform, Lewis pointed out, would be pledges to keep the United States out of foreign wars; grant labor a voice in national defense policy and administration councils; force industry to obey the law; preserve civil rights and social welfare laws; end the southern states' poll tax; pass the anti-lynching bill; stop attempts to force craft units on industrial unionism; encourage a tax program based on ability to pay; and find a solution for the problem of unemployment."

THE SMITH BILL

During his talk to the Republicans, Lewis assailed the Smith bill to amend the Wagner Act as an effort to wipe out the CIO.

"The Republican members of Congress have failed again and again to give labor a square deal on this issue," he charged.

Jack Johnson, Ex-Champ, Now CIO Booster

BOSTON, June 22 — Jack Johnson, former world's heavyweight titleholder, has found a new champion in the CIO—one of "peace, prosperity and happiness for millions of people" according to his own words in accepting honorary membership in Local 183 of the CIO Cleaners and Dyers Union of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers here.

The presentation was made by Organizer Edward Jackson after a meeting and talk with Johnson about the CIO. As reported by Jackson: "I met him the other day and asked him what he thought of the CIO. He said he thought it was the greatest movement since the Civil War.

"He came to one of our meetings and spoke. On receiving the membership card he said he was happier on becoming a member of the CIO than when he became world heavyweight champion, because while he was champion for a while, the CIO was the champion of peace, prosperity and happiness for millions of people now and all the time."

Pact Protects Workers' Health

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 22.—Equipment to protect employes from injury and safeguard their health are provided in a sole bargaining contract signed by the CIO United Ice & Refrigerator Workers with the Utah Ice & Storage Co. here.

Other terms call for a 40-hour week, seniority rights and set up a wage scale effective until March , 1941.

Steel Workers Hail Murray on Anniversary

PITTSBURGH, June 22.—Thousands of union steel workers throughout the nation celebrated the fourth anniversary of the creation of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee with a national "Phil Murray Day", in honor of the SWOC chairman.

More than 40 "Phil Murray Day" meetings were held at central points in the main steel producing districts, from New England to California, and from the deep South to Minnesota.

While most of the meetings were held on Sunday, June 16, the actual birthday of the SWOC is June 17, 1936, when the first meeting of the committee was held in Pittsburgh.

Speaking at one of the largest meetings, held in Youngstown, O., Murray reported that since the creation of the steel union only four years ago, "78 per cent of the industry is organized and working under signed union agreements."

'THE HOME STRETCH'

"There remains only 22 per cent of the steel industry to be organized," he said. "They continue to fight us, fight our union, fight your wives and children—and fight America."

"But I told you four years ago when we began this job that we were going to carry on until the entire industry is unionized. I renew that pledge today."

SWOC lodges in the Mahoning Valley cooperated in sponsoring the meeting, under direction of John L. Mayo, sub-district director.

MAYOR SPEAKS

A crowd of more than 7,500 attended the Youngstown meeting. It was preceded by a parade of two bands and 400 automobiles. In addition to Murray, Mayor William B. Spagnola spoke, and a lodge committee presented the SWOC Chairman with a gift.

After giving a short review of the SWOC's history, Murray told the crowd the steel union "is beyond reproach" in its method of conducting union affairs.

"It is a union that has won the respect and admiration of the people of the United States. It is an American institution that lends itself solely, primarily and exclusively to the promotion of American ideals.

"This union cannot be bothered with foreign 'isms'," Murray declared. "It is strictly and very definitely commited to the American government."

OTHER MEETINGS

Other national SWOC leaders also addressed meetings. David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer, and Van A. Bittner, midwestern regional director, spoke at a large meeting in Duluth, Minn.

Clinton S. Golden, northeastern regional director, addressed a "Phil Murray Day" meeting in Lackawanna, N. Y., and Noel R. Beddow, executive director of the SWOC in the southern region, spoke at a meeting in Aliquippa, Pa.

Other meetings were held in Berwick, Donora, Bethlehem, Pottstown, Lebanon, and Johnstown, Pa.; Fort Wayne, Kokomo, Frankfort, Muncie, Gary, Indiana Harbor, South Bend and Indianapolis, Ind.; Chicago, West Chicago, Harvey, Joliet, Chicago Heights, Kewanee, Sterling and Waukegan, Ill.; Beloit, South Milwaukee and Milwaukee, Wis.

Louisville, Ky.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Sparrows Point, Md.; Canton and Cincinnati, O.; Kansas City, Mo.; Pittsburg and Maywood, Calif.; Fairfield, Ala., and Roebling, N. J.

This year marked the second annual celebration of "Phil Murray Day".

'Organize For Democracy' -- Haywood

Ashland, Ky., June 22.—The best way to preserve American democratic institutions is to organize the workers of the country into unions, Allan Haywood, CIO national director, told delegates to the convention of the Kentucky State Industrial Union Council held here last week.

Haywood addressed the convention twice, the first time during the business session, and later at a banquet where his speech was broadcast. In his radio speech, the CIO director outlined the CIO position on the national defense program, declaring that "we are in favor of adequate national defense to protect our nation and its institutions of liberty and democracy against any aggressor or group of aggressors.

LABOR'S PLACE

"We ask that we be accorded our proper place in serving our nation in these dark and crucial days, and that representatives of labor be placed on all administrative bodies to represent effectively labor and to safeguard its rights."

PHILIP MURRAY
Honored by steel workers

He called upon the government to protect the right of workers to organize and to insist upon sincere and honest collective bargaining to protect and maintain the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and assembly.

Council President Samuel Caddy and Secretary-Treasurer John Grigsby were re-elected for another term, and a slate of vice-presidents representing the various affiliated unions was chosen.

Hosiery Workers Hear Rieve Flay Green's 'Deals'

By TRAVIS HEDRICK

MILWAUKEE, June 22. — Indorsement of the Smith committee amendments to the Wagner labor act by AFL Pres. William Green erected "an insurmountable barrier to peace within our household," CIO Vice-Pres. Emil Rieve declared here.

Rieve, who is president of the Textile Workers Union, spoke June 19 before the 29th annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers. His scathing attack on Green was the highlight of the convention to date.

"I must admit," Rieve continued, "that the success of the Smith committee may be attributed less to the strength of the reactionaries and more to the betrayal by William Green—an act of treason unparalleled in the history of American labor. I shudder to think what the judgment of history will be upon this cowardly act and its perpetrator.

"The President of the American Federation of Labor is elected to a high fiduciary position. He is the trustee of the wellbeing of many men. Yet in order that he might momentarily prevail over his rival (CIO President John L. Lewis) he has betrayed even his own members.

PREDICTS PROTESTS

"When the full import of that act is brought home to the rank and file, when their own unions are sapped or even destroyed, I do not believe that they will long tolerate such fifth column leadership. I cannot believe that the progressive leadership of the American Federation of Labor in Wisconsin will submit to such treachery.

"I am the more grieved personally because the preliminaries for Green's betrayal were performed by Joseph Padway (AFL counsel and, like Rieve, a Milwaukeean), whom I have counted as a personal friend.

"It was Green who consummated the final act of conspiracy with Howard M. Smith (Virginia Democrat), but it was Padway who prepared the path. It was Padway who called upon three corporation lawyers who serve the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers to draft the nullifying amendments to the Wagner Act.

"I am also the more grieved because this retards the cause of labor unity," Rieve continued. "No single event of the last five years has erected a more insurmountable barrier to peace within our household.

"It is the more reprehensible because William Green at the very moment of his public pronouncement in favor of unity was conspiring to perform an act that would make unity virtually impossible."

Coming Conventions

Washington, June 22.—Four CIO organizations including three national unions and a state council will hold conventions during the month of July. The list of conventions held in June is rounded off with a meeting opening today in Atlanta, Ga., to set up a CIO State Industrial Union Council.

The conventions meeting in July are:

July 8—The Federation of Flat Glass Workers, Toledo, Ohio; and on the same day, the American Newspaper Guild, in Memphis, Tenn.

July 22—West Virginia Industrial Union Council, Morgantown, W. Va.

July 29—United Automobile Workers, St. Louis, Mo.

WHEELER RENEWS PLEA THAT U. S. AVOID WAR

SAINT PAUL, Minn., June 22.—American workers, youth, businessmen, farmers, mothers, have "at no time given a mandate to the President or the Congress to lead us into war," and they must wake up or they will find pro-Allied policy in Washington leading them to the slaughter in Europe, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, speaking at a memorial meeting for the late Governor Floyd B. Olson, Minnesota's fighting liberal, told a nationwide radio audience this week.

"At no time have the American people given a mandate to the President or to the Congress to lead us into war," he said. "We are still a democracy and we should find out by democratic process if the American people want war. It has been said that we will give the Allies all aid short of war. But what is short of war?

"Can we drive an automobile 80 miles an hour down a road toward a precipice, keep feeding the engine gas and suddenly stop short of the precipice?

"I say to you mothers of America, to the youth of the country, to the businessman and to the workers—wake up—or you'll find yourselves in war. Your boys killed and maimed on the battlefields, your hospitals and insane asylums filled, the debts of your country increased beyond all comprehension and your American way of life gone forever. And for what?"

PRINCIPLES

Propaganda mills are busy trying to sell the European shambles as a war for "freedom, justice and liberty," Wheeler said. "These are precious words and these are precious things, but I ask—is it not true that the war in Europe is concerned with many other things besides abstract principles?"

The American people, he declared, must go beyond the screen of propaganda to find out the "real questions." Then, he indicated, they will find that "this is the same old ghastly European struggle over the balance of power—of age-old hatreds and age-old quarrels. . . .a fight for world markets —for oil wells and gold mines. . ."

Wheeler quoted from an early statement of Joseph P. Kennedy, U. S. Ambassador to England, on America's need to stay out of the European tragedy, in which Kennedy said:

'NO WAR': Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who told a meeting of Minnesota Farmer-Laborites that he would bolt the Democrats if they become the country's war party.

"There is no place in this fight for us. It's going to be bad enough as it is. As you love America, don't let anything that comes out of any country in the world make you believe you can make a situation one whit better by getting into the war. . . .There is no reason, economic, financial, or social, to justify the U. S. entering the war."

INVASION A MYTH

Wheeler quoted also from the Senate Navy Committee report based on evidence by "the highest ranking officers of our armed forces" to show that talk of invasion of the U. S. was hysterical fantasy, and called for struggle at home against unemployment and poverty as a vital part of any defense plan.

"We in America today face an enemy," he said. "That enemy is the force that is slowly sapping the strength of our economic and financial system. . . There is only one way to produce that collapse—go into war. There is only one way to avoid it—stay out of war and correct the conditions that make 10,000,000 men idle and jobless.

"Seven years ago we started out in pursuit of this enemy. Three years ago we were talking about the illfed, illhoused and illclothed. What has become of them? They are still with us—but our thoughts are being turned to Europe—when we ought to be thinking today of making democracy work in America."

Labor Dept. Starts Radio Series

Washington, June 22.—A New series of radio programs offered by the U. S. Labor Dept., will be concerned with labor laws and their application in the daily lives of American workers.

Thousands of workers, the Department points out in announcing the new series, do not know of the laws that already exist to protect them, and therefore fail to take advantage of legislation concerning health, compensation, wages, etc. The program series, built around daily life stories, will undertake to do this educational work.

The series will begin Saturday, July 6, at 1.00 P. M., Eastern Standard Time, and will run weekly for 13 performances. It will be broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System's national network.

SWEEP MORE POLLS

GM Plant

New York, June 22 — The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers picked up another Labor Board election victory today.

Latest in the long series of contests won by the union was a poll among employes of the Delco Products Division of the General Motors Corp. at Dayton, Ohio.

The UERMW collected 2,159 votes, with 1,673 voting for no union.

duPont

Some 87 workers voted for the CIO, with only 33 casting their ballots for no union.

108-1

Oakland, Calif., June 22.—A 108-1 decision by paper makers at the Paraffine Companies, Inc., here, to switch from the AFL to the CIO today had officials of the federation affiliate threatening a jurisdictional strike.

The secret ballot election, which was held in May, is to be followed by a Labor Board poll immediately after June 30, when it is expected the CIO local will be certified as sole collective bargaining agency. Some 194 of the 220 eligible employes have already signed CIO cards.

When an official of the company —which has gained widespread fame through its contracts with 17 unions, two of them CIO—suggested that AFL officials withhold action until after the NLRB election, they roundly criticized him, apparently for failing to take their position against the CIO.

Hosiery

Reading, Pa., June 22.—Company unionism, inspired by a 67-vote lead in an initial NLRB election at the Rosedale Knitting Company here, received a setback June 14 when the American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) topped a heated run-off campaign with a victory by 20 votes, 994 to 974.

The so-called Rosedale Employes' Association received 950 votes to the AFHW's 883 in the original election, while 135 workers chose to name niether organization. Lacking a majority for either union, the Labor Board ordered the run-off.

HOME VISITS

Representatives of the AFHW, led by James W. Bamford, Pennsylvania district manager, engaged in a three-week drive here, personally visiting more than 1,000 workers at their homes. In addition, the federation issued two special editions of the newly established "Rosedale Reporter" and exposed the wage-cutting tactics and company unionism of the employes association.

Reading hosiery workers celebrated the victory over the week-end and Rosedale employes are assured of a continuance of their contract with the company. The vote was taken despite the fact that the union contract runs until 1941.

Big victory for the UAW

Name Hillman To Study U. S. Training Plan

Washington, June 22.—Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and a member of the National Defense Advisory Commission, has been appointed by Pres. Roosevelt to map plans for the new federal program of compulsory government training for 2,000,000 young men and women each year.

Hillman, who is in general charge of personnel and employment for the Defense Commission, will be assisted in the new study by Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins and officials of the CCC and the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The program calls for semi-military, industrial and technical training for young people, who will be assigned to camps throughout the country.

Hillman has been working on plans for coordination of the various government agencies which will assist in the program—among them the Natl. Youth Administration, the CCC, the WPA and the Office of Education.

Lines Drop Scheme For Discrimination

New York, June 22.—The CIO National Maritime Union has won its fight to stop reprisals against 43 German- and Italian-born American seamen aboard the U. S. liner President Roosevelt. The ship sailed for Bermuda on schedule with the men still aboard.

The company, acting on the request of British authorities in Bermuda, had threatened to fire the 43 foreign-born seamen, some of whom have worked on the ship for 15 and 20 years. The 250-man crew, all NMU members, threatened to strike unless the men were retained.

Seamen Rap Phony 'Insurance' Plan

WASHINGTON, June 22.—For ships and cargo lost in war, the sky's the limit on indemnities for shipowners. For seamen's lives—or if they're lucky and lose only two arms or two legs or an arm and a leg or both eyes—$2,000 is tops. That's the way the U. S. Maritime Commission has it figured out in its War Risk Insurance Bill just offered in Congress here. The government, of course, will pay the bill.

The CIO maritime workers have different ideas, and they are pressing for amendments to place the lives and bodies of the men who work the ships on a somewhat more equal level.

Three CIO maritime representatives, Bjorne Halling, CIO Maritime Committee secretary; Bill Standard, Natl. Maritime Union attorney, and Steve Harvey, legislative agent, presented the case for the workers at hearings before the Marine and Fisheries Committee of Congress.

The CIO representatives presented two alternatives—either raise the indemnity to $10,000 per man, or eliminate all limits and leave them to be worked out by the union with the shipowners. They know that the NMU can do better than $2,000 in negotiations any day in the week.

Win $17,000,000 Gain in New GM Pact

DETROIT, June 22.—Long negotiations between the United Automobile Workers, CIO, and the powerful General Motors Corp. today had resulted in a new contract which union negotiators termed "the greatest advance in the history of automobile unionism."

Highlights of the new agreement, which replaces an old contract signed in 1938, include:

1. A $7,000,000 "CIO dividend" in the form of 40-hour pay bonuses to all employes with 10 months' seniority.

2. A $5,000,000 wage increase to iron out unfair wage differentials throughout the giant motor company's many plants.

3. Appointment of a permanent impartial umpire, paid jointly by the union and the company, who will have final authority on the settlement of all grievances which come under his jurisdiction.

HAILED BY CIO

The contract, negotiated in behalf of 130,000 GM workers without resort to strike or the loss of a minute's worktime, brought immediate enthusiastic comments from leading officials of the CIO.

Pres. John L. Lewis, in a telegram to UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas, extended congratulations for the "splendid agreement," which he said was "of paramount importance to the members of organized labor everywhere."

The CIO president took special note of the fact that "this is the first time that such an agreement has been negotiated with any of the major corporations of the automotive industry without the necessity of a suspension of productive operations."

MURRAY PLEASED

Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, who aided the UAW negotiators during many of the parleys with the company, described the agreement as a demonstration of the "desire of the CIO and its affiliated unions to adjust difficult problems in constructive spirit."

Vice-Pres. Sidney Hillman praised the union for its accomplishment — which, he said "in these days of national emergency, when all citizens are concerned with meeting the problems of national defense, deserves the appreciation of the entire country."

PACT GETS OK

The pact has received unanimous approval from the UAW's General Motors Council, and locals in the 54 GM plants covered by the agreement are already starting to ratify it.

In addition to the three major innovations in the contract, provision is made for a larger number of grievance committeemen, for more time to adjust grievances, and for the establishment of a shop steward system.

'CIO DIVIDEND'

The "CIO dividend" will amount to 40 hours pay for every worker with ten months seniority as of May 1, 1940. It will be paid between July 1 and Sept. 1 of this year, and will amount to seven million dollars.

Whereas the union originally requested a vacation with pay, the new agreement provides for something much better, in that a worker does not have to be laid off or lose time from work in order to collect his "dividend."

TWO-MONTH PARLEYS

Negotiations with the company were started shortly after the UAW-CIO swept to a decisive victory in Labor Board elections late last April.

Early in June the union's international executive board turned down a draft agreement submitted by GM as unacceptable. The board, backed by the GM locals, at once voted full authority to the union to win an improved contract. On June 12, CIO Vice-Pres. Murray entered the negotiations. Three days later, Murray, Pres. Thomas and Walter Reuther, head of the UAW's General Motors Dept., reached the agreement after a six-hour session with the corporation's top officials.

CITES YEAR'S PROGRESS

"This contract with GM will loom ever more important to our unions as the days pass," Thomas said. "The principle of CIO dividends will take hold and other corporations will have to follow suit. Other innovations in the contract will also be copied.

"The year which is now drawing to a close places our union in the strongest position it has yet enjoyed, and it opens up the greatest possibilities for new services to the auto workers."

Win Fall River Strike, Get Contract

Fall River, Mass., June 22.—A six-weeks' strike called by Local 198, CIO Transport Workers Union, ended with a victory for employes of the City Hall Taxi and Cozy Cab companies this week.

The settlement provided for an increase in commission wages from 20 to 30 per cent, and for the return of all strikers to their jobs. Drivers hired during the strike were fired.

Akron Contract

Akron, Ohio, June 22. — Some 300 workers are covered by a new contract signed between Local 1, Transport Workers Union and the Akron Transportation Co. here.

Pay increases ranging from 4 per cent to 10 per cent for maintenance employes, arbitration machinery and two-weeks' vacation with pay for employes with sufficient seniority were among the terms of the agreement.

Packing Drive Zips In South

Birmingham, Ala., June 22.—CIO Packinghouse Workers here are driving ahead to organize remaining unorganized workers in this area following the reaching of a pact by the Armour Co. The agreement brings all the principal Birmingham packers under CIO union conditions.

In addition to standard PWOC wage and hour conditions, the contract includes extensive reclassifications of jobs with corresponding wage boosts. PWOC Director Art Kampfert and Representative G. R. Hathaway aided the local committee.

CIO Man Named To State Board

New Haven, Conn., June 22.—Appointment of John J. Driscoll State CIO Council secretary, to the Connecticut Council for National Defense was announced here by Governor Raymond E. Baldwin.

Driscoll was appointed as one of two labor representatives. He is also eastern representative for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, which has strong locals in the metal fabricating industries of the state, currently busy on arms orders.

Senate Passes WPA Bill

Washington, June 22.—The Senate today has sent to a joint House-Senate conference committee the 1940-41 WPA bill after having defeated the Murray amendment for 3,000,000 jobs and removing the unpopular 18-month layoff provision.

Whether that action will survive the conference committee report was not known in the capital.

As approved in its major outlines by both the House and Senate, the bill calls for a $975,000,000 appropriation for eight months of the new government fiscal year. This will mean approximately 1,950,000 jobs, slightly fewer than at present.

HAD CIO SUPPORT

The Murray amendment was defeated 51-25 in the Senate. Previously the Casey bill, its companion measure in the House, had been likewise voted down. Both proposals had full CIO support.

The 18-month layoff amendment, which was accepted in the Senate, was offered by Sen. Brown of Michigan. At present, all persons who have been on WPA for 18 months are dropped from their jobs, regardless of their needs or conditions at the time.

BOOK FIRM SIGNS

New York—(FP)—An agreement covering employes in the local office of Bobbs Merrill Co., publishing house, has been signed by the CIO Book & Magazine Guild.

The CIO Pays A Dividend

A "CIO dividend" of $7,000,000, in the form of 40 hours' pay for every worker with 10 months' seniority, is one of the features of the new contract won by the CIO United Automobile Workers for 130,000 General Motors workers.

In a broader sense, the $5,000,000 more in wage increases and all the other benefits in this most noteworthy agreement are also part of the dividend paid to the auto workers in return for their investment in CIO membership.

More than this, the CIO has paid a dividend to the whole country by establishing democratic and orderly labor relations in this basic industry, and by working out a collective bargaining agreement without any interruption of production.

The dividends which the CIO pays to the workers, to industry and to the country are measured not only in dollars and cents but also in the greater welfare, freedom and security of the American people.

An Act of Anti-Labor Hysteria

The outrageous and unprecedented action of the House of Representatives in adopting a special bill for the deportation of Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union and California CIO director, is a warning signal of the mounting hysteria which reactionaries are seeking to direct into anti-labor channels.

The recent meeting of the executive board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations unanimously adopted a resolution which described this bill as "clearly an attempt to override judicial procedure which has already ruled that Harry Bridges is not subject to deportation on the grounds alleged in the bill."

The CIO sees this bill as "a violation of American democratic institutions and a bill of attainder of the kind expressly forbidden in the constitution of the United Statees."

The board also noted that it is "designed to damage the CIO in California, and as such is an attack on the entire CIO."

The labor-baiting Congressmen who pushed this bill through the House have acted like the worst foes of American democracy. Let us hope that the shocked protest of labor and all who cherish American liberties, which is already making itself felt, will prevent this un-American bill from getting to first base in the Senate.

The Negro People And Labor

"The problems of the Negro people are the problems of all American wage earners," John L. Lewis told the conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Unemployment, low incomes, poor living conditions—these are evils confronting all labor. But they fall with most oppressive weight on the Negro people.

A larger proportion of Negro than white workers are unemployed. Incomes of Negro families fall far below the common level. Their housing and other living conditions are the worst. In addition, they suffer from many forms of economic and political discrimination.

A chain is as weak as its weakest link. A strong labor movement must, therefore, concern itself particularly about remedying the conditions that are worst and the wages that are lowest.

That is why the CIO organizes all workers without racial discrimination, demands equal wages for equal work and seeks equal economic opportunity for Negro workers.

The same applies to political discrimination. Denial of the right to vote through the poll tax disfranchises white as well as Negro people and holds back the whole cause of liberalism and social progress.

White and black make common cause in the CIO for their mutual economic advantage. And in Labor's Non-Partisan League, the organizations of the Negro people are finding a hearty welcome and their natural place alongside the labor, youth, farm and other liberal groups in promoting their common political interests.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THERE was a time when Republican and Democratic party bosses could get together for a nice quiet convention without having to bother too much about the "hewers of wood and drawers of water."

They paid their respects to Labor (with a capital L) by allowing an AFL leader or two to appear before a platform committee and insert his statement in the record. "File and forget" was the formula. Some hand-shaking, picture-taking and back-slapping—and that was that!

But nowadays the CIO is making it tough on the boys. What was supposed to be division of labor has turned out to be addition, if not multiplication—to be mathematical about it. So there are millions more organized workers than there used to be, and you can't be too sure just how they're going to vote.

As a result, the various "Stop Whosit" caucuses adjourned, poker tables were left desolate, and a crowded roomful of full-blooded Republican leaders paid close and excited attention to a pretty forthright speech by John L. Lewis, when he appeared before the GOP resolutions committee.

The Old and New

When William Green had appeared earlier in his best bib and tucker, everything ran comfortably true to form. He read his prepared platitudes with proper unction and customary finger-wagging. He blushed and beamed at some few kind words. Big Hutch and Shorty Woll also made their curtsies to the crowd. And that was that!

Then came the CIO—and life will never be quite the same again for the men who shape our political destinies, or try to.

Independent, alert, plain-spoken and somewhat demanding are the new hosts of labor who have found in Lewis a leader after their heart. Before they were organized, many were compelled to wear the buttons of their employer's party or candidate. But now they wear no such badges of political serfdom.

So they are an uncertain quantity to the old-line politician.

Lewis had been using the slide-rule of labor's needs and demands to measure the performance of the Democratic leadership. He had not hesitated to make his findings public. His application of the same slide-rule to the GOP was eagerly awaited.

Plain Words to GOP

Lewis spoke directly and frankly to the Republican leaders. He told them that labor had lost confidence in the Republican party, because "the Republican party as such has practically abandoned labor in the past eight or ten years," and as a result labor has abandoned the Republican party.

He bluntly criticized the Republicans for their reactionary record on the Wagner act and social legislation. He advised them that if they ever hoped to return to power, they must gain the confidence of labor and the common people by becoming a "party of the people, not of the coupon-clippers."

Lewis listed a number of labor's main demands. First, no intervention in any war abroad. The night before he had said, in a public address: "The major political party that permits war, or potential war profiteers, or professional politicians with an aggressive military complex, to dominate or write its platform, will find itself hopelessly beaten by the votes of an enraged electorate in November."

Full participation for labor in determining and administering national defense policies—granting of government contracts only to such corporations as observe the labor laws—preservation and expansion of social welfare legislation—the militant guarding of all civil rights—a practical program to put the unemployed to work—these and other labor demands Lewis listed as tests which the workers will apply to those who seek their votes.

Warns Both Parties

Labor, Lewis said, makes the same demands on the Democrats as on the Republicans. It "cannot eat platitudes" nor will it "rest content with generalities." It expects definite and specific assurances from the major parties in return for its support.

He impartially warned both political parties that if they fail to offer a definite program to cope with unemployment, to give labor a square deal and to give the American people security and peace, "some day the people will tire of being deceived and neglected by the major parties." Then both parties will lose the confidence of the people, and with it their power and influence.

Such straight talk from labor is being listened to more attentatively by political leaders this year than ever before (1) because labor is better organized, thanks to the CIO; (2) because labor is more politically conscious and independent, thanks to Labor's Non-Partisan League; and (3) because labor support is not in the bag for any party or politician without a program that merits labor's support.

WAR ADVOCATES FACE DEFEAT, NEGROES HEAR

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—Any political party that allows "war, or potential war profiteers, or professional politicians with an aggressively military complex" to dominate or write its platform will be "hopelessly beaten by the votes of an outraged electorate in November," John L. Lewis told a cheering audience at the conference of the Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored people here.

Lewis invited the NAACP to join with Labor's Non-Partisan League in a united campaign of political action to secure common objectives. The invitation was similar to those extended earlier to the Natl. Negro Congress and the American Youth Congress, which Lewis addressed in Washington.

"Increased national income and employment for all Americans is a fundamental and imperative problem," he said, "which the major political parties and the government must face.

"It is truly tragic that the current Administration in power, after seven years of experimentation, has made no substantial contribution toward the abatement of this problem. It is equally tragic that the political party in power, and its spokesmen, have even now no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems."

NEGRO RIGHTS

Negro workers are America's most exploited group, Louis declared, in calling attention to the lower incomes, lower living, health and educational opportunities available to Negroes. Their salvation, he pointed out, lies with labor.

"Most of the Negroes are wage earners and their salvation lies in the same measures as does that of labor as a whole. Two great essential rights guarantee the advance of labor and of the Negro in a democracy.

"The first is the right to organize into unions as workers. The second is the right of political expression free and unhampered. Equal economic opportunity will only come to the Negro workers when they are organized industrially, side by side with all other industrial workers."

CIO AND THE NEGRO

This equal opportunity exists in the CIO, Lewis said, where Negro workers have equal rights with white workers throughout the unions organized in the CIO. Negro workers occupy many positions of leadership in the CIO, he pointed out—not only in Negro locals but in white locals as well.

Finally, Lewis told the delegates, the program of the CIO contains the basis for broad social advance of all the people of America, white and Negro alike.

Its insistence on collective bargaining, on workers' rights, on housing and health, on an end to the polltax and to lynching and other oppressive evils, show clearly that the interests of the Negro people and of all the workers represented by the CIO are identical, he declared.

Win Strike In Steel Town

BETHLEHEM, Pa., June 22.—CIO bakery workers today had gained substantial improvements after a two-day strike conducted right under the nose of the powerful, anti-union Bethlehem Steel Corp.

The Bricker Bakery, after conferences with the union, granted 3c hourly wage increases and bettered working conditions as demanded by the strikers. Sitting in at the parleys was Mayor Pfifle of Bethlehem.

Edward McCrone, CIO field representative, said that 72 out of the company's 73 employes joined the strike. Its success is bound to have considerable infuence in this steel town, union officials declared.

Lewis Gives GOP List of Labor Demands

PHILADELPHIA, June 22.—The Republican party has forfeited the confidence of labor by its record in recent years, Pres. John L. Lewis frankly told the party's leaders in a straight-from-the-shoulder talk to the convention resolutions committee. If it hopes to be restored to power, he added, it must adopt a straightforward program that will win the confidence of labor and the common people.

Speaking to a packed and attentive audience, which closely followed every word and frequently applauded, the CIO leader said:

"The Republican party is in a position to render a great service to our country and to its people, if in this year 1940 it is capable of deciding to become a party of the people and not a party representing the interests of the coupon-clippers and those who believe the future of the nation lies in their ability to beat labor to its knees and exploit economically, politically and socially the common people of the country.

"But labor," he added, "has had no cause to feel any confidence in the Republican party in recent years, because the Republican party as such has practically abandoned labor in the past eight or ten years. And, I think, it is fairly obvious that labor has abandoned the Republican party."

Speaking in "a representative capacity" as a leader of the CIO, the United Mine Workers and Labor's Non-Partisan League, Lewis pointed out that these organizations, together with the youth, Negro, farm and liberal groups associated with the League, include some 10 million Americans.

PEOPLE'S PROGRAM

He made no claim, however, to "carry the vote of any man, but myself, in my pocket." His only power and influence, he said, was "the power of recommendation to those who have entrusted me with their confidence. They decide if my recommendations are sound and desirable."

If the Republican party hopes to be restored to power, Lewis warned, it must "evolve a program that will beget the confidence of the common peope," for there are not enough people in the privileged classes, the owners of industry and the opponents of labor to carry the party to success in the November elections.

Confidence cannot be won, he said, by "ancient platitudes capable of a dozen different interpretations. Labor can't eat platitudes and will not rest content with generalities.

"The time has come for a straightforward declaration, not weasel words that seek to allure but only deceive.

"And what I say applies to both the Democratic and the Republican platforms. For some day the people will tire of being deceived and neglected by the major political parties."

10-POINT PROGRAM

Lewis then listed ten points on which labor seeks definite assurance from the Republican and Democratic parties:

(1) That the United States must not be led to intervene in any war abroad. The workers, however, he added, are "willing to defend America and American institutions with their last drop of blood and with every ounce of their strength."

(2) That labor be granted full participation in the determination and administration of national defense policies.

(3) That industry and everyone else be required to comply with the law, just as labor wants to comply with it.

"If the Ford company gets government contracts," Lewis said, "it should be willing, as a condition precedent, to comply with the acts of Congress and give its workers the right to organize and bargain collectively. The same goes for the Electric Boat Co., Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel and other companies which have been disobeying the law.

LAWS FOR ALL

"We ask them to obey the law because we believe in the law and think it should be applied to the rich and powerful, no matter how rich they are, as well as to the poor."

(4) That social welfare legislation be preserved and expanded.

(5) That all civil rights be militantly guarded.

"We believe that America should be kept a free nation," he said. "For free men will protect their country more effectively than men who are regimented and who may be driven like dumb cattle to attain the objectives of others."

THE SMITH BILL

(6) That Congress should not legislate in favor of one type of union, the craft form, as against another.

Here Lewis launched into a denunciation of the Smith amendments to the Wagner act recently passed by the House. "The Smith bill," he said, "would wipe out the CIO in favor of the AFL. That's what the bill means.

"The Republican members of Congress have failed again and again to give labor a square deal on this issue. All of which does not beget confidence in the Republican party and its leadership."

(7) That the party go on record against the disfranchisement of millions in the Southern states through the poll tax.

ANTI-LYNCH BILL

(8) That the anti-lynching law should be passed. "If the poll tax has been abolished," Lewis said, "the representatives in Congress of those states would not have been able to block this legislation."

(9) That the increased load of taxation should be on a progressive basis, eliminating sales and excise taxes.

(10) That something should be done about this unemployment situation.

Lewis declared that there are now more than 11 million unemployed, "about the same number as on the last day when the Republican party was in power.

"Don't you forget, you Republicans," he said "that when you went out of office, you left a mighty army of unemployed.

"That does not justify the Democrats for having done nothing about it. But it does call for something being done now.

THE REAL MENACE

"The greatest menace to America is not the alien or the fanatic who may dream some dream of another form of government, whether that may be totalitarian, Fascist or Communist, but the shrunken bellies of one half of the population who do not get enough to eat."

Lewis dwelt for some time on the low living standards of millions of Americans, and on the effect of their low purchasing power on farm incomes.

"These are the kind of questions," he said, "upon which the workers and the average man who works for a living, or who would like to work for a living, are looking to the Republican party and the Democratic party for leadership.

"If neither of the political parties can live up to these requirements, both of them will lose the confidence of the people to a degree that they will not be able to function."

Questioned by Gov. Alfred Landon as to his opinion of the President's proposal for compulsory industrial or military service for all young peope, Lewis replied:

"I think it is a fantastic suggestion from a mind in full intellectual retreat."

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK:

800,000 Jobs Ahead, 10 Million Jobless

WASHINGTON, June 22.—While the National economy is rapidly pinned to the U. S. arms program, and more than three billion dollars beyond January budget estimates will be spent on defense within the next year, the program does not "provide the basis for much increase in our industrial production or for any substantial reduction in the number of unemployed," according to the current issue of the CIO Economic Outlook, released this week.

Unemployment is down 2.5 per cent from March to 11,259,000 for April, the Outlook says, and the arms program will "provide at best between 700,000 and 800,000 additional jobs. This slight cut in the number of jobless, plus other factors in the domestic picture, make for "only a minor rise in domestic production and employment."

Taking steel as an example, the Outlook points out that the entire U. S. naval program represents only one per cent of the capacity of one corporation—U. S. Steel—and that steel orders for automobiles are expected to come to an almost complete halt soon due to seasonal changes in models and consequent stoppages in production.

AN ILLUSION

"In short, the idea that the present armament program will bring high prosperity and full employment to the country is an illusion," the Outlook says. "Unless the defense expenditures are multiplied or unless a greatly increased program of other public work related in part to national defense is undertaken, only a minor rise in domestic production and employment can be expected."

Present jumps in steel production are largely speculative, the Outlook declares, quoting a "large steel consumer" as saying:

"Something is in the wind. It is war or inflation. We figure that we'd better get our orders in now for steel. If the war ends abruptly, we'll be caught with a large inventory, but we're not figuring it that way."

The Administration's tax program as presented to Congress was "a lazy man's plan which in substance simply increased all current Federal taxes by 10 per cent," the Outlook points out.

Chief burden is designed to fall on workers and other small income groups, who already pay the greatest share,

LEWIS TELLS NEGRO GROUP:

U. S. MUST AVOID WAR, SOLVE OWN PROBLEMS

Following are excerpts from the speech delivered by CIO Pres. John L. Lewis to the 31st annual conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in Philadelphia on June 18:

I appreciate very deeply the honor of your invitation to appear before the Thirty-First Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Your Association has, since it was first conceived by public-spirited citizens in 1909, fought a courageous fight for the rights of American citizens. Fundamentally, labor's fight is the same as yours—to obtain for American citizens those rights which are their heritage.

The problems of the Negro people are the problems of all American wage earners, but they are the problems in an aggravated form.

Unemployment, still the first bane of our land, rests with unequal heaviness upon the Negroes. When the census of unemployment was made in 1937, it showed that 15 7-10 per cent of the white working force was totally unemployed, while at the same time over 23 per cent of the Negro working force was totally out of work. We know that kind of a disproportion exists today.

The National Resources Committee has shown in cold facts what we already know, that the income of the Negro families falls far below the common level; for example, one of the studies showed that in Southern rural towns 91 per cent of the yearly incomes of Negroes was below one thousand dollars ($1,000), while only 45 per cent of the white population was under that level. In the large Northern cities 42 per cent of the Negro incomes was below one thousand dollars ($1,000), while only 18 per cent of the white incomes was below that figure. This income disproportion is reflected in the housing and medical care which the Negroes can get.

Negroes' Problems

The needs of no group in the nation are greater than those of the Negro people.

Their incomes as a group are the lowest.

Their living conditions are the poorest.

Their unemployment is the highest.

The discrimination against them is the worst.

Most of the Negroes are wage earners and their salvation lies in the same measures as does that of labor as a whole.

Two great essential rights guarantee the advance of labor and of the Negro in a democracy. The first is the right to organize into unions as workers. The second is the right of political expression free and unhampered.

Equal economic opportunity will come to the Negro workers only when they are organized industrially, side by side with all other workers.

CIO Principles

In the CIO all workers have equality of opportunity. There is no discrimination in wage rates between any of the workers. They have equal rights to all others within the organization, and they must be paid equal wages for doing equal work. The United Mine Workers brought that principle home to the thousands of Negro mine workers in the South, when in 1933 it established equal rights for white and Negro workers in the Southern mines.

Many Negroes are leaders of CIO unions and stand high up in the ranks of the leaders of organized labor. They lead not unions of Negroes alones, but unions of all workers, no matter what their color.

Equal economic opportunity for Negroes under organized labor is the first step toward their rightful place in the sun for the Negro people.

The right to vote establishes the rightful place of every group in our nation. That is why the Negroes as well as the millions of other Southern workers must be released from the shackles of the poll tax, so that they can exercise their franchise.

A Sound Program

The CIO's program offers to Negroes, as well as to the other people of the nation the basis for a sound program.

1. The CIO is the instrument through which the fight of the workers for the right to bargain collectively is being carried on.

2. The CIO is fighting for the end of the poll tax which destroys the right to vote.

3. The CIO demands the passage of the anti-Lynching Bill.

4. The CIO calls for the end of unemployment, for adequate security and decent housing and free and equal education.

Clearly the CIO program, and that of the welfare of the Negro people, are to all intents and purposes practically the same. The way to attain such a program is by common action, and that common action labor freely offers to those who would cooperate with it to the same ends.

Unemployment

In the United States, there are 11,259,000 unemployed.

This is substantially the same number as were unemployed on March 4th, 1933. It is unfortunate for the nation that nothing has been done in seven years to correct this situation. It is tragically unfortunate for those millions who have borne the brunt of the human suffering which these figures suggest.

Government figures recently released reveal that 19 million American families are compelled to subsist on a monthly income of $26.00. Government figures further reveal that under-consumption threatens the health and physical standards of the population. One half of all the people in the United States have incomes which enable them to spend for food requirements only ten cents per meal per person.

Those who love to fuminate against the menace of Fifth Columns and Trojan Horses should thus stop to consider that the most menacing condition in American national life is the inadequate diet and the empty stomachs of one-half of the population.

Increased national income and employment for all Americans is a fundamental and imperative problem, which the major political parties and the Government must face. It is truly tragic that the current Administration in power, after seven years of experimentation, has made no substantial contribution toward the abatement of this problem. It is equally tragic that the political party in power, and its spokesmen, have even now no suggestion to offer for national unemployment, except that possible involvement in a European war may relieve them from the responsibilities of unsolved domestic problems.

No War!

Involvement or intervention in the European war is repugnant to every healthy-minded American. The American electorate is anxious to demonstrate this fact in the political election of 1940. The major political party that permits war, or potential war profiteers, or professional politicians, with an aggressive military complex, to dominate or write its platform will find itself hopelessly beaten by the votes of an outraged electorate in November.

All of the labor and liberal organizations with which I am identified stand unalterably for the adequate defense of the nation and its democratic institutions, and against involvement in the European war and against those who advocate such involvement.

No Recovery

A great depression came on the world in 1929. That depression arose fundamentally from the financial collapse of Europe, which was inevitable as the aftermath of the losses and inflations of the World War.

The economists all agree that recovery from that world-wide depression began in the United States and in every other democratic country in the spring of 1932. The other democratic countries in the world went straight on out of that depression from 1932. They had recovered employment for their people, most of them in the year 1934, and practically all of them by 1935.

The United States alone went backward after the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt, and under his policies it has stayed depressed in the United States ever since. We have never recovered our national income within ten billions per annum. And with our growth of population at the normal rate of progress, it should be 30 billions greater today than it now is. If it were 30 billions greater we would have no unemployment.

In Great Britain they not only recovered their pre-depression national income by 1935, but they marched ahead to 25% above it, while we sweated along 20% below.

Mr. Roosevelt made depression and unemployment a chronic fact in American life. It was a slogan of the 1932 presidential election that Herbert Hoover was responsible for that depression. As a simple matter of justice, let me say here and now that the workers of the United States realize that he had nothing whatever to do with it. It was laid on his doorstep when he came to the White House. It is only the self-seeking politicians that blame Mr. Hoover. The policies he pursued, in cooperation with other nations, had a powerful effect in the start at recovery in 1932. The New Deal did not fulfill their promises or complete their undertakings. It was their policies and their weaknesses which have kept this country in depression for seven more years.

The Future

It is time for all Americans to take stock of the problems which face them today. When the European war ends, and the populations of the warring countries return to the peacetime production of essential commodities, our own country will face terrific economic repercussions. It is time for the major political parties to appraise the situation and keep faith with the American people, by enunciating policies and selecting candidates equal to the task before them. Otherwise, every American will pay the price of our national failure — a price that may well be beyond their ability to pay.

PROTESTS GROW ON GREEN'S SELLOUT

Washington, June 22 — The Smith amendments to the Wagner Act, passed by the lower House last week after public endorsement from AFL Pres. William Green, have reached the Senate Labor Committee where they are for the moment stalled while the Senators argue and whisper about the possibilities of early Congressional adjournment.

The amendments, which would rip the heart out of the Wagner Act and turn into a bill for oppressing labor, were proposed by Tory Democrat Howard W. Smith of the polltax state of Virginia, and were supported through the lower House by a coalition of reactionary Republicans and their reactionary colleagues on the Democratic side. Green's final benediction was all that was needed to shove them through in record time.

The delay in the Senate is only temporary, and the drive for passage can be resumed at any time, CIO observers noted. CIO members and friends of labor were urged not to let up for a moment in the flood of letters and telegrams to Senators expressing their protests against the bill.

GREEN SCORED

In the meantime, honest Congressmen and labor people continued to blister Green for his act of treachery in endorsing the Smith bill.

Speaking on the floor of the House, Frank Fries of Illinois said: "Among those who will bitterly regret the passage of the vicious Smith amendments will be the supposed-to-be labor leaders who, in endorsing amendments which tore the heart out of labor's magna charta, betrayed the trust which had been placed in them by a helpless and confiding people."

In Baltimore, Miss Angela Bambace of the AFL Ladies Garment Workers said: "I know quite a few AFL unions that oppose Green's stand, but you know how it is. They keep their mouths shut. They go down the line. We're not for the Smith amendments even though the AFL Executive Board endorsed them. We are certain they will give more advantage to the employers and less privileges and rights to the workers."

And also in Baltimore another AFL official, who withheld his name from fear of reprisals, spoke out: "I always thought William Green was a fool, but I know he's also a knave. No man in his position could be so blindly stupid that he failed to realize the Smith amendments would hurt the AFL far more than they would help it. It is time for rank and file members to ask whether the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers is helping to pay Bill Green's salary."

BREWERY WORKERS

The Brewery Worker, official organ of the AFL Brewery Workers Union, described the House passage of the Smith bill and Green's endorsement as a "blow at labor peace", and spoke of "troublous times ahead for the labor movement" if the bill passes the Senate.

In Toledo, the AFL Central Labor Union paper, Toledo Union Leader, accused Green of lining up with the NAM and other anti-union employer groups. "In this case," the editorial said, "it appears as though fear of the CIO has stampeded his better judgment as effectively as our present war hysteria has unbalanced the clear thinking of many of our citizens."

U. S. Finds: 'No Lack Of Skilled Workers'

WASHINGTON, June 22.—CIO assertions that no shortage of skilled labor exists throughout the nation—a claim hotly disputed by foes of organized labor—were given government endorsement today.

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt announced that a Social Security Board survey showed large numbers of skilled wrokers unemployed and available for jobs in the national defense program.

Over three million applications are on file with U. S. Employment Service in 33 states, the government statement pointed out, and of these, some 1,538,000 workers in 4,953 ocupations can be classified as skilled. The group included 23,000 technicians, 657,000 skilled craftsmen and 858,000 semi-skilled production workers.

"The conclusion to be drawn from these data," McNutt declared, "is that no general labor shortage exists at present."

INCOMPLETE REPORT

The number of skilled workers available is expected to rise when results of the survey in such important states as California and New York are added to the preliminary figures released by the Federal Security Agency.

In connection with the statistics, McNutt cited a survey by the Social Security Board in 76 special occupations. In April, the results from 33 states revealed that the employment offices have registered 5,300 tool and die workers, over 2,300 experienced engineers and designers, and more than 17,000 qualified machinists and mechanics.

BACK CIO CLAIMS

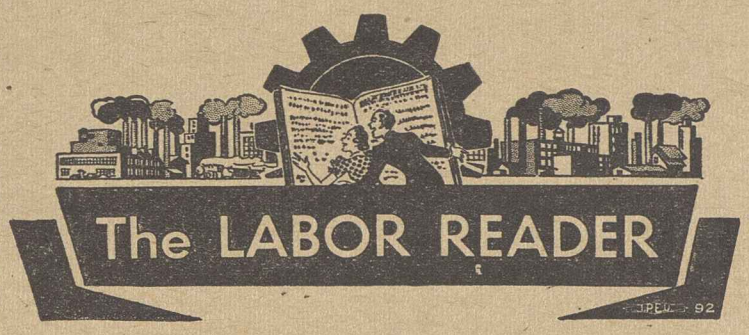
Results of the government study clearly bear out the statement passed by the CIO at its San Francisco convention "that there is no prospect of a prospect of a serious national shortage of skilled or unskilled labor."

The convention also called upon the government to "make a careful survey of the needs of industry and the present available unemployed, and that it then publish the facts."

With that study now almost complete, the country's labor force is shown to be completely adequate for the present national defense program.

Ask Action In Canada Coal Dispute

Glace Bay, June 22.—Immediate action in the investigation of wage disputes with the Acadia Coal Company, Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Corporation and the Sydney and Louisburg Railway, is being pressed for by District 26 UMW.



Dissatisfied with the delay in having a Conciliation Board function under the Industrial Disputes Act, District President D. W. Morrison has asked Canadian Minister of Labor McLarty to have the board function at once.

Originally three separate boards were asked but later it was agreed one could probe all the disputes.

Set-up of the tribunal was first asked several weeks ago and the UMW appointed District Vice-President P. G. Miles as its representative and Russell McInnes, K. C. Halifax, was named as company member.

A chairman to be named by the Federal Department of Labor remains to be selected before the board can function.

LABOR ON TRIAL

By C. W. FOWLER

San Francisco's waterfront is as impressive as the travel folders say it is. The Embarcadero is beautiful; millions of dollars of world commerce goes through the Golden Gate; ships of all nations load and discharge at the docks. Six years ago the Embarcadero was the center of one of America's bitterest labor struggles, with violence and death dealt out by the employers to the workers.

The longshoremen were the victims of the shipowners' violence, because they were on strike for a decent wage and a chance to live. Before the union came, they were earning, theoretically, 75 cents an hour. Actually they were making an average of about $10.45 a week. The strike went on a long time, became a general strike that tied up the whole great city and frightened everybody—except the workers and the common people—out of years of anti-labor growth and most of their remaining wits.

After the strike was over, the longshoremen were paid 95 cents an hour, were averaging $40—$50 a week. The shape-up and the kickback were gone. The workers had a union, a democratic one they controlled themselves, with their own leaders that came up during the struggle and who followed the custom—unusual for the AFL Intl. Longshoremen's Association—of taking leadership only when they were elected in an honest ballot.

THE ALIEN MENACE

The head man of these elected leaders was one Harry Bridges, who had gone for some years quite unnoticed by employers or newspaper publishers while he was simply one of thousands of longshoremen of all national and racial origins. Nobody bothered about the fact that he had been born in Australia and hadn't been able to complete his citizenship papers. Nobody bothered about Bridges at all—until he became a leader of the union.

Ever since that time, of course, Bridges has been a first class "threat" to America, the subject of countless editorials, radio blasts, Congressional and other stump speeches, official investigations, culminating finally in the deportation hearings held on Angel Island and the exile bill shot through the House of Representatives just a week ago.

THE CASE OF HARRY BRIDGES

The deportation hearings, subject of "Harry Bridges on Trial," by Estolv Ward, head of the Bridges Defense Committee, made a fascinating story through many days of newspaper copy, though the ending was not too happy for the shipowners and the publishers who started it. As Ward details it in his book, the prosecutors and the forces behind them came off badly—so badly that the Government could not order the deportation so ardently desired.

A parade of extraordinary characters marches through Ward's pages. Finks, stoolpigeons, labor spies, ex-convicts, pathological liars and professional and amateur labor-baiters all stood on the stand, swore Bridges was, must be, always had been, a Communist—and one by one saw their "testimony" broken down at the first contact with fact and an honest man, Dean Landis, in charge of the hearing.

The longshoremen and other CIO and honest labor people called the anti-Bridges witnesses some harsh names—like those listed above—but no harsher if less polite than the comments from Government's man, in charge of the hearing, Dean Landis. There's space for one of the Dean's salty remarks: "Leech (a witness) was afflicted with verbal haemophilia . . . much of it flowed from a curious pretense to knowledge about totally irrelevant matters; much of it merely sprang, however, from a habit of using 10 words where one would have sufficed."

The most pointed comment, however, came from Harry Bridges, CIO leader in California, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, who said when the trial was over and the verdict in:

"I was on trial, but labor was the defendant. Labor fought the case and won. To the thousands of union men and women who gave their aid in time and money, I can best express appreciation by saying: 'It is your victory.' "

Atty. Gen. Jackson Attacks Bill To Oust Bridges

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Atty. General Robert Jackson today denounced the bill to deport Harry Bridges to Australia as un-American.

In a lengthy letter to Sen. Russell of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Immigration Committee, the Attorney General cited in detail and with feeling his opposition to the bill, which singles out the California CIO leader for deportation.

"If this bill were to become law, it would be an historical departure from an unbroken American practice and tradition," Jackson declared.

"It would be the first time that an Act of Congress has singled out a named individual for deportation. It would be the first deportation in which the alien was not even accused, either of unlawful entry or of unlawful conduct while here.

"It would be the first time that Congress, without changing the general law, simply suspended all laws which protect a named individual and directed the Attorney General to disregard them and forthwith to deport 'notwithstanding any other provision of law.'

WITHOUT HEARING

"And it would be the first time since the Alien and Sedition laws a century and a half ago that any law would provide for deportation without a hearing or without, indeed, the slightest pretense toward giving the accused what our nation has long known as 'due process of law'....

"What becomes of equality before the law, of the impersonal and impartial character of our government, if it is to select unpopular persons to suffer disadvantage or punishment."

UN-DEMOCRATIC

Jackson, pointing out that at this time he is not discussing the constitutionality of the Bridges bill, recalled that "our forefathers objected to a government where 'whatever pleases the Prince had the force of law.'

"The report of the House Committee comes close to reverting to this when it says that deportation 'without assigning any reason is inherent and asserted by this bill.'

"As an American I would not, for the sake of my own liberty, deny the protection of uniform and discriminatory laws and of fair hearings to even the humblest and meanest of men. As an official of the United States I cannot in good conscience do other than recommend strongly against this bill."

HYSTERICAL HOUSE PASSES BRIDGES BILL

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, June 22.—By a 330-42 vote which followed hours of screaming anti-labor oratory, the House of Representatives passed a tersely-worded bill ordering immediate deportation of Harry Bridges, head of the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

Soon afterward, Sen. Reynolds of North Carolina, ardent alien-baiter and reactionary, indicated he would press for speedy action on the bill in the Senate.

Ignored in the House debate was the warning of the minority that fundamental American civil rights would be thrown out the window if the deportation bill were to become law. Instead Tory Congressmen spent hours filling the record with their speeches of hatred against Bridges and the CIO, and urging his immediate removal to Australia and even expressing hope that he might be used as cannon fodder by the Dominion.

DECRIES HYSTERIA

"Some of the speeches here today are suggestive of that state of hysteria that was prevalent in this Chamber in the days preceding the vote that put us into the World War," Rep. Sabath of Illinois, veteran House leader, solemnly reminded his colleagues.

He warned that a vote for the deportation bill was a vote for a clear-cut violation of the Constitution.

Leaders of the opposition to the bill included Representatives Marcantonio of New York, Murdock of Utah, Geyer and Havenner of California and Coffee of Washington.

Marcantonio read into the record a long letter from Bridges which denied the "red" charges hurled against him, and pointed out in detail the history of his case. The letter charged that his original application for final citizenship papers had been denied through a clerical error.

'DEMOCRACY'

Rep. Geyer, after charging that the fight against the CIO leader was part of the West Coast employer-labor contest, asserted:

"He (Bridges) has been proved by a judicial procedure not to be guilty as charged. In the United States I thought only the guilty were punished, and then after due process of law.

"We are importing Hitler methods. Can we protect democracy by destroying it?"

EMPLOYERS' EFFORT

Rep. Havenner, who represents a San Francisco district, took the same position: "whether the members of Congress realize it or not," he said, "if Harry Bridges is deported by this action, it will be because he has been a militant leader of labor."

DuPont Must Rehire 23

Paulsboro, N. J., June 22 — Under an agreement reached just before the Labor Board was to start hearings, 23 members of District 50, United Mine Workers fired by E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. here, for union activity will be reinstated with $4,000 back pay.

Leonard Goldsmith, executive secretary of the New Jersey CIO Council hailed the agreement as "a substantial victory for the CIO over one of the largest war industries in the United States."

The company has also agreed to an election to be held by the Labor Board.

RECORD-BREAKING GAINS!

Electrical Union Gains Many Pacts, New Members

NEW YORK, June 22.—Gains of more than 10,000 members in three months, 40 contract renewals and 17 new pacts, eight Labor Board election victories covering 5,062 workers and five new locals were reported to the quarterly meeting of the Executive Board of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine workers here.

Speaking out on defense policy, the Board declared, with the CIO, that the UE will support defense of American institutions from all attacks, and will demand that labor's gains be protected in any emergency the country faces.

"Like the rest of the labor movement, and like all Americans," the Board declared, "we will defend our country with our lives. We refuse, however, to indorse extra-territorial adventures for gain or conquest; nor will we support any efforts to plunge the people of this nation into such wars."

'DOMESTIC FAILURE'

The Board commented that "a failure to deal successfully with domestic tasks makes but a poor guarantee of success in dealing with international affairs.

"We watch the selfsame enemies of labor—those who a few years ago waged open and hidden warfare on labor, under pretext of 'employers' privilege'—today continuing that warfare on labor with renewed violence under pretext of national emergency," it added.

Carrying out this insistence on protection of labor's gains, the Board demanded an end to tory attacks on the Wagner Act, led by polltax Congressman Smith and his ally, Wm. Green of the AFL, denounced supporters of the Smith-Green-employer tieup, and urged Pres. Roosevelt to issue an executive order requiring Wagner Act compliance from all government contractors before contracts are given to them.

"SACRIFICE"

The Board also spoke out on the subject of "sacrifice" now much in demand by certain anti-union circles. "We are told that during national crisis, all groups must make sacrifices, employing groups and groups of employes alike," the Board said. "We note, however, that the actual steps taken do nothing but impose new burdens on labor and exact unwarranted sacrifices of intrinsic American rights from labor, meanwhile leaving war-greedy profiteers free to drain more and more of the nation's wealth into their own pockets."

The UE Board put teeth into its statements on the Smith-Green-employer amendments passed in the lower House by calling on its locals to "take any steps and actions they may deem necessary," in consultation with the Board, to resist anti-industrial union drives by splinter craft units and other disruptive groups.

It cited the case of nine AFL pattern-makers in a New York plant employing 600 skilled and other workers who have been on strike for nearly a month, though the 600 workers have "harmonious relations with their employer through our union's contract."

No real or extensive shortage of skilled workers exists, the Board pointed out, and where a shortage may exist, a proper apprentice training system, as outlined by the Board, could be very easily set up to take care of the slack.

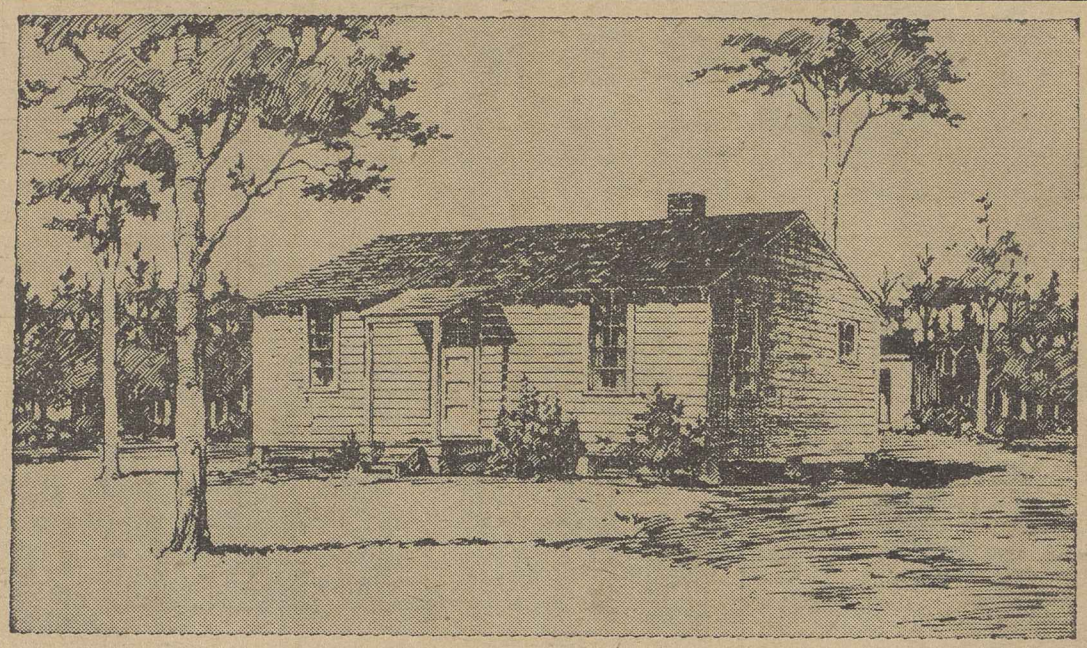
The Board concluded by indorsing the policy on labor unity as set forth in the recent CIO Executive Board meeting, where the work of the negotiating committee made up of Pres. Lewis and Vice-Presidents Murray and Hillman was unanimously approved and full authorization for any further negotiations voted.

Carey Cites Union Gains

Washington, June 22. — Growth of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers from small beginnings in 1936 to a position of power in the electrical industry is described by Pres. James B. Carey, writing in the May issue of the Labor Information Bulletin.

The magazine is a publication of the U. S. Department of Labor.

"From a nucleus of 18 local unions with an aggregate membership of approximately 25,000 in March, 1936," Carey recalls, "the union has grown to 191 locals in the United States and Canada, with a membership of about 160,000.



"It has established contractual relations with most of the largest manufacturing companies in the industry and serves as the collective bargaining agency for about three-fourths of the approximately 360,000 workers normally employed in the production of electrical equipment, appliances and machinery."

Coast Firm Must Bargain

Washington, June 22.—The Los Angeles Spring Bed Co., Los Angeles, was ordered this week by the Labor Board to bargain collectively upon request with the United Furniture Workers, CIO, as sole bargaining representative of its production employes.

The company was also ordered to stop discouraging membership in the union and to reinstate 15 employes with back pay.

The Board's ruling was based on evidence not denied by the company, showing that 52 of the 66 workers employed by the concern had designated the CIO union as their desired union representative, in the course of a membership campaign started in January, 1939.

FIND INSANITY CAUSE IN RAYON PROCESS

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A study on occupational poisoning in the viscose rayon industry, undertaken at the request of officials of the CIO Textile Workers Union, has been issued by the U. S. Department of Labor.

Results of the inquiry started by the Division of Labor Standards two years ago, is published as Bulletin No. 34, prepared by Dr. Alice Hamilton, internationally known authority on industrial poisoning.

Thousands of rayon workers will be better protected against health hazards today, as a result of the study, the Division of Labor Standards declared in releasing the bulletin.

Carbon disulphide, used to dissolve the wood pulp crumbs and form the cellulose solution which is later spun into rayon yarn. Dr. Hamilton discovered in her research, was the cause of cases of sudden insanity which came upon men and women at work on certain operations.

ATTACKS NERVE CELLS

The fumes from carbon disulphide which smell like rotting radishes, attack the nerve cells and nerve trunks of the brain. The substance also attacks the eyes, ears and skin. Neuritis is the commonest form of the poisoning, insanity the worst form, the bulletin states.

Dr. Hamilton shows in her report that viscose workers need not be exposed to disulphide fumes, as protective measures are possible all along the line of manufacture. A number of plants began installing improved ventilating systems, enclosing some of the more dangerous operations, after her study was launched.

Hydrogen sulphide fumes are another danger to viscose workers. In its mild forms, it causes inflammation of the eyes, and may also irritate the lungs. Large quantities in the air have been known to cause death.

OTHER INDUSTRIES, TOO

The same poisons also menace workers in other industries, the report points out. A study of the industrial poisons to which workers are exposed and improvement of industrial hygiene and safety are therefore major needs in the protection of millions of workers, the investigation showed.

Extension of workmen's compensation laws to give some protection to occupational disease victims and their families is also needed, the Division of Labor standards declared in a statement announcing the bulletin.

"All but two states of the union have some form of workmen's compensation laws in effect. Of these, however, only 23 states provide any coverage at all for occupational diseases. In several of the states with important viscose rayon plants, victims of carbon disulphide poisoning cannot even claim workmen's compensation."

CANADIAN UNIONS PLAN MERGER SOON

Glace Bay, N. S., June 22.—Affiliation of Congress of Industrial Organizations unions in Canada with the All-Canadian Congress of Labor is proposed to take place at a convention to be held in Toronto in September, Silby Barrett, regional director for the CIO in Canada announced here.

The announcement followed the return of Barrett from a tour of United States and Canadian cities in connection with union organization work.

Under the plan for the proposed merger of the CIO organizations and the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, a huge organization would be formed which would be known as the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Member unions would have a combined total of more than 100,000 workers in their ranks.

Protests Kill Plan To Shift Jersey Jobless to Army

NEWARK, N. J., June 22. — Unmarried unemployed men in New Jersey will not have to enlist in the army to avoid starvation.

Acting on a protest that shook the entire state, Relief Director Arthur Mudd announced abandonment of his proposal to "conscript" the state's jobless for the military service.

The New Jersey Industrial Union Council, civic and professional groups and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt were among those who attacked Mudd's proposal. Faced by this lineup, the state official backed down, claiming his proposal was only a "suggestion" to relief chiefs.

RIGHTS IN DANGER

But even with the provision for enlistment of single persons on relief eliminated, New Jersey relief clients faced a curtailment of their rights if the relief reorganization bill passed by the legislature on June 11 becomes law.

Urging Gov. A. Harry Moore to veto the bill, the State CIO Council declared:

"This bill would in effect cut relief standards throughout the state of people who are already on the brink of starvation; would put restrictions upon the civil rights of relief clients; and would set up a one-man relief czar responsible to no one in the administration of the vital matter of relief.

Tennessee Tries Plan

Nashville, Tenn., June 22.—(FP)—Another attempt to force the needy to enlist was made June 14 by State WPA Administrator Harry Berry.

After being told by local army recruiting officials that enlistments were lagging, Berry ordered district WPA directors to turn down all single relief applicants of military age.

He also announced that persons in this category would be the first to be dropped from WPA rolls when reductions are made.

Die Casters Strike In Cleveland; to Vote In Syracuse

By WALTER F. PETERS

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 29. — A two-day strike at the Syracuse plant of the Precision Castings Company ended today when officials of the National Labor Relations Board ordered an election to determine whether the National Association of Die Casting Workers, a CIO affiliate, should be the collective bargaining agent for the 68 employes.

The workers walked out last Wednesday after failure of a one-year attempt to convince the company to agree to a consent election. On each occasion the company refused the union's request and retaliated by discriminating against a number of active unionists. Climaxing the company's discriminatory attitude was the dismissal of Willard Smith, chairman of the Precision unit. Smith was reinstated earlier in the week after sharp protests by the Union.

170 STILL STRIKE

Meanwhile some 170 Precision employes at the Cleveland plant are still on strike. The Cleveland workers walked out one day before the Syracuse workers and are demanding a consent election along with other union requests.

The Cleveland strike is receiving wide support from the local Labor Movement. An attempt by the Mayor of Lakewood, a suburban community where the Cleveland plant is located, to break the strike by issuing a proclamation against picketing resulted in a demonstration of 1,000 Cleveland workers at the picket line during the first day.

The Syracuse strikers withheld action earlier last week pending the arrival of Thomas Finn, of Washington, conciliator for the U. S. Department of Labor, who met with both company and union officials.

WILL BARGAIN

A statement of policy issued by Conciliator Finn, agreed to by company officials, guaranteed that the company would bargain in good faith with the CIO affiliate if it won the NLRB election. The company also agreed that it would

CIO Auto Union Sweeps Run-off Election At GM

BALTIMORE, June 29 — On the heels of the new United Automobile Workers national contract with General Motors, the CIO swept to victory in the first run-off election at GM since the April 26 balloting.

By a 711 - 116 vote, the UAW - CIO delivered another crushing body blow to the AFL affiliate which has been hoping to get a toe-hold in the automobile industry.

Lawrence Smith, UAW-CIO regional director and Carl Copeland, organizer, said the men — employed in the local Chevrolet plant — will participate in gains won by the new national GM contract, which brought with it a $12,000,000 income increase for 130,000 of the corporation's employes.

"The sweep to CIO after the original plurality we won in 'Chevy' is indicative of a major trend," Smith said. "With the enthusiasm generated by this 600% better CIO vote, we expect to go to town on other industries where sub - standard wages and insecurity are the rule under open shop conditions."

Some 834 out of 943 eligible voters went to the polls.

Hoffman's Home-Town Boys Again Vote CIO

BUCHANAN, Mich., June 29.—The labor-baiting diatribes of Republican Rep. Clare Hoffman must be for export purposes only. At least, the folks in his home district don't seem to be taking them very seriously.

Less than six weeks after the United Automobile Workers, CIO, had won its first contract in Adrian, which is Hoffman's native city, workers at the Clark Equipment Co.—located in Hoffman's own Congressional district—plumped heavily for the CIO.

After votes in a Labor Board election were counted, the UAW was found to have polled 535 votes. An "independent" union was able to get only 318.

AFL Gets Candid!

Toledo, Ohio — "We organized for the purpose of breaking the strike." This statement, made in a burst of unusual frankness, came from Frank Dexter, organizer of AFL Federal Union 22194 in hearings before a Labor Board official here on the AFL union's demand for an election at the Gulf Oil Co., already under contract to the CIO Oil Workers Union.

The Oil Workers won their contract after a five months strike during which Francis Dillon, AFL Pres. Wm. Green's personal representative, made repeated attempts to organize a "back-to-work" movement. Now the AFL splinter outfit is trying to chisel an election out of the Board.

Win 5-1 In Jersey

Newark, N. J., June 29—Automobile workers are continuing to roll up huge majorities for the CIO in Labor Board elections, following the pace set by the General Motors election a month ago. Latest United Automobile Workers victory is in the Wenzel Hammered Piston Ring Co. here, where Local 727 won handsomely.

Vote was 186 for Local 727 of the UAW-CIO to 36 for no union. Negotiations will start immediately, according to Wm. J. Carney, New Jersey CIO regional director.

Construction Firm Signs

Baltimore, Md., June 229.—The Mancini Construction Company, which is soon to start work on a $53,000 building job, has signed a contract with the CIO United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, which will provide five months' work for 30 CIO members.

The Mancini concern is the first general contractor in Baltimore to sign with the CIO.

Shipyard Union Gets Big Gains At Kearny

KEARNY, N. J., June 29.—Higher wages, vacations with pay and improved methods of handling grievances are among the terms of a one-year sole bargaining contract covering some 7,000 production and maintenance workers signed this week between the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Company here.

The pay increases, ranging from 2½ to 20 cents an hour, are in addition to the hourly pay boost of 2½ to 4 cents given in the settlement ending a three-day strike early this month.

John Green, IUMSW national president, and John F. Dempsey, president of the Kearny local, signed for the union, and L. H. Korndorff, president, and J. H. Love, industrial relations manager, represented the firm. The company, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, holds contracts for about $100,000,000 in naval and merchant ship construction.

Leonard Goldsmith, secretary of the New Jersey CIO Industrial Union Council, hailed the agreement as "the best contract in the industry."

District 50 Hits Fast Stride

Washington, June 29.—Members of three locals of District 50, United Mine Workers, received dividends on their union affiliation this week as the organization piled up three quick victories.

In Charleston, W. Va., site of a big duPont chemical plant employing upwards of 3,000 workers, the National Labor Relations Board reversed the findings of a trial examiner and ordered a company union be sent to the scrap heap.

It was the big chemical firm's third stab at company unionism in the Charleston plant, the other two having previously headed for the graveyard. An election has been ordered as soon as effects of the firm's unfair labor practices wear off.

WIN ELECTION

Meanwhile District 50 headed on the road to a contract at the duPont plant in Paulsboro, N. J., after winning an election by a 2-1 margin among the plant's 50-odd employes. Just two weeks ago 23 members of the union had been rehired with back pay as the result of an NLRB order.

In the midwest, District 50 rang the bell at East Chicago, Ind., when it ended a 13-week strike at the U. S. S. Lead Refining Co. plant in East Chicago, Ind. The settlement provided for increased wages, exclusive recognition of the union as bargaining agent and the first vacations with pay in the history of the factory.

Rieve to Address Textile Confab

Jasper, Ala., June 29.—Emil Rieve, president of the CIO's Textile Workers Union of America, is scheduled to speak at a conference of the Alabama TWUA to be held here July 21.

H. S. Williams, state TWUA director, in announcing the conference, said it would be "the largest Alabama textile workers have ever had, despite the overflow crowds we have had at past conferences"

800 Steel Workers To Vote in Canada

HAMILTON, Ont., June 29.—More than 800 workers in the Canada works plant of Steel Co. of Canada will shortly have a chance to decide by ballot whether they want the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to act for them in obtaining improvements in wage and hour conditions, Silby Barrett, SWOC regional director, stated this week.

The ballot will be conducted by officers of the federal department of labor. Sometime ago workers in the plant voted to strike after charging the company with discriminating for union activity. Application was then made for a conciliation board.

Establishment of the board is being withheld until the workers express their decision by official ballot since the company disputed the claim that a majority of the men voted strike.

Canadian CIO Head Urges Organizing Drive

TORONTO, Ont., June 26.—With the declaration by the federal government that workers in industry have the right to collective bargaining in war industries or otherwise, Silby Barrett, chairman of the Canadian CIO and regional drector of Steel Workers Organizing Committee, this week urged all workers to avail themselves of the benefits of industrial democracy.

The official government statement opens the way to an organizational drive in which the workers will be given every assistance where they call upon the Canadian CIO for aid, Barrett emphasized.

"We offered the government full cooperation in the war effort last fall and it was reiterated at a recent conference at Ottawa," Barrett said. "However, we hope the government's statement of policy is more than lip service to industrial democracy and that there will be genuine collective bargaining.

DISCRIMINATION

"Employers in a number of industries have been continually discriminating against workers for trade union activity and we have ample proof of this. We hope the government's announced policy will effectively end this discrimination."

Barrett called for the outlawing of such anti-democratic employer practices as the establishment of company unions, which should be more accurately described as "Hitler unions," he said.

WORKERS' RIGHTS

"Workers in industry should have complete freedom to join unions of their own choice without coercion by employers, indirect or otherwise. If workers are given this right they will have more confidence in employers and more incentive to give the fullest cooperation in producing machines and munitions for the defense of Canada and the Empire."

Back Quebec Strikers

Cumberland, Md., June 29.—Immediate financial aid to the striking workers at the Celanese plant in Drummondville, Quebec, was voted here by Celanese Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America. The Canadian plant was struck early in May to win recognition and wage increases.

A statement issued by James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874 said: "Our own membership can feel keenly the position in which the Canadian workers find themselves in their fight. We still recall the hard struggle through which we went here before winning recognition of our union from the Celanese Corporation of America.

"Pretty much the same statements were made and the same procedures used against us then as are now being applied in Canada."

Salmon Fishermen Ask Compensation

San Francisco, June 29—(FP)—A hearing is being held before the Alaska Unemployment Commission on the claims filed by 1,200 San Francisco members of the Alaska Cannery Workers Union, CIO, to about $200 unemployment compensation apiece because of cancellation of this year's Alaska salmon fleet.

The Alaska Salmon Industry, Inc., says the men should not receive unemployment compensation because the union's failure to sign a contract constituted a labor dispute.

CIO Wins Poll, 5-1, At GM Sales Corp.

LOS ANGELES, June 29.—The United Automobile Workers, CIO, today hailed its Labor Board victory at the General Motors Sales Corporation here a "pioneering step in the organization of non-production workers in the auto industry."

The UAW was certified by a 5-1 majority.

Today's board victory was the culmination of a bitter fight for organization of parts and sales workers at the local plant and, officials of the union said, it struck a major blow in the nationwide drive.

Of the 29 votes cast, 19 were for the UAW-CIO, four opposed. Six of the ballots were challenged.

The election was ordered after a hectic eight-month struggle which included two strikes.

Hosiery Workers Condemn Poll Tax

MILWAUKEE, June 29.—Vigorous opposition to the poll tax as a prerequisite to the right to vote in eight southern states was voiced here by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, in their annual convention at the Hotel Schroeder here.

The twenty-ninth annual convention here adopted a strong national defense resolution, advocated the elimination of excess profits from war preparations, and urged the re-election of Roosevelt for a third term as President of the United States.

Other resolutions adopted by the convention included the condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan as an instrument of the labor-hating, CIO-fighting reactionaries of the Southern states.

The convention adopted a resolution stating that the "American Federation of Hosiery Workers heartily commends the Textile Workers' Union of America for its great gains and reaffirms its pledge of support for the TWUA."

This resolution also recounted what had been "accomplished under the leadership of Emil Rieve, who for ten years has been president of the AFHW prior to his being chosen for this greater task as president of our parent organizations, TWUA."

News Guild Ready For 7th Convention

By JOHN DUNN

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 29.—Almost 150 delegates, representing locals from coast to coast, will meet here July 8 to open the seventh annual American Newspaper Guild convention which will continue through July 12. The International Executive Board will meet July 6-7.

The delegates will hear reports from officers telling them of one of the most important years in Guild history — a year in which the Guild won its biggest strike and made great strides on both the bargaining and organizing front. The Chicago Hearst strike victory paved the way for national negotiations with the Hearst management.

Since its last convention the Guild has increased its number of contracts to 124, covering more than 150 American newspapers, including an overwhelming majority of the major metropolitan dailies.

The financial situation of the Guild is the healthiest in its history with larger balances than the Guild has ever had in both its general and defense funds.

A successor to President Kenneth G. Crawford, ace Washington correspondent, will have to be elected, as Crawford has said he will not seek re-election. He was chosen in January to succeed the late Heywood Broun, who was Guild president for six years until his death.

BOOSTER: Jack Johnson, former heavyweight titleholder, who has been made an honorary member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in Boston. Jack's a strong supporter of CIO principles.

W. Virginia Ladies Plan Convention

Morgantown, W. Va., June 29.—The first convention of union ladies' auxiliaries will be held here July 22, in conjunction with the annual CIO State Council convention.

A call sent out by Ruth Voithofer Allen, director of the Marion County Council of Ladies' Auxiliaries, said that this group was taking the initiative in calling a conference of all ladies' auxiliaries in West Virginia, as the CIO State Council constitution "makes no provision for participation of auxiliaries in the Council."

"We are living in a crucial period of American life where war, unemployment, insecurity, face the millions of American workers," the call stated. "Women as mothers of American democracy, play an indispensable part in the labor movement."

Glass Union Convention On July 8

Columbus, Ohio, June 29—The fourth convention of the CIO's Federation of Flat Glass Workers opens at the Commodore Perry hotel in Toledo the morning of July 8, it was announced at the FFGW headquarters here today.

The union's General Executive Board will hold its regular July meeting two days before the convention opens. Committees on credentials, on rules and orders and on constitution will also meet before the convention starts to facilitate the business to be transacted and shorten the time of the regular sessions.

Printed copies of proposed revisions in the constitution to be submitted to the delegates have been sent to all local unions for preliminary discussion.

May Strike

San Francisco, June 29.—(FP)—The Marine Cooks & Stewards, CIO, has been given strike sanction by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific against both intercoastal and offshore shipowners.

The strike will be called July 1 if a contract with higher wages is not signed by that time. Negotiations have been going on for nine months.

CITES LABOR DEMANDS: CIO Pres. John L. Lewis (at left) as he addressed the Republican Party's resolutions committee listing labor's demands and warning that labor votes will go only to the party or candidates which meet the workers' needs with an adequate program.

Congress, in Recess, Hears Protests on Smith Bill

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Congress took time off this week to let minority members attend the Republican convention in Philadelphia, leaving the Wagner Act in temporary status quo with the Smith ripper amendments passed by the lower House and still to come before the Senate.

The truce was not observed by labor, however, as continued protests against the Smith bill poured in on Senators even in their absence. From New York, 6,300 members of the CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Employes, Local 65, sent in a strong resolution from a mass membership meeting condemning the bill as designed to "create untold industrial strife, jeopardize the rights of unorganized workers to organize into unions of their own choosing and make of the act a weapon to be used against unions by the reactionary employers."

The Natl. Maritime Union, representing about 85,000 CIO workers, earlier sent a sharp letter to all Senators describing the Smith bill as "employer amendments, pure and simple," and demanding that they vote them down.

The amendments, the NMU said, "will enable a small employer-financed minority to defeat the will of thousands of seamen. That can't be right. The Wagner Act was designed to protect American workers. If it is emasculated, it will fail of its purpose. It will then serve only the enemies of labor."

DISRUPTION AND DISORDER

"To change the act now," the NMU wrote, "would be to open the way once more for disruption and disaster. The seamen on the Atlantic and the Gulf ore overwhelmingly on record many times for the preservation of their union. They will fight to keep it from being broken up."

From the textile areas from Rhode Island word came that the Independent Textile Union of America (unaffiliated) was continuing its opposition to proposed changes in the act. An earlier edition of the official organ, ITU News, had condemned current proposals as written and sponsored by AFL big shots in collusion with agents of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and other anti-union employers, as revealed in Senate testimony by CIO President John L. Lewis.

WRITE YOUR SENATOR

CIO members and all progressives were urged again to keep up a steady stream of resolutions, wires and letters to their Senators and to Senator Elbert Thomas, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, protesting against passage of the Smith bill.

A new CIO leaflet, "It's Up to You," reviewed the meaning and history of the Smith bill, calling special attention to the role of William Green in lining up with anti-union forces to endorse the bill, thus leading to it passage through the lower House. The leaflet urged doubled efforts to block the Smith bill, pointing out that workers need the Wagner Act "now more than ever before."

The Colorado Labor Advocate, offical organ of 51 AFL unions in that state, called on all union members to remember the Congressmen who voted against the Wagner Act when remembering has the most point—in November.

Also from Colorado, the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers issued an urgent call to its members in all states of the union to write, wire, phone protests to their Senators.

"The fight to save the Wagner Act has become the fight to save our own individual locals and our International," the union said.

"If the heartaches and hardships of future battles are to be flooded now with demands that the Wagner Act, major guarantee of industrial democracy, be preserved."

Pay Boost In Virginia

Big Island, Va., June 29.—A 3c hourly wage increase for employes of the Bedford Pulp & Paper Co. was won by the CIO United Paper Workers Local Industrial Union 1013.

The wage boost is retroactive to June 1 and will last for the duration of the union contract. Representatives of the local and the management will confer on or before August 1 to discuss further wage boosts.

The pact was signed by W. H. Brydges, representing the com- director in Virginia, and members pany, Roy Thomason, CIO regional of the local's executive board.

"It's Up To You," newest CIO leaflet, tells the story of Bill Green's treachery in endorsing the Smith bill that would rip the heart out of the Wagner Act, plus some choice quotes from AFL leaders and Congressmen on Green's action. 'IT'S UP TO YOU':

New Pamphlet Bares Green's Doublecross

WASHINGTON, June 29.—"It's Up To You" is the title of the newest CIO leaflet just off the press and ready for wide distribution among CIO members and other progressive groups. The leaflet deals with the doublecross by William Green in endorsing the Smith ripper bill that would tear the heart out of the Wagner Act.

The leaflet outlines the union-wrecking purposes of the Smith bill, tells of Green's endorsement, and lines up a number of quotes from leaders of the AFL and of Congress condemning Green's treacherous backing of the anti-union employer inspired bill.

The new leaflet brings the number of leaflets and pamphlets devoted to the fight to save the Wagner Act put out by the CIO to 10 in the past two years, not counting a large number of other publications where the Wagner Act is taken up with other subjects.

RCA Wireless Picketed In 3 Cities

New York, San Francisco and Honolulu today as the lockout ordered by RCA Communications, Inc., moved into its second week.

its second week.

The lockout followed breakdown of negotiations for renewal of a contract with the CIO American Communications Assn., with the company refusing to consider wage demands put forth by the workers.

SUGGEST ARBITRATION

In an effort to restore radio telegraph service as soon as possible, the union proposed today that the question of wages be arbitrated.

In an effort to restore radio telegraph service as soon as possible, the union proposed today that the question of wages be arbitrated.

ACA spokesmen made public a proposition that "the question of (1) the amount of money which should be made available for wage increases and other financial benefits to employes, and (2) the manner in which such sums of money shall be distributed among such employes in wage increases and other benefits" be submitted to an impartial arbitrator whose decision would be final.

Eight hundred employes in the New York office of the firm, which handles commercial wireless messages among large cities in the country and abroad, were refused employment when they reported for work last week. Some 100 union members in San Francisco were faced with the same situation. Employes at the Honolulu office left their keys shortly afterward in support of their fellow unionists.

ACCUSES COMPANY

Pres. Mervyn Rathborne of ACA, who headed the union's negotiating committee, charged that RCA officials "have attempted to browbeat their employes into accepting terms which come nowhere near the just wage demands put forth by the employes.

"They have chosen to lock out these employes, who are members of our union. ACA members are determined to return to work with improved conditions and higher wages guaranteed by a genuine collective bargaining agreement."

The old contract expired on June 13, after a week of negotiations had failed to bring about terms satisfactory to the union.

BACK-TO-WORK MOVE FAILS

Shortly after the lockout W. A. Winterbottom, company vice-president and general manager, sent out a "crawl back to work" movement to all employes—a letter which ACA officials branded as "a violation of the basic principles of collective bargaining.'

The locked out workers, meeting at rallies the same day, unanimously rejected the Winterbottom proposals and reaffirmed their allegiance to the union's demand for true collective bargaining.

Ranks of the strikers were strengthened when a number of non-live-traffic workers refused to pass the picket line. Some 98 per cent of all live-traffic employes in New York are out, the union asserted.

May Strike At Aluminum Co. Plant

New Kensington, Pa., June 29. — Several thousand workers employed by the giant Aluminum Company of America voted here yesterday on whether or not to call a strike in protest against the firm's refusal to grant a 10c an hour pay increase. Results of the referendum are not yet known.

Local 2, Aluminum Workers of America, voted last week to hold the referendum on the question of pulling a strike. Union officials said that the dispute over a pay increase has been pending ever since the present agreement with the company was signed last November.

The matter of a pay raise was to be taken up in negotiations between the union and the company, under the terms of the agreement.

SAY FIRM STALLS

Since then the union charges that company officials have repeatedly stalled off the union's request for the pay increase, and recently added to the union's indignation by introducing a lower rate of pay for new workers.

Brass Vote Proves CIO Landslide

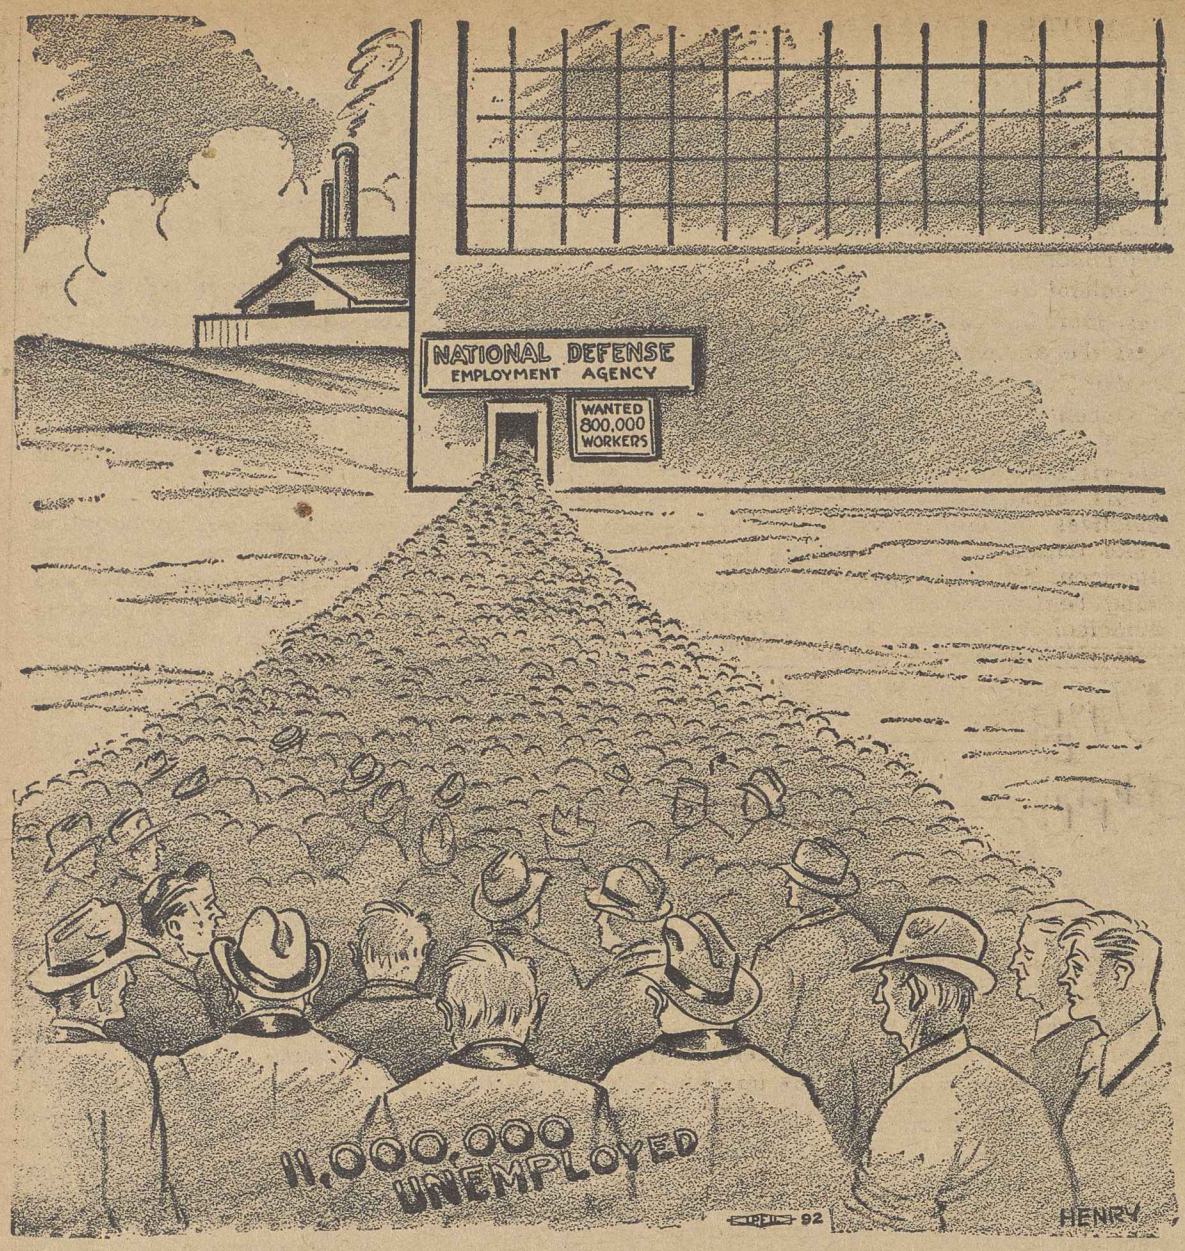
Local 500 of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers polled 295 of the 356 votes cast, only 56 choosing no union.



The election was agreed upon at conferences between management and CIO union officials, with the poll being supervised by the Connecticut Dept. of Labor. John J. Driscoll, international representative for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, arranged the conferences and led in building the local.

The pre-election agreement provided that the company will immediately begin bargaining with the local after it is certified as sole collective bargaining agency.

CIO Leading In NLRB Polls

Washington, June 29 — Figures released by the National Labor Relations Board on recent elections held by the Board show that CIO unions are continuing to swamp AFL groups.

Locals affiliated with the CIO won 19 elections with a total of 5,267 votes cast in favor of the CIO, while AFL unions won 12 elections with a total of 1,447 votes, according to the Board's latest release on elections held. Independent unions or employe representation plans won six elections with a total of 2014 votes.

TEN MILLION DISAPPOINTMENTS

Defense and Jobs

The idea that the defense program will put the unemployed back to work and restore prosperity is a dangerous illusion.

It is an illusion, because government economists figure recent increases in defense funds will provide at most between 700,000 and 800,000 additional jobs in 1940, as the CIO Economic Outlook points out. And there are more than 11 million unemployed.

It is an illusion, because even the most optimistic economists do not believe spending on armaments could result in more than two million more jobs in the next six months. And that would still leave more than nine million jobless.

It is a dangerous illusion, because politicians are already trying to dodge domestic problems by dangling this false hope—because the attempt to solve unemployment along this route leads to war involvement — and because the nation's internal security and defense is endangered so long as no real remedy is provided.

The CIO continues to call for at least three million jobs on WPA, for expanded public works, and for the working out under government auspices of a practical program to put the country to work.

Less Than A Living

What do you consider a bare living for yourself and family? Government statisticians have tried to figure this out, if you haven't. They have estimated, according to the cost of living in different cities, just how much it costs to feed, clothe and house the average family of man, wife and a couple of kids, at the most economical level, without any trimmings or luxuries or even a second-hand car.

This "maintenance level", as the WPA researchers call it, calls for an income ranging from $1,190.90 a year in Mobile, Ala., to $1,502.29 a year in New York City.

In other words, in any of the larger cities of the United States, a family must have an income of at least from $22.90 to $28.89 a week—and have it every week in the year—to be able to eke out a bare existence.

Yet the Survey of Current Business of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce shows that in the last year the average wage of boot and shoe workers ranged from less than $16 to little more than $19 a week. Textile workers got from $16.36 to $17.72 a week; lumber and sawmill workers from $17.08 to $19.45. The average for all American factory workers was only from $24.01 to $25.81 a week.

If most American factory workers with a family to support can live at only a bare maintenance level even when working steadily, what can be said for the level of existence of those millions who are laid off much of the time or are unemployed?

People can and do exist for a time at less than a living wage, but only at a cost of malnutrition, stunted growth, ill-health and general wretchedness that saps a whole people's strength.

By organizing the workers to obtain decent wages, the CIO is performing the greatest possible patriotic service to the American people.

Smith Bill Sabotage

A vote for the Smith bill to amend the Wagner labor act is a vote for "the disruption and sabotage of the nation's most important defense industries, the mass-production industries," says the general executive board of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

This CIO industrial union has been overwhelmingly chosen by the workers in electrical and machine manufacturing, who in repeated elections have rejected the craft disruption associated with the AFL. It has 375 contracts covering more than 250,000 employes, and has solidly established industrial peace and harmonious relations in the industry.

But now, the board points out, some AFL craft leaders are asking Congress "to put them into a position where a small group stationed at some strategic point in the production process can, for one purpose or another, cripple an entire plant and halt the work of thousands of workers.

"On the day when the jurisdictional disruption and racketeering characteristic of such craft-organized and economically sick industries as the building trades are introduced by Congressional warrant into the mass-production industries, on such a day are the defense industries of the nation placed in serious and intolerable danger."

The union's board therefore concludes that "a vote for the so-called Smith-Green amendments to the Natl. Labor Relations Act is an open incitement to the very disruption and sabotage that will most rapidly cripple those industries so vital to defense."

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

SOME people pay to be poked, pummeled and kneaded like dough. But "getting a massage" is mental rather than physical for insurance agents of Metropolitan Life. It means being called in by the boss and threatened or coaxed for hours to quit the union.

The agents have voted to be represented by the CIO United Office & Professional Workers, but the company won't bargain. Its efforts to discourage union membership have been so numerous and varied that the New York Labor Board has had to present 12,000 words of testimony against the company, in the longest case it has ever handled.

Twenty-nine million policyholders are supposed to own Metropolitan. Many of them are concerned, and more should be, about the anti-union practices pursued in their name. In fact, a story on the subject in PM, the new New York daily, brought more letters to the editor than on any other subject except the new paper itself.

Attention Clare Hoffman: The more you talk against the CIO, the more people in your home district get to like it. At Buchanan, Mich., some 850 employes of the Clark Equipment Co. have just voted two to one for the CIO United Automobile Workers union. Add that to the CIO contract recently won at Blood Bros. Machine Co. in your home town of Allegan—and keep on howling!

What does an AFL vice president think, if and when he thinks?

The Philadelphia Record sought an answer to this intriguing question by interviewing Wm. L. (Big Bill) Hutcheson, boss of the Carpenters and the AFL executive council.

On the Wagner Act Hutcheson said: "I still can't see the need of it. It should be amended to make it fairer to employers."

In other words, the employers want the Smith Bill to amend the Wagner Act, and Big Bill and pals don't give a hoot about the act anyhow.

Editors and publishers who fill the press with interventionist propaganda should be privileged to intervene in person, says a resolution now circulating through Minnesota labor groups, according to IN FACT. They should form an Editors & Publishers Expeditionary Force to get in on the side they choose, it adds, be honored with front-line position, and their crosses should be inscribed, "Here Lies."

If you like detective stories and/or pretty girls, you'll pick up and look into "The Case of Mary X." The title is intriguing and the girl on the cover more so.

If you are one to jest about passion, or even if you shudder at sin, your eye will be caught by the prim be-bustled young lady who flees from the amorous advances of a mustachioed and top-hatted boss on the cover of "In the Horse and Buggy Era. . . ."

"I knew there was a catch to Sunday's off!" the modest young lady cries as she flees. And that is the only clue you get from the cover that this is a leaflet put out by the United Office & Professional Workers Union on the Five-Day Week, and how office employes can get it through organization.

"The Case of Mary X" is not a detective story, but you won't be disappointed if you dig into it. With all the arts of color, illustration and lively text it tells the story of any office girl in the Big City—and what a union can do.

It is evidently no coincidence that the UOPWA organizes advertising copy writers, artists, magazine workers—for these pamphlets have the expert touch. But they are just a sample of the increasing proficiency of CIO unions in telling their story to the unorganized and the public.

Labor And The Law:

THE NEW TAX BILL

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

Congress has passed the new defense tax bill. It will have a very decided effect upon the pocketbooks of workers and their families. Every time they go to a popular priced movie for each ticket they will pay at least one cent to the government. When they buy an automobile, or a tire or accessories for their present automobile, they will pay 5 to 10% more because of this new tax. A drink of beer, a glass of wine will cost more, and so will cigars and cigarettes.

A single worker who earns more than $800, and married couples with more than $2,000 a year will now pay about 5% on the excess in income taxes. The total bill for wage earners and lower income groups will be nearly one-half billion dollars a year.

'VIOLATION OF PRINCIPLE'

The nature of this new tax measure can be looked at in another way. The government wanted to raise a billion dollars for armaments. Recent studies show that wage earners and low income groups under $1,500 receive less than one-third of the national income, yet they are made to bear nearly one-half of the tax burden. This is certainly in flagrant violation of the principle that just taxes should be according to ability to pay.

There is another feature of this law which labor needs to consider. In addition to raising taxes, this law also authorizes the government to borrow four billion dollars. Now, the people who will lend this money to the government will be the well-to-do, and they will get interest from the government that will have to be paid out of taxes. At the same time, the new law leaves these bonds completely free from all taxes. The Secretary of Treasury has the authority to bring the income from such bonds under the tax laws unless he does so, the result will be that a good share of the taxes on the low income groups will go to pay interest to the bond holders while the bond holders pay no taxes on the interest they receive from the government.

When the bill was passed, an attempt was made to equalize the tax burden by placing an excess profits tax on corporations. This would mean that corporations would be allowed to earn a fair return on their capital, but they pay heavy taxes on the excess earnings.

CORPORATIONS SHOULD PAY

In view of the fact that a large number of businesses are going to get extra profits this year on account of the government contracts for the national defense, it would only be fair to make them pay part of the cost of the national defense through a scheme of excess profits taxation. However, this measure was defeated on the plea of the Congressional leaders of both parties that immediate taxes were necessary and that the whole subject of excess profits would be considered in the next session of Congress.

The CIO at its 1939 convention, and at the recent meeting of the executive board in June of this year, has laid down three principles for a tax bill. The CIO has insisted that a sound tax measure should serve the double purpose of providing adequate revenue and correcting the maldistribution of income; it has expressed its opposition to all forms of sales and other consumer taxes direct or indirect; it has urged that our taxes should be based upon the principle of taxation according to ability to pay. At the same time the CIO has strenuously advocated an excess profits tax.

A JOB FOR LABOR

It is time for organized labor and all progressive groups to begin to think seriously of the tax problem. We must see to it that the promises of the administration are kept, and demand that, in the next session of Congress, laws will be passed which will tax government bonds, increase the rates on upper bracket incomes, eliminate the loopholes in our income tax laws, and most of all, tax the profits that corporations are going to make this year and the next few years on government arms and munitions contracts.

Your WPA Job:

THE WPA BILL

By RALPH HETZEL
CIO Unemployment Director

The new WPA Bill, with none of the bad features of the last bill removed and some new ones added, was rushed through Congress under the artificial stress of an arbitrarily chosen deadline. The conference report, which contained none of the favorable amendments passed in the Senate, was broughtback to the Houses of Congress with sufficient time allotted for only a few Congressmen and Senators to voice their disapproval.

The Senate was especially bitter at this procedure, since amendments passed in the Senate, was brought back to the Houses of restore the theatre project, and so on, had been abandoned in the secret sessions of the conference committee. As Senator McCarran remarked, "Experience teaches me that the Senate never loses a battle and never wins a conference."

THE NEW BILL

The bill provides for $975,650,000 to be spent, if necessary, within eight months. Since there does not seem to be any doubt that it will be necessary, the expenditure of such a sum within 8 months will mean an average employment of only 1,950,000 on the WPA. The practice of the WPA is to increase its rolls during the winter months and, therefore, in order for the WPA to maintain an average of 1,950,000 jobs, the rolls will undoubtedly be reduced to a low of 1,700,000 — 1,600,000 during the summer.

Townsendites To Hear Lewis July 2

ST. LOUIS, June 29.—Continuing his series of addresses to important liberal groups throughout the nation, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will address the annual convention of the Townsend Pension Movement here on Tuesday, July 2.

Lewis is scheduled to speak to the hundreds of representatives of the country's senior citizens early in the afternoon. The convention is being held in the St. Louis Municipal Auditorium.

Biggest Telegram— It's 531 Feet Long— Hits Bridges Bill

WASHINGTON, June 29. — President Roosevelt got the longest telegram ever sent to anyone at the White House here this week.

It was 531 feet long—only 14 feet short of the Washington Monument—contained about 18,000 signaturees, and was carried to the President in a roll of one continuous telegraph blank several inches thick.

The telegram urged the President to come out in opposition to the illegal Allen bill (HR 9766) passed in the lower House of Congress to exile Harry Bridges, CIO California leader and president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union. The bill went through the House last week, accompaing by tory Democrats and Republicans, and now comes before the Senate.

BRIDGES' 'CRIME'

"Bridges' only crime has been the betterment of wages and work ing conditions of people under the terms of the Wagner Act," the telegram says. "He has been completely vindicated of all charges by Dean James M. Landis, one of this nation's most respected legal authorities.

"The Allen bill is fostered and supported by anti labor forces. It is an unconstitutional bill of attainder and represents an attack on the rights of labor and on social legislation and civil liberties. Please urge its defeat in Congress. If it should pass, we ask that you veto it."

Signatures on the monster telegram were collected within a few days by the Bridges Defense Committee on the west coast.

Urge U. S. Adopt Program to Train Apprentices

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Immediate expansion of apprentice training is a necessary part of the national defense program, according to a report just made to U. S. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins by the Federal Committee on Apprenticeship. The committee is made up of labor, government and industrial representatives. Clinton S. Golden of the Steel Workers and Ralph Hetzel, Jr., unemployment director, are the CIO representatives.

"Industry and labor are working with us on an agreed plan for the training of future skilled workers, not by any shortcut methods or by government subsidies but through carefully worked-out standards of training," the committee reported.

Proposed expansion of committee activities, according to the report, will provide industry with skilled workers, give youth a chance to acquire skills, enable partially trained workers to complete training, and facilitate "orderly absorption of apprentices into industry."

MASS SEMI-SKILLED

"The mass of workers in modern production plants are semi-skilled," the committee said. "The smooth flow of work depends upon an adequate working force of skilled craftsmen who know all of the operations in a particular trade.

"The training of the semi-skilled men can be carried on in a relatively short time within industry and in conjunction with the existing vocational educational facilities and with other available agencies capable of providing assistance. This training for such jobs can be immeasurably speeded up."

Bakery Local Certified

Birmingham, Ala., June 29.—A contract recognizing the United Bakery Workers' CIO Local as sole bargaining agency at the bread bakery plant of the National Biscuit Company was announced here by Yelverton Cowherd, CIO regional director.

One week's vacation with pay for all employes with 52 or more weeks' service; time and a half pay for work on holidays; seniority rights, and health protection are provided in the agreement.

Longshoremen Fight Attack on Gains

Seek Long-Term Pact For Coast

San Francisco, June 29. — Terms handed to the CIO Longshoremen and Warehousemen by the Waterfront Employers Assn. here are described by union spokesmen as "impossible" and as a shipowners' attempt to "eliminate all the conditions that the longshoremen fought for in 1934 and in 1936 and '37."

According to a circular from the ILWU, "the position of the union briefly is that we want a long term contract with a guarantee that our seven fundamentals be a part of this contract and all other points to be submitted to negotiation and arbitration upon failure of negotiation." The seven points include:

1. Union preference in employment.
2. Union hiring hall.
3. Pacific Coast Safety Code for operations.
4. Six hour day.
5. Right of the union to observe picket lines.
6. Present contract terms on standard loads and penalty cargoes.
7. Right of union to discipline its own members and penalize them for violations of contract.

NOW IN CONTRACT

All these provisions, the union points out, are in the contract now in force, except point five, which has been observed in practice through arbitration decisions. These are the basis for the union's offer to sign a long term contract, leaving all other matters to be adjusted as the contract goes along.

The shipowners proposals simply ignore when they do not flatly contradict the basic program offered by the union. Their demand for "free use of labor saving devices," it was pointed out, would result in firing about half the workers now employed, if they get it. The demand for setting aside various union rules that have protected the workers for the past six years would result in terrific speedup, as would the demand for an "efficiency study."

The shipowners also want gang foremen abolished, which, according to union spokesmen, simply means that they want, to get rid of foremen who have refused to cooperate in the speed-up drive.

LOAFING DISPROVED

Shipowner proposals were accompanied by provocative charges that the workers were loafing on the job, that drunkeness on the job was increasing, and that pilfering from cargoes was getting worse. The union answered these charges, however, by insisting on an inspection tour of the docks by a joint employers-union committee.

Docks to be inspected were chosen by the shipowners committee, the union declares, adding: "We have visited Matson, American-Hawaiian and Luckenbach, and to date there has not been one manager of any of these companies who has not stated that production is better than a year ago, and that there has been a reduction in pilferage cases and drunkeness on the job."

Transit Union's Medical Service Cares for 12,000 During First Year

NEW YORK, June 29.—Under the group medical care set up a year ago by the CIO's Transport Workers Union, nearly 12,000 employes on the city's subway, elevated, trolley and bus lines have benefited during the year ending May 15, 1940, according to a preliminary report issued this week by TWU President Michael J. Quill.

Hailing the medical service as "the most extensive and comprehensive" plan of cooperative medicine ever started, the TWU report declared that it provides 50,000 union members with the full services of 43 general practitoners and specialists in eight essential specialized fields, including X-ray and surgery.

PAID BY DUES

The plan is supported by the union out of regular dues payments and the proceeds of two benefit dances held each year. The union spent $197,000 during the first year, exclusive of administrative costs, the report stated, making a per capita expenditure of about $16.63 for each of the 11,835 transit workers who used the medical service.

In addition to the care provided under the plan, which includes office and home calls, hospital attendance and consultation with specialists, the union has made arrangements for reduced rates for hospitalization, drugs, medical supplies and eye glasses.

PREVENTIVE CARE

Great stress has been placed on the promotion of preventive medical care, Quill reported, through periodic general health examinations and educational lectures by physicians.

The TWU medical plan is administered by a union health committee and a medical advisory committee of three staff physicians. A detailed study analyzing the experiences gathered during the year will be published within the next three or four months, the report said, and studies are also being made for extending the plan further.

Five Hundred Cab Drivers Swing to CIO

CHICAGO, June 29. — Five hundred Negro cab drivers here have just voted unanimously to leave an independent union and join the CIO. Two weeks of a strike against miserable wages and conditions were enough to convince them that they needed the union protection that the CIO offers.

They voted to affiliate with the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee at a strike mass meeting attended by PWOC District Director Frank McCarty. Immediate steps were taken to mobolize packinghouse workers and other CIO union support to the striking cabbies. Ishmael Flory of the National Negro Congress has also pledged his organization's support to the strike.

The Negroe drivers, who rent their cabs from operators, have been making as little as 14 cents for a ful day's work—the net return after cab rent, gasoline, insurance, etc., are paid out.

Auto Union Signs GM Contract

Detroit, June 29.—Final signing of the new United Automobile Workers CIO contract with General Motors took place here early this week, Walter P. Reuther, director of the UAW's General Motors Dept., announced.

The contract becomes effective immediatellly, Reuther said. Printed copies are being sent to all GM plants by the corporation, and will be available to employes within a week.

Signing of the contract followed ratification by all UAW members employed in GM plants, in accordance with the union's constitution. The contract won $17,000,000 in wage increases for GM workers, much improved grievance adjustment machinery and other gains which caused CIO Pres. John L. Lewis to describe it as "of paramount importance to the members of organized labor everywhere."

Shipowners Urged to Rap Smith Bill

New York, June 29.—Shipowners who have signed contracts with the National Maritime Union, were asked to oppose the Smith amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, the NMU announced this week.

In a letter addressed to each company, Joseph Curran, NMU president, warned that if the Wagner Act is crippled "the shipping industry stands to return to the chaos of former days—a blow which it cannot stand at this time."

The chief stabilizing influence in the formerly chaotic industry, Curran said, has been the strengthening of the NMU and the use it was able to make of the Wagner Act.

IN NEGOTIATIONS

Detroit, June 29—Negotiations between Wayne Co., Mich. government officials and the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers are progressing "satisfactorily," SCMWA leaders announced here. At the same time, hundreds of members of a dual AFL government organization are deserting it for the CIO, they said.

Ask Probe Of Cleveland Tory Outfit

Cleveland, Ohio, June 29.—Investigation of the Associated Industries, labor-smashing outfit of William Frew Long, was demanded by the Cleveland Industrial Union Council in a telegram to Secretary of Labor Perkins.

The Council charges that the employers' organization is consistently "instigating violations of the letter and spirit of U. S. laws, promoting labor disputes and forcing stoppages in production of government orders."

The charges grew out of months of investigation made by CIO groups which showed that the Associated Industries was engaged in a union-smashing campaign by intervening in disputes and negotiations between union representatives and small firms.

"We feel the record of Associated Industries substantiates our warning that the real fifth column in Cleveland is symbolized by the activities of this organization," the telegram stated.

Win Boost At Dairy

Indianapolis, Ind., June 29.—Improved working conditions and higher wages for workers of the O. J. Wittner Dairy of South Bend are provided in a contract signed by United Dairy Workers, CIO local industrial union, James Robb, CIO regional director, announced here today.

"This is the third contract we have signed for dairy workers in South Bend," Robb said, "and takes in about all the largest dairies there. We expect to have workers in many other small dairies affiliated with our organization soon, and under similar contracts."

Insect Spray Firm Goes CIO

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 29.—You can use a CIO insect spray now that workers in the Ansbacher-Siegle Corp., insecticide makers, have chosen District 50 of the United Mine Workers as their union. The vote, held by the Labor Board, was 27 for District 50, 9 for no union.

Congressmen Draft Plan On Unemployment

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Agreement by 70 Congressmen on causes of unemployment and on partial steps to remove the nation's most serious permanent problem was revealed here by Rep. Jerry Voorhis.

A number of the suggestions for tackling the problem are closely in line with CIO proposals during the past few years.

Included in the 16-point program were calls for a "scien-tific" government tax program based on ability to pay; a national old age retirement system to cover all groups; passage of legislation to insure the public's receiving the benefits of technological improvements through lowered prices; continued aid for the farm population, including soil conservation and the making available of low-cost credit; a long-range public works program "emphasizing projects which will promote the general welfare;" and the granting of sufficient funds to the Department of Justice to make possible the breaking up of monopoly - buttressed high prices.

Voorhis revealed that the Congressional group had first assembled in February of this year to "seek to work out and then act upon the answer to the greatest problem of our age." Members of four political parties attended the sessions.

Voorhis admitted the group had not always agreed on possible steps to be taken but added: "I think we are able to show a very remarkable area of substantial agreement among us, and I believe we have demonstrated that the unemployment problem can and will be solved just as soon as enough of us sit down in dead earnest to the task, with a profound consciousness that the job must be done."

'CENTRAL PROBLEM'

The statement, as accepted by the 70 representatives, took the position that "unemployment is the central and typical economic problem of the twentieth century, that there is not an unlimited time left in which to effect its solution, that the future of individual freedom and of constitutional government depends directly on its solution, and that we should proceed at once to a consistent, determined and coordinated attack upon unemployment."

Among the causes of unemployment the Congressional group listed the fact "that of the 15 to 20 per cent of the national income which is annually saved, a considerable proportion has been held out of use—neither spent nor reinvested.

"This constitutes one of the primary reasons why industry and agriculture cannot function on a reasonable capacity basis and cannot consistently recover their costs of production of goods out of the current market."

TECHNOLOGICAL CHANGE

Another factor was seen in "technological change and the introduction of machinery without compensatory reduction in the prices of goods produced. Monopolistic controls and administered prices are a principal cause for the failure of prices to come down."

The government's tax program, which in recent weeks has come in for considerable CIO criticism, was described as "short-sighted and unscientific."

"Federal, state and local taxes overlap one another, and in neither case are the levies calculated on sound tax principles," the Congressmen declared. "The farmers' taxes, for example, bear no relation whatsoever to his income and may indeed be heavier in a year of complete crop failure than in one of comparatively good returns.

Seamen Block Phony 'Risk' Bill

Washington, June 29.— Sharp protest from CIO organized seamen succeeded in blocking an attempt to leave them practically unprotected in the War Risk Insurance Bill just passed in Congress.

As originally proposed, the bill would have given unlimited indemnity (at public expense) to shipowners for loss of ships or cargo, and would have put very narrow limits on loss of life or permanent disability to the seamen.

Vacations at Union Camp Do Wonders for 15 Kids

NASHVILLE, June 29.—Seven days of work and play in the fresh air and sunshine of the Cumberland mountains is worth 46 pounds. Anyway that is the total number of pounds put on by 15 children who attended the Junior Union encampment at Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn., last week.

Leading the weight gainers was a little skinny son of a Grundy County WPA worker who gained seven pounds, bring-ing his total weight to 58. He is eleven years old. Perhaps three square meals a day also had something to do with the weight gained.

SPONSORED BY ACW

This affair was the first of its kind sponsored by the Junior Union of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Nashville and by Highlander. Plans have been laid to make it an annual affair. It was under the direction of Horace and Margaret Bryan of Nashville and Zilphia Horton and Leon Wilson of the Highlander staff. Vertie Pate and Florence Richardson, Amalgamated members, assisted and were in charge of preparation of meals and camp work.

Ten children from families in men's clothing in Nashville, two from the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and three from rural families in Grundy County, where Highlander is located, attended the encampment. Highlander furnished the houses and grounds and the sporting and other equipment. Junior Union members in Nashville raised the most of the money for food and transportation through the sale of candy and cookies.

FULL DAY'S PROGRAM

The program opened each day at 9 o'clock with an assembly where the children discussed the problems of youth, of unions, sang union songs and planned the day's work and activity. The rest of the morning was spent in study, lawn games, folk dances and singing games.

The afternoons were spent on the outdoor athletic field, hiking, swimming, and in visits to water falls and old coal mines. In the evening they sang folk songs and danced, and put on programs of short skits, stunts and questionnaires which the Junior Union members prepared.

For the majority of the youngsters, despite the fact that they have lived in Tennessee, the famed home of the Cumberland and Smoky Mountains, this was the first time they had even been in the mountains in their life.

Textile Pact Covers 2,100 In Maine

Biddeford, Me., June 29—Members of the Textile Workers' Union, CIO, which recently won an overwhelming victory in an election to determine the collective bargaining agency in the Pepperell Manufacturing Company mills here, have signed a union agreement affecting approximately 2,100 employes.

The agreement, which will run for one year, provides the 40-hour week, no strikes, no lockouts and arbitration of grievances relating to discharge. It also gives preference to local residents in hiring.

Southerners Push Fight On Poll Tax

Birmingham, June 29 — Southern Negro youth, joining with progressive white workers are demanding the right to vote now denied them by the polltax laws that disfranchise millions of white and Negro workers and farmers in eight Southern states.

Here in Birmingham the Southern Negro Youth Congress has just held a mass meeting on the subject, addressed by James E. Jackson, Jr., Congress vice-chairman, and has sent an open letter on the subject to President Roosevelt.

SOME STATISTICS

The letter said in part:

"The combined vote of 17 Southern Congressmen in 1938 . . totalled less than the vote received by one Congressman from New Jersey . . . The 750,000 citizens of Rhode Island cast more votes to elect two Congressmen than the 10,750,000 citizens of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, plus four counties of Virginia, to elect 36 Congressmen.

"The Southern Congressmen have time after time voted against the best interests of the people, because they do not feel responsible to the people who have no voice in electing them."

VOTERS LEAGUE ACTIVE

And in Washington, the Colored Voters League has sent a strong demand to the Republican convention in Philadelphia for an anti-polltax plank in its platform.

Crump's Cops Look Chumpish As Anti-Union Raid Backfires

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 29.—A company-inspired police raid on a union meeting here brought a swift kick-back to the company officials in question as publicity in the local press concerning the case led dozens of workers to join the Union.

The Steel Workers Organizing Committee, beginning a drive to make Memphis a union town at least so far as steel is concerned, signed up several workers in the local Wabash Screen Door Company, which employs approximately 1,000 workers, with the result that these workers were promptly fired. The company officials also got wind of a union meeting of their workers to be held the same night, and tipped off the local police that there would be a "Fifth Column" meeting that night, giving them the address.

NAB SEVEN WORKERS

Accordingly, local police swarmed on the meeting place, taking to the station with them seven employes of this company, plus the steel workers organizer, Will Watts, and Wm. R. Henderson, vice-president of the Tennessee Industrial Union Council and agent of the National Maritime Union (Inland Boatmen's Div.). In ten minutes newspaper reporters and a young labor attorney, Charles M. Wylie, who had been tipped off at the time of the arrest, swarmed in at the police station, with the result that the puzzled cops, apparently looking for German parachute troops at a union meeting, were compelled to release the entire crowd with profound apologies.

BUSINESS MEN ON SPOT

The police had told the press that a "prominent business man" had tipped them off, thus giving away the source of this anti-union, hysteria-mongering incident. As a result of the unfavorable publicity to the company officials and the good work of the two CIO organizers, the company was compelled to reinstate all of the discharged workers and the next day without fighting out the case at the Labor Board. These reinstated employes were assured by company officials that they can join any union of their choice, and accordingly they are now wearing CIO buttons to work, distributing huge quantities of literature, and signing up people in their plant as fast as possible.

Further results of the raid were evidenced when oil workers, electrical workers, rubber workers, office workers, and what-have-you streamed into the local CIO union offices during the next few days and demanded organization.

Form Georgia CIO Council

Eighth State Group Set Up In The South

ATLANTA, Ga., June 29.—CIO unions in Georgia representing a membership of some 40,000 workers, set up a State Industrial Union Council at a constitutional convention held here last week-end. This convention, which brought together for joint action a dozen or so national unions and a group of industrial locals affiliated directly with the CIO, marks a new stage in CIO growth in Georgia.

The Georgia State Council, the eighth to be formed in the South, includes unions in the textile, steel, rubber, automobile, packing, clothing, quarrying and other industries, as well as locals whose members are employed in offices, professions and state and federal services.

ELECT OFFICERS

Officers elected to head the Georgia Council for the coming year are:

President—Charles H. Gillman, president of the Atlanta local of the United Automobile Workers.

Vice-President—John Holt, Textile Workers Union.

Secretary-Treasurer—May Bagwell, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

An executive board composed of the following six members was also chosen: Reed Burton, Packinghouse Workers; G. R. Hathway, Steel Workers; Frank Barker, Hosiery Workers; James Tucker, Federal Workers; William Spurlock, Communications Workers; and Doris McDonald, Office & Professional Workers.

WIDMAN A SPEAKER

Michael F. Widman, assistant national director of the CIO, who gave the keynote address, told the delegates that the CIO's main aim is to lift the standard of living for the mass of the workers by organizing them into strong, democratic unions.

Quoting from the declaration of the CIO Executive Board on National Defense, Widman explained that the CIO stands for adequate defense, no war on foreign soil, the preservation of the free institutions of the United States, and the maintenance of civil liberties

Among the out-of-state visitors and CIO speakers were Yelverton Cowherd, secretary of the Alabama CIO Council; H. S. Williams, Alabama TWUA director; Alton Lawrence, Carolina director of the League for Progressive Democracy; and Paul Christopher, South Carolina TWUA director.

HONOR STEVE NANCE

R. R. Lawrence, southeastern TWUA director, presided until the election of officers, when the new president took the chair. At the close of the meeting, Lawrence asked the delegates to stand a minute in silent prayer in commemoration of Steve Nance, the first Southern TWUA director, who died "after a year of heroic work and effort in the CIO cause."

A resolution was adopted at the convention praising President Roosevelt for appointing Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, as a member of the National Defense Commission, and condemning Congressman Cox of Georgia for his derogatory remarks about Hillman on the floor of the House.

HIT SMITH BILL

Other resolutions passed called upon the Senate to reject the Smith amendments to the Labor Relations Act; endorsed the spread of the Food Stamp Plan; urged elimination of the poll tax and reform of the Georgia ballot; endorsed the CIO stand on National Defense and urged support for Labor's Non-Partisan League.

reduce to writing any agreement reached between Union and company. The election is expected to be held early next week.

More than 300 unionists joined the Syracuse picket line during the first day of the strike and a continued mass picket line was maintained for the duration of the strike.

A joint meeting of Precision Union representatives from the Cleveland, Syracuse and Fayetteville, N. Y. plants will be held this week end in Syracuse to determine the Union's future course in its drive to gain Union conditions from the company.

HAILS NLRB ORDER

Edward T. Cheyfitz, executive secretary of the NADCW, hailed the NLRB decision to hold an election as a victory for the union. He pointed to the refusal of the company in agreeing to an election and declared that as soon as the election result was determined the union would immediatey enter into bargaining relations with the company.

Principal union demands include, union recognition, an increase in wages up to the standard paid in other union shops, seniority rights and a system of apprenticeship "fair to both the apprentice and diemakers."

Southern School Opens Session

New York, June 29.—A staff experienced in Southern labor and industrial problems has been selected to lead activities at the Southern Summer School for Workers which will be held in Asheville, North Carolina June 23 to September 3, Mrs. Louise McLaren, director of the school announced this week.

Special effort has been made to have the school's program fit the present Southern labor scene, the director said in announcing plans for the 1940 six weeks' session which will be held on the campus of the Asheville Normal School where it has met since 1938. Some 40 students will attend.

Dr. H. Clarence Nixon, author of "Forty Acres and Steel Mules," who teaches at the University of Missouri, will lead the discussions at the Southern Summer School on problems in agriculture and industry.

Alice Hanson, who has been an organizer for the Textile Workers Union of America and educational director for the Viscose chain of rayon workers' unions, will be in charge of courses in parliamentary law, public speaking and English.

Others on the staff will be William Wolff, dramatics director and Carl G. Thompson, Jr., field assistant. In addition to the regular staff members, union officials and leaders from all parts of the South will take part in leading discussions in labor problems.

30,000 Brass Workers Enjoy 'CIO Vacations'

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 29. — Thirty thousand brass workers employed in the "brass valley" here are going on mass vacation this week—with pay at regular rates based on forty hours of work.

The vacations came from the CIO, which has been organizing for the past three years in the big plants in the area through the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. First given by the companies in 1937 in an attempt to stave off CIO organization, they were withdrawn a year later and a 10 per cent wage cut handed down.

The CIO then went to work and got not only the vacations but complete restoration of the cut for all workers. It is estimated that the workers will have an extra $1,000,000 to spend as a result of CIO contracts.

Time to Vote

Washington, June 29 — U. S. government employes entitled to vote will receive time off from their jobs to do so, under a bill just passed by the Senate here. The bill was won through activity of the CIO Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

CIO Cracks Arizona Open Shop

Bisbee, Arizona, June 29.—The CIO has cracked the open shop mine owners' paradise of Arizona, with the first written contract in state mining history.

The breach was made by Local 30 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, and marked the seventh year of struggle with the Shattuck-Denn Mining Corp. for the right to organize and bargain collectively.

The contract followed very shorty after the CIO union won a wide margin victory in a recent Labor Relations Board election. Its major clauses include union recognition, seniority rights, grievance machinery and a floor under wages.

Victory at Shattuck-Denn was followed by concessions from Pheps-Dodge, huge copper producer, which suddenly granted paid vacations to some of its workers as soon as news of the contract began to spread. The vacation scheme, obviously designed to head off organization, is strictly limited, and can be taken away from the workers at the company's whim.

Marine Union Re-Elects Curran

New York, June 29.—Re-election of Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, for another two-year term was announced today at a general headquarters membership meeting here.

This is Mr. Curran's second election to that office. He was unopposed and the total vote cast for him was 13,692.

Also unopposed was Ferdinand Smith, national secretary, running for re-election. The total vote cast was 15,339.

In the principal contest, that for national treasurer, M. Hedley Stone, formerly Great Lakes organizer and now NMU Pacific Coast representative, won over Moe Byne and Thomas Atkins by a vote of 4,916 to 4,149 and 2,396 respectively.

Auto Union Head Raps Ford Stall On Making Planes

DETROIT, July 3. — Refusal of Henry Ford to cooperate with the government's defense airplane construction program drew sharp criticism today from Pres. R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers.

The Ford Motor Co.'s attitude springs from the industry's sole remaining open shopper's "well-known and indicated sympathy with the Nazi government of Germany," Thomas charged in referring to Ford's refusal to manufacture 9,000 airplanes, a third of them for Britain.

"This is not the first time Henry Ford has tried to set himself above the government of our country," the UAW official declared. "He has done it continuously in his flouting of the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board.

"We place no stock in Ford's stated reasons for refusing to cooperate with the defense commission. He has in the past given training in his Rouge plant to Nazi technicians, who, in turn, helped perfect Hitler's military machine."

Seek to Avert Big Strike At AluminumCo

New Kensington, Pa., July 3.— Workers at the plant of the Aluminum Company of America here who voted last week to strike for a 10 cent hourly wage increase, agreed to withhold action pending attempts of the U. S. Department of Labor's conciliation service to obtain a settlement.

Members of Local 2, Aluminum Workers of America voted eight to one to strike after the company continued to stall on meeting their demand for the increase. Employes of the company's big plant at Edgewater, N. J., also voted to walk out.

The AWA agreed to await the results of the mediation conference before taking a strike vote at other plants.

One Week — 8 Pacts

DETROIT, July 3. — Eight new contracts in one week, six of them with closed shop provisions —

That was the record hung up today by Charles Kiser, district director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Six of the new agreements are with sheet metal firms employing about 500 men and provide for 2½c hourly wage increases, formation of shop steward systems and improvement of seniority.

Sole collective bargaining agreements have been concluded with Steel Sales Co., providing for paid vacations, and with Rex Products, providing average monthly wage increases of $20.

SIGN CONTRACT

Universal, Pa.—Local 309, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, has signed a contract overing the local plant of the Universal Atlas Cement Co., subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

Hails Wheeler At Townsendites' Convention

ST. LOUIS, July 2 — Declaring that the Democratic party will be "on trial" at its coming convention, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis today told Townsendites gathered here for their national meeting that only Sen. Burton K. Wheeler of Montana can defeat Wendell Willkie, the Republicans' presidential choice.

In an address frequently punctuated by bursts of applause from the representatives of the nation's senior citizens, the CIO leader said the Republicans had failed an opportunity to become a people's party.

But if the Democrats are not to meet similar failure, their approaching convention must take a strong position against American involvement in the European war and meet the people's domestic needs, Lewis declared.

Should the Democrats refuse to adopt this kind of program, Lewis warned, "then it will be time for organizations of labor, organizations like the Townsend clubs, and others, to consider what to do."

Sen. Wheeler followed the CIO leader to the speaker's stand and made a vigorous plea for a "strong, liberal" peace movement, if necessary outside the two existing major parties.

The nation's first line of defense, the veteran Montana liberal declared, must rest on preservation of democracy, protection for the aged, jobs for the unemployed and retention of civil liberties.

TIME OFF TO SING: Messenger boys of the RCA Communications Corp., part of a group of 800 employes locked out in New York and San Francisco, take time out from picket line duty to relax with a few songs at a party to raise funds for their fight for better working conditions.

Rubber Firm Lauds Strikers As 11 Week Strike Ends

AKRON, July 3.—The 11-week strike of the United Rubber Workers, CIO, at the General Tire and Rubber Co., ended with a unique climax. The company signed a new agreement with the union and announced simultaneously that it is building a new five-story plant in Akron.

In its public announcement, the company hailed its workers as "the best workers in the world."

The new agreement provides liberal concessions in paid vacations, protection of wages and grievance settlement procedure. The company also agreed to immediately negotiate the grievances which led to the shutdown April 8.

The plant expansion of General is the third such development in the last year. Goodrich has built a new laboratory and is now building a new factory for production of synthetic rubber. Goodyear has effected a $3,000,000 modernization program in its Akron plants.

S. H. Dalrymple, rubber union president, pointed out that these developments "give the lie to the 'ghost town' stories which have been spread about Akron."

"Akron is no more a 'ghost town' than any other industrial city in the nation," he declared. "The stories that the United Rubber Workers has ruined the city have fallen by their own weight of falsehood.

"Indeed, the stability which Akron has demonstrated over the past few years is largely attributed to the policies of our organization, which stabilized and protected the purchasing power of the majority of its citizens."

Sue Winchell For Million; Claim Libel

New York, July 3 (FP)—Walter Winchell, columnist and professional eavesdropper, got in trouble when he made sabotage charges against the National Maritime Union, CIO, during his June 9 broadcast.

A libel suit for $1,000,000 was filed this week by the NMU. Named in the suit are Winchell, his sponsor—the Andrew Jergens Co., the Radio Corporation of America, and the National Broadcasting Co., owners and operators of Station WJZ, which aired Winchell's broadcast, and Hearst's New York Daily Mirror, which carried the charges in Winchell's column.

The portion of the broadcast which the NMU termed libelous consisted of accusations that certain members of the union carry mercury and emery dust for sabotage purposes on American vessels.

UNION FOR SAFETY

Commenting on Winchell's broadcast, William Standard, NMU attorney, declared:

"Far from sabotaging the American merchant marine, the NMU is actively engaged in promoting it. The union has carried the fight for safety-at-sea into the halls of Congress over the combined opposition of the shipowners and the U. S. Maritime Commission.

"The NMU has forced the operators to improve working and living conditions on board ship and to enforce safety-at-sea statutes. That is the real reason for these charges and similar ones voiced by Congressman Dies and other employer agents."

LABOR DAY AT FAIR

New York—Some 65,000 New York trade unionists attended Labor's Day at the World's Fair.

U. S. Court Cracks Down On Oil Firm

New Orleans, July 3.—The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a National Labor Relations Board order calling upon the Humble Oil & Refining Co. to cease dominating company unions in its plants at Baytown and Ingleside, Texas.

Part of the NLRB order calling for dissolution of the two fake unions were over-ruled by the court, however.

The Labor Board action was based on unfair labor practice charges filed by the Oil Workers International Union, CIO, in August, 1937.

TakingNoChances!

CANTON, O. — Not until T. J. Salby, president of SWOC Lodge 1590, agreed to sign a letter stating that the Union Metal Manufacturing Co. here made steel under a union agreement, was the city of Gary, Indiana, able to proceed with a job using material ordered from Union Metal.

The men in Gary refused to work with the steel until they were sure it was union made.

Reach Accord On National Hearst Pact

New York, July 3 — Agreement on a national Guild shop pact covering 14 Hearst papers was reached today by representatives of the newspaper chain and the American Newspaper Guild.

Guild officials will present the tentative contract to a meeting of the union's Hearst council during the ANG convention at Memphis starting July 8. If approved, it will be referred to the locals for ratification.

Described by negotiators as a "peace formula," the agreement would require nine out of every 10 new Hearst employes to join the Guild as a condition of employment. In addition it would provide for a two-year contract with each of the 14 papers, uniform severance pay running up to 28 weeks' salary after 12½ years' employment; uniform sick leave and overtime pay for extra work.

The formula calls for arbitration of all disputes excepting economy dismissals, on which the management must consult the Guild over "means by which the hardship of such discharges may be alleviated."

Harvey Kelly, Hearst labor representative, indicated that if the "peace formula" is accepted by management for the 14 papers, it would undoubtedly be extended to cover the organization's wire services and syndicates.

Rubber Union Wins Pay Lift

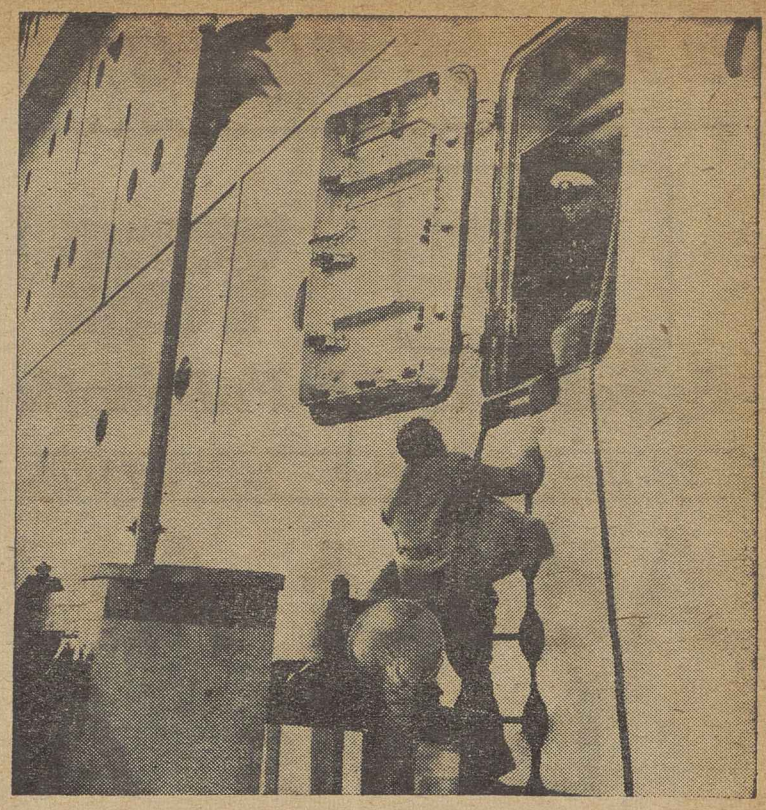
Erie, Pa., July 3.—A new agreement with the Continental Rubber Works providing wage increases, improved seniority right, paid vacations and other improvements was announced here this week by Local 61, United Rubber Workers.

The contract, signed after extended period of negotiations, also includes a clause stating that any revision in piece rates will be put into effect only after a mutual agreement between the union and the company.

Fight Effort To Undermine Steel Union

Trenton, Nova Scotia, July 3.—Demands that the Eastern Car Company and the Trenton steel plant refrain from attempts to undermine the union were made in a telegram which has been sent Federal Minister of Labor Norman McLarty by the Trenton Lodge 1231, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

The union representing practically 100 per cent of the workers employed by the two concerns blamed delay in bringing wage disputes before a conciliation board on the company managements.



Feeling of the community over failure to reach agreement was keynoted at a protest meeting in New Glasgow by Don F. Fraser, ex-member of the Provincial Parliament, who said:

"I feel we should tell the company if they don't get out and get some orders we'll petition the government to take over the plant saying thousands of men are ready to work."

Direct negotiations with the companies are being led on behalf of the CIO employes by Philip Clows, international representative, and G. Miller Dick, president of the Trenton Local.

CHARTER LOCAL

Detroit.—Employes of Detroit furniture stores have received a charter from the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO.

THE WINNERS: Members of the American Communications Assn. climb back to work on the S. S. Monterey after they won a one-day strike which delayed departure of the vessel.

Many Jobs Opening Up In Government Service

WASHINGTON, July 3.—CIO affiliates were advised today that jobs are open in Federal service for workers with various kinds of skills, and that applications are being received by the U. S. Civil Service Commission here. The advice was contained in a circular letter sent by Ralph Hetzel, Jr., CIO unemployment director, to CIO unions and councils.

Hetzel's letter explained that: "The army and navy are nearing the bottom of their civil service lists for workers with various kinds of skills. Workers for these jobs must be drawn from the lists of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

"Applications are now being invited for certain jobs on these lists," the letter added. "No examinations are required but applicants will be rated on their experience."

The letter urged all CIO unions to notify their members of such opening, suggesting that they post Civil Service application lists and directions on local bulletin boards. The letter emphasized that the job openings are only in government-owned navy yards, ordnance depots, etc.

Firm Signs Fourth Steel Union Pact

Reading, Pa., July 3 — The Steel Workers Organizing Committee has signed its fourth contract with the Reading Hardware Corp., thereby winning important gains, George Medrick, SWOC sub-regional director, announced today.

The pact is more detailed and contains a number of features which previous agreements lacked, it was pointed out. Ratified by SWOC Lodge 1488, the pact is effective immediately.

CIO Research Men Confer At Capital

Washington, July 3.—Research Directors of a dozen CIO international unions attending a U. S. Labor Dept. research conference here, helped work out a program to broaden and improve statistical and other research services maintained by the Department.

The program was based on three main points as follows:

1. Preparation of adequate figures on the cost of a proper standard of living in leading industrial centers throughout the country, to be published monthly.

2. Regular estimates of the total available labor force and the amount of employment, to give an accurate basis for estimating the amount of reemployment on a monthly basis.

3. Publication of a labor yearbook to give facts about the labor movement, labor conditions, employment, etc.

The conference, which met for two days, set up a continuing committee to meet with Labor Dept. officials from time to time on research problems. CIO representatives are Gladys Dickason, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Sol Barkin, Textile Workers, Harold J. Ruttenberg, Steel Workers, and Ralph Hetzel, Jr., from the CIO national office.

Leading Catholics Oppose Plans To Harrass Aliens

NEW YORK, July 3. — Leading Catholics throughout the country are strongly opposed to anti-alien legislation at this time, the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights announced today after a nationwide survey.

Dr. Emanuel Chapman, executive secretary of the committee, said the poll had been conducted at the suggestion of a number of prominent Catholics who feared that alarm over possible "fifth column" activities might lead to an unprecedented wave of alien-baiting.

Some 75 per cent of the persons interviewed in the survey were found to agree with a statement made recently by Senator George W. Norris, veteran Nebraska liberal, that "growing hysteria about a fifth column might undermine civil liberties, involve the United States in a war and make possible a government like Hitler's."

Only 2 per cent of those polled saw any need for new legislation, while the remainder felt that all subversive activity could be dealt with under existing laws.

Among those participating in the poll were Msgr. John A. Ryan of Catholic University, the Most Rev. Robert E. Lucey, Bishop of Amarillo, Tex.; Senator James Murray of Montana and Sec. James B. Carey of the CIO.

John T. Jones Appointed Director of Labor League

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Chairman John L. Lewis of Labor's Non-Partisan League today appointed John T. Jones as director of that organization.

For many years president of District 16 of the United Mine Workers, with headquarters in Cumberland, Md., Jones will be "in charge of legislative and organization work," Chairman Lewis declared in making known the appointment. Jones succeeds E. L. Oliver, who resigned two weeks ago.

Lewis, in a letter to League officials, pointed out that the work of LNPL is "of growing importance."

"Unsolved domestic problems and the economic political confusion throughout the world increases the necessity for labor and all progressive groups to continue to organize and extend their strength.

"Labor's Non-Partisan League has a most creditable record, and can be welded into an increasingly effective instrumentality for the benefit and protection of the interests of all Americans and our free institutions," Lewis said.

HAS LONG RECORD

John T. Jones, the new director, is a veteran of labor's cause and a member of the United Mine Workers since the day when as a young man he came from Britain and found employment in the coal fields of Illinois.

In 1907 he crossed the Atlantic, spent a year in Canada and then moved into Illinois. An enthusiastic member of the United Mine Workers, he held a number of local elective offices. During 1923-24, he directed a survey of old age pension plans for District 12 of the UMW, but it was not until June, 1929, that he became a full-time official for the union.

JOHN T. JONES
Appointed Director of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

From 1931 until 1933 he served as the international's legislative agent in Washington, leaving that position to aid the coal miners "blitzkrieg" organization drive that soon made the union the largest in the world.

Since 1934 Jones has made his headquarters in Cumberland, Md., where headquarters of UMW District 16 are located. For the past three years he has been president of the Maryland-District of Columbia Industrial Union Council.

In recent months Jones has been in Washington, where under the direction of Pres. Lewis, he has been leading the fight to save the Wagner Act from crippling amendments.

Lewis Boosts Wheeler, Asks Peace Stand

By KARL PRETSHOLD

ST. LOUIS, July 2.—There is only one man who can take the nomination of the Democratic Party and defeat Wendell L. Willkie, and that man is Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, John L. Lewis told ten thousand cheering delegates attending the Fifth Annual Convention of Townsend Old Age Pension groups here.

Lewis made his declaration a few hours after Wheeler, who was in St. Louis to address a peace rally, announced he would seek the Democratic nomination even if Roosevelt attempts to secure a third term.

"Both parties are on trial in this year 1940," Lewis declared. "I know that the people of this country are going to impose a heavier responsibility upon the political parties than ever before. The need is greater, the emergency is here.

GOP HAS FAILED

"The Republican Party in Philadelphia failed to accept the opportunity to become a party of the people. The Democratic Party will have an opportunity to express itself and name candidates for the high office of President and Vice-President that will convince Americans that it does desire and intend to be a party of the people.

"If it does so it will have to rise above the considerations of ordinary party politics and local patronage and above the question of involving America in a European war and will have to dedicate itself to the well being of the people of this country.

"The Republican Party has nominated Mr. Willkie. It may be that the Democratic Party will nominate Mr. Roosevelt."

The suggestion that the Democrats might name Roosevelt was met with cries of "no! no!" and boos from delegates.

When Lewis continued with the statement:

"I hope that Mr. Roosevelt will not be nominated" thousands of delegates rose and cheered.

PREDICTS FDR DEFEAT

"In February I made the statement that if Roosevelt runs for a third term he will be ignominously defeated," Lewis continued; "on this platform I say that if Roosevelt decides to run that Mr. Wendell Willkie will defeat him ignominously."

The Presidential election, the CIO chieftain told the Townsendites, must reflect the sentiment of the American people for peace and for social reform.

LAUDS WHEELER

"There is only one man in the Democratic Party who can take the nomination for President and defeat Mr. Willkie. That man is Senator Wheeler from Montana—Burton K. Wheeler, a man of the people, a man with an unblemished record, a man with the ability and courage to stand for the rights of labor, the aged, for the principles of democracy, for peace and non-participation in a European war.

"I say the Democratic Party is on trial. If it fails to nominate Burton Kendall Wheeler then the responsibility will rest upon the Democratic Party, and not on the common people."

If the Democratic Party fails to outline a program and name candidates worthy of the support of the common people "then it will be time for labor organizations and organizations like the Townsend group and others to consider it.

OUR SITUATION

"There are some," he pointed out "who ask us to give up our quest for economic security because military security requires our full resources and our last penny. We do not need to make such a choice. This country is so endowed that we can have both. We can have both if we have the courage and the vision to put our resources and machinery and our people to work.

"A country which pushes its unemployed around, treats its aged like refugees and denies jobs to its youth cannot defend itself, cannot be strong no matter how many billions it finds for airplanes and tanks."

WHEELER SPEAKS

Senator Wheeler made an unexpected appearance before the Townsend convention and spoke immediately after Lewis. In his talk Senator Wheeler declared:

"Unless the Democratic Party nominates a candidate who the people believe will keep us out of war there won't be any difference between the Republican and Democratic parties, and

Win Big Poll In Jersey By 2½–1

Bloomfield, N. J., July 3.—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers today added another Labor Board election victory to its already impressive list by polling a 2½-1 majority at the local plant of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

The UERMW received 1,451 votes, while only 578 voted against the CIO affiliate.

In Mansfield, Ohio, the union chalked up its 19th Westinghouse win. At the Refrigerator Plant there, it polled 1,714 votes, to 1,326 against.

RCA Agrees To Negotiate New Contract

New York, July 3. — Some 800 locked out employes of RCA Communications, domestic and foreign commercial wire service, returned to work today when the firm agreed to resume negotiations for a new contract.

The lockout, affecting New York and San Francisco offices of the firm, occurred in mid-June when parleys with the union broke down.

7 CIO Leaders Named to Defense Labor Committee

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Six leaders of CIO unions and a representative of the CIO national office have accepted appointment to the newly formed Labor Policy Advisory Committee set up here by Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and labor coordinator for the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Their function, according to Defense Commission sources, will be to advise the government on employment and other labor policies with specific emphasis on putting idle workers back on jobs as defense orders come in.

Members of the Committee are:

CIO: Van A. Bittner, chairman, Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee; S. H. Dalrymple, president, United Rubber Workers; Clinton Golden, northeast regional director, Steel Workers Organizing Committee; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Samuel J. Hogan, president, Natl. Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn.; Emil Rieve, president, Textile Workers Union of America; and R. J. Thomas, president, United Automobile Workers.

AFL: Harry Bates, president, Bricklayers Intl. Union; H. W. Brown, president, Intl. Assn. of Machinists; John P. Coyne, president, AFL building trades dept.; George Q. Lynch, president, Pattern Makers League; Charles MacGowan, vice-president, Brotherhood of Boilermakers; George Masterson, general president, United Assn. of Journeymen Plumbers; and D. W. Tracy, president, Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Lion Oil Co. Unfair

FT. WORTH, Tex., July 3.—The Lion Oil Company and its products were placed on the unfair list at a recent meeting of the executive board of the Oil Workers International Union.

Auto Union to Cooperate On Defense Job Program

DETROIT, July 6.—Full cooperation will be given by the Automobile Workers, CIO, in placing unemployed workers on jobs in defense industries, R. J. Thomas, UAW president, announced after consultation with Sidney Hillman in his capacity as employment coordinator on the U. S. Advisory National Defense Commission.

In addition to Pres. Thomas, Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's General Motors division, and Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the Chrysler division, met with Hillman in Washington.

Under the agreement with the Commission, the UAW will immediately conduct a survey of unemployment in the union, listing jobless workers in skilled and semi-skilled categories. Every local of the UAW will be asked to cooperate in this survey, Thomas announced.

"In accordance with the needs of the nation and the policy of cooperation on defense adopted by the CIO, we informed Mr. Hillman of our readiness to give aid, to the full extent of our ability, in making available necessary workers "well-known and indicated sympathy with the Nazi government for the defense program," Thomas said.

It is hoped to absorb much of the great reservoir of unemployed in our industry, thus serving our members while promoting successful and speedy work on the huge defense program," he added.

RAPS FORD

Thomas accused Henry Ford, bitterly anti-union car maker, of refusing to cooperate on the defense commission's program for construction of airplane motors of acting in accordance with his of Germany.

"This is not the first time Henry Ford has tried to set himself up above the government of our country," Thomas said. "He has done it continuously in his flouting of the Wagner Act and the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

"The position taken by Henry Ford, in opposition to our country's needs and in violation of Edsel Ford's agreement with the defense commission, does not in any way indicate the attitude of the Ford workers, who are completely loyal to the U. S."

$618,000 Pay Boost

KEARNY, N. J., July 3. — Officials of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers estimated today that employes of the Federal Ship & Drydock Co. would benefit to the tune of $618,000 a year as a result of a new union contract.

The pact provides the top mechanics' base rate in any major private shipyard — a dollar an hour.

PLAYMATE, COME OUT AND PLAY WITH ME!

Gerrymander

The CIO continues its unbroken record of leading in the workers' choice.

Elections reported in June by the National Labor Relations Board show CIO unions receiving 11,649 of the workers' votes cast, as against 7,826 for AFL unions and 3,501 for independents.

Ever since American workers were given the chance to vote their preference for one type of union as against another, results have shown a consistent and often overwhelming majority for CIO industrial unionism.

That is why employers opposed to strong unions and some spite-blind AFL craft leaders have seen fit to join together to put the Smith bill for compulsory craft division through the House. They don't want the workers to have what they want.

What the Smith bill proposes to do is to gerrymander the voting units. When a dominant party or group of politicians cannot defeat its opponents in a fair vote, it sometimes attempts to redivide voting districts in such a way that it may have an unfair advantage, and a united vote against it may be avoided. This is known as gerrymandering.

The gerrymandering Smith bill would divide the workers in such a way that it would be virtually impossible for them to continue to vote, as they have been doing, for the strength and unity of CIO industrial unionism.

In the interests of democracy and fair voting, aside from anything else, it must be stopped in the Senate.

Testimonial

"We bargained while others were brawling," says H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the Consolidated Oil Corporation, in a letter to Pres. J. L. Coulter of the CIO Oil Workers International Union, in celebration of the sixth anniversary of the company's collective bargaining agreement with the union.

"The agreement," Sinclair says, "was described as a 'treaty of industrial peace' and as affording a new basis of labor relations. It has proved to be that, and more."

Expressing his gratification at the benefits achieved, he adds: "We take no more credit for this result than I accord to you and the members of your organization who have cooperated to bring it about.

"Of course, we have had differences, complaints and grievances. Over some of these our patience has worn pretty thin at times. No doubt you could say the same thing. But the point to remember is that we had a will and a way to settle our differences. We bargained while others were brawling."

The sentiments expressed in this testimonial by a big employer to the advantages of collective bargaining can be matched many times over by other employers who have discovered from experience that bargaining with the CIO union chosen by their employes is much better than brawling.

Corporations which have defied the Wagner act and refused to deal with their organized employes, on the other hand, have found that "the way of the transgressor is hard." They have suffered from the industrial warfare they have provoked, and have paid a high price for their lawbreaking in dislocation of production and the dissatisfaction and lowered morale of their employes.

But wherever an employer has bargained in good faith with a CIO union, he has found like Sinclair that there is "a will and a way to settle differences" and that it is far more profitable for all concerned to bargain than to brawl.

When Harry Bridges began organization of the Pacific Coast longshoremen, average wages were $10.45 a week, with long hours, kickbacks to foremen and dangerous working conditions. Today, the longshoremen average $40 to $50 a week, with reasonable hours and union protection on the job. Is organizing workers to better conditions a deportable offense?

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

If you want to know what would happen to us if we had no unions to protect our rights and our conditions, just read what some of the "best minds" in the business world are saying and proposing.

"We must choose between guns and gadgets; between personal security or 'social' security," says Roger W. Babson, syndicated business writer.

He describes unemployment relief, farm aid and social security as the "gadgets" of which we must strip ourselves for the sake of defense; takes a crack at the eight-hour day; and criticizes the idea that we can keep our "superluxuries."

Superluxury to you may suggest yachts, sable coats, jewelry, palatial estates and the like. But not to Babson.

"By superluxuries," he explains, "I refer to hour and wage benefits, old-age pensions, farm bounties, indiscriminate relief and other sops and paps."

C. of C. Too

What Babson says publicly, many wealthy clubmen are saying privately. And organizations of big business like the Chamber of Commerce of the United States are actually coming to express the same ideas in more guarded terms in their official statements.

The Chamber calls for reduction of public expenditures for all purposes except defense; asks for a "modification of labor legislation"; and includes the following as one of its planks:

"No elements in our economic life should profiteer. This principle should apply to investor, manager, laborer and farmer."

Wage 'Profiteers'

If you find it hard to imagine laborers or farmers "profiteering" on their average family incomes of around $1,000 a year—if you think the Chamber just threw in these two groups for good measure to show its impartiality—you are due for a surprise.

For you will find that the Chamber at the same time is quite violently opposed to excess profits taxation.

So it seems they don't want anything done about the investor who makes excess profits, but only about the worker or farmer who wants a little less poverty.

Rolls-Royce 'Patriots'

Roll on in your Rolls-Royces, all you excess profiteers! Build new mansions, buy new yachts! Adorn yourselves with diamonds and other costly trinkets!

For Mr. Babson does not include such with his "gadgets" that interfere with defense.

Superluxurious

But woe to you, you men and women of small income, who would "profiteer" at the expense of the Rolls-Roycers!

Shame on you, old man, for expecting the superluxury of the present $20 a month pension in your declining years!

Go to, you dirt farmer, who would luxuriate on government farm bounties to keep the wolf from the door!

As for you, you unemployed, who take the "sops and paps" of relief or a WPA job, instead of quietly starving to death, don't you know such relief is a "gadget" to some?

And you workers who still have jobs, don't you realize the wage and hour benefits your unions have won, and even the weak limits on sweatshop exploitation in the wage-hour law, are "superluxuries?"

All of these "gadgets" must go, according to Babson and his friends, to provide for guns. Labor laws must be modified, hours lengthened, wages cut; aged and unemployed must be left to starve; democratic liberties must be abolished; and the great American people must be driven hungry, enslaved, exploited, without hope of security or protection, to fight—for what?

An Evil Dream

Such is the evil dream conjured up by imagining an America in which there are no unions to curb the lust of exploiters, and no progressive political organization of labor and farmers to make their right to vote effective.

As it is, this nightmare doesn't make sense.

Yet ideas like Babson's are a menace to any real national defense, if they are allowed to gain ground. For it takes a free people, not starving slaves, to protect a free country.

"We believe that America should be kept a free nation. For free men will protect their country more effectively than men who are regimented and who may be driven like dumb cattle to attain the objectives of others."—JOHN L. LEWIS.

Five Years of the Wagner Act

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

A Milestone in American Labor History

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, July 5.—The Wagner Labor Relations Act had a birthday today — the fifth anniversary of the signing of the bill on July 5, 1935.

The birthday passed quietly. No celebrations were held, no speeches made.

The Smith bill, designed to rip the Act to pieces, lay on the Senate's doorstep, after William Green of the AFL had greased its way through the lower House of Congress. The big commercial newspapers, who make many an anti-labor editorial page even more anti-labor by denouncing the Act and all its works, kept silent.

Workers remembered the Wagner Act, even if the anniversary was overlooked. Resolutions, letters, wires, continued to pour in on the Senate Labor Committee and all 96 Senators to whose hands the Smith bill has been consigned. All of them continued to protest against the bill, pointed out that its eight main provisions were all anti-labor, all designed to destroy labor's industrial bill of rights.

LABOR'S FIGHT

The fight of organized labor to save the Wagner Act has been going on for more than 2½ years now, was started only a short while after the Act was held constitutional by the Supreme Court in April, 1937, an event that came almost two years after Congress passed it by overwhelming vote.

Passage of the Wagner Act "was one of the greatest achievements for organized labor" in American history, as the CIO has pointed out in its legislative program. And, as the CIO program adds; "The powerful financial and industrial anti-labor leaders of the country have not slackened for a single moment since the enactment in their attempt to repeal or emasculate its provisions." What has the Act meant to the workers, that they have fought so consistently to save it from anti-union employers and from the top leadership of the AFL?

Here are a few figures, brought up to May of this year, that help to explain. Since its vindication by the Supreme Court, more than 6,000,000 workers have been directly affected by the Act. Almost 30,000 cases have been filed. Over 1,150,000 workers have taken part in 3,157 Labor Board elections to choose their own form of union.

In its first two years of operation, more than $550,000 was paid to workers in the form of wages due for illegal discharge for union activity. Millions more in back pay orders are pending —most notably in Bethlehem and Republic Steel.

THE FIRST TACTIC

The first tactic of the enemies of collective bargaining was to ignore the Act entirely, following the advice of a self-appointed committee of Liberty League lawyers who told their clients it never could be made to stick. The Supreme Court thought otherwise, but almost as soon as the verdict was down the enemies of the Act started a new phase of the campaign.

They soon picked up allies in the craft union officialdom of the AFL. By January, 1938, the CIO was warning against threatened amendments in Congress, brought out the first of a dozen widely circulated pamphlets and leaflets on the Act.

A short time later the top-shots of the AFL were letting out their first outcries against the Act—caused by the fact that the CIO was winning the elections and that big industry was being forced to deal with CIO unions.

In the meantime, Inland Steel, Tom Girdler's Republic Steel, Bethlehem, Western Union, the Harlan County coal operators felt the pressure of the CIO behind the Wagner Act, reflected in orders to cease fighting the CIO, stop building company unions, bargain as U. S. law said they must. By April, 1938, the Board had collected 4,000,000 words in 19,000 pages of testimony against Henry Ford, most flagrant of all lawbreakers, and was beginning a long series of decisions and orders against the Ford idea of labor relations.

CIO CRITICISM

The CIO did not profit exclusively from the Act and from decisions of the Board. Far from it; on many occasions the unfounded demands of AFL craft splinter groups for representation in industrial plants were listened to, received Board certification. The CIO protested vigorously, making careful distinction between the Act and the way the Board interpreted it.

By January of 1939 the general staff of the AFL was more or less out in the open, sponsoring the Walsh amendments in S-1000. The revolt in the AFL began simultaneously. The Machinists, the Typographical union, the Teamsters, the Pattern Makers, the Brewery Workers—a total of 13 AFL internationals plus local bodies with membership over a million, went on record against Green and the Walsh bill.

The payoff on Green's amendments came shortly after, when President Lewis declared and proved with documentary evidence that the Walsh-Green bill had been "drafted with the aid, advice and counsel of representatives of the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and of several of the most reactionary and anti-labor corporations of the country." Green and his attorney sputtered, but have not been able to disprove Lewis' charges.

THE NEW ASSAULT

Also in 1939 the Smith Committee, headed by a poll tax tory from Virginia, was set up and launched a smear campaign against the Board and everything that had been accomplished under the Act. In March, 1940, three of the five man committee brought out the Smith amendments, described in a minority report as the "ripper bill," denounced by responsible labor leaders everywhere—even criticized by Green.

The Norton bill came out in April, with a compulsory craft unit amendment that would force splinter groups on every industrial plant at the whim of any tiny craft setup, no matter how small. Again a minority report (signed by seven of 15 who voted on the bill) denounced it as a wreckers' plan, and again the CIO led the fight to save the Act from new dangers.

American workers continued to show their preference for industrial unionism when given the chance to vote. The CIO won the General Motors election with 86,000 votes against the AFL's 26,000. Dozens of other major polls showed CIO victories.

Two months after the GM vote, the CIO Auto Workers won a new contract with a $12,000,000 wage boost. The Board was upheld by the courts. Republic Steel was again ordered to obey the law, pay back wages for illegal firings. A score of decisions upheld the right to organize freely and democratically.

A FINAL DOUBLECROSS

The biggest doublecross of Green's history came in June of this year, when he wrote to Rep. Smith endorsing the ripper bill he had previously criticized. Liberals in Congress and elsewhere, leaders of AFL unions, again protested. The CIO organized scores of delegations, representing millions of workers, to tell Congress to keep hands off the Act.

The Smith bill has gone through the lower House, helped by Green, speeded on a wave of anti-labor war hysteria. Today the bill is before the Senate, waiting action to become law.

IT'S UP TO YOU

The Smith bill to destroy the Wagner Act is through one House of Congress. Wm. Green and the NAM put it through.

HERE'S THE STORY

HERE'S THE STORY of Bill Green's latest doublecross on the Wagner Act, just put out in leaflet form by the CIO. Leaflet sells for $3.75 a thousand. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Avenue, Washington, D. C.

Pres. Lewis Addresses Townsendites

there will be a tremendous demand for a strong liberal peace party to give the people an opportunity to vote on whether they want war or peace.

"I will not support any candidate not pledged to keep this country out of war or to any candidate not pledged to carry out progressive reforms."

Senator Wheeler had, previous to his announcement here, indicated that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination if Roosevelt sought a third term.

DISCUSSES PENSIONS

Well over half of the CIO leader's speech was devoted to the problem of the aged and of old age security in modern society.

Lewis declared that "we are convinced that the present system of old age pensions is totally inadequate and unjust," with large population groups excluded from its benefits, as well as from the unemployment insurance program.

"With your help . . . in cooperation with the hosts of organized labor in this country, we are going to make Washington understand about all this," he said as the audience stood, cheered and applauded.

The United States, he went on, is so wealthy that we can have both economic and military security if we have the "courage and vision" to put our resources, machinery and men to work.

Lewis said there have been some in the nation who have criticized details of the Townsend plan, but "few have disagreed with the great principles involved, providing adequate security for our aged people." Such a program must rest "upon the expansion of our economic system," he reiterated.

Lewis Speech To Townsendites

The CIO NEWS herewith prints excerpts from the address of CIO Pres. John L. Lewis to the annual convention of the Townsend Old Age Pension movement at St. Louis on July 2.

I bring back to your membership at home, whom you represent, and I bring back to those millions of the aged in this country, who have not yet had time and opportunity to identify themselves with the forward movement of America today, I bring you the sympathy and the greetings and the good wishes and the goodwill and the offer of cooperation from all those whom I represent.

There have been some in this country who have criticized the method devised by your organization for payment of adequate old age pensions. Some have found fault with the amount provided in your program, and with its details. If I may say so, however, few have disagreed with the great principles involved, providing adequate security for our aged people.

Entitled to Aid

The American people are entitled to assistance and real security for our aged. The present system of old age pensions is state old age assistance, federal old age insurance, and does not take care of our needs in any satisfactory way, and does not reach the limits of our resources to pay proper pensions.

A program of security for our aged must rest upon the expansion of our economic system, and the distribution of adequate social security benefits will contribute to an expanding national income by increasing mass purchasing power and help to correct the present mass distribution of income.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations endorsed an old age pension program based upon a flat minimum pension of $60 a month, with supplementary amounts to wives up to a maximum of $90 a month for each married couple, with an age limit of sixty years, eligibility to all persons, and administered through a single federal system. The initial fund for this program should be secured by taxes upon aggregates of wealth and income.

The United Mine Workers of America, at its recent convention in Columbus, Ohio, unanimously voted to cooperate in the attainment of this social program, and declared that no problem is more universal for workers than that of security in old age. No one who works for a living is immune from the fear that some day he must lay down his tools and his wages cease. The terrors of poverty and disability are multiplied many fold as the worker grows older. . . .

Federal Uniformity

With unemployment in many basic industries it is impossible for many men, and especially those in the neighborhood of 50 or 60 years of age, to make these earnings, and as a result we have thousands of these borderline cases where pensions are denied. It is vital and it is necessary that some federal uniform standard be established which will provide adequate pensions for the aged. These provisions should be made regardless of former earnings, regardless of property equities and regardless of lineal relative support.

This country is big enough and is rich enough to execute such provisions. This problem is not only social, but economic as well, because money paid to the aged fits into our economic scheme of increased purchasing power, which is bound to favorably react on the general economics of this nation. . . .

The CIO has offered a program to unite all aged and progressive groups seeking real security for the people. We are convinced that the right to security in old age rests upon elemental, just and economic needs. We are convinced that the adequate payment of benefits to these people by increasing mass purchaisng power will contribute to the solution of one of our basic difficulties —a lack of a sufficient consumer purchasing power to take up the products that industry can produce. . .

So, one of the things that will come here in America, when we learn to distribute the genius of our science down to the population, will be the shortening of the span of productive years which men and women must labor in, and thereby create greater opportunity for the constant millions of young men and women who come every year and demand jobs. . .

'Inadequate'

We are convinced that the present system of old age pensions is totally inadequate and unjust.

The insurance plan excused millions of workers, farmers and small workers and professional people. The so-called old age assistance is penurious and imposses hard tests, requiring the cooperation of aged beneficiaries. As a matter of fact, the experts of the CIO in Washington, who are constantly making a study of these problems, tell me that both the form and the administration of the present social security act is so complex, and so confused, and falls so far short of its objective, that it is almost idle to think of undertaking to amend it. . . .

And I want to say now that with your help, and the help of many of the men in this country, in cooperation with the hosts of organized labor in this country, we are going to make Washington understand all about this.

The realization of old age security depends upon members expanding and increasing the total national income. Millions of our aged people are insecure for the same reason that millions of our adult and young people are unemployed—because our economic machinery does not work. That seems to be something else that the administration in Washington does not understand. . . .

A Fixed Yield

In this whole picture, old age security may be reality. It is no longer an empty demand made upon an insolvent, bankrupt economy, but a fixed return yielded by a rich growing concern able to meet this obligation, such as the French government met in a troubled world. We are in a crucial period. There are some who ask us to give up our question and quest for economic security because military security requires our full resources and our last penny. But we do not need to make such a choice. This country is so endowed with the richest of nature, and the inventions of the vigorous democratic people, that we can have both! We can have both if we have the courage and the vision to put our resources and our machinery and our people to work.

But a country which treats its aged like refugees, can never defend itself. A country which pushes its unemployed around like criminals can never defend itself. A country which denies jobs to its youth cannot be strong, no matter how many billions it finds for airplanes and tanks. . . .

GOP Plank Weak

I do not know just to what degree our convention and its delegates may be satisfied with the declarations of the platform of the Republican Party just held at Philadelphia. As I analyze that declaration, it is recommended that there be an extension of necessary old age benefits. I wonder who will decide what is necessary, on an ear-marked pay-as-you-go basis, to the extent that the revenues raised for this purpose will permit.

This means that there will be no extension of old age benefits through any government contribution, but that all benefits must be paid out of direct taxes raised through payroll taxes, I assume. There cannot be any extension of old age benefits except through government contributions to the funds.

In other words, that plank of that platform, to my mind, is on a par with the plank in the Republican platform dealing with labor. Any good driver could drive a coach and four horses straight through without impairing the plank in any way.

It is acceptable of any interpretation that any politician may desire to place upon it, depending upon the type of interpretation he desires to meet the requirements of any special meeting that he might be attending.

Parties on Trial

There is a burden, there is an obligation there, and these political parties, whether they be Republican or whether they be Democratic, had better give heed to this call from the people of this country.

I do not know what the Chicago Convention, Democratic Party will do on this question effecting labor, the common people, and all Americans. I do know that both parties in this year 1940 are on trial. I do know that the people of this country are going to impose a heavier responsibility upon those parties in this year than ever before. The need is greater and the emergency is here.

The Republican Party, in Philadelphia, failed to accept its opportunity to become a party of the people. The Democratic Party, in Chicago, will have an opportunity to express itself and name candidates for the high offices of President and Vice-President of the United States that will convince Americans that it does desire and it does intend to be a party of the people; but if it does so, it will have to rise above the considerations of ordinary party politics, above the question of local patronage, above the question of crime to involve America in a European War, and will have to dedicate itself to the well-being of the people of this country.

The Republican Party has nominated Mr. Willkie for President. It may be that the Democratic Party will nominate Mr. Roosevelt. I hope that Mr. Roosevelt will not be a candidate.

Wheeler Can Win

On February 10th of this year, in a public address, I made the statement in Columbus, Ohio, that if Franklin Delano Roosevelt will run for a third term in this year of 1940, he would be ignominiously defeated. On this 2nd day of July, on this platform, I say that if Franklin Delano Roosevelt decides to run for a third term, that Mr. Wendell Willkie will defeat him ignominiously.

Let me say this on this question of a Presidential election of a type and character that must in the end reflect the sentiment of the American people, there is only one man in the Democratic Party who can take the nomination for President of that Party in this year and defeat Mr. Wendell Willkie, and that man is a Senator from Montana — Mr. Burton Wheeler. Burton K. Wheeler, a man of the people, a man with an unblemished record, a man with the ability and the courage to stand for the rights of the aged, for labor, for the principles of democracy, for peace and non-participation in a European war.

So, I say the Democratic Party in its convention, in Chicago, is on trial, and if the Democratic Party, in Chicago, fails to nominate for its candidate for the Presidency of the United States, Burton Kendell Wheeler, of Montana, then the responsibility of the results will rest upon the Democratic Party, and not on the common people of this country.

If this convention in Chicago should fail to outline a program and candidates which the common people of this country can support, adopt and approve, then it will be time for organizations of labor, organizations like the Townsend organizations and others to consider it.

War Propaganda

My friends, it is with profound pleasure that I come here today as your visitors to be the recipient of your hospitality. I cannot too strongly impress upon you the great degree of responsibility that rests upon every thinking American today in this troubled period in our own country and abroad. It will be necessary for every man and every woman, it will be necessary for every effective and powerful organization, of all citizens, to be constantly on the alert, to be prepared for the great task of maintaining stability and orderly procedure and rational thinking here in America.

There are forces in our country today that are working insistently in undertaking to involve our country in the war in Europe. Mr. John P. Flynn, one of the great American writers, with Scripps-Howard Newspapers, publicly stated, "That the government of Great Britain has appopriated 165 million dollars for propaganda in the United States. Where is that money being spent? Is it to involve Americans in the ancient rivalries and the tragic conflicts that wage and rage over Europe from time to time through the years? If it is, then Americans must beware and Americans must be on guard, not to be guiled away from their ordinary state of mind or their usual methods of reasoning.

America has problems. It needs employment for its people; it needs protection for itself, aged, it needs opportunities for its youth, and there is work here at home for Americans to do, and when Americans get their house in order, in such order that they can become a pattern for the whole civilized world then will be the time for America to undertake to influence the neighbors across the sea by saying, "See what we have done!"

Cleveland Sits Up, Take Notice Of Die Casters' Strike

By TED COX

CLEVELAND, July 3.—Precision Die Casting workers turned back frantic attempts of the management to break their strike here and entered the second week of their walk-out with a completely shutdown plant to enforce their demands for collective bargaining.

The strike was called a week ago by the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, CIO. It came after employes exhausted every other means of enforcing their right to bargain collectively. The company had consistently refused to negotiate and met every request for negotiations with a terroristic program of dismissing workers and flouting federal laws.

Twenty-four hour picket lines stretched along the back fence at the railroad siding and covered the front gate, trapping a handful of frightened, nervous scabs inside the plant for the fourth night. The total number of Precision employes wandering through the plant and peering through the windows was counted exactly at the figure 16. Production was completely halted.

HALT SHIPMENTS

Freight trains were stopped twice when they attempted to move material out of the plant. Precision workers sat on the railroad tracks, along with scores of brother CIO members, and held up a locomotive for two hours until top officials of the railroad arrived and convinced the picket lines that no strikebreakers were in the one box car which they sought to move into plant property.

Company representatives also sought to get Cleveland's big strikebreaking police force into action to help the management escape collective bargaining. Police officials, faced with demands from the company on one side and a determined, fighting picket line on the other side, explained they had no right to interfere since the plant is located across the street from the Cleveland boundary line.

CITY AROUSED

In the meantime, all Cleveland was aroused. Thousands of people, day and night, came out to park and observe the huge picket line. CIO men from scores of plants stopped off to take a turn at the gate.

Every CIO union meeting heard reports, and after every meeting, at least a committee jumped into cars to visit the picket line. A threat that a shipment of professional strikebreakers were coming in Friday night immediately brought mobilization of 200 fighting union men. They didn't come in.

Saturday afternoon and Saturday night another freight movement was halted for more than 12 hours until pickets finally agreed to permit shipment of one box car at 5 a. m., Sunday. Since the opening of the strike, therefore, only two box cars have been moved.

This was considered important since authentic reports showed a large number of factories are burning up the wires demanding delivery of overdue orders from the Cleveland plant. Most of the plants now putting the heat on the anti-union Precision management cannot use dies or castings even if they are delivered, because union workers in the customer-factories will refuse to handle the hot goods.

Included among those who have orders from the struck Cleveland plant are Midland Steel Co., Packard, Hudson, Apex Electric and other solidly organized shops.

Fur Union Gets Pact In Toronto

Toronto, Canada, July 6.—Eight weeks of negotiations, carried on despite opposition from tory politicians and attempted disruption from an AFL splinter union, brought a contract to the Toronto Joint Board of the CIO Intl. Fur and Leather Workers.

The contract boosts wages 7.5 per cent, gives the closed shop, overtime pay, a 40 hour five day week, and other improvements. It runs for two years.

San Diego, Calif., July 6—The first straight union shop in the canning industry, plus an eight hour day, overtime and seniority—was won by Local 64 of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers, CIO, from the Van Camp Sea Food Co. here.

67 Miners Reinstated By Board

Washington, July 3.—Discrimination against 67 CIO workers of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Corp., employed at Santa Rita and Hurley, New Mexico, was ordered stopped in a proposed order issued by the Natl. Labor Relations Board here.

The men, who are members of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, were refused jobs solely because of union membership, the Board held.

Evidence brought out before the Board showed that the corporation drew up a blacklist of men "who had engaged in or were suspected of engaging in concerted activities on behalf of the union," and that the 67 were singled out from 750 who got jobs when the mine reopened after a shutdown in 1937.

CITE TESTIMONY

The Board cited testimony from vice-president W. S. Boyd, who told of a conference with R. B. Tempest, then general manager of the mine. Boyd's testimony was frank.

"Mr. Tempest did not want these men put on," Boyd testified, "and I told him he did not have to. We had been shut down and now were starting up again. Let us start again clean, and I told Mr. Tempest I would not let the decision as to that be broadcast among others, but put it in his hands and his hands alone."

Fight Cops and AFL Strikebreaking In New York

NEW YORK, July 3.—While the strike of Local 430 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers against the Air King radio factory in Brooklyn held solid in its seventh week, CIO unions in this area were taking steps to show up Local 3 of the AFL's International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers as engaging in strikebreaking practices.

The strike began May 17, when Air King management locked out three members of Local 430 at the request of the IBEW. Local 430 is made up of more than 1,200 workers in some 16 radio plants in this area.

FED UP WITH AFL

After two years as Local B-1010 of the AFL's IBEW, and two years of IBEW-brand "contracts," the members voted to change affiliation to the CIO, and became Local 430 of the UE. The IBEW then sought to get the employers to discharge their old employes. Most of the employers have refused, but Air King discharged three as a "test case"—and the strike began.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia initiated some mediation, but dropped such efforts as soon as Local 3 of the IBEW took up the cause of smashing the CIO strike. IBEW officials have been supplying approximately 60 strikebreakers per day to Air King, and city police have used riot squads, mounted police and clubbing to break the lines long enough to get a few AFL strikebreakers into the plant.

BIG DEMONSTRATION

A number of strikers were badly hurt by police, however, and James Lustig, business Representative for District 4, was arrested on charges of "inciting to riot." Production in the plant has nevertheless been held down to zero.

Speed Plan For Council In Gotham

New York, July 3—Creation of a CIO Industrial Union Council for New York City is of vital importance to every CIO member and union in the area, Allan Haywood, CIO national director of organization, declared today in issuing a call to a conference to be held, here, July 24, at the McAlpin Hotel, to set up a city CIO Council.

Stressing the attempts being made by the forces of reaction today to drive labor backward and destroy the rights and liberties won by years' of hard struggle, the call stated:

"Uniting of the CIO unions in this area can and will go a long way in coordinating labor's efforts and directing labor's energies in a manner that will enable us to resist these reactionary forces, protect our cherished liberties and advance the interests of those who toil.

URGES BIG TURNOUT

"I strongly urge each and every local union to send its full quota of delegates to the July 24th meeting at the Hotel McAlpin. Join with your fellow unionists in setting up a CIO institution in New York City that will be an inspiration to all labor throughout the nation."

All unions were asked to send in credentials for their delegates not later than Tuesday, July 22, to the CIO Regional Office, 1133 Broadway, New York City.

The call was issued following a conference of New York CIO union representatives held here last week with Director Haywood. The CIO Executive Board at its meeting in Washington in June, authorized the setting up of a Council for New York City.

S. S. Kresge Signs First Contract

Flint, Mich., July 3.—The CIO has signed its first contract with a unit of the S. S. Kresge store chain.

The agreement was won when the Flint store, acting to avert a threatened strike, came to terms with Local 176 of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

Led by Tucker P. Smith, URWEA regional director for Michigan, a negotiating committee representing 40 girls who made up the union's Five & Ten Organizing Committee, won sole bargaining rights, a 25 per cent increase for employes with one year's seniority and improved working conditions.

Coust Upholds NLRB On Consumers Power

CINCINNATI, O., July 3. — The U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today had upheld the National Labor Relations Board in an order directed against illegal labor practices of the Consumers Power Co.

The firm is a subsidiary of the Commonwealth & Southern Corp.

Acting upon a case which dates back to 1938, the court agreed with NLRB contentions that the company had interfered with its employes' choice of bargaining agency, in this case the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

FORMED FAKE UNION

The NLRB had accused the company of forming a so-called "independent" union of its employes, encouraging membership in the fake outfit and "making known its hostility to the CIO union."

Looking into record, the court found evidence "that an important supervisory employe, in charge of more than 20 line crews operating within the Jackson (Mich.) division, comprising some 300 men, went far beyond the bounds of that strict neutrality asserted to be the petitioner's labor policy in coercing employes to be members in the union . . ."

Paper Men Win Election

Muskegon, Mich., July 3.—CIO Paper Workers Local Industrial Union swept to an easy Labor Board election victory at the Central Paper Co. plant here.

The industrial union polled 205 votes, while an AFL local succeeded in garnering only 168.

Pres. August Scholle of the Michigan Industrial Union Council hailed the election as all the more impressive because the union has been organized for only a few months and has met bitter opposition from AFL craft unions and the corporation management.

'2ND LINE OF DEFENSE':

Clothing Union Mobilizes Against Wage Chiselers

NEW YORK, July 3.—A "second line of defense," aimed at insuring maximum protection for striking workers with a minimum amount of delay, has been set up by the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Called the "Consumer-Retailer Department," the new union branch is slowly but surely developing friendly relations with leading department stores, organized consumer's groups and labor unions which hate sweatshop products or other merchandise manufactured under inferior or unfair wage and working conditions.

As such, ACWA officials point out that the department's work backs up organizing activities, strikes, picket lines or union contract negotiations.

APPARATUS READY

Here's the way it works:

Should a manufacturer force a strike or resist the workers' collective bargaining demands, the Consumer-Retailer Department swings into action.

Retail store proprietors are promptly given all the facts on the situation. The National Consumers League, the Women's Trade Union League, the League of Women Shoppers, CIO industrial union councils and other organized labor groups are notified.

Pretty soon retailers who are handling unfair goods begin to get complaints—and delegations—from these organized labor-consumer organizations. Representing great masses of purchasing power, these delegations are usually heard with respect and attention.

The union makes it clear to the retailer that products manufactured under ACWA conditions are available in every price range and quality classification, and that consumers are increasingly looking for the Amalgamated label in the men's clothing goods they buy.

PROOF OF THE PUDDING

As a result, the new department—which is headed by Richard Rohman, ACW publicity man—has a growing file of letters that indicate real progress. Excerpts from some of the letters:

". . . have made last purchase from . . . in March and will not buy the line again if they are working against organized labor, you can rest assured."

"I now see this matter in quite a different light after the explanation given by you concerning the reason for CIO's attitude. Accordingly I have given instructions to discontinue the handling of this merchandise by my firm until such time as present difficulties may cease."

". . . you may rest assured that we will do nothing to jeopardize the interests of the organization which you represent."

NEW STRATEGY

There's nothing new, of course, about unions' fighting unfair corporations. But the Amalgamated is just about the first union in the country to mobilize a standing army for its "second line of defense," prepared at any moment to rush into the battle with all its strategy worked out in advance.

Sugar Workers Hold Confab, Review Gains

NEW YORK, July 3.—Reports on new contracts signed and gains made during the past two years were given by delegates from CIO local industrial unions in the sugar refining industry at an annual conference held here last month.

Michael F. Widman, Jr., assistant CIO director of organization, who was elected permanent chairman of the conference, told of the new contracts negotiated and improvements won in previous agreements and pointed out the importance of legislative work in this particular industry.

BROPHY SPEAKS

John Brophy, CIO national director of local industrial unions, outlined the progress being made in bringing locals together into regional groups. "These conferences are becoming more encouraging and stimulating constantly," he said.

"The past four or five years have been important, but the coming months and years will be more important. The war is getting closer. Legislation is being proposed that will set us back. No one is sure what is going to happen."

He warned that unless unions continue to grow in strength and power, they stood in danger of losing the gains they have won.

"The CIO national office will cooperate with you people to strengthen your organization in order to improve conditions and to see to it that we keep the enemy out."

STRENGTHEN SET-UP

Following Brophy's talk, action was taken to set up committees:

(1) To inform all unions which sugar was union-made; (2) to strengthen the relationship between the various local unions; (3) to draw up resolutions on legislation.

Chairman Widman read the draft of a letter to be sent to Colonel Philip B. Fleming, wage-hour administrator, requesting that an industry committee be appointed to set up proper minimum wage scale for the industry, pointing out that the scale ranges from 30 cents an hour in nonunion refineries to a much higher basic minimum in organized plants.

FOUR ARE NAMED

A committee of four in addition to Widman, were named to serve on an industry committee to take up this question.

The delegates attending the conference came from sugar refining locals in Boston, Mass.; Edgewater, N. J.; Baltimore, Md.; and Long Island City, N. Y. A delegate from a local at Sugarland, Texas, was unable to get to the conference.

DRIVE ON LUMBER

Washington. — A nationwide drive to force the lumber industry to comply with the wage-hour law was set into motion by Philip B. Fleming, administrator of the Wage-Hour Division.

St. Louis CIO Unions Back "5th" Strike

St. Louis, Mo., July 3.—The CIO Council in this city has gone on record in support of the strike of Local 1108, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, against the Century Manufacturing Co., and urges all of its member unions to back the strike, which is the fifth that has been called against the firm.

Refusal to bargain in good faith is the main cause of the present strike. The union is also asking for a pay increase, reduction of hours, paid vacations and removal of certain penalty clauses contained in a previous agreement.

Conciliators Urge Canadian Mine Recognize Union

OTTAWA, Ont., July 3.—A federal conciliation board this week recommended recognition by Teck Hughes Gold Mines of Local 240 of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union (CIO). The mine is located in Kirkland Lake, one of northern Ontario's gold production centres.

The report, submitted to Minister of Labor McLarty, was signed by Chief Justice W. W. Martin, chairman; J. L. Cohen, K. C., representing the union, and G. C. Bateman for the company.

Bateman dissented in part from the finding on union recognition holding "that no good purpose would be served."

The board was established last fall when the union applied to the federal labor department for arbitration of its dispute with the company. The union sought recognition and 15 cents an hour wage raise.

TOOK STRIKE VOTE

The management, instead of negotiating with the union discharged 47 men. The union took a strike vote and after labor department supervision of a second vote a board was granted.

To the company's claims that the union should not be recognized because it "was irresponsible," the board replied:

"In respect to this dispute, no sufficient justification has been shown to the board for the refusal of the company to recognize local No. 240."

The board also recommended that the 47 discharged employes be given preference in re-employment of men. Its decision marks a victory for the union's drive to obtain recognition. The board also suggested that both parties consider employes welfare including holidays with pay.

Canadians, Too, Feel Rising Cost of War

OTTAWA, Ont., July 3.—Canadian labor this week learned that war is a costly business as Hon. J. L. Ralston, federal minister of finance, submitted his budget to the House of Commons.

Every unmarried person earning $11.54 a week and every married man or woman earning $23.08 without dependents will have his or her wages taxed to swell the nation's war chest.

Three hundred and ninety thousand persons who hitherto escaped paying income taxes now come under the scope of the new budget and will pay either two or three per cent tax on their wages depending on the level of their present earning.

A single person earning $610 a year will pay a tax of $10 and a married person earning $1,210 annually will contribute $36.30. The tax will be deducted monthly from the wages of the employes by the employers under the new regulations.

In addition to the wage levy there will be a 10 per cent tax on "luxury" products including radios, automobiles, cameras, etc.

Buffalo CIO Hits Drive On Liberties

Buffalo, N. Y., July 3.—Copies of a resolution passed by the Erie County CIO Industrial Council denouncing "all attempts to arouse mass hysteria, wipe out civil liberties and get the United States into war" were sent to 30 CIO unions in this area.

The Council also went on record in support of the anti-war declaration of CIO President John L. Lewis, and declared that the principal problem facing American workers was jobs for 11,000,000 unemployed.

Secretary Alfred Larke was elected as a delegate to the American Youth Congress meeting in Geneva, Wis., July 3-7.

Remove Trojan Horses In High Places, Is Plea

NEW YORK, July 3.—"Men in high places must not be permitted, while secretly sharing fascism's hatred for labor and for liberties and rights of the people, to hide behind the 'Trojan Horse' of super-respectability and super-patriotism," Local 30 of United Office & Professional Workers declared in a letter to Pres. Roosevelt today.

At the same time the local, consisting of industrial insurance agents, pledged the eagerness of its members to "make their contributions, even if it be with their lives if necessary, to the defense of American democracy and to the protection of our free institutions."

The letter called to the President's attention the "blitzkrieg invasions" and "aggressions" against the rights of employes by officials of the five-billion dollar Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., whose trial on charges of firing 46 employes for union activity, fostering a company union and discriminating against union members is now being conducted by the New York State Labor Relations Board.

Confer on Aluminum Co. Dispute

Workers Want Pay Increase

(See Story Page Six)

Pittsburgh, July 12.—Negotiators for the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, were meeting here with the management of the Aluminum Company to seek a 10c hourly wage increase or declare a strike at the powerful corporation's huge New Kensington, Pa., plant.

Pointing to the fact that the company's profits rose by 44% to $36,000,000 last year—and that prospects indicate a continued increase—, the union negotiators complain that the workers have had no increase in wages for three years.

Representatives of both sides were in Washington during the mid-week to confer with Sidney Hillman and Edward Stettinius, members of the National Defense Advisory Commission. After a series of meetings in the Capital, during which the union and company officials held no joint conferences, the parleys resumed in Pittsburgh.

Guild Elects Sullivan As President

Memphis, Tenn., July 12.—Donal M. Sullivan of Boston was elected International President of the American Newspaper Guild on the closing day of the convention here. He received 78 2-3 votes to 66 1-3 cast for Kenneth Crawford of Washington, retiring president.

Sullivan, a reporter for the Boston Globe, has been a member of the ANG executive board for two years.

Milton Kaufman of New York was re-elected executive vice president over Max Ways of Philadelphia,, by an 85¼ — 43-4/5 margin. Sec.-Treas. Victor Pasche was also re-elected by the same vote over I. L. Kenen of Cleveland.

Previously Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director, brought greetings to the convention from Pres. Lewis and the CIO. He praised the Guild's hardiness and commented that it had been "baptized in all that it takes to make a real labor movement.

"You have commanded the respect of the coal miners, the auto workers, the steel workers and all the other unions of the CIO," he said.

Settle Strike at Mill In South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 13.—Terms of an agreement settling a strike at the Olympia plant of the Pacific textile mills have been accepted by the workers, according to a statement issued by Local 254, Textile Workers Union of America.

The walk-out took place the latter part of last month when fly frame operators struck in protest at the delay in reaching an agreement over the overloading of work assignments.

Under the terms of the settlement no changes will be made in present work loads except by mutual agreement between the union and the company. Departmental seniority is to prevail in cases of lay-offs, demotions and promotions.

The settlement was reached following a conference between representatives of the union and the company attended by two U. S. Department of Labor conciliators and the State Labor Commissioner.

Paul R. Christopher, TWUA state director; H. D. Lisk and Walter M. Pearson, represented the union.

CIO Wins

Albert Lea, Minn., July 13.—Packinghouse workers at the Wilson plant chose the CIO by 407 to 237 for an "independent" in a Labor Board election here. The vote went to the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee after a tough campaign of company protests, evasions and use of company agents among the men.

PLANT STILL SHUT

Stirling, N. J.—(FP)—Despite an 8-1 victory for Local 727, United Automobile Workers, CIO, in a recent NLRB election, the U. S. Hammered Piston Ring Co. is continuing its refusal to bargain in good faith, the union charges. The UAW won the election by a vote of 286 to 36.

CIO Asphalt Workers Get Contract

Natural Rock, Ky., July 13—A sole bargaining contract with the Kentucky Black Rock Asphalt Company has been signed by the CIO United Asphalt Workers Local Industrial Union here. Terms include seniority rights, closed shop, check off, reduction in weekly hours of work from 48 to 40 and an average pay increase of 20%.

The union reports that the company is expanding and that it expects soon to have some 200 men at the plant.

Furniture Union Wins Chicago Elections

CHICAGO, July 13.—The CIO United Furniture Workers today rolled up clear-cut majorities at polls held in three Chicago furniture establishments and led both the AFL and no union in three others.

The shops where the UFWA will be immediately certified as sole bargaining agent are:

1. S. Karpen Bros. (woodworking department), where the CIO union polled 150 votes to 14 for the AFL and 10 for neither.
2. American Furniture Novelty Co., 104 for UFWA, 10 for the AFL.
3. Intl. Furniture Co., 19 for UFWA, 14 for the AFL, 3 for no union.

At the Fenske Bros., Butler Specialty, and Emil J. Paider Co., as well as in the bus seat upholstering department at Karpen, the furniture workers polled sizable votes, though not a majority over the AFL and no union. New elections will be held by the Labor Board in those shops.

The elections were necessitated by the recent exodus of a local union of the AFL upholsterers' union en masse to the CIO affiliate. There are about 1,000 members in the local, and the AFL challenged UFWA's right to bargain for those workers who changed their affiliation.

Campaign To Start At Once

(See Story Page Three)

Chicago, July 13. — Plans for a nationwide campaign to bring industrial unionism into the country's busy airplane manufacturing factories were announced here by leaders of the CIO and the United Automobile Workers of America.

A joint statement issued by CIO Organizational Director Allan S. Haywood and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, announced the drive would get under way immediately. The statement was issued after conferences with Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO.

Walter Smethurst, assistant director of organization, left for a swing around the country's airplane centers shortly after his appointment as director of the drive was made known.

A few airplane manufacturers are already under contract with the auto union, while organizing efforts have been in progress for some time at a number of others.

Haywood and Thomas pointed out that the organizing drive would have a beneficial effect upon U. S. national defense plans.

Retail Union Appoints Mrs. Gompers

New York, July 13 — Long rebuffed by leaders of the AFL, Mrs. Samuel Gompers, widow of the federation's founder, has been appointed an organizer for the Five & Ten Cent Store Committee of the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

Mrs. Gompers received considerable public attention when the CIO Executive Board, at its last meeting, donated $500 to help the widow of the distinguished labor leader ward off starvation.

At that time it was revealed that her efforts to secure work with the American Federation of Labor had been turned down over a five-year period by the same leaders who used to court her favor when Compers was alive.

Glass Union Ranks Firm, Plans Big Organizing Drive

By WALTER F. PETERS

TOLEDO, July 13.—Greeted with a standing ovation and loud prolonged applause, CIO Vice-Pres. Philip Murray, last week urged delegates to the fourth convention of the Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers of America not to permit the present war hysteria to distract their attention from greater domestic problems facing American labor.

"I do know that American labor is definitely opposed to intervention in that European conflict," the CIO leader said after informing the delegates that he would propose to the Democratic party convention that it go on record against intervention.

"Our mind should be largely centered on domestic problems in our country," Murray declared.

"What are we going to do about the unemployment problem?" he asked. "In the midst of this hysterical situation are we going to forget our obligations to America by ceasing to forget about unemployment?

"Some day there will have to be a meeting of minds to settle that problem for once and for all."

John Brophy, CIO director of local industrial unions, was another speaker at the convention. He called for protection of labor's rights as an essential to effective national defense.

NEW CONSTITUTION

Adoption of a streamlined and more democratic constitution and reports of national officers kept convention delegates busy since last Monday.

President Irwin DeShetler earlier in the week reviewed the growth of the union, saying that more than 22,000 workers in the flat glass and allied industries are now enrolled in the ranks of the Federation. DeShetler highly praised the efforts of his fellow national officers and reported that never in the history of the union has there been such cooperation as now exists among national officers.

Peter Vidmar, secretary-treasurer, also reported great progress in that the union now has a stabilized membership enjoying the benefits of an industry-wide union agreement with the flat glass companies of the nation.

Pointing to the union's great success in the flat glass industry, President DeShetler explained that since the union has widened its jurisdictional scope the name of the organization was changed from the Federation of Flat Glass Workers to its present name of Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers of America.

The union will now center its organizational activities in the silica sand and mirror industries, he said.

BACK DEFENSE PLANS

Resolutions adopted earlier in the week included endorsement of the President's national defense program, at the same time demanding that the defense program must not be used as a weapon against civil and labor rights.

The convention, attended by 53 delegates from Ohio, Illinois, Oklahoma, Missouri, Pennsylvania and Buffalo, N. Y., was marked with unusual unanimity of feeling, a sharp contrast to the 1937 convention when the selfish personal ambitions of a factional president threatened the union with complete destruction.

Adoption of the new constitution and by-laws will be followed by a referendum vote of the members. The Federation also elects national officers by referendum vote.

Two Councils Meet Later in July

Washington, July 13 — Two important CIO councils are holding conventions later this month. The West Virginia Council which meets July 21 at Morgantown, will have Allan Haywood, CIO National Director, as the featured speaker.

On July 24, CIO unions in New York City will hold a convention to set up a City Council for affiliated unions in the Greater New York area. Director Haywood is also scheduled to address this meeting.

Guild Convention OKs Plan For Hearst Contract

By JOHN DUNN

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 12. — Unanimous approval of a "peace formula" which would establish a modified Guild shop with 14 Hearst newspapers was a highlight of the seventh annual convention of the American Newspaper Guild in progress here last week.

Almost 200 delegates and alternates attended the convention, presided over by Pres. Kenneth G. Crawford. A report from the administrative officers, Executive Vice-President Milton Kaufman and Secretary-Treasurer Victor Pasche, made organizing the keynote. The problem of organizing occupied the attention of practically all committees, which worked far into the night on their tasks.

The Hearst formula, which is yet to be acted on by the Hearst units of the Guild, received the convention's praise when it approved a report of the Chain Papers Committee which lauded the formula and said it might pave the way to chain-wide negotiations with Scripps-Howard and other combines. At the same time the Hearst Chain Advisory Council also approved the formula and recommended it to the units for speedy approval.

VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

The convention was the scene of a vigorous campaign for the administrative offices and 11 other places on the International Executive Board.

Another highlight of the convention was a telegram from John L. Lewis, President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in which he declared that unity of the CIO was a bulwark for democracy against the forces threatening it.

The chief speeches of the convention came from Allan S. Haywood, National CIO Director, and Claude M. Baker, President of the Intl. Typographical Union (unaffiliated).

Baker told the Guild delegates that he believed the Guild, as it grows old and stronger, would serve as a real force for integrity and honesty in the news. Baker also declared that his union and the Guild had always settled any differences in amicable fashion an dbelieved they would continue to do so.

Auto Union Meeting To Hear of Progress

DETROIT, July 13. — In a pre-convention report to the membership of the CIO United Automobile Workers, George F. Addes, international secretary-treasurer, reviewed the activities and progress made by the union during the first half of the year.

The union's annual convention opens July 29 in St. Louis, Mo. Headquarters will be at the Hotel Jefferson.

"The union is stronger in every way," Addes said in his report, "in membership, financial position, new and better contracts, labor board elections, legal advances, relations with the rest of the labor movement and in its standing in public opinion."

WANT NO WAR

On the subject of national defense, Addes said that "the union firmly holds to the position laid down by the CIO that our country must not be involved in foreign wars and that labor and social legislation must not be weakened under pretense of a national emergency."

As the defense program devolpes he declared, "the aircraft workers will feel the need of organization with increasing urgency, and the union's careful preliminary work will reap its reward.

About 600 delegates representing a paid-up membership of well over 300,000 will attend the convention.

Homer Martin Gets A Job— From Ford

Detroit, July 13 — Homer Martin, ousted from the labor movement by the auto workers whom he tried to betray to the Ford Motor Co., has received his reward from Harry Bennett, chief Ford strong arm man.

Bennett has set up Martin and John Gillespie, another Ford agent, as "manufacturers' agents" operating as the Industrial Mercantile Co.

At Bennett's direction, several parts plants and jobbers which supply Ford must deal with the motor company only through Martin and Gillespie, thus assuring the pair a substantial income which will cost the Ford Motor Co. nothing. Bennett has arranged a number of such easy-money jobs for persons who have served Ford in one way or another.

Although in his new job only a few days, Homer told a local newspaper that "business is good" and that he's enjoying it "immensely."

Flouts Labor Act, Must Pay $40,000

Trona, Calif., July 13. — It's going to cost the American Potash and Chemical Corp. here between $25,000 and $40,000 to find out that it can't buck the Wagner Act.

The painful lesson was applied by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in an order holding the corporation in contempt of court for attempting to settle "privately" with discharged CIO workers after the Labor Board had ordered them reinstated with back pay.

Form New CIO Council In British Columbia

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 13.—A British Columbia Industrial Union Council was formed here last week when 16 CIO unions in the province met to discuss unified action in industry.

The new central labor body was greeted by Adolph Germer, CIO representative, and Mayor Telford of Vancouver.

The new body was formed as a result of the splitting tactics of the AFL top officialdom. The group decided to apply for a charter from the CIO.

Nigel Morgan, Canadian representative of the Intl. Woodworkers of America, heads the council and James Robertson of the Cumberland local of the United Mine Workers was elected vice-president, James Thompson, secretary of the Inland Boatman's Union was elected secretary.

CITE OBJECTIVES

Objectives of the council were listed as follows: "To extend and establish a united labor movement throughout the province: to coordinate the activities of and assist all affiliates in gaining recognition of and enforcing collective bargaining; to gain the support and united organization of farm labor through education and cooperative effort; and to work for legislative reforms and legislative acts in the interests of labor and social advancement and security for all people."

THE WINNING TEAM: Local 415, United Photographic Employes, CIO, gets the softball trophy at the second labor sports day at New York World's Fair, sponsored by the Trade Union Athletic League.

CIO Booms In Connecticut

New Haven, Conn, July 13.— Nine new CIO locals were chartered in Connecticut during the past six weeks, and this small state is experiencing its greatest upswing of organizational activity of the past two years.

The new locals include the Wallace Barnes Company employes of Bristol, chartered by the United Automobile Workers: the Ingraham Clock Company workers of Bristol, now rapidly joining the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, and workers of the Bristol Brass Company, who recently demonstrated their preference for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union by a six to one vote.

New Haven is vying with Bristol for first place in the number of new CIO unions. A new chapter of the American Newspaper Guild has been formed there, boasting 75 per cent membership of the total employes of New Haven's two major newspapers, the Register and Journal-Courier.

WATER WORKERS ORGANIZE

New Haven Water Company workers have organized in District 50 of the United Mine Workers and are negotiating for a contract.

143 New York AFL Locals Rally To Wagner Act

WASHINGTON, July 13.—AFL workers, liberal organizations, religious groups and employers are adding their voices to the protest against the Smith ripper amendments to the Wagner Act passed by the lower House of Congress and before the Senate, while CIO demands that the Act be left alone to pour in on the Senators and particularly on the Senate Labor Committee.

This week's score is led off by 143 officials of AFL unions in the New York city area who petitioned Senator Robert F. Wagner, father of the Act, to vote against all proposed amendments. The petition declared:

"The undersigned officers of American Federation of Labor affiliated locals realize that our membership has achieved great benefits as a result of the Natl. Labor Relations Act. We believe that any amendments to the Ntl. Labor Relations Act at this time will be disadvantageous to labor and work to the detriment of our affiliated memberships."

With the petition went a letter from Harry Reich, president of Local 89 of the Chefs, Cooks, Pastry Cooks and Assistants Union, which said that the 143 AFL signers "represent the spirit of the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor in New York affirming that amendments to the Act will work to the detriment of the trade unions.

"The officers who have signed this petition," Reich added, "and the thousands of members they represent hope that you will resist any move in the Senate to amend the Magna Charta of labor which you fathered in 1935."

Signers included leaders of AFL unions in the building and electrical trades, in the hotel and restaurant and related food industries, teamsters, carpenters, steamfitters, etc.

EMPLOYERS TOO

From Garfield, N. J., A. Levine, president of the Presto Lock Corp., whose plant is 100 per cent organized by the CIO Electrical and Radio Workers, wrote to Senators Barbour and Smathers of N. J., asking them to vote down the Smith bill. Levine's letter said, after citing the good relations he enjoys with the CIO:

"If our groups of employes were to be split up into several unions, we would have to deal with each union individually, and if each union were to have the power to call a strike regardless of how the other groups feel, not only would the operations be

Sign Pact With Siam!

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13 Even in far off Siam they know about the CIO and feel its influence.

The Thailand (Siam) Government Steamship Co. has just signed a five-year contract covering radio operators on two ships bought from the Pacific Literage Corp. here. The contract was signed with the American Communications Assn., and will give operators an increase of $25 a month in base pay, plus about $35 for overtime.

Marine Cooks Get Raise, Avert Coast Strike

SAN FRANCISCO, July 13.—Ten months' steady negotiating, climaxed by a unanimous strike vote, brought a 10 per cent wage boost and other gains to 5,000 members of the Marine Cooks and Stewards, CIO, operating from ports on the west coast. The contract renewal came only a few hours before the strike deadline set by the workers and postponed at the urgent request of U. S. Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Other gains include a reduction in the workday from nine to eight hours for certain categories of stewards and time off on weekends when ships are in U. S. ports. The settlement was ratified by the union two and a half hours before the strike deadline was due, at a two A. M. meeting.

HAD STRONG SUPPORT

The strike vote was backed up by the Maritime Federation of the Pacific in an overwhelming vote of solidarity with the Cooks and Stewards. The Maritime Federation, which has more than 40,000 members, could have tied up all west coast shipping through action on their vote of support.

The proposed settlement was presented to union members by Harry Bridges, CIO regional director for California, who was asked to help settle the deadlick by the U. S. Government. A formal contract is expected within a few days.

U. S. Court OKs $250,000 In Back Pay

Chicago, July 13 — The U. S. circuit court of appeals has upheld a decision issued by the National Labor Relations Board ordering the Stewart Die Casting Company to reinstate 190 workers with some $250,000 back pay.

The workers who are members of Local 298, United Automobile Workers, were fired for taking part in a strike in March 1937.

The Court ordered that an NLRB election to determine the union representative desired by the employes be held immediately.

Many Gains In New Dallas Mill Contract

Huntsville, Ala., July 13—A new contract with the Dallas Manufacturing Company here containing a number of improvements over last year's agreement has been signed by the CIO Textile Workers Union of America. Members of the Dallas local ratified the pact by a four to one vote at a special meeting.

Speakers at the meeting stressed the need of building up the union's strength so that further advances might be made in the future, and a better contract won when the present one expires.

H. S. Williams, TWUA director in Alabama; E. C. Earnhardt and R. H. Brazzell represented the union during the negotiations, and George Elliott, president of the Dallas mill and the company attorney represented the management.

Utica Steel Lodge Shows Quick Rise

Utica, N. Y., July 13 — Some time ago the Steel Workers Organizing Committee started out at the Hart and Crouse Co. here with four members, facing an "independent" union that seemed to have a stranglehold on the plant.

Today the SWOC has a 100 per cent union and a contract giving scale recognition, an eight hour day and a 40 hour week, seniority, and grievance adjustment machinery.

The company also agreed to furnish an office for dues collecting purposes. Rinaldo Cappellini, CIO field representative, led in the negotiations.

Seek Poll Tax Plank In Platform

Washington, July 13 — Framers of the Democratic Party platform at the Chicago convention will be asked to put in an anti-poll tax plank pledging support of efforts to abolish the tax on voters in eight Southern states, according to an announcement by Rep. Lee Geyer of California, author of an anti-poll tax bill and Joseph Gelders, secretary of the Civil Rights Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

The proposed plank reads: "We believe that the requirement of the payment of taxes as a prerequisite to the right to vote is contrary to the basic principles of the Democratic Party and that it creates a barrier to the establishment of a democracy of opportunity to which our party is pledged. We now pledge our support to the efforts to abolish this requirement."

Palookas Use Bazookas, Fail to Halt Unionism

FOND DU LAC, Wisc., July 13.—Don't speak to Vice-Pres. F. E. Reuping of the Fred Reuping Leather Co. about bazookas.

For Mr. Reuping's experiments to launch a new type of labor relations policy based on the humble bazooka (which is described as a type of whistling instrument) have ended in failure.

The National Labor Relations Board, unimpressed with the firm's arguments, ordered dissolution of a company union, reinstatement of 48 members of the CIO Textile Workers Union and the payment of $13,500 in back wages.

Reuping's novel twist to the art of combatting unionism consisted of an order to his foremen and company union stooges to play their bazookas whenever TWUA organizers tried to address his employes.

AIRCRAFT: Plans for a big-scale campaign to organize the nation's aircraft industry were announced in Chicago by Allan S. Haywood, (left), CIO director of organization, and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, after conferences with Pres. Lewis. Named director of the drive is Walter Smethurst (below), CIO asst. director of organization.

Launch Drive In Aircraft

CHICAGO, July 13.—CIO leaders today announced an immediate campaign to organize the nation's booming airplane industry.

The plans were made known in a joint statement issued by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, who was in the Windy City for a meeting of his executive board, and Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization. Announcement followed a conference with Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO.

Walter Smethurst, CIO assistant director of organization, was named to direct the campaign, which aims to make the nation's fastest growing industry 100% union.

PLANS TOUR

Smethurst is to make "an immediate and complete" tour of all aircraft manufacturing centers.

"After Smethurst's tour, as many organizers as are required will be placed in the field," the joint statement said.

The campaign to unionize and to insure stable labor relations in the aircraft plants of the country will be carried out with complete realization of the needs of our national defense program and in complete cooperation with that program.

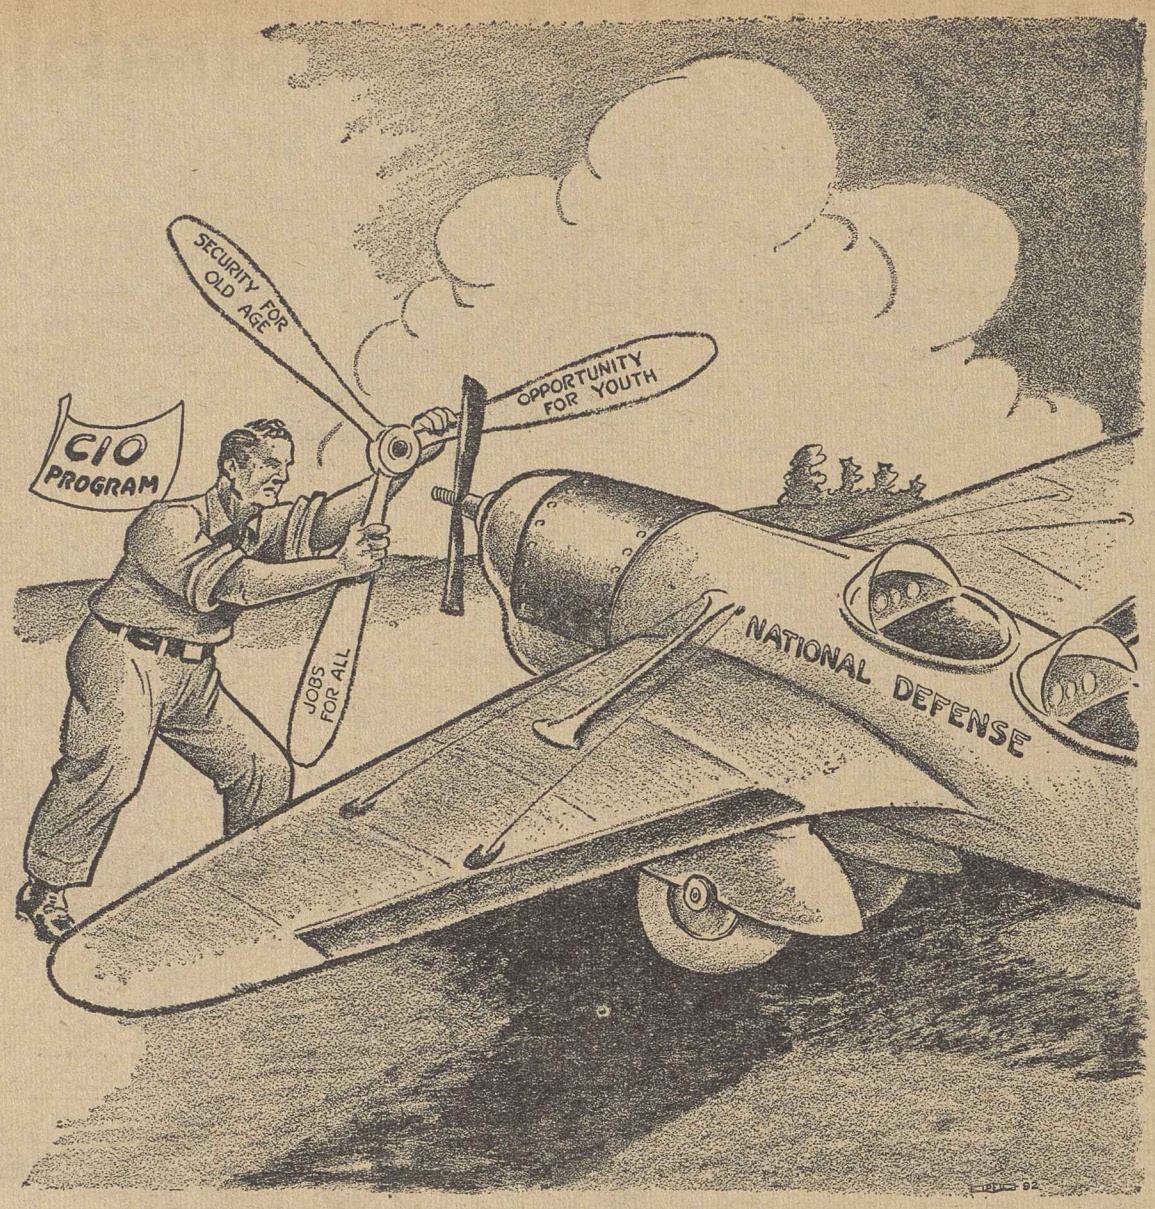
"We believe that the speedy and efficient completion of the defense program can and must go hand in hand with stable and equitable relations.

"Unionization of the aircraft industry and the establishment of fair standards for labor will make strikes unnecessary and will remove all possible barriers that may arise in the form of labor problems.

"The campaign also will endeavor to assist in procuring skilled and other workers needed to speed the defense program. Both of us are members of the Labor Advisory Council of the National Defense Advisory Commission," Haywood and Thomas concluded.

HAVE CONTRACTS

At present the United Automobile Workers has contracts with such leading aircraft firms as Bell, Lycoming, Brewster and the Packard Motor Co. Work is "under way and will be pressed" in the North American, Interstate, Vultee, Vega, Lockheed, Consolidated, Solar and North Island plants, as well as in all the rest of the country's airplane factories.



Smethurst, director of the new campaign, has spent most of his time in recent months counseling the Utility Workers Organizing Committee in their struggle for recognition at the Consumers Power Co. in Michigan.

Order Poll At Western Plane Plant

Washington, July 13 — Production and maintenance employes of Vultee Aircraft, Inc., Woney, California, will soon have a chance to vote on whether or not they want to be represented by Local 683. United Automobile Workers, CIO.

The NLRB has ordered a poll for a collective bargaining agency to be held on or before August 2, following a hearing at which it was brought out that the company had refused to recognize the UAW as sole union representative on the ground that it did not know whether the union represented a majority of its workers.

Both the union, the company and the Board agreed at the hearing that the appropriate unit for voting included all production and maintenance employes at the Downey plant excluding office workers, employes in the engineering department, pattern makers, welders, inspectors, supervisors and officials who have the right to hire and fire.

GIVING IT A REAL PROPELLOR

Real Security

More than a third of all Americans over 65 years of age have neither jobs nor pension provisions of any kind, according to a survey of the Public Affairs Committee. More than 2½ million of these are dependent on their children, relatives or friends, or are on relief.

Of the people over 60, more than 4½ million are unprovided for by pensions, jobs or working husbands.

There is every sort of restriction against obtaining pensions under the Security Act. The very people who need them most are often those who cannot qualify for old-age insurance, as for instance people who have had irregular work, or who have been disabled by sickness or accident before reaching the age of 65. And whole occupational groups, such as seamen, domestic and agricultural workers are excluded.

Even those needy aged who finally battle their way through the maze of red tape and restrictions receive only from $6 to at most $40 a month—and the average is far, far below that maximum.

Small wonder that John L. Lewis, speaking before the Townsend convention, declared that "the present system of old age pensions is totally inadequate and unjust."

Along the lines of the CIO program, he called for a federal uniform standard of adequate pensions for all aged people, to be financed through taxes on large incomes and accumulated wealth.

A real program of security, Lewis pointed out, "must rest upon the expansion of our economic system, and the distribution of adequate social security benefits will contribute to an expanding national income by increasing mass purchasing power and helping to correct the present maldistribution of income."

He also noted that an adequate pension system will free many older people from the necessity of competing with younger people in the hunt for jobs. "It will shorten the span of productive years which men and women must labor in, and thereby create greater opportunity for the constant millions of young men and women who come every year and demand jobs."

The hearty reception accorded to Lewis at the Townsend convention indicates that all who seek justice and real security for the old people recognize in the progressive labor movement a natural ally.

The political alliance which Labor's Non-Partisan League is working to cement between the organizations of youth, labor and the aged represents a power with which all office-seekers must reckon in the coming elections.

Along with the farm, Negro and liberal organizations with which it makes common cause, this alliance also represents the interests of the great majority of the American people.

"A country which treats its aged like refugees can never defend itself. A country which pushes its unemployed around like criminals can never defend itself. A country which denies jobs to its youth cannot be strong, no matter how many billions it finds for airplanes and tanks." — John L. Lewis.

The Reason

More than six million workers have been directly affected by the Wagner Act since it was upheld by the Supreme Court.

Over 1,150,000 workers have taken part in 3,157 Labor Board elections. The Board has helped avert 824 threatened strikes. It has saved the jobs of 290,810 workers by ordering them reinstated after unjust discharge. More than $550,000 in back pay was secured for such workers in two years of operation alone.

It is precisely because the Wagner Act has been so effective that anti-union employers want to amend and emasculate it.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

BRAGGED the flea on the elephant crossing the bridge: "Boy, oh boy, we sure shook that one!"

Which reminds us of the Chambers of Commerce and politicians that usually proclaim themselves the guardians of business prosperity and community welfare.

Actually it is the workers and their unions that do most to keep the wheels turning and the money circulating in sufficient volume. And the average Industrial Union Council is more concerned about community interests than the average city council.

But where labor is less alert than the business associations and politicians is in claiming the credit.

What One Union Did

In St. Louis, not so long ago, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers decided it might as well let the world know in a pamphlet what it had been doing for the general welfare of the city.

The title tells much of the story: "How a Union Saved 1,500 Jobs, a $2,000,000 Payroll and the Business They Create for St. Louis."

It is the tale of the union's long, vigorous and successful campaign to keep the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. from moving away—in which the union "put its shoulder to the business wheel and became the civic arm of St. Louis", when the municipality and Chamber of Commerce offered nothing.

The company, on friendly terms with the union, benefited; and so did the workers and the whole community. And for once, a CIO union got pretty fair credit for its constructive work.

Another recent CIO union pamphlet that calls for attention is "Fur Floor Boys Organize", put out by the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union. In lively style it tells about a large group of badly exploited young American workers whose wages were doubled and whose outlook on life was changed by union organization.

The Gimme Boys

Remember the impoverished English lord who married an American heiress and then invited her father over with the cable: "Come across as soon as possible."

"I didn't know he knew American slang," grumbled the father as he cabled back: "How much?"

The American "gimme boys", however, don't leave any doubt as to what they mean. They are always asking labor to "come across" — and they don't mean trans-Atlantic trips either.

Speaking to 100 industrialists at Akron, A. C. Blinn, president of the Ohio Edison Co., said: "Labor must understand that it too must make a sacrifice. Some of these crazy laws can't be lived up to."

Claiming there is a shortage of skilled labor, Blinn called for longer working hours and added: "This idea of holding on to everything that has been gained socially has to be abandoned."

This kind of talk is typical of America's "gimme boys". Never backward in coming forward at the best of times, they see in the present national emergency an opportunity to lengthen working hours, keep down wages, amend the Wagner act, cut down on social security, relief and social legislation — and generally to squeeze the last drop of profits out of their employes.

American workers need union protection against this type of profiteering. That's why CIO union ranks are swelling these days.

Two-Legged Mule

A farmer at Dresden, Tenn., announces the birth of a two-legged mule. People are paying ten cents to see it.

So what! We know plenty of two-legged jackasses we can see for nothing. One or two of them even got elected to Congress.

But, seriously speaking, this is a significant event. In a dignified way the animal world is striking back at the calumny that has been unjustly heaped upon it.

Nature did not make a mistake in this case. It probably deliberately planned this two-legged mule, so that we might compare its career with those of the human beings whom we are prone to call two-legged jackasses.

In so doing, we shall probably come to understand why in the mule world it is customary to call a particularly stupid jackass "a four-legged human."

Every kind of offer will doubtless be made to this two-legged mule. Company unions will see in him a likely recruit. He will be expected to scab—to send wires calling for amendment of the Wagner act—to call every union man a Trojan horse.

Who knows, he may even get an offer to substitute for Clare Hoffman or Gerald L. K. Smith in a radio broadcast against the CIO.

But it can be confidently predicted that his only comment on all such offers will be a derisive "Hee-haw."

Longer Work Week Not 'Desirable'

Wage-Hour Chief Cites Experience During Last War

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Relaxation of workers' wage and hour standards for national defense purposes is neither "necessary" nor "desirable"—

That was the statement made last night by Wage-Hour Administrator Philip Fleming in a nationwide radio speech, and he quoted from official army orders during the last war to prove his point.

The Administrator urged retention of the Wage-Hour Act on the basis that "certainly no sane man defends his most priceless possessions by throwing them away as he gets ready to fight for them." It will be time to talk about lengthening hours of work only when industry has absorbed the eight to ten million workers now jobless in this country, he continued.

ARMY KNOWS IT

Scoffing at amateur "arm-chair generals" who advise the nation to relax provisions of the Wage-Hour Law, Fleming read from an order issued by the Chief of Ordnance and the Quartermaster General of the U. S. Army in November, 1917. It said:

"Industrial history proves that reasonable hours, fair working conditions and a proper wage scale are essential to high production.

"The pressing argument for maintaining industrial safeguards in the present emergency is that they actually contribute to efficiency. To waive them would be a short-sighted policy, leading gradually but inevitably toward lowered production.

"It might be expected that an individual working 10 hours a day, instead of eight, would turn out more goods. He can, for the first few days. But experience shows us that in a few weeks, or a few months, the output will be the same, or even less, than it was during the shorter day."

Fleming was asked if the Army meant by that statement that shorter hours bring higher production.

"Exactly," he replied. "The Army, which was as desperately in need of supplies then as it is today, realized that American labor standards were not standards of peace and leisure. They were the standards of efficiency. This was borne out in the last war, not only in this country but also in Great Britain."

LABOR NOT TO BLAME

The Wage-Hour Administrator, himself an army colonel, was caustic in his reference to those who have expressed belief that France's downfall was a direct result of its 40-hour week labor policy.

"It strikes me as rather significant," Fleming declared, "that most of the hue and cry about the need for lengthening the work-week comes from these arm-chair generals and not from actual employers in the primary defense industries."

From the time of Munich, he pointed out, the French 40-hour week had been in total discard, and even before that time it was in the process of being abandoned. Newspaper stories to the contrary notwithstanding, German industry was on a 48-hour week from 1934 to 1939. Thus for nine months prior to the war, French workers were employed for a longer work week than their brothers in Germany.

LONGER HOURS FAILED

Efforts by the Nazi government to extend the work week to 60 hours, Fleming explained, resulted only in a situation where "production began to fall off rapidly, accompanied by such an alarming increase of industrial accidents and stoppages as to attract the serious attention of governmental authorities."

During the last war, Great Britain found exactly the same results when it attempted to increase the hours at various munitions plants. An investigation subsequently showed that "the long hours imposed too severe a strain on the workers; that the rate of production decreased; that the extra hours produced proportionately little or no additional output; and that the quality of the output suffered."

In one British ordnance factory, statistics proved that production on a 45½-hour week was more than for a 66-hour week, and only 1% less than for a 55-hour week, Fleming said.

Board Meets

New York, July 13.—Michael J. Quill, president of the CIO Transport Workers Union, announced that the union's international executive board is meeting today and tomorrow at the Hotel President in Atlantic city.

Pamphlet Hits Plan to 'Exile' Harry Bridges

Washington, July 13.—Describing the bill to deport Harry Bridges, CIO California leader as "an exile bill" and a new "blow at labor," the Bridges Defense Committee today released a new pamphlet analyzing the bill and urging concerted labor and liberal action to block it in the Senate.

The bill is more than "simply an attempt to deport 'the alien, Harry Renton Bridges,'" the pamphlet declares, and the fact "that Bridges happened to be born in Australia" is not the real issue at stake in House passage of the deportation measure.

"The real issue is the fundamental right of people in America to organize, as guaranteed by the law of the land, for the betterment of their living and working conditions. The instigators of this bill do not agree that Americans should have this right. They do not want to see American workers organized free, democratic, effective trade unions," the pamphlet declares.

Copies of the pamphlet, "The Bridges Exile Bill, a Blow at Labor," can be obtained from the Bridges Defense Committee, 320 Market St., San Francisco, and the Washington Bureau, 1319 F St. NW, Washington, D. C. Price, 2 cents each, quantity prices on application.

SCAB PLAN FLOPS

Indianapolis, July 13.—Thirty-five foremen and others who tried to lead a back-to-work movement at the SWOC struck plant of the J. D. Adams Co. here were glad enough to crawl home after a one day attempt when 1,000 pickets appeared at plant gates at quitting time. They were allowed to go when they promised not to try it for at least another 12 days.

hampered, but we would have to contend with the inconvenience of negotiating with many individual groups.

"I might further state that such conditions would not only be against the interests of the employers, but would be detrimental to the workers as well, especially now that the industries of the U. S. are about to engage in the work of rearmament where unity and cooperation are vital for the safety of the nation."

CATHOLIC UNIONISTS

The New York branch of the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists added its protest in a letter to the two N. Y. Senators, citing a full membership meeting which went on record as "unalterably opposed to any changes in the Act." The ACTU, whose members come from CIO and AFL unions, went on to say:

"It is contradictory to say that such action is necessary for national defense. The first line of defense is a satisfied, democratic nation. American workmen, who make up the bulk of the nation, will not be satisfied unless the rights guaranteed them under the NLRA in its present form are maintained."

In Detroit the Civil Rights News, organ of the Michigan Civil Rights Federation, carried a story on current attacks on democracy, listing as first and most important attempts to emasculate the Wagner Act and calling for their defeat.

STAINLESS STEEL...
the Ageless Metal

• Thousands of products which contribute to American standards of living are better because they are made of stainless steel.

This ageless metal combines beauty, strength, and durability. Its brilliant lustrous finish will not rust, tarnish nor stain. It is unaffected by weather and many corrosive chemicals. It requires no lacquers or other surface treatments to preserve its distinctive gleam. Its unique combination of strength and durability makes possible lightweight, economical construction.

The valuable properties of this metal are becoming increasingly useful in the food, automotive, railroad, aircraft, architectural, and numerous other fields.

Aluminum Union, Company Confer; Strike Threatens

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 12.—Officials of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, conferred here again this week with the management of the Aluminum Company of America in another attempt to avert a strike for a pay increase involving some 15,000 employes in five plants.

Earlier in the week, President N. A. Zonarich and other officials of the union met in Washington with members of the National Defense Advisory Commission to discuss the dispute. The AWA is asking a general wage raise of ten cents an hour, pointing out that although the company's profits have greatly increased, the workers have had no general pay increase for three years.

CAME TO WASHINGTON

Both union and company officials talked with members of the Defense Commission at the Washington meetings, but did not confer together. No agreement was reached, and negotiations were transferred to Pittsburgh, scheduled to open July 11.

Reports were current in Washington that the company was asking the government to call off its 3-year-old anti-trust suit against Alcoa in return for a settlement of the wage dispute, but officials of the Department of Justice were said to have denied any knowledge of such a proposal.

TOOK STRIKE VOTE

Members of the union's big Local 2 in New Kensington, Pa., voted overwhelmingly on June 28 to strike. Out of 4,262 ballots cast, 3,762 were in favor of striking for a wage increase. The day following employes of the company's plant at Edgewater, N. J., also voted in favor of striking. The unions three locals at Detroit, Mich., Alcoa, Tenn., and Baden, N. C., deferred taking a strike vote at the request of the national executive board, pending further attempts at negotiating a settlement.

The AWA has been negotiating for a pay increase since September, 1939, but the company has steadily refused to consider the demands, although no general wage raise has been granted since 1937.

Profits of the company were 44 per cent higher in 1939 than in 1929, rising from some $25,000,000 to $36,000,000 in the ten-year period, a statement issued by the AWA executive board declared.

HEYWOOD BROUN

NEW YORK, July 13—The Heywood Broun book, prepared and published by the American Newspaper Guild he founded and led, is off the press. It is a short book, assembled from tributes of 21 Guildsmen, labor leaders, actors, editors, a priest, a lawyer, a waiter and a cab driver who knew Broun and loved him. The tributes were paid at the Broun memorial held in New York shortly after his death.

John L. Lewis, who knew Broun before he became a labor man and regarded him highly as the leader of the Guild and as an early member of the Committee for Industrial Organization, was at the meeting. This is what Lewis said, in part:

"Perhaps I can solace my own spirit in the thought that he was a weary, weary man, because, my friends, no one man, no one spirit, no matter how valiant or how great, can for a long time try to move the great mountains of indifference, self-complacency or self-satisfaction."

A UNION MAN

Throughout the book made from it runs the picture of Broun as a liberal, as a leader who wanted to help his fellow workers, as a union man. The book quotes from his famous column of 1933, when Broun wrote that he was going to start a union of newspaper people:

"But the fact that newspaper editors and owners are genial folk should hardly stand in the way of the organization of a newspaper writers' union. There should be one. Beginning at nine o'clock on the morning of October 1, I am going to do the best I can to help in getting one up."

How good "the best I can" became is seen in Broun's monument, the Newspaper Guild, which goes this week to its seventh annual convention at Memphis, an industrial union with 17,210 active members, 122 contracts, bargaining relations with the biggest chain papers, a surplus in the union treasury, and a record of never having lost a strike.

Ford's Press Agents Don't Fool 'Workers Over 40'

DETROIT, July 13.—Henry Ford's press agents can write a convincing story—but not convincing enough to fool their own boss.

The press department turns out hundreds and thousands of words quoting the elder statesman of the Ford Empire as being a strong believer in employment for men over 40. Their stories may kid some of the public into believing that Henry is an enlightened industrialist.

But Ford himself—and thousands of former employes—know better.

"Men do not come into full usefulness until they are 40," Ford tells the nation's newspapers and magazines.

Meanwhile his foremen and plant executives fire thousands when they turn the corner of 40.

Delving into some statistics, the CIO United Automobile Workers looked into the case records of 587 workers recently dismissed by the open shop motor manufacturer.

Of that group, 45 per cent had been fired between the ages of 45 and 50. Another 31 per cent had been fired between the ages of 51 and 60.

Hit Sheppard Bill As New Menace To Labor Unions

WASHINGTON, July 13.—CIO criticism of the bill to set up a "National Industrial Defense Corps" offered by Senator Sheppard of Texas was expressed in testimony given by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, at hearings before the Senate Military Affairs Committee here.

According to the CIO analysis, the bill would give employers authority to set up squads of picked employes who would be armed by the Federal government, with the job of watching for "unlawful activities" not only in industrial plants but in the entire community as well. These squads would be responsible to nobody for whatever they might do, except through general supervision by the commander of the U. S. Army Corps in the area.

'IRRESPONSIBLE POWER'

"The bill thus confers upon employers the authority to establish groups of armed men who are given completely irresponsible power to use force and violence against anyone whom they consider to be engaged in subversive, treacherous or unlawful activities," the CIO statement said.

"It seems incredible that such a plan could be conceived, yet a specific analysis of the bill's provisions shows that it proposes an outrageous delegation of irresponsible power to private interests to commit acts of force and violence against anyone in the community whom they do not like."

CIO OBJECTIONS

CIO objections to the bill centered on the grant of blanket powers to employers to build up an irresponsible armed vigilante force with full sanction of Federal law, and to use this force to supersede all other law enforcement agencies not only in their plants but in the communities where industrial plants are situated.

"This bill places the country under martial law," the CIO statement concluded. "It is thoroughly and completely un-American. It cannot be amended or revamped. It deserves utter and complete obloquy."

Cab Drivers In W. Va. Win 20% Boost

Huntington, W. Va., July 13.—Pay increases of 20 per cent and a bonus of $2.50 per week when drivers book $60 or more in any week are included in a one-year contract just signed between the Yellow Cab Company and the CIO Transport Workers Union.

The contract provides for a wage of $3 per day exclusive of tips, reduces the work week from seven to six days, guarantees seniority ratings and the closed union shop.

The contract to run until June 1, 1941, was signed for the company by its president, Anthony Perry and for the taxi drivers by Douglas L. MacMahon, international vice-president of the Transport Workers Union of America.

The TWU also has a closed shop agreement with the Ohio Valley Bus Company here, making it dominant in the Huntington public transportation industry.

Steel Union Going to Town Around Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 13.—Three new contracts, a number of renewals and eight new lodges chartered in recent weeks were reported today by William F. Donovan, director for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Cleveland district.

The new contracts were signed with the Metal Fabricating Co., Atlas Belt & Screw Co., and Lake Terminal Railroad Co. of Lorain, covering maintenance men. Other new agreements are pending Donovan said.

The newly chartered lodges which have a total membership of more than 1,000 are in plants never before organized. A rapid increase in membership has been reported by several established locals, Donovan stated, one, Lodge 185 at the Otis Steel Company, having doubled its membership last month. It now has about 1,500 dues paying members.

ORGANIZE SCRAPYARDS

Marked gains have also been made in the various Republic Steel plants and the American Steel & Wire plants in Cleveland, Donovan reported. "Even in the scrapyard industry we have begun to make good progress," he said, "bringing to the workers increases in their miserably low wages, better hours and working conditions and concessions they never enjoyed before."

Some 400 volunteer organizers have been busy in Cleveland, Akron and Lorain, Donovan declared.

Organize Auxiliary

Cleveland, Ohio, July 13—Wives and sisters of members of SWOC Lodge 1298 in the Cuyahoga plant of the American Steel & Wire Company have organized a women's auxiliary which is now functioning under a charter issued by SWOC.

Officers are Corinne Smith, president; Mary Yurko, vice-president; Florence Yurko, recording secretary; Catherine Frala, financial secretary, and Ann Frida, treasurer.

New Homes for Old:

HOUSING & DEFENSE

By CECIL OWEN
Publicity Director, United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee

A department dealing with the need for better housing and how to obtain it, conducted by the CIO Committee on Housing. Contributions are received from a number of sources, and do not always reflect the views of the Committee.

As the new defense program gets under way, new "bottlenecks" are forming—bottlenecks that threaten to reduce speed, lower efficiency, and raise the cost to the taxpayer.

Housing already looms on the horizon as one of the most dangerous of these bottlenecks. In every town where old industries are expanding and new industries are located, the problem of providing homes for the influx of workers is rapidly becoming of grave importance. Union leaders from the nation's basic industries—coal, steel, auto, tool, textile, rubber, aluminum, and others—all tell the same story. Two thousand additional workers will be hired in this town, eight thousand in that town. In this place plant capacity will be doubled, in that place a new plant will be built.

But in none of these towns, in none of these places, is any provision yet being made for the housing of the additional workers! Factories are being planned to house the machines, but nothing is being planned to house the workers who are to operate the machines.

ACTION NEEDED QUICKLY

Unless vigorous action is taken now, the situation will soon become far worse than during the First World War. The last war period came at a time when residential construction had been moving ahead at full speed for over a decade. This war period comes at a time when the home-building industry has been limping along on two crutches. Even if there were no special problem, even if the lions and lambs of Europe were now lying down side by side, we would be facing a critical shortage.

Here are two concrete proposals toward solution of the critical housing problem:

First, that government, labor and business cooperate in streamlining the home-building industry.

UCWOC CAN HELP

The United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee offers the cooperation of many thousand building workers organized in a fashion designed to meet the needs of the hour. The contractor using CIO labor does not worry about having to bargain with 20 separate craft unions. One single union speaks for every worker on the job. Since there are no jurisdictions, he does not have to worry about jurisdictional strikes. There are no regulations against the use of new materials and new methods. Hourly rates are calculated on a reasonable basis.

With this type of labor, streamlined housing for defense needs is possible. Engineers and architects can be given free rein. Private builders and public authorities can bank upon quick jobs well done. When the Defense Commission plans the expansion of a plant in a certain area, CIO labor will be able to put up the required housing—no matter how large the quantity—in one or two months. If 20th century methods are used, this new housing need cost no more than $3,000 a house.

Builders would welcome such a program. Labor is ready. Business is ready. All that is required is vigorous action by the government housing agencies. If they sincerely resolve that all the new housing built in connection with the defense program must be built by modern industrial methods, we will be well on the way toward eliminating the housing bottleneck.

The second suggestion is that a Housing Coordinator be appointed to coordinate the activities of the various government housing agencies.

Today there is no single plan guiding the activities of the government housing agencies. Most of them carry on in their own separate channel doing their own bit of work with little or no regard for what the other is doing.

The CIO has done its part through the creation of an industrialized building force already experienced in tackling the problems of mass production. Government must do its part by putting its housing house in order and subordinating everything else to the goal of sound construction, quick construction and low-cost production.

NOBODY ENTERS: Cleveland police inspect a locked gate at the Precision Die Casting Co., while pickets of the CIO Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers watch the proceedings. Union is seeking recognition and improved working conditions.

Youth Congress Ratifies Tie With Labor's League

COLLEGE CAMP, Wis., July 13.—Ties between organized labor and organized youth were further strengthened at the sixth American Youth Congress meeting just concluded here, when the Congress called for closer cooperation with Labor's Non-Partisan League as urged by John L. Lewis in his speech at the February gathering in Washington.

Preservation of labor and civil rights, plus a strong demand that the government keep America out of foreign war, featured the keynote speeches and the discussion and resolutions of the meeting.

"An aggressive national program to meet the crying needs of the two-thirds who are illhoused, illclothed, illfed — to defend the people from the real fifth column of undernourishment, poor housing inadequate opportunity for health, joblessness — this is the road to the preservation of American democracy, the maintenance of American peace," Jack McMichael, chairman, said in his opening speech.

"For such a national defense program, youth does not need to be conscripted. American youth is ready and anxious to work, live, and even die for that kind of national defense."

CIO LEADER ELECTED

CIO national Secretary James B. Carey presided at the civil rights session and was reelected to the post of vice-chairman of the Congress. Roy Lancaster, newly appointed Youth Director of Labor's Non-Partisan League was elected to the national cabinet. In all, 135 of the 533 delegates present came from labor organizations.

The resolution on national defense, voted by 384 to 19, pledged American youth "to defend our country and our democratic rights against any attack of the enemy from without and against any betrayal from within."

The Congress also declared that labor's right to organize and bargain collectively and to exercise freedom of speech and assembly must be protected as first line of defense in any national emergency.

Reports of the Jobs Committee of the Congress called for expansion of the Natl. Youth Administration, increases in WPA employment, no amendments to the Wagner Act, and strengthening of other social and legislative gains of labor of the past several years.

Optical Union Strike Enters 2nd Month

Mt. Vernon, N. Y., July 13—Three hundred members of CIO United Optical Workers Union, L.I.U. 208, went into the second month of their strike today determined to win wage increases, the union shop and holidays with pay from the General Optical Co. here.

The local, which has had contractual relations with the company for the past few years, contends that it has amply demonstrated its "responsibility" and is "entitled to a fuller degree of recognition."

Newspaper reports have sought to picture the union as refusing to arbitrate the causes of the strike but have neglected the union's position, Sebastian Rebaldo, union business agent, declared today.

MODIFIED DEMANDS

He pointed out that while the strikers have refused to live up their union shop demands, they have already modified earlier requests for the closed shop.

General Optical is a subsidiary of the Shuron Optical Co., third largest firm of its kind in the world.

Designers Win Overtime Pay Drive

New York, July 13.—When President Roosevelt signed the Naval Appropriations bill recently, it marked the successful conclusion of a two-year campaign for overtime pay for marine engineers and architects in the Navy Department, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians announced today.

The bill, known as "Expedition of Naval Shipbuilding," provides that "compensation for employment in excess of 40 hours in any administrative work week shall be computed at a rate not less than one and a half times the regular rate," and shall be paid in addition to per diem, hourly and other such workers, "also to professional and subprofessional employes."

The FAECT initiated a campaign for such legislation in 1938 when advised during a conference with Navy Dept. officials that considerable overtime work would probably be required.

CIO Leather Union Raps Unfair Firm

Boston, July 13 — Employes of the Moench Tanning Company, Gowanda, New York, have twice voted overwhelmingly to affiliate with the CIO International Fur & Leather Workers Union.

Last April the National Labor Relations Board declared that the company was guilty of unfair labor practices, had refused to bargain and was fostering a company union known as Tancraft.

In view of this stubborn anti-union stand taken by the company, Daniel Boyle, secretary-treasurer of the union's leather division, is asking all CIO unions and members to place the products of the Moench Tanning Company on the unfair list.

Canadians Hit Naming Of Labor Foe to Key Post

Ottawa, Ont., July 13. — Appointment of G. C. Bateman as war-time controller of the metal and mining industry was protested this week by 14 Canadian CIO unions because of his publicly expressed opposition to trade unionism.

The protest was sent to Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply, by Silby Barrett, Canadian CIO chairman.

The CIO leader referred to the conciliation board report concerning the employes of Teck Hughes Gold Mines in Kirkland Lake in which Bateman submitted a dissenting brief opposing recognition of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union.

Barrett drew the minister's attention to the fact that most of the CIO unions were operating in basic industries and were responsible for the production of munitions and war materials. Bateman had displayed definite anti-union bias for many years and therefore did not possess the confidence of organized labor, necessary to one in his position, he declared.

"The reason, as I understand it, that Britain and Canada are now at war with Hitler and Mussolini is that both dictators have destroyed political and industrial democracy. We are now engaged in a struggle for defense of both these principles on behalf of the people and I cannot understand how men taking Mr. Bateman's attitude could possibly be fair-minded," Barrett added.

9 NEW LOCALS

Hartford, Conn., July 13. — Nine new locals have been set up in recent weeks, the CIO State Council announced here.

Advise Locals On U. S. Job Placements

Washington, July 13. — Three steps to securing non-civil service jobs were outlined to laid off government employes by the United Feredal Workers, CIO, in a statement released at headquarters here. The steps were outlined following an announcement by President Roosevelt that a replacement list would be established from such workers would be drawn for jobs in defense agencies.

They include; (1) a list of members on the replacement lists, to be kept up by UFWA locals, (2) notification of layoffs and reappointments to UFWA headquarters and (3) listing of members who have been laid off for a month or longer.

Labor Board Assails Weir Policies

Steel Firm Must Obey Labor Act

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, July 13—Weirton Steel, headed by E. T. Weir, bitter end foe of the Wagner Act and of collective bargaining, has been told by the Natl. Labor Relations Board to stop using anti-union tactics that include mass firings, company unionism, use of labor spies, assaults, beatings, evictions and general terrorism.

The telling came in a tentative Board order based on many months of hearings. It was announced three years and one week after charges were filed by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, against which Weir employed his anti-union tactics.

The Board found that Weir began his terror campaign against the CIO immediately on announcement of the SWOC drive to organize the steel industry in June, 1936, that his use of company unionism to prevent or break real unionism first started in 1933, and that Weirton Steel's conduct from then on was "in flagrant violation" of the Wagner Act.

HITS USE OF SPIES

The Board, after noting the use of spies and strong arm squads against union leaders and members who were ruthlessly beaten on many occasions, describes the use of anti-labor propaganda through publications, speeches, etc., and showed the company spent $70,000 on an anti-CIO bulletin alone.

Much of the Weir campaign was directed by Earl F. Reed, corporation attorney who prepared the proposed amendments to the Wagner Act for AFL Pres. William Green's endorsement, as shown in Senate testimony by John L. Lewis during hearings on the Act.

Score Wins In Two More Elections

New York, July 13 — Complete organization of the two largest corporations in the nation's powerful electrical products industry moved a big step nearer today, officials of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers declared, as Labor Board election returns showed two more victories at plants of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

Within two days, UERMW Local 410 "mopped up" at the corporation's lamp factory in Bloomfield, N. J., and Local 711 swept to victory at the Mansfield, Ohio, refrigerator plant.

The union won in New Jersey by nearly 3-1 among the 2,000 employes, while at Mansfield the vote was 1,714 for the CIO affiliate to 1,326 against.

19TH PLANT

As a result, the union now has 19 plants of Westinghouse and is driving forward to future tests in the remaining factories. At General Electric, the UERMW has 16 plants working under the master contract first signed in 1937. Only one large GE plant and a few small units remain outside the contract fold.

Organization of the Westinghouse Bloomfield unit first got under way three years ago. An independent union, which formerly held considerable power, finally went out the window earlier this year when a U. S. Circuit Court upheld Labor Board and CIO contentions that the "independent" was in reality company-dominated.

Lamm Turns Lion, So Union Strikes

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., July 13.—Complete breakdown in negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the strike at the Lamm Lumber Company was reported this week by Local 6-12, International Woodworkers of America. The local voted unanimously to place Lamm on the official unfair list, and to advise all CIO affiliates to take similar action.

A statement issued by the union declared that W. E. Lamm arbitrarily refused even to consider the ten-point proposal submitted by the union, and insisted that the men return to work immediately under the same conditions that caused the strike.

SEEK GOOD FAITH

"The striking Lamm workers will make no further attempts to negotiate with the company until such time as they show a willingness to bargain in good faith," the statement declared. A slip made by the company lawyers, the union pointed out, gave away what was behind the company's stand.

It was not the ten points to which the company objected, the lawyers were said to have made plain, but the attitude of the Western Pine Association, lumber operators' outfit, which fears that if this strike succeeds it will extend the IWA's organizing drive in the Klamath Basin.

10-POINT DEMANDS

The points put forward by the union as a basis for negotiations included reinstatement of a union worker fired for union activity; tools filers and transportation for the fallers; electric lights in the camp; house rent at cost plus six per cent; seniority; improvements in camp sanitary conditions; 40-hour week, eight-hour day; permission for peddlers to visit the camp without being required to pay 10 per cent to the company on all they sell, and a cut in the $2 a month water rent for water which the company gets free.

The strike was called more than a month ago, and the strikers say they are prepared to stay out until the company agrees to negotiate with the union on their demands.

Win Election At Chain Store

New York—(FP)—Employes of the Vim Radio & Sporting Goods stores selected Local 830, United Retail & Wholesale Employes, CIO, as their bargaining agency in a State Labor Relations Board election here.

May Strike For Demands At Tractor Plant

Chicago, July 13.—Refusal of the International Harvester Company to sign an improved contract providing better working conditions and assuring industrial peace for employes at its Tractor Works has brought Local 101, United Farm Equipment Workers to the verge of a strike.

The union is threatening to call the workers out if the dispute is not settled by next Wednesday. David Roadley, conciliator from the U. S. Department of Labor, has been conferring with both union and company representatives in a final effort to reach a settlement.

BLAME COMPANY

Local union officials at Tractor Works in a statement issued this week said:

"For three weeks we have bent every effort to keep the men from striking. We are of one mind that if a strike occurs it is of the companys creation. Harvester wanted a strike—it will get one."

LaborBoardOver-Rides 'Troublemaker' Claim

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Laid off in December, 1938, as a "trouble maker." Ordered back on the job in July 1940 with an honor record for union service in line of duty—and two and a half years' back pay.

These are the low and high spots marking the union career of Walter Anderson, who up until Dec. 20, 1938, was a shop steward for Local 85, CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee in the beef kill department of the Cudahy Packing Company's plant in Denver, Colorado.

The facts of Anderson's fall and rise were revealed in a decision recently issued by the National Labor Relations Board ordering Cudahy to stop firing, laying off or refusing to reinstate its employes for union membership, and to put Anderson back on his job with pay for time lost.

Anderson was laid off along with two others just before Christmas 1938, and although others with less seniority were hired and new employes taken on later, the company refused to reinstate him.

FILLING HIS JOB

In arguing the case before the Labor Board, the company contended that Anderson was a trouble maker, but the Board found that what was meant was that he "acted in his capacity as shop steward for the union in seeking to arbitrate the speed under which the employes were required to work."

In conferences with the management when the company tried to increase the basic speed by an 'average' of three additional cattle an hour, Anderson was spokesman for the employes' efforts to keep the basic rate at 21 cattle slaughtered an hour.

The Board also dismissed the company's contention that Anderson was 'inefficient' by pointing out that his foremen testified that he did his work all right.

FIND NO SLEEPING!

Without any apparent intent to be funny, the company advanced as another reason for refusing to reinstate Anderson the curious statement that he "slept in a standing position, leaning against a post in the room in which he was working." Anderson denied this.

The Board dismissed the charge shortly by remarking that his "alleged sleeping" was not brought up at any of the meetings at which the union had tried to secure Anderson's reinstatement.

Upon the basis of the entire record the Board concurred in the trial examiner's findings that the company refused to reinstate Anderson because of his union activity, and that the company is selecting Anderson for the layoff was "motivated primarily by a desire to rid itself of an employe who, the company felt, as the chief representative of the United in his department, was the leader in its employes' concerted activities especially with reference to the killing-speed grievance."

INFORMING THE PUBLIC: "While Old Glory Waves, We Refuse to Be Slaves" is the message carried by a striking member of the CIO United Shoe Workers in Washington, D. C. The strike, called against a shoe repair firm, is aimed at winning better wages.

Keep Up Guard Against Tories, Lewis Warns CIO

WASHINGTON, July 20 — Warning against attempts by reactionaries "in times like these" to destroy all labor organizations, CIO Pres. John L. Lewis today advised all CIO affiliates not to "drop their guard."

The Lewis message was contained in a letter which accompanied the latest report of the CIO legislative committee. It noted that as long as Congress remains in session, any liberal legislation stands the possibility of being drastically amended, and urged CIO officials to keep their Congressmen continuously informed on labor's attitude towards important matters of the day.

The report reiterated CIO support for the national defense program, and at the same time renewed the demand for "maintenance and extension" of labor standards.

Lewis criticized the Burke bill for compulsory military training and the defense tax program, which he described as throwing the major part of the burden on low income groups.

The CIO leader was "gratified," he said, to report success so far in preserving labor gains, especially the retention of labor safeguards in the Walsh-Healey and Wage-Hour Acts, both of which have been targets of Tory drives.

14th Armour Pact For CIO

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—CIO packing workers here have just won an agreement with the local plant of Armour and Co., bringing to 14 the number of agreements negotiated by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee. Nicholas Fontecchio, PWOC vice-chairman, led the negotiations.

The agreement covers about 300 workers in the production, maintenance and distribution departments. The workers are 100 per cent members of the CIO union.

Negotiations are going ahead with the Cudahy plant, where the PWOC swamped an AFL outfit 410 to 285 in a recent Labor Board election.

Win Kaylon Walkout

Baltimore, Md., July 20.—The four-month-old strike of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at the Kaylon pajama firm ended in a complete union victory today.

The strike, the first in the cotton garment industry of this area, brought the 275 strikers substantial wage increases, sole bargaining rights and the 40-hour week. In addition, the State unemployment compensation commission has ruled that the strikers are eligible for jobless payments which will run up to approximately $16,000, and for back pay restitution if ordered by the government under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Strike Threat Leads Tractor Firm To Dizzy Propaganda

CHICAGO, July 20.—Efforts to avert a strike at the International Harvester Tractor Works continued this week, as the U. S. Department of Labor rushed in another conciliator to try to settle the dispute between the CIO United Farm Equipment Workers Local 101 and the company.

The union accuses the management of stubbornly refusing to grant an improved contract and with trying to turn public opinion against the union through paid ads in Chicago newspapers.

ANSWER PROPAGANDA

In answer to large ads the company inserted in Chicago papers charging that the workers were threatening to starve America by taking drastic action to get their demands, a union statement declared:

"It is evident that someone who has a cynical regard for the intelligence of the American public is trying to turn out simple demands for an improved contract into a situation wherein we can be charged with just about everything, including starvation of babies.

"Inasmuch as there are enough foodstuffs stored as a result of the under-consumption of the American people from too little purchasing power and unemployment, to feed America for a long time (plus the fact that certain other companies produce farm implements) the whole business sounds like something out of Alice in Wonderland."

A strike deadline was set for this week, but on a request wired by Dr. John R. Steelman, U. S. Department of Labor conciliator, the union decided to postpone strike action pending further attempts to negotiate a contract. Earlier attempts by U. S. Concilator David Roadley to reach a settlement failed when the company refused to budge on the main points in the union's demands.

Certify News-Guild

Washington, July 20. — The American Neswpaper Guild has been certified as sole collective agency for employes of the International News Photos Division of the Hearst-owned King Features Syndicate.

The Guild defeated an independent union, the Kingsyn Employes Assn. by a 96-13 margin in an election held late last month.

Union Contract Saves Lives of 250 Workers

MUSKEGON, Mich., July 29.—Some 250 employes of the Lakey Foundry Co. have the union to thank for the fact that they're still alive.

Last week a coke oven exploded and demolished an entire department in the plant. The accident occurred just before 7:00 A. M.—an hour when the workers used to be on their jobs.

But a few weeks ago the United Automobile Workers, CIO, won a contract which provided that the employes would no longer have to spend a half-hour before work started laying out their tools and sharpening chisels.

Had the explosion occurred before the contract was signed, the lives of the 250 would have been jeopardized. As it was, the working force had not yet come on the job when the department was destroyed.

TELLING THE BOSS: Pickets parade before the home of Albert Wenzel, executive of the U. S. Hammered Piston Ring Co. at Stirling, N. J., to make sure he knows that the strike of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, is still going strong. Walkout started May 23 after discharge of five employes. The local had previously won an easy majority in an NLRB poll.

News Guild Elects Sullivan, Urges Defense of Rights

By JOHN DUNN

MEMPHIS, July 20.—United on a program of industrial unionism, loyalty to the CIO, defense of American institutions and protection of social and labor laws, delegates to the seventh annual American Newspaper Guild convention have returned home determined to make organizing their most important task.

The Guild remained unified after the most heated election contest in its history. Donal M. Sullivan, 29-year-old Boston reporter, was elected president on a platform of complete support for the Guild's two leading full-time officials, Executive Vice-President Milton Kaufman and Sec.-Treas. Victor Pasche, both of whom were re-elected.

Max Ways of Philadelphia, leader of the chief opposition, who was defeated in his race against Kaufman, pledged complete cooperation with the officers and their program immediately after the election was over.

In addition to electing a new president, the convention named six new vice presidents to the 13-man International Executive Board. They are George Wilson, president of the San Francisco CIO Council; Don Pinkston, president of the Sioux City, Iowa, Guild; Agnes Fahy, president of the Newark, N. J. Guild; Richard Henry, president of the Denver, Colo., Guild; Ralph Foster, president of the Toronto, Can., Guild, and Anthony Berardi, one of the leaders of the strike against Hearst in Chicago.

Re-elected to the board were Vice Presidents Morris Watson, New York; Philip M. Connelly, Los Angeles; Julius Klyman, St. Louis, and Harry Martin, Memphis.

RAP SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITY

The convention made clear its position on national defense by unanimously passing a resolution which said that the Guild reaffirms its loyalty to the Bill of Rights and Constitution of the United States and that "we pledge ourselves to defend these against any attack, whether it comes from within our border or without" and that it "endorses the CIO position for a defense program that will protect American institutions." The resolution also condemned "any movement or activity, of subversive character . . . which is aimed against our nation and government, or the basic, free and democratic institutions upon which our republic has been founded."

ANSWER CHARGES

After the convention ended, Sullivan, Kaufman and Pasche issued the following statement:

"Now that the convention has acted, we desire to answer the charges of Communist domination of the American Newspaper Guild which were carried in the press during the pre-convention campaign.

"We state categorically, as newly elected officers, that we are not controlled or influenced by any outside organization, nor is the American Newspaper Guild. The Guild is controlled by its membership and its membership bodies exclusively.

"The convention's rejection of witch-hunting is in the best American tradition. The convention, through the majority report, adopted a clear stand in defense of the democratic process and American liberties."

The convention had rejected by a vote of 105 to 37 a resolution purportedly condemning "isms", agreeing with Lewis Gannett, fa- York Herald-Tribune and an alternate to the convention, that ernate to the convention, that such action would only give aid and comfort to Westbrook Pegler's red-baiting attacks on the Guild and the CIO.

ELECTED: Donal M. Sullivan of Boston, elected president of the American Newspaper Guild at the organization's seventh annual convention in Memphis, Tenn., last week.

BACK PAY CHECKS

Mooresville, N. C.—Thanks to the Wagner Act, R. M. Waugh, an employe of the Mooresville Cotton Mills, has received a back pay check of $1,600, while seven other employes received checks totalling $7,400.

Glass Union Maps Drive In Ceramic, Mirror Industries

By WALTER F. PETERS

TOLEDO, July 20.—Ending its fourth constitutional convention here last Tuesday, the CIO's Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers of America is prepared to dispatch top-notch organizers into the ceramic and mirror industries field to enroll under its banners the 60,000 unorganized workers in those industries.

The decision to stage an intensive organizing drive in these two widely-scattered industries was topped off by a vote of convention delegates directing the establishment of $10,000 revolving fund for the duration of the campaign. The federation has successfully organized the flat glass industry and has contractual relations with the major glass companies on an industry-wide basis.

Besides taking the organizational action, the convention adopted a new streamlined constitution and by-laws, reported to be perhaps a model for democratic procedure. Major changes in the new constitution include a more fair representation for local unions at future conventions, establishment of a fair trial procedure for those under charges of misconduct, and a change in the union's name. The union was formerly known as the Federation of Flat Glass Workers.

CHANGE STRUCTURE

Changed also was the union's geographical status from a national to an international union. The union's international executive board will hereafter consist of one member from each of the five geographical districts and one to be elected at large. The board member-at-large automatically becomes the international vice president.

Resolutions adopted by the convention indorsed the CIO's legislative program, including the proposed old age pension plan providing $60-a-month for those reaching 60 years, or $90 for married couples. Federal legislation liberalizing residence laws for workers in need of assistance, the establishment of an annual wage and endorsement of the Social Security Act and its administration was also voted.

MURRAY, BROPHY SPEAK

Earlier during the convention the delegates heard Philip Murray, national CIO vice-president, and John Brophy, director of CIO industrial unions. Both speakers called for protection of labor legislation gained by labor during the past few years. Murray cautioned against America's intervention in the European conflict and stressed the dire need for solving the unemployment problem.

The next convention of the federation will be held in two years at a city to be designated by the international board. Irwin DeShetler, Toledo, is president and Peter J. Vidmar, Ottawa, Ill., is secretary-treasurer. All officers are elected by referendum vote in between conventions.

Expect Thousand Delegates At W. Virginia CIO Parley

By FOREST R. THOMPSON

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 20. — The eyes of the CIO will be on Morgantown next week when over a thousand delegates are expected to be present at the annual convention of the West Virginia Industrial Union Council. Coming as it does immediately after the Democratic national convention, the West Virginia CIO sessions will hold special importance, since this will be the first labor group to have an opportunity of expressing its attitude towards the two major presidential candidates after the convention.

John B. Easton, president of the West Virginia CIO Council, has arranged an attractive speaking program for the convention.

Included among those who will address the sessions are Sen. M. M. Neely, long-time friend and champion of labor and Democratic nominee for Governor of the state; Judge Harley M. Kilgore, Democratic nominee for the seat in the United States Senate now held by Rush D. Holt; Van A. Bittner, nationally-known CIO leader; J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board.

Other speakers include Allen S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; T. C. Townsend, counsel for the United Mine Workers of America; Mike Pugh, director of the CIO in the Chicago area; Rep. Jennings Randolph, member of the House Labor and Mines and Mining Committee, and Mrs. Ruth Voithofer Allen, director of northern West Virginia union education activities.

Tuesday evening a banquet will be held honoring Van A. Bittner. Over 500 are expected to be present at the affair, which will be in the nature of a "home coming" for the CIO leader.

AFL Fake Pact Tossed Out

Camden, N. J., July 20.—Cancellation of an AFL-company engineered contract and reinstatement with back pay for 22 CIO workers at the Eavenson and Levering Wool Scouring Co. was won by Local 229, CIO Textile Workers Union of America.

The victory came as the result of a stipulation entered into between Local 229, the company, the AFL and the National Labor Relations Board. The stipulation, which awards the workers $2,625 in back pay, also provides for a Labor Board election on July 22 to determine the bargaining agency.

TO VOTE ON CIO

San Francisco.—Thirty employes of the Sutliffe Tobacco Co. will vote to determine whether their bargaining agency should be the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

Beware Of Attacks, Lewis Tells Unions

Washington, July 20.—Labor must be ready "to fight off anti-labor laws and fight for progressive social legislation" during the present period of Congressional attack on workers' laws, John L. Lewis told all CIO affiliates in releasing a report of the CIO Legislative Committee of which he is chairman.

"It is difficult to say how long Congress will remain in session, or if it does, what action will be taken," Lewis wrote. "But so long as the possibility remains of Congressional action, labor must be prepared to fight off anti-labor laws and fight for progressive social legislation.

"It is easy for labor to drop its guard, and assume that nothing more will be done," he wrote. "It is in times like these that a well-organized bloc of reactionaries in Congress will attempt to destroy all labor legislation."

SIX POINTS

The CIO report deals with six main points: national defense and labor standards; the Wagner Act; Walsh-Healey Act; Walter-Logan Bill; LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices Bill; and civil liberties.

The report notes two major victories in the CIO campaign to maintain labor standards in the national defense program, pointing to defeat of attempts to emasculate the Wage-Hour Law and the Walsh-Healey Act that sets wage standards on government purchases.

The attempts came during passage of the Army and Navy bills, when board exemptions from both acts were asked in Congress. In addition, the CIO was able to stop a drive to rob Federal employes of their right to organize and petition members of Congress.

The report analyzes the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory training bill, pointing out that it would require registration and training of all males between 18 and 65, who would have to serve for eight months or longer at a compensation of $5.00 per month.

DISCUSSES TAXES

New taxes to pay the cost of defense are described as reaching "into the pocketbooks of workers in a very decided way," while making only slight increases in levies on large incomes and corporation profits. The report cites increases in sales taxes on consumers' goods such as tobacco, movies, autos, toilet goods, etc., as well as a lowering of income tax exemptions as evidence of this trend.

Defense of the Wagner Act, particularly against the Smith ripper bill, is urged in the report as essential to preservation of workers' rights. Also noted are attempts to repeal the Walsh-Healey Act outright and to block strengthening amendments designed to deprive Wagner Act violators of government contracts. The Walter-Logan bill to turn over decisions of government agencies to the courts is criticized

CIO Leads In Poll At Frigidaire

Dayton, O., July 20.—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers rolled up an almost 2-1 margin over an "independent" union at the big GM Frigidaire plant here today, but a sizeable "no union" vote prevented the UE from the majority needed for certification.

A run-off poll will be held in the near future, it is expected. The CIO union received 3,926 votes, the Dayton Independent Assn. 2,346, and neither 1,703. Some 210 votes were challenged.

Anthracite Casualties Up

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 20. — Eighty-three Pennsylvania anthracite coal miners lost their lives through accidents during the first five months of this year.

This fact was made known today by John Thomas of the state bureau of mines. The figures showed a slight decrease in the number of accidents proportionate to tons of anthracite mined.

Save Social Legislation, Avoid War, Murray Tells Democrats At Chicago

CHICAGO, July 20.—Organized labor's insistence on staying out of foreign war and on preservation of democratic rights and social gains was made clear to the Democratic Party convention in a nine-point statement submitted to the platform drafting committee by Philip Murray, CIO vice-president and Steel Workers Organizing Committee chairman. The statement was submitted by Murray in the name of the CIO.

First point in the CIO's demands was protection of the right of workers to organize and bargain collectively through unions of their own choice. In line with this, the statement called for preservation of the Wagner Labor Relations Act that guarantees this right and the withholding of government contracts from firms that violate it.

The CIO statement contained a strong warning that involvement in "the wars of Europe and Asia" would bring about "a complete blackout of our democratic American institutions." Stressing the need for defense of the western hemisphere against foreign aggression, the statement declared that "we cannot accept or adopt any policy which may in any way lead toward the involvement of the U. S. in the European or Asiatic wars."

THE BEST DEFENSE

National defense is not limited to military preparations alone, the CIO statement declared, but must include preservation of social and labor gains as an essential part of a truly national program.

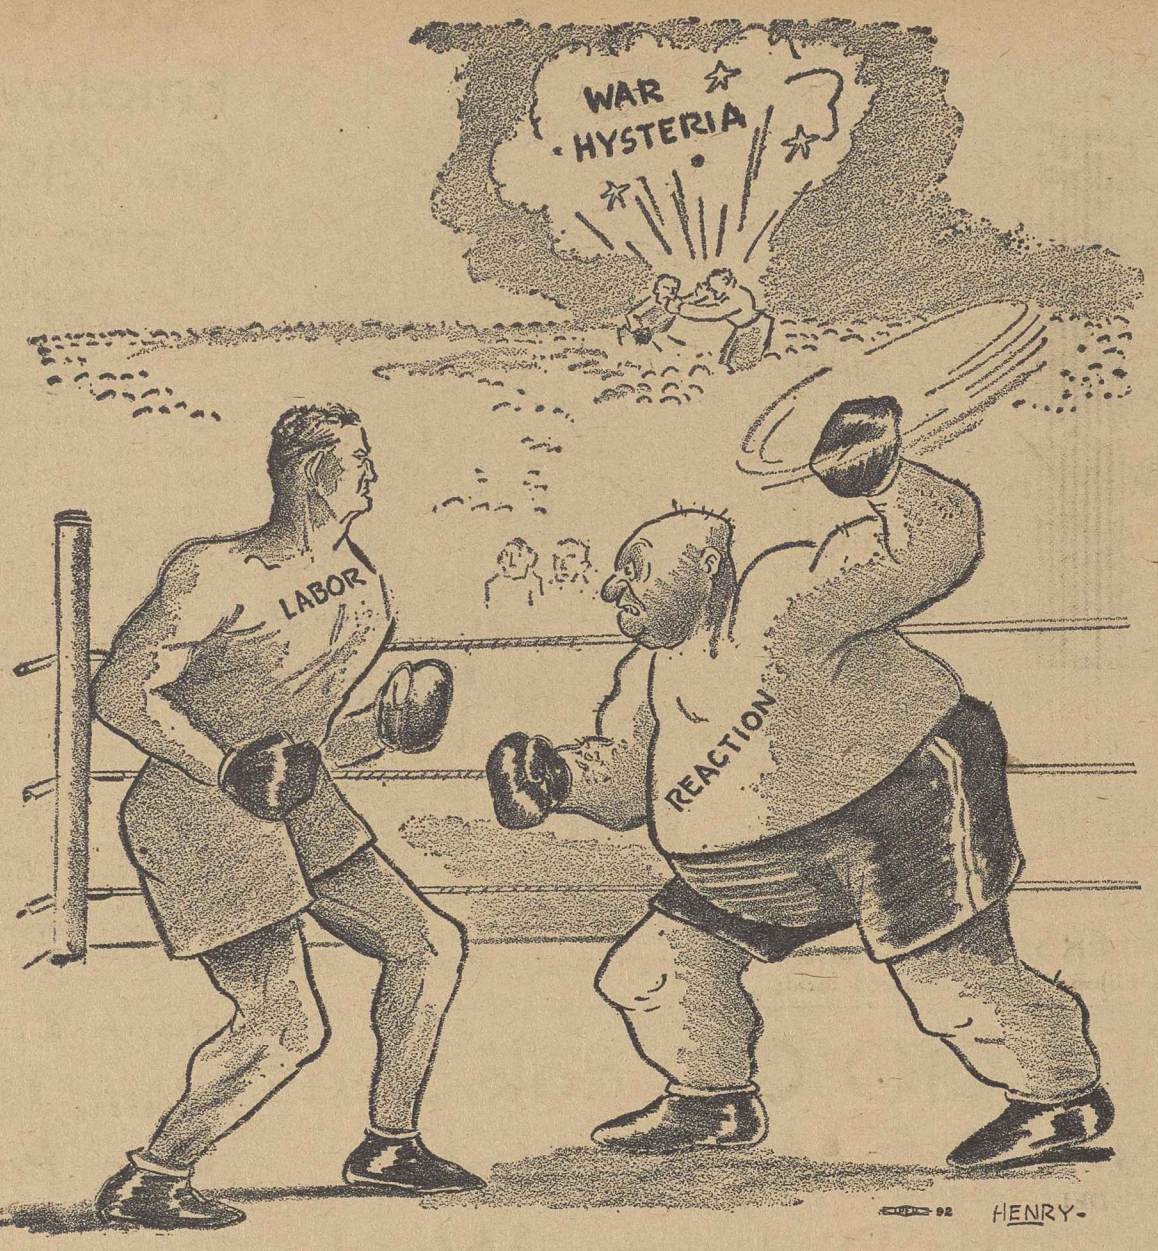
Number one problem that must be solved before prosperity or permanent industrial welfare is reached is the problem of unemployment, Murray added. The Federal government "must recognize" its obligations to take legislative and executive action to see that every able and willing worker now unemployed receives a job at decent wages.

The statement also urged a Federal program requiring payment of dismissal wages to displaced workers, a training program and a national conference of labor, government, industrial and farm leaders on the whole question of jobs for the jobless. A program to provide jobs through Federal action for those industry cannot employ was also urged.

SECURITY, RIGHTS

Following the CIO legislative program, the statement urged a broadening and extension of social security, housing and health, and a revision of the tax system to place the burden on the shoulders of those best able to pay.

Vote 244-2 For Quarry Workers



York, Pa., July 20.—Employes of the Certain-Teed Products Corporation plant here answered the company's demand for proof that Branch 289, Quarry Workers' International Union, represented the majority of its employes by voting 244 to 2 for the CIO union at a Labor Board election.

Negotiations for a contract are now in progress.

In Raleigh, N. C., meanwhile, bad whiskey and money handouts failed to prevent the Quarry Workers International Union from winning an election among employes of the Southern Aggregates Corp. here. The vote was 117 to 113 in favor of the union.

To Vote at GE

ERIE, Pa. — A Labor Board election at the Erie plant of the General Electric Co., sole sizeable unit of the corporation remaining outside the master contract with the CIO Electrical Workers, will be held here August 8.

DON'T DROP YOUR GUARD

On Guard

The ballyhoo of another political campaign has begun. At times it even pushes the war news off the front pages. Between the two we almost forget that Congress is still in session.

But it is. And among its members are many enemies of labor who are looking for an opportunity like this to slip things over.

It is a timely warning therefore that President John L. Lewis has just issued on behalf of the CIO Legislative Committee.

"It is easy for labor to drop its guard and assume that nothing more will be done" (in the present Congress), he says. "It is in times like these that a well organized bloc of reactionaries in Congress will attempt to destroy all labor legislation."

Issues of the most vital concern to all American workers may still be dealt with by this Congress. There is the matter of labor standards on national defense work. The Wagner Act is still in danger. Labor's rights and civil liberties are threatened from a dozen different directions.

The CIO is on guard for labor at Washington. But it must have the backing of the folks back home. Every union and every union member must be alert. Study the issues before Congress and let your Congressmen and Senators know how you feel about them.

And, since this is election year, it is not a bad idea to remind them that their votes in Congress will have a lot to do with the way your votes will be cast at the polls.

Home Defense

While we weep for those now dying on foreign battlefields, let us not forget to mourn for the many Americans who are needlessly slaughtered right here on the field of labor.

Sixty-two coal miners have recently been killed in an appalling mine disaster at Portage, Pa.

The United Mine Workers of America has long been battling against political indifference and outright obstruction for adequate mine safety legislation.

The Neely-Keller bill for federal inspection of coal mines has been passed in the Senate but pigeonholed in a House committee.

Renewing their demand for the passage of this legislation, in a wire about the Portage disaster, Pres. John L. Lewis and the other officers of the UMWA declare:

"The mine workers of the United States, with their dependents and neighbors, and the population of the mining areas, are hoping and praying that the present Congress will find time between its political diversions to enact the mine safety bill."

Is this too much to ask? Surely defense of American lives, like charity, should begin at home.

American

Stable labor relations in the aircraft industry are one of the main objectives of the recently launched CIO organizing campaign.

Calling for unionization and fair labor standards, the CIO announced: "We believe that the speedy and efficient completion of the defense program can and must go hand in hand with stable and equitable relations."

Is there anything un-American about American workers wanting fair wages, union conditions and orderly labor relations to enhance the efficiency of national defense?

"The greatest menace to America is not the alien or the fanatic who may dream some dream of another form of government, but the shrunken bellies of one-half of the population who do not get enough to eat."—John L. Lewis.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

"If you can't lick 'em, split 'em" has long been one of the favorite slogans of the union-buster.

The CIO has been harder to lick than any previous union movement. So proportionately more efforts have been exerted to split its organizations.

Union-busters have thought they could take advantage of the inexperience of newly organized workers to turn them to fighting among themselves.

Finally, the CIO is more democratic than any previous union movement. Democracy seems to tempt the disrupter. But it often fools him.

At any rate the youthful vigor and toughness of CIO democracy has made its new unions proof against some of the worst splitting attempts in labor history.

These thought are occasioned by two recent CIO union conventions.

The Federation of Flat Glass Workers (now renamed the Federation of Glass, Ceramic and Silica Sand Workers of America) met in Toledo the same week that the American Newspaper Guild held its convention in Memphis.

Both unions have confronted attempts, of widely different kinds, to fan dissension into division. But both registered, at their conventions, a high degree of democratic unity and more solid organizational strength than ever before in their histories.

Unity Restored

In 1937 the Glass Workers seemed so hopelessly split that they called upon the CIO to step in to hold their union together.

Every possible aid was given, and when the job of restoring unity was achieved, the CIO representative stepped out and new officers were elected by referendum vote.

To the Toledo convention President Irwin DeShetler was able to report a triumph of democratic unity. With peak membership, a 100 per cent solid union and industry-wide union agreements, the Glass Workers turned from the organized flat glass field to the job of unionizing some 60,000 unorganized workers in related industries.

The Guild Fools 'Em

Never split from the inside like the Glass Workers, the American Newspaper Guild has been subjected to the most virulent propaganda campaign from the outside for the purpose of creating dissension within.

Newspaper men and women, by the very nature of their work which deals so much with the world of ideas and politics, should fall an easy prey to this sort of campaign, it was thought.

But the Guild has fooled the would-be disrupters.

The movie-promoted idea of newspapermen is that they are unduly addicted to drink, Bohemian, cynical, individualistic and impractical.

Yet the Guild convention was marked by almost ostentatious sobriety and domesticity. Most of the delegates brought their wives, who held a lively Auxiliary convention; and the sobriety of all concerned was possibly enhanced by the fact that only beer is on tap at local bars.

"That's one group you'll never organize," people used to say about newspapermen. "And even if you do, they're too argumentative to stick together long. They think they're too professional to strike or anything like that, or to associate with the regular labor movement. The best you'll get out of it will be some kind of a club, not a real labor union."

On every one of these scores, the Guild has fooled such prophets—and how!

A Real Union

With nearly all the major metropolitan dailies now under contract, the Guild is one of the most successful white-collar unions in existence.

Its militancy and persistence, including a number of long and hard-fought strikes, have won not only better wages and working conditions but special benefits, such as severance pay, that are hardly known in other industries.

As to association with the labor movement, the Guild is one of the most enthusiastic and loyal affiliates of the CIO. Its locals and its members everywhere are noted for their participation and leadership in all matters of common labor concern.

All Hours

In only one respect did the Guild delegates live up to popular notions of newspaperdom—by doing most of their work at the most outlandish hours.

Much of the convention business was transacted in sessions running from nine in the evening to four or so in the morning. And if there weren't night sessions, there were always caucuses.

For this was a hot convention, with a close elec-

But when all was said and done, after all the tion contest and plenty of issues, which got the fullest possible airing.

arguments and the full fling of democratic procedure, after the final votes, the Guild was as strong and solid as ever, in the loyalty of an intelligent membership which knows what organization means.

Unions Act To Save Labor Law

Washington, July 20.—Defense of the Wagner Act was again made the theme of CIO messages and statements this week, while another large AFL union joined the army of workers' organizations to denounce William Green for his double cross endorsement of the Smith ripper bill.

From Washington Pres. Lewis wrote to all CIO affiliates reminding them that the danger to the Act still exists as long as Congress remains in session, and urging them not to let up on the wires and letters of protest to the Senate Labor Committee and to their own Senators.

In Chicago Philip Murray told the platform committee of the Democratic convention that labor's first demand was the protection of its right to organize and bargain collectively as provided under the Act.

"The Smith bill is now before the Senate Labor Committee," Lewis wrote, "which must decide whether it will attempt to take any action at this session of Congress. Since there is a possibility that Congress may remain in session, the danger that the Senate Labor Committee may grant consideration of this bill remains open.

"It therefore requires the most persistent and continuous activity on the part of CIO affiliates to secure widespread support from individuals and organizations among AFL unions and other groups in their communities."

AFL PROTEST

Bakers Local 50 of the AFL in New York, representing over 5,500 workers, joined hands with the CIO and with scores of AFL affiliates and hundreds of thousands of AFL members in sending a sharp protest to the two N. Y. Senators against passage of the Smith bill.

Protection of the Act was the first point in the list of labor demands read to Democratic party platform makers in Chicago by Philip Murray, CIO vice-president. "Integration of modern industry compels recognition of the need for labor unions capable of representing all the workers in each industry," Murray said. "Collective bargaining between management and labor on an equal economic basis is the best guarantee of stabilized industrial relations.

"The U. S. Government can effectively protect these rights of labor by compelling full recognition of such rights by all persons receiving the benefits of government contracts."

The Democratic plank on labor relations contained this section on labor relations:

"We pledge to continue to enforce fair labor standards; to maintain the principles of the Natl. Labor Relations Act; to strengthen the orderly processes of collective bargaining and peaceful settlement of labor disputes; and to work always for a just distribution of our national income among those who labor."

Paper Union Certified

Washington, July 20.—The National Labor Relations Board today announced certification of Local Industrial Union 1006, CIO, as sole collective bargaining agency for production, maintenance and power house employes at the Consolidated Paper Co.'s Plant No. 10 at River Rouge, Mich.

The NLRB action was based on a secret election in March.

HEADQUARTERS: South Bend, Ind., CIO unions use this building, their headquarters, to advertise their strength and principles. Many thousand workers belong to the affiliated locals.

CIO Still Winning

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

Washington, July 20.—To those persons who believe that the moon is made of green cheese, that Friday the 13th is unlucky, and that the CIO shriveling to a slow death while the AFL is blooming bigger and bigger every day, it may be news that the CIO is still leaving the AFL miles behind in winning Labor Board elections.

According to the latest election summary issued by the NLRB, CIO unions during the past few weeks won 21 polls with a total of 12,878 votes, to 1,636 votes won by AFL unions in 30 successful elections.

AFL WON SMALL POLLS

For the most part all the AFL elections won involved a small number of workers, only two running over 100. In the case of the CIO, four of the elections were won by votes exceeding 1,000 and only ten of those won involved less than 100.

The largest poll won by the CIO was that conducted among employes of the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co. which was carried by the United Automobile Workers 4,655 for the union to 595 against.

The middle of June the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers won an election at the Delco Products Division of General Motors 2158 for, to 1679 against, and in July the same union won polls in two Westinghouse Electric plants. At the Bloomfield, N. J. Westinghouse plant, the UERW scored 1451 for, to 578 against and at the Mansfield, Ohio, plant, it won by a vote of 17714 for, to 1326 against.

The AFL did not compete in any of these four big polls.

CIO Outlook Sees 2½ Million Jobs In Defense Work

WASHINGTON, July 20.—From $15 to $20 billions a year would be needed to employ all the U. S. unemployed on arms production, the CIO Economic Outlook, released today, declares in its July issue. Unemployment (for May) is estimated at 10,748,000, of which the arms outlay of $6.4 billions for the present year will absorb directly and indirectly about two and a half million workers.

Eight million will still be without jobs, the Outlook adds, commenting: "The unfolding of the national defense program emphasizes again the fact that the program as now conceived will not wipe out unemployment."

Not much expansion in plant capacity is needed to take care of the present arms program, huge as it is, the Outlook points out, since the 12 to 15 million tons of steel required in the next two years can be produced by present plants in two or two and a half months. Plant expansion in aircraft and other industries where present capacity is not large enough "so far has only been sufficient to offset the drop in government financed public works," it adds.

AMPLE LABOR SUPPLY

Labor supply for all defense needs is ample, the Outlook declares, citing a U. S. Government report of 4.1 million registered jobless workers in 43 states, of which almost half are skilled or semi-skilled workers.

"In most of the cases where employers have reported shortages of labor, it says, "investigation has shown that such shortages could be quickly filled if: (1) employers paid union rates; (2) if employers would provide some slight retraining; and (3) if workers were sought outside the immediate vicinity of the plant."

The Outlook criticizes the current tax program as a burden on consumers, and calls for an excess profits tax which "would substantially improve the tax structure of the country and would be in line with labor's program."

Steel Union Issues Booklet On Unemployment

PITTSBURGH, July 20.—Organized labor's five-point program for curing the social misery resulting from technological unemployment is presented in pamphlet form in the newest Steel Workers Organizing Committee publication, "Technological Unemployment," by Philip Murray, SWOC chairman. The pamphlet contains Murray's testimony before the Temporary National Economic Committee last April.

The five point program includes: (1) reabsorption of displaced workers in the regular manner by companies using new processes; 2) six months notification of workers about to be displaced, plus training for new jobs; 3) temporary employment until regular jobs are open; 4) compensation for displaced workers who secure jobs at lower wages than earned previously; 5) dismissal pay at 10 per cent of former wages, minimum $500.

500 U. S. Employes Go CIO

Washington, July 20—More than 500 custodial workers in the District of Columbia walked out on the AFL last week and joined the ranks of the CIO when two locals of the American Federation of Government Employes switched their affiliation to the CIO's United Federal Workers of America.

The two locals, composed of workers in Washington's public buildings, voted to join the CIO by a substantial majority. Instrumental in the switch was Andrew Wicketts, former AFL organizer who has joined the UFWA staff, and Henry Rhine, UFWA national organizer.

Rhine said that this was the first step in an intensive campaign to organize thousands of government custodial workers including elevator operators, janitors, charwomen and other employes of the Administration of Public Buildings.

Back Lewis Stand On War, Politics

Fairmont, W. Va., July 20.—President John L. Lewis' recent statements that the United States should participate in no foreign wars are "essentially sound" and deserve the "intense consideration" of all workers, the Marion County Industrial Union Council declared in a resolution today.

The council also asserted that Lewis' "indictment of the present political administration . . . was not unwarranted in any manner but was, on the other hand, completely justified by many obvious facts."

NewYorkStateCIO Meeting Sept. 20

New York City, July 20.—A call to the third annual convention of the New York State CIO Industrial Union Council to be held in Rochester September 20-21, was issued this week by Council President Gustave A. Strebel and Hugh Thompson, secretary-treasurer.

Originally set for September 27-28, the convention date was pushed up one week. Many decisions of far-reaching importance will be made at this year's meeting which will precede the national election by a few weeks.

Murray Addresses Democrats

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Describes CIO Views on Platform

This is the complete text of the CIO position on major political and economic issues, as read to the Democratic Party's Resolutions Committee by Vice-Pres. Philip Murray.

Wagner Act

The right of workers to self-organization, free from interference from employers, for the purpose of collective bargaining and other concerted activities, now guaranteed by the National Labor Relations Act, must be preserved. Integration of modern industry compels recognition of the need for labor unions capable of representing all the workers in each industry. Collective bargaining between management and labor on an equal economic basis is the best guarantee of stabilized industrial relations.

The United States government can effectively protect these rights of labor by compelling full recognition of such rights by all persons receiving the benefits of government contracts.

Foreign Affairs & National Defense

It has become clear that if the United States permits itself to become engaged in the wars of Europe and Asia there will be a complete blackout of our democratic American institutions. The Western Hemisphere must be protected and defended against foreign aggression.

We cannot accept or adopt any policy which may in any way lead toward the involvement of the United States in the European or Asiatic wars. Peace must be preserved for the people of the United States.

The United States must take all measures necessary to build up an adequate national defense. National defense, however, must not be limited to military or naval considerations. The preservation of social and labor legislation and their extension for the betterment of the common people must form an essential part of national defense.

Unemployment

There cannot be any permanent prosperity or industrial peace in this nation as long as we have the misery and suffering of ten million unemployed people. The problem of unemployment must be our American Problem No. 1.

The federal government must recognize its obligation to adopt legislative measures and to take executive action which will provide jobs in private industry for all able-bodied Americans who are willing to work. Such a program must look toward the attainment of maximum production in our basic industries, effective minimum wage and maximum hour legislation, and recognition and practice of collective bargaining with bona fide unions to insure adequate purchasing power for our industrial and farm products and concrete price controls to prevent the high cost of living from eating away the purchasing power of the American people.

Dismissal Wages

A federal program should be adopted making it compulsory for industry to pay adequate dismissal wages to all workers who are displaced as the result of technological changes and the Federal government, through joint management - labor committees, should conduct a large-scale vocational training program for displaced workers to adapt them for other occupations.

To accomplish these ends a national unemployment conference should be called by the President of the United States, of leaders of government, industry, labor, and farm groups.

In addition, the Federal government must recognize its further obligation to provide government jobs to those able-bodied Americans who are willing to work but for whom jobs have not yet been made available in private industry. People cannot and must not be permitted to starve.

A special educational and work program must be established for the young men and women, between the ages of 15 and 25, who desire further educational opportunities or who are unemployed. In the welfare and morale of our youth is involved the future of the nation.

Social Security

It is imperative that the social security program relating to old age and unemployment compensation be expanded, simplified, and liberalized through federal action. A federal old-age pension system for our elder citizens should be established, which must not be based upon any needs test and which will provide sufficient compensation to afford a decent standard of living.

There must be adopted a national health program which will cover: (a) immediate construction of hospitals and clinics subsidized through federal funds and under proper federal standards; (b) expansion of present public health services; (c) establishment of a system of medical care for all income groups with free medical care for low income groups; and (d) carry out a needed program of industrial hygiene.

Housing

The national housing program must be expanded to take care of the needs of the low income groups in industrial and rural areas through increased appropriations to the United States Housing Authority, lowering of interest rates, and liberalization of other requirements on the part of the Federal Housing Administration and the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

Taxation

The tax structure must be amended to shift the disproportionate burden now borne by low income groups. This can be accomplished by providing for such taxes as an excess profits tax to reach the swelling profits of industry resulting from increased industrial activity and war contracts, elimination of tax exemption for government securities, increased inheritance and gift taxes, and increased rates and elimination of loopholes in taxes upon upper bracket incomes.

Civil Liberties

The federal government must recognize its obligation to protect the civil rights of all persons in America. Freedom of speech, of assemblage, of press and religion, must at all costs be preserved to assure the preservation of democracy.

The Federal Civil Rights Statute furnishes an excellent basis for the effective protection of civil liberties, and if further amendments are required legislation to such effect should be introduced and adopted.

The LaFollette-Thomas Oppressive Labor Practices Bill, which outlaws the use of industrial spies and the purchase of munitions by private corporations, should be adopted by Congress.

Universal Suffrage

State poll taxes imposing a condition to the exercise of the franchise in federal elections amount to a denial of fundamental rights of citizens of the United States. Federal legislation must be enacted to eliminate such restrictions upon the right of vote which now exist in certain States in order to protect the republican form of government.

Guffey Coal Act

Guard Against Tory Drive, Lewis Warns

as an attempt to hamstring agencies dealing with labor matters.

CIVIL RIGHTS

Under civil rights for workers, the report demands passage of the LaFollette-Thomas bill, while criticizing crippling amendments tacked on in the Senate, condemns the Harry Bridges deportation bill, and the wiretapping bill designed to place spies on unions everywhere.

The report concludes by sharply condemning the Sheppard private police bill, which it declares would allow employers to maintain armed vigilante squads who would have no responsibility to any civil authorities for anything they might do.

Unions Heads Pledge Aid To Defense

Washington, July 20.—Organized labor in America will unitedly support the national defense program, according to a letter signed by 16 representatives of CIO, AFL and railroad workers unions recently appointed members of the Labor Policy Advisory Committee of Defense Commission.

"We and our membership are united in our effort and determination to give effective and expeditious cooperation in the fulfillment of the defense program, and to contribute to a free and secure democracy," the latter said.

"We are confident that with the extension of such cooperation among all groups this great nation will become increasingly more worthy of the principles upon which it was founded."

Of the 16 signers, the following seven were from CIO affiliates; Van A. Bittner, S. H. Dalrymple, Clinton S. Golden, Allan S. Haywood, Emil Rieve, R. J. Thomas, Samuel J. Hogan.

To Study Wage Law In Alaska

Seattle, Wash., July 20.—A study of wage-hour conditions in Alaska and enforcement of the Fair Labor Standards Act in the territory is being undertaken by J. R. Dille, manager of the Seattle office of the Wage-Hour Division.

Says 30,000 In Vocation Schools

Washington, July 20.—Between 30,000 and 40,000 workers are enrolled in vocational training schools under the voluntary national defense program for ensuring an adequate supply of skilled workers, Sidney Hillman, head of the Defense Commission's Division of Labor Supply reported to Pres. Roosevelt this week.

Hillman's report told of the setting up of a Labor Policy Advisory Committee to work with the Commission and cited "several serious production stoppages" which were prevented by his division, acting with the U. S. Labor Dept. Conciliation Service.

Unions Get Memos On Training Plans

Washington, July 20.—Means for CIO unions to cooperate in the defense training program were outlined in a memorandum sent to all CIO affiliates over the signature of Pres. John L. Lewis, who asked CIO unions to make it available to locals and to their membership.

The CIO memo, after outlining the scope of the Federal defense training program, points out that educational authorities in the communities are being asked to include labor representatives by the U. S. Office of Education in setting up their projects. CIO unions are urged to see that their members obtain places on these committees.

The memo also recommends use of the U. S. Employment Service by members seeking jobs in defense industries. It points out that there is no reason why CIO members should not secure jobs as instructors in the various schools.

Miners Ask Action As Death Claims 62

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Officials of the United Mine Workers today sent messages of consolation to the families of 62 coal miners killed in the Portage, Pa., disaster and at the same time voiced the hope that "the present Congress will find time between its political diversions to enact the mine safety bill."

The message, sent to John Barnes, recording secretary of UMW Local 1318, was signed by Pres. Lewis, Vice-Pres. Murray and Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy. It said:

"The international officers are profoundly shocked by the great disaster which has befallen members of local union 1318. The death of 62 members of our union is a most appalling tragedy.

"We grieve with their bereft families, and in the name of the entire mmbership of our great union, we express our sorrow. The international union is cooperating with the officers of District 2 in making available some degree of material assistance to the stricken families.

"The mine workers of the United States, with their dependents and neighbors, and the population of the mining areas, are hoping and praying that the present Congress will find time between its political diversions to enact the mine safety bill."

GAS KILLS MANY

A spark from a cutting machine was believed to have caused the initial explosion, while deadly gas which seeped throughout the mine killed many survivors who were unable to reach the surface. Only 21 employes were able to make their way to safety.

Meanwhile, resting comfortably in a House pigeonhole is the Neely-Keller mine safety bill, which calls for federal inspection of coal mines. Passed by the Senate at the insistence of the United Mine Workers, the bill has been bottled in he House Mining Committee ever since.

DEFY INJUNCTION: Refusing to give up their strike activities, as an injunction would have had them do, members of the Natl. Assn. of Die Casting Workers, CIO, maintained their picket line at the Cleveland plant of the Precision Casting Co. The workers, on strike for three weeks, are seeking union recognition and improved working conditions.

Aluminum Union Wins Increase, Calls Off Strike

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., July 20.—In response to pleas not to interfere with the nation's defense program, the CIO Aluminum Workers of America agreed last week to accept an hourly pay increase of two cents from the Aluminum Co. of America.

The settlement followed prolonged negotiations between the union, the company and U. S. government representatives. Although the increase was smaller than desired, AWA officials said it was a victory for the union, as it was the first time the big aluminum trust has ever agreed to pay any kind of a wage increase over the conference table.

25,000 BENEFIT

The pay raise, totaling some $1,400,000 a year, will cover about 25,000 workers in 13 Alcoa plants, including five plants employing around 16,000, organized by the AWA in New Kensington, Edgewater, N. J., Detroit, Mich., Alcoa, Tenn., and Badin, N. C.

AWA locals at New Kensing-Badin and Alcoa accepted the increase as proposed. The other two locals will vote on it shortly.

Commenting on the settlement, N. A. Zonarich, AWA president, said:

"While the settlement is not what it could be, it is the general consensus among aluminum workers that it is a big step forward, especially in these days of national emergency."

He declared that it undoubtedly would give impetus to the AWA organizing drive.

Charge Firm Flouts Anti-Fink Law

Cleveland, Ohio, July 20.— Violation of the Byrnes Act forbidding the importation of strike-breakers across state lines, is charged against the anti-union Precision Castings Company by the National Association of Die Casting Workers.

The CIO union has been conducting a struggle for several weeks to get the company to bargain collectively with the NADCW but the management has balked all attempts to have a properly supervised election.

HEARING IN PROGRESS

A hearing on holding an election is now held by the NLRB regional office, and the CIO Die Casters union predicts a smashing victory will be won when the poll takes place. Meanwhile the company has locked out some 100 of its employes who are members of the NADCW, and has snubbed the attempts of Mayor A. I. Kaufman and U. S. Department of Labor conciliators to mediate the dispute.

Canadian CIO Asks Britain Ban War Order Contracts To Non-Union Firms

GLACE BAY, N. S., July 20.—Placing of a clause in all contracts given Canadian manufacturers requiring them to bargain with unions of their employes own choosing has been asked in an appeal forwarded to the British government by Silby Barrett, chairman of the Canadian Committee for Industrial Organizations and international board member of the United Mine Workers of America for District 26.

Reason for this appeal was that 80 per cent of Canadian manufacturers refuse their employes collective bargaining and will not discuss wage rates or hours of employment with trade union representatives.

MESSAGE TO MORRISON

Addressed to Herbert Morrison, Minister of Supply in the British Government, Barrett's message expressed willingness to send a representative to London to discuss with British authorities all phases of the situation in the event the minister deemed such a move necessary.

The text of his cablegram follows:

"I am appealing to you on behalf of the Canadian workers to protect them in granting contracts for munitions and other war materials to the manufacturers of Canada.

"Eighty per cent of the Canadian manufacturers refuse their employes collective bargaining and will not discuss wage rates or hours of employment with the trade union representatives in these industries.

"We are asking you to write a clause in these contracts so that they will have to bargain with the union of the men's own choice.

FAKE UNIONS ABROAD

"They have company unions which are the same in principle as the Fascist unions in Germany and they are continually discriminating against the employes for joining independent unions.

"We have pledged our cooperation to the Canadian Government in the prosecution of the war and will continue to do so, but would like to have our industrial rights protected so that we may be able to sit around a conference table and discuss matters pertaining to the speeding up of munitions and other war materials in the different industries of Canada.

"I am writing you on this subject and if you deem it necessary we will have a representative go to London to explain the situation."

Hail Proposals On Govt. Procedure

Washington, July 20.—Proposals of the Attorney-General's Committee on Administrative Procedure was praised as "an intelligent approach to modern problems of administrative law" and sharp exception taken to the Walter-Logan bill now before congress in a CIO statement made to the Committee.

Two committee recommendations on procedure of the National Labor Relations Board were criticized by the CIO, though that section of the report was also commended as "an intelligent and informed answer to the wild and irresponsible charges and theories in administrative law, laid down in the pending amendments to the National Labor Relations Act in H. R. 8813, the so-called Smith bill."

"By contrast," the CIO statement said, "the proposals embodied in the Walter-Logan bill now pending before Congress appear to be based upon the assumption that administrative agencies are harmful to important private interests and must be rendered as harmless as possible by entangling their procedures with unworkable complexities, subjecting them to interminable delays, and exposing them to litigious tactics."

Strike Makers Of Venus Pencils

Hoboken, N. J., July 20.—(FP)— The plant of the American Lead Pencil Co., one of the largest pencil manufacturers in the country, was shut down here by a strike of 600 workers.

The walkout was called by Local 77A, Textile Workers Union of America, at the expiration of a two-year contract. The firm manufactures Venus pencils.

Co-operating with the CIO strikers, AFL teamsters and warehousemen have refused to cross the picket line. Demands of the strikers include an $18 weekly minimum, a 25 per cent wage increase for workers receiving more than $18 a week and two weeks' paid vacation.

The existing weekly minimum is $13 and only one week's vacation is given. In the past two years the firm has flatly refused to negotiate wage increases on the ground that it is losing money.

Transit Union Reports 16 New Locals

Atlantic City, July 20.—Substantial growth, represented by 16 new locals and thousands of additional members since the last convention featured the report of the International Executive Board of the Transport Workers Union, CIO, at its quarterly meeting here.

The Board concurred in CIO policy on national defense and renewed demands that America be kept out of war, declaring: "A genuine program of national defense must contemplate not only the preservation and protection of our territorial integrity, but must include provision for the fulfillment of the social and political aspirations of a democratic people."

Fremming to Direct Utility Poll Drive

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Harvey Fremming, former president of the CIO's Oil Workers International Union, was assigned this week by Allan Haywood, CIO Director of Organization, to direct activities in connection with the coming election among employes of the Consumers Power Company in Jackson, Michigan.

The National Labor Relations Board last week ordered a new election to be held within 45 days from July 10 at which employes will vote on being represented by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee, the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, or neither.

Fremming will replace Walter Smethurst as national CIO field representative in charge of CIO activities in the Michigan utility field. Smethurst, who is assistant CIO national director, was recently appointed to head up the aircraft drive of the CIO's United Automobile Workers.

As CIO field representative assigned to aid the UWOC in the Consumers Power election, Fremming faces a complicated case which has been pending for more than a year and a haf and involves a bitter fight with the AFL electrical union and conflicts with the Labor Board over election procedure.

cast. The official results were 1164 for the UWOC; 1072 for the IBEW and 506 for neither.

The Board therefore ordered a run-off election with spaces on the ballot for employes to choose between the UWOC and no union, but the IBEW held up the election by throwing the case into the federal courts where it dragged on for many months until the proceedings were finally dismissed by the Supreme Court.

NEW HEARING HELD

On March 4, 1940, the Board again called for a run-off but later set the election order aside and directed that a new hearing be held on the basis that its policy for holding run-off elections had been changed in connection with another case.

In these proceedings the UWOC pointed out that as 17 months have elapsed since the date of the first election new employes on the pay roll should be allowed to express their choice. The IBEW opposed the holding of a new election which would permit the new employes to vote, and wanted a run-off held between the IBEW and the UWOC based on the pay-roll used in previous elections.

The Board held that eligibility to vote should be based on the company's most recent payroll, with employes who have worked for the company for eight months and who have been laid off for less than six months entitled to vote.

Steel Union Parley

Indianapolis, Ind., July 20.—A district convention of all lodges of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Indianapolis area opens at Kokomo tomorrow, James Robb, CIO regional director, announced today. Robb, who will preside at the meeting, said that a national CIO representative will address the convention.

Find 'Fascism' In Southern Lumber Towns

FLAT CREEK, Ala., July 20 (FP)—The quarter million sawmill and woodpulp workers in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana and eastern Texas are almost totally unorganized and the 20,000 sawmills and woodworking plants are running their affairs almost as though federal and state laws didn't exist, officials of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America in the south report.

One shining exception is Flat Creek, the site of the first closed shop in the southern lumber industry. The CIO contract was signed last October with a subsidiary of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co., a unit of U. S. Steel. It covers 220 employes and guarantees a minimum wage almost three times as high as generally prevails in southern plants. The Flat Creek minimum is 42 cents an hour.

DISREGARD WAGE LAW

Though the U. S. Wage-Hour Act sets a minimum of 30 cents, most employers in the south pay 15 or 20 cents an hour. A wage of 22 cents is considered high. Some get around the law by claiming they are not in interstate commerce, but most of them arrogantly defy the statute, as most southern Federal appointees are political hacks who are more interested in their salaries than in enforcing the law. Sixty-two cents is the minimum elsewhere.

Recently the U. S. Department of Justice indicted southern manufacturers for conspiracy to evade Federal law and wage regulations.

HITLER ATMOSPHERE

One reason the employers can do as they please is because they maintain company towns with all the refinements of Hitler's concentration camps. Among such towns are Dierks, Ark., with 450 employes confined behind a barbwire stockade, Gibsley, La., where a cyclone fence holds them in, and Crosset, Ark., where the town is surrounded by a high fence.

Negro workers who talk back to the white foremen in many of the company towns are killed without compunction. A Negro CIO organizer who made his way into the Wood & Waters company town at Gibsley narrowly escaped lynching by being tipped off and helped over the cyclone fence at the back.

White organizers can't get into these towns except by posing as insurance agents, etc., in which case the gate boss will frequently let them in if they promise to split commissions with him 50-50.

Good organizing progress is reported by CIO men from the lumbering counties in Rep. Martin Dies' district in Texas. Ft. Smith, Ark. has a CIO sawmill local and Alabama has locals besides the one at Flat Creek. Work is less advanced in the other states. William Mitch and William Turnblazer, CIO directors in Alabama and Tennessee, have been particularly helpful in the drive.

An average of 40,000 workers is estimated in the lumber industry in each of the six states, ranging from almost 60,000 in Texas down to 25,000 in Mississippi.

Quarry Union Lifts Wages

Barre, Vt., July 20.—Hourly pay increases of 2½ cents and 5 cents an hour for 240 employes at the plant of the Certain-Teed Products Corp., in Akron, N. Y., are provided in a contract signed with the CIO Quarry Workers' Union, John C. Lawson, international union secretary-treasurer, announced here today.

In addition to the wage boost which is retroactive to July 1, paid vacations and improved working conditions are included in the terms of the contract.

Three Danby quarry workers will receive $450 in cash and two others will get cancellation of rent totaling $392.46 as result of a settlement between the Quarry Workers' International Union and the Vermont Marble Co., reached through the National Labor Relations Board.

A hearing to make final arrangements for a Board election among employes of the company is scheduled to be held in Rutland. Employes will vote on being represented by the CIO Quarry Union, the Independent Marble Workers of Vermont, or neither.

Industrial Store Clerks Get Pact, Pay Boost

EBENSBURG, Pa., July 20.—Some 550 employes of 38 industrial stores in four central Pennsylvania counties will get a yearly pay increase of $25,000 under the terms of a two-year agreement signed here with the CIO United Retail & Wholesale Employes.

In addition to a flat wage increase of $3 a month, the agreement also provides other improvements, including longer paid vacations, over the previous contract, which expired July 1. Terms of the new agreement are retroactive to the date of expiration of the old contract.

ENDS 'GIFT' OF TIME

A clause in the previous agreement calling upon each employe to give 48 hours "free time" annually was eliminated. Vacations were extended from one week for employes with one to five years' service, and ten days for those with more than five years' service, under the old contract, to two weeks for all employes with more than two years' service, and one week for those with one to two years' service.

During the negotiations, which extended over several weeks, the union was represented by Elmer Barger and Ben Gudes, URWEA international representatives; Meade Retallack of Ebensburg, president of the general council of the union; James Mark, president District 2, United Mine Workers, and local union leaders.

HOSPITAL PLAN: Pres. Lewis Merrill of the United Office & Professional Workers receives the first application for hospitalization under a new plan inaugurated by the union. Thousands of UOPWA members are expected to enroll.

Office Union Starts Hospital Care Plan

NEW YORK CITY, July 20. — Hospital services for the 45,000 members of the United Office & Professional Workers in all sections of the country are provided under a group hospitalization plan sponsored by this big CIO white collar union.

Underwritten by a large national insurance organization specializing in this sort of work, the plan allows the insured union member to choose any hospital he likes. Benefits are paid directly to the member or to the hospital if he so desires.

In a letter announcing the plan to officers of the 85 locals of the union in the principal cities of the United States and Canada, President Lewis Merrill said:

"On the basis of a unanimous vote of approval by the general executive board, we are recommending to the membership the hospital service plan devised for the UOPWA by the Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Association. Careful study has shown that this plan gives the most comprehensive coverage for the longest time of any in the low cost field.

MANY REQUESTS

"We have had many requests from our members for the establishment of a hospitalization plan. The Wagner Health Bill which we had once hoped would be passed in this session of Congress, has been definitely abandoned by the Administration.

"Our union, therefore, has taken this step to help our members, especially those in the low income groups, take care of their health needs. By mutual effort, the combined strength of all the locals affiliated to the international has been able to obtain benefits which would be beyond the power of any one local."

Farm Machine Men Vote On Merger With Auto Workers

CHICAGO, July 20.—A proposal that the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee merge with the United Automobile Workers has been recommended by the FEWOC executive board and will be voted on by affiliated farm equipment locals.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, who brought the two unions together for the first conference, declared that both organizations would submit the proposed merger to the national officers of the CIO for approval before it will go into effect, in conformity with an understanding arrived at in the first conference.

In announcing the vote to be held on the merger, Grant Oakes, chairman of the FEWOC said:

"With a splendid record behind us, we must now consider the next major step that is before us in our progress toward organizing all of the workers in our industry."

FEWOC PROPOSAL

The FEWOC executive board in recommending ratification of the merger to combine all FEWOC and UAW farm equipment locals into a farm equipment department of the United Auto Workers stated:

"We propose that this merger be contingent upon the UAW ruling that delegates from the FEWOC locals be seated with full voice and vote at the UAW convention and that a farm equipment worker who has proved his ability be selected to head the UAW Farm Equipment Department."

Seek Pact With Gotham

New York, July 20. — Conferences will soon be held with Mayor LaGuardia of New York to discuss the raising of sub-standard wage rates in the city's two municipally-owned radio stations, WYNC and WNYF, the CIO American Communications Assn. said today.

The Union pointed out that employes of WNYF, which maintains two-way radio communication with the city's fireboats and fire department squad cars, have a constantly growing responsibility, while entrance salaries have decreased during the past few years.

Utah CIO Miners Win Vacations

Salt Lake City, July 20.—Paid vacations and exclusive recognition—both firsts in the mining industry of Utah—plus about $385,000 in wage boosts, were won by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in a state-wide contract just signed with 13 companies throughout Utah.

The wage boost brings to over $700,000 the amount of money put into the pockets of CIO mining and smelter workers by the union. In addition, the contract includes grievance adjustment machinery, adjustment of wage differentials, and a retroactive clause that will pay the increases as of July 1.

Signing came after long negotiations which culminated in a 4,000 to 700 strike vote by the union men represented in 12 Mine Mill and Smelter Workers locals. Last-minute intervention came from the U. S. Labor Dept., which informed the union that the U. S. Defense Commission was seriously concerned over the possibilities of a strike.

Eight Workers To Divide $9,000 Check

Mooresville, N. C., July 20.—For more than four years the Mooresville Cotton Mills here fought its union workers out one court and in another in a battle with the National Labor Relations Board. At last it has conceded defeat.

A check for the lump sum of $9,000 for back wages due was turned over recently to the NLRB regional director for distribution to eight members of the Textile Workers Union of America.

The workers, who received sums ranging from $500 to $1600 each, were taken back on the job under an order of the Labor Board in March, but the company continued to stall about complying with the order to pay the unionists back wages.

DATES FROM 1935

The case dates back to October, 1935. Early in 1936 charges against the company were filed with the NLRB. The mill fought the case through several courts, including two trips to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

T. F. Moore, president of Local 1221 of the TWUA, to which the eight reinstated workers belong, said both the local and the members who won out were much elated over the victory.

Seamen Win $5 Increase

New York, July 20.—CIO seamen in the coastwise trade have won a $5.00 a month wage increase through the Natl. Maritime Union. About 1800 workers will benefit by the raise, which was secured in renewing agreements with five companies.

The raise brings monthly pay scales to from $60 to $90 for workers in the deck department, from $65 to $87.50 in the engine department, and from $60 to $125 in the stewards' department.

BIG PARADE

San Francisco.—The biggest Labor Day parade in San Francisco history is expected this year, according to local CIO officials.

Elect Liberals To Congress, Lewis Urges Labor League

CIO Head Demands U. S. Stop Buying From Law-Breakers

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Number One policy of Labor's Non-Partisan League at this time is to work for the election of Senators and Congressmen who will "cast their votes and exercise their office in behalf of the people of America," Chairman John L. Lewis wrote to all LNPL officials today.

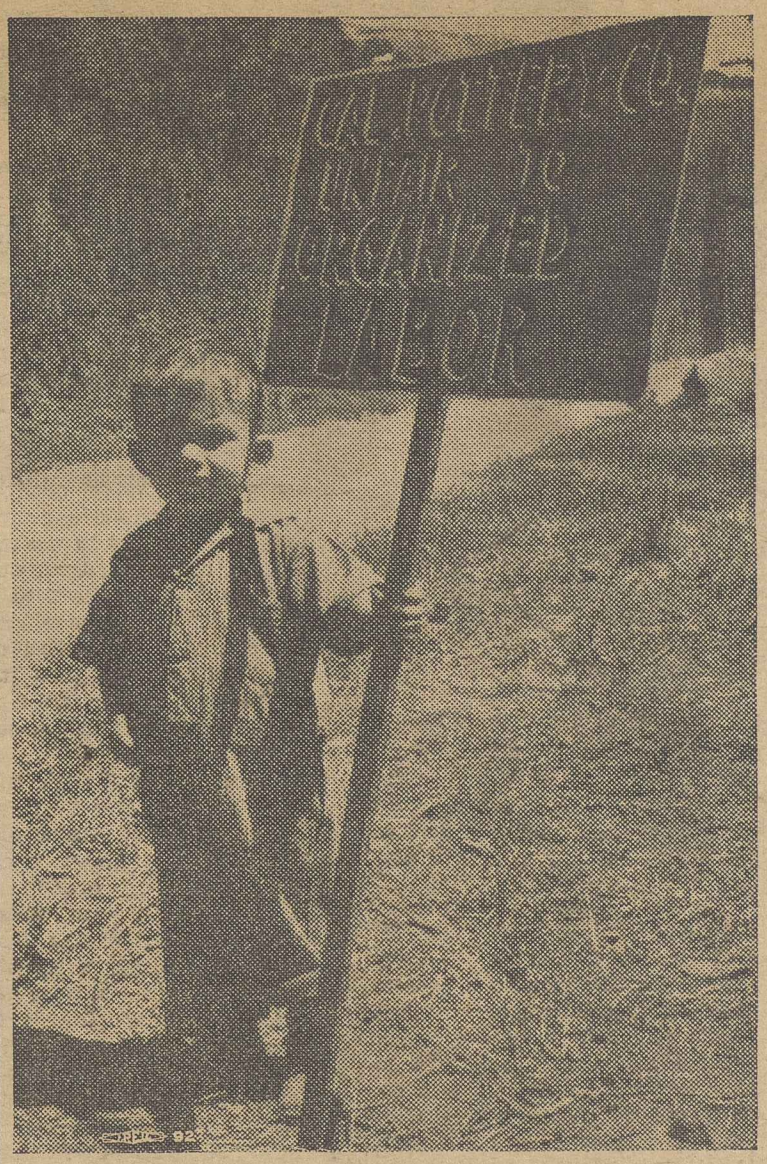
Labor's great social gains of the past few years are "in jeopardy," Lewis pointed out, both because of "brutal warfare abroad" and because of "vicious hysteria at home."

No matter who wins the Presidential election, the letter predicted, American working people will be out of luck unless they elect representatives to Congress who can be depended upon to support progressive legislation.

It was a busy week for the CIO leader. Earlier he had sent to all CIO affiliates a sheaf of correspondence between himself and Pres. Roosevelt and Natl. Defense Advisory Commissioner Sidney Hillman in which he asked for an Executive Order to bar government purchasing contracts from firms which violate the Wagner Act. He recalled the successful efforts of a Tory Democrat-Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers bloc to prevent passage of legislation to this effect, and renewed his demands upon the White House for action. (Story Page 3.)

A day later Lewis, acting in his capacity as head of the United Mine Workers, wrote to all members of the House and, after calling attention to the death toll in the latest of a frightful series of coal mine accidents, urged immediate passage of the Neely-Keller bill for federal inspection of mine properties. (Story Page 2.)

Plan Defense Labor Training Program



Washington, July 27.—Defense Commission officials announced here that plans for a conference on labor training in industry were now ready and that a group representing labor, government and the defense industries would meet shortly to work out a detailed program.

The committee also agreed to conduct a survey of the number of workers needed for defense and worked a general program designed to train apprentices, retrain workers to refresh their skill where necessary, and generally increase the skills of industrial workers.

CIO members of the committee include Clinton Golden of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, John Green of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and Walter Reuther of the United Automobile Workers.

Appointed

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., July 27.—Sec.-Treas. George Hobaugh of the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO, has been appointed a member of the Westmoreland Housing Authority, county commissioners announced today.

Engineers Win Back Pay For 223

New York, July 27.—Back pay for 223 workers in the Lummus Company, designers of oil refineries, have been paid $13,845 in back pay for overtime as the result of protest by the CIO Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians to the Wage Hour Division of the U. S. Labor Dept.

The backpay came when the Division found the company had violated the act by classifying technical workers as professionals, which would have exempted them from the law. The investigation and decisions came after the Technicians union had filed charges against the company.

Oil Drive In Texas

Houston, Tex., July 27 — An intensive union drive by District Four, Oil Workers International Union, embracing the area from the Rio Grande River on the west to the Mississippi on the east, was announced here this week at union headquarters. Union officials estimated that the territory contained a potential membership of 100,000 oil workers.

Center of activity will be the Humble Oil Refinery at Baytown, one of the largest refineries in the Gulf Coast area. It employs upward of 4,000 men.

Regional Director Maurice J. Dineen is in charge of the drive with three field representatives—Bob Calloway, Sarge Kintsley and Jack Knight — working with him.

Plans for the campaign have been under way for three months.

Paper Workers Get Improvements

Kansas City, Mo., July 27.—CIO Local 179, United Paper Box Workers, has just won contracts with the Central Products Manufacturing Co., and the United Manufacturing Co. here, Neil Beam, CIO regional director, reported today.

A 5 per cent wage increase, vacations with pay, seniority, the union shop and checkoff of union dues were contained in the two agreements.

Form CIO Council In New York City, Elect Curran Head

NEW YORK, July 27.—A powerful Industrial Union Council for the world's biggest city was established at a meeting here attended by 234 delegates from 118 CIO local unions and seven joint boards. It will speak for a city movement of close to 400,000 members.

Pres. Joseph Curran of the National Maritime Union was unanimously elected president of the Greater New York Indus-trial Union Council, as the new body will be known.

Other officers elected include Austin Hogan of the Transport Workers, first vice-president; John Cooney of the United Retail & Wholesale Employes, second vice-president; Saul Mills of the American Newspaper Guild, full-time secretary-treasurer; and Joseph F. Manning, United Cemetery Workers, sergeant-at-arms.

In addition an executive board of 16 members, representing the major unions in New York City, was elected.

President John L. Lewis sent greetings and congratulations, declaring that the new Council will fill a great need and add prestige to the CIO in New York City. It will strengthen all of the unions by solidifying their ranks and uniting their aims, purposes and objectives."

HAYWOOD SPEAKS

The meeting was opened by Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, who went into the history of efforts to form a New York City Council, culminating in action by the CIO national executive board. John Brophy and Michael Widman of CIO national office, as well as many delegates from the floor, also stressed the importance of the Council's formation after so many delays.

ENDORSE LEWIS' CALL

One of the first actions of the new Council was to pass a resolution endorsing the steps taken by President John L. Lewis to prevent government contracts going to Wagner Act violators, and calling upon President Roosevelt to issue an executive order to this effect.

A message from Irving Potash, New York Fur Workers' leader, in prison on a frameup for union organizing activities, brought a demonstration of sympathy from the delegates. It was unanimously resolved to condemn the frameup, send a telegram of greetings and demand release of Potash and other framed Fur Workers.

The Council will be financed by epr capita payments of one cent per member per month from affiliated locals. It will establish headquarters at the CIO office, 1133 Broadway.

CIO Man On Canada's Labor Board

Ottawa, Ont., July 27.—C. H. Millard, secretary of the Canadian CIO, has been appointed alternate member to the 20-man National Labor Supply Council, established recently by the federal government.

The duties of the board will be to advise "on any matters touching labor supply for industry which may be referred to it by the minister of labor."

Chairman of the board is Arthur J. Hills, chief of personnel of the Canadian National Railways.

Plan for 1941 Campaign

WASHINGTON, July 27.—CIO members in Maryland will be prepared well in advance for whatever battles they may face in the coming session of the Maryland General Assembly, due to open early in 1941. They are being urged by the Maryland-D. C. CIO Council to start drafting campaign plans now, though the session is five months away.

Among other points, the Council has suggested getting ready to campaign for a state labor relations act, for a state wage-hour law, and for liberalizing the present system of unemployment compensation.

Miners Press Drive for Passage Of Safety Bill, Cite Death Toll

JOSEPH CURRAN

Washington, July 29. — Some 1,538 coal miners have lost their lives during the "14-month procrastination" period in which the Neely-Keller mine safety bill has been bottled up in Congress, Pres. John L. Lewis reminded all members of the House of Representatives today.

Lewis' letter pointed out that four serious mine disasters in the past two years—at Providence, Ky., Bartley, W. Va., Willow Grove, O., and Portage, Pa.—have snuffed out the lives of 254 miners, leaving 186 widows and 418 orphans.

'APPALLING'

"This is an appalling series of disasters," Lewis told the Congressmen, and it would have been "entirely preventable by proper mine inspection and proper management of the mines by the operating companies."

"It would seem," the UMW official continued, "that ordinarily humane consideration would cause the average member of Congress to desire to cast at least one vote to prevent the continuous killing of coal miners.

"This mining bill can be passed within the next week or ten days if each member of Congress will only resolve to take a few minutes' time to exercise his personal influence. Surely, each member of Congress would wish to do this much.

COMMITTEE INACTIVE

"The inactivity of the Committee in charge of the Bill admits no other interpretation than desire to strangle the measure. This appalling wastage of human life continues, and the families of the dead are left to become objects of public charity.

"May I not strongly urge the personal attention and personal support of this measure by each member of Congress. The effort will cost so little and the sum total of the human agony involved is so great that in all sincerity the request for immediate action is justified by every human consideration."

The bill, S. 2420, was passed by the Senate in January of this year. Referred to the House Commitete on Mines, the bill was pigeonholed by a subcommittee. Some hearings were held in June, but in the ensuing six weeks no action has been taken.

Metal Miners To Hear Pres. Lewis

Denver, Colo., July 27. — CIO Pres. John L. Lewis will address the 37th annual convention of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, on Tuesday, August 6, Pres. Reid Robinson announced today.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, and Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, have also accepted invitations, Robinson said. Sidney Hillman, CIO vice-president and member of the Natl. Defense Advisory Commission, has informed the union that he will make every effort to attend.

The convention opens at the Albany Hotel here on August 5. Problems of finances, organizational plans and issues arising out of the present national defense program will occupy key spots on the parley's agenda.

Back-to-Work Plan Flops At Steel Firm

Indianapolis, Ind., July 27.—Its attempted back-to-work movement a complete bust, the J. D. Adams Manufacturing Co. today took the easy way to end a 56-day strike by signing a contract with Local 1262 of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

James D. Robb, SWOC and CIO director here, hailed the agreement, which followed more than 40 conferences in two years. Breakdown of the negotiations led to the calling of the strike.

The company unsuccessfully tried back-to-work movements during the walkout, but the union members held steadfastly together and finally won their contract.

PLAN LABOR DAY FETE

Stockton, Cal., July 27—Plans are under way here for a two-day Labor Day celebration to be held September 1-2. The committee in charge said that the biggest labor day parade ever held in the city will march down the streets to tunes played by drum and bugle corps.

Immediately following the parade a free barbecue will be served at Oak Park.

A baseball game between Stockton police department and Stockton longshoremen will be the big event of the afternoon.

Coast Anti-Labor Case Goes to Trial Again as Jury Splits

STOCKTON, Calif., July 27.—Twelve members of the State, County & Municipal Workers, CIO, are on trial here for the second time charged with contempt for refusal to testify before a state legislative committee set up to investigate and report on relief costs in California. The first trial held last month resulted in a hung jury.

The union charges that the committee, headed by Assemblyman San Yorty, and dubbed the "Little Dies" committee, has directed its efforts toward attacking unionism under the guise of studying relief administration costs.

A statement issued by the union's defense committee says that when the Yorty committee first started its investigation, the union co-operated willingly. Members answered all questions, only to find that the committee "swung the red herring in all directions, humiliated the workers personally, and gave out sensational interviews to the avid press."

28 DISMISSED

After an investigation conducted by Yorty in Alameda county, the relief director and 28 workers, 27 of them union members, were fired. "Now knowing itself to be under attack," the defense committee said, "the union had obtained legal advice that the (Yorty) committee had no right to ask personal questions, or subpoena union records."

Therefore, during Yorty's next investigation, this time in Tulare county, members of the SCMW local decided not to answer any questions regarding confidential union business. Joseph Zukas, financial secretary of the local, who refused to supply Yorty with a complete list of all persons paying dues, was later given a 60-day term and fined $100. Now out on bail, Zukas is on tour in the east to raise funds for the defense of the unionists.

THREE 'CONTEMPT' TRIALS

Seventeen other unionists were tried for contempt of the committee in three separate trials by a justice of the peace in Stockton. The first two trials, in which the police judge refused to admit a single defense motion, ended after 15 minutes with the conviction of five of the defendants. They were sentenced to one year and fined $500 and released on $2,000 bail each, pending appeal.

The 12 remaining unionists were tried in June, the trial ending June 28 with a hung jury. The re-trial of the 12, which began July 16, is now in progress here, with a jury being selected. The union charges that the judge and the prosecuting attorney show open prejudice against unionism in the conduct of the trial. Several special panels were exhausted before a jury was selected.

Court Upholds Glass Union's Position

Columbus, Ohio, July 27.—A decision of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals upholding Labor Board certification of the CIO's Federation of Flat Glass Workers as sole bargaining agency for employes of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., was hailed jubilantly at union headquarters here as "another step forward in complete organization of the glass industry."

The Board's order upheld by the court, certified the Federation as the proper union representative for all production and maintenance employes, excluding window glass cutters, in the company's flat glass plants at Mt. Vernon, O.; Clarksburg, W. Va.; Henryetta, Okla.; Crystal City, Mo.; Creighton, Pa., and Ford City, Pa.

Stop U.S. Contracts to Law Violators, Lewis Demands

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The U. S. Government, now engaged in making "patriotism profitable for American finance and industry," is subsidizing anti-union corporations that violate its own laws, John L. Lewis told CIO Executive Board members this week.

The subsidies come through highly profitable contracts freely given to consistent violators of the Wagner Act, he said, and three years of steady campaigning by the CIO have been blocked by Administration and Congress majority leaders' refusal to act.

Lewis' statement came in a letter to all Board members in which he pointed to huge contracts going to such firms as Douglas Aircraft, Bethlehem Steel, Electric Boat and others notorious for their defiance of the Wagner Act, and in which he detailed the history of attempts to stop the practice and urged all affiliates to press for action from the Administration and from the Defense Commission.

The circular to Board members also contained a letter from Lewis to Sidney Hillman in his capacity as labor coordinator to the Defense Council, urging Hillman to use his influence in support enforcing the Act.

"Under the urge of a declared emergency, the Government is making patriotism profitable for American finance and industry," Lewis wrote. "Surely it is not too much to expect of Government that it will also protect the inherent and statutory rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively.

"Labor, as well as industry, has

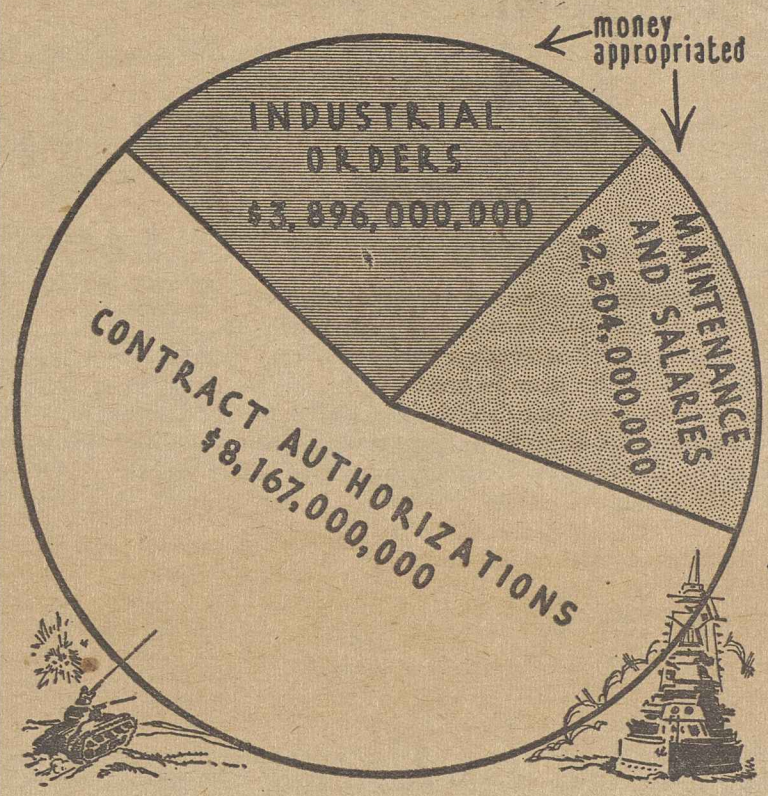
Win Coast Aircraft Election

Los Angeles, July 27.—Aircraft workers at the big Vultee plant in Downey near here, largest aircraft concern in southern California, gave the CIO's new aircraft drive a fine start last week by voting 1439 to 512 for the United Automobile Workers at an election held by the Labor Board.

Of the 1968 ballots cast, 1439 were for the CIO union, 512 against, and 17 were blank, void or challenged.

CIO representatives here called the Vultee poll a key election, as it is the first to be held by the National Labor Relations Board since the CIO speeded up its national aircraft drive.

'A SPRINGBOARD'



Walter Smethurst, recently appointed to head up the drive who arrived in Los Angeles before the election, declared after the vote was announced that the union's victory at the Vultee plant "would act as a springboard for further gains."

"There is now an election pending at the Ryan plant in San Diego," he said, "and more than 2000 signatures have been gathered on petitions circulated at the North American plant in Inglewood." There are some 50,000 aircraft workers altogether in southern California, union officials estimate.

Wyndham Mortimer, in charge of the UAW aircraft drive in this region said after the election: "This is but the first step. The low wages and insecurity in the life of aircrafters make it imperative that they be protected by a strong industrial union. We have that union.

"When aircraft workers in the the rest of the industries see the gains to be made by the Vultee workers, we have no doubt that they will follow the lead."

The election was the climax of a six months' campaign to win the right of collective bargaining for the Vultee workers, during which the United Auto Workers were given support by other unions in the area.

NOTES: The total of $14,567 million to be spent for national defense is reached by adding the appropriations and authorizations already made, those now before Congress for action and those officially proposed by the President. Some of the money is not yet actually appropriated or authorized, but it is expected that such action will follow the request of the President.

Send Liberals To Congress, Lewis Urges

WASHINGTON, July 27.—John L. Lewis, acting in his capacity as chairman of Labor's Non-Partisan League, today defined the major policy of that organization during the coming months as "the election of Congressmen and Senators who will cast their votes and exercise their office in behalf of the people of America."

The League chairman pointed out that "regardless of who may be the next President of the United States, we are confronted with this fact: If the men and women who are elected to the halls of Congress cannot be depended on to support the welfare of the people through legislation, no man in however high office can or will give labor what it needs."

The statement, sent to all LNPL state and local officials, stressed the fact that "whether labor achieves its program depends squarely on the men and women whom we elect to the United States Congress and Senate."

'HECTIC BARGAINING'

Lewis' message, his first comment on political matters since the party conventions, expressed regrets to the LNPL officials that "in this hectic business of bargaining for the rights of labor, both in the industrial and political field," he had been unable to "speak with you personally on these matters at every turn."

This statement, it was pointed out by the League, was based on experience after the 1936 Democratic landslide, when, despite campaign pledges by Pres. Roosevelt, enactment of the Wage-Hour law to ban sweatshops was delayed nearly two years by a coalition of Democrats and Republicans in Congress.

LABOR GAINS MENACED

Lewis pointed to the grave national situation which makes it more important than ever that labor's political voice be heard.

"The great social gains which labor has made through its organization and through political action are in jeopardy," he wrote. "Brutal warfare abroad and vicious hysteria at home are beclouding the issues that confront the labor people of Amer-

CIO Laundry Workers Win Big Pay Lift

New York, July 27. — Gotham's laundry workers today looked forward to an immediate $300,000 annual wage boost, won for them through the efforts of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The increase came in the form of an order from the industry's impartial chairman wiping out flat 35c-an-hour minimum wage rates and replacing them with base rates ranging from 36 to 41c an hour and from $18 to $40 a week.

The arbitration award developed out of the collective bargaining agreement between the ACW's laundry division and nine laundry owners' associations last November. Following the pact, a study of the industry's wage rates was made by employers and the union.

Hyman Blumberg, manager of the union's laundry joint board; Noah Walters, assistant manager, and Dr. Gladys Dickason, ACW research director, argued the union's case before the impartial chairmen.

Blumberg, hailing the new min-

Text of Lewis' Letter on Government Contracts

Following is the full text of Pres. Lewis' covering letter to the CIO Executive Board, in which he calls for immediate action to stop U. S. government contracts going to firms that violate the Wagner Labor Relations Act:

Under the urge of a declared emergency, the Government is making patriotism profitable for American finance and industry. Surely it is not too much to expect of Government that it will also protect the inherent and statutory rights of labor to organize and bargain collectively. Labor, as well as industry, has declared its willingness and desire to cooperate completely in making effective a program of national defense. Assuredly, if under this program, industry is to wax opulent, then labor as a partner of Government should at least be permitted to live and not be deprived of its rights by concerns which enjoy attractive and profitable Governmental contracts.

Three-Year Effort

For three years, the CIO has sought to have the Congress or the Executive Branch of Government agree that corporations and individuals contracting with the Government should stipulate that they will conform to the provisions of the National Labor Relations Act. Legislation to this end has passed the Senate three times, and each time it was killed in the House of Representatives by the Rules Committee and the House Majority Organization.

It is high time to renew the effort for the acceptance of the simple formula that lawless corporations and individuals should not be privileged to act in the capacity of purveyors to our Government.

I am therefore writing each member of the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, transmitting, herewith attached, copy of the formal presentation which I have made to Commissioner Hillman of the Defense Advisory Commission. This document contains:

a. Copy of my letter to Mr. Hillman dated July 15, 1940.
b. Tentative draft of Executive Order, directing the insertion of a provision in Government contracts requiring compliance with the National Labor Relations Act.
c. Legal analysis of the subject; and
d. Copies of correspondence between the President of the United States and this office, bearing upon the subject matter.

Urges Support

The Executives of the CIO should take the necessary time to read and analyze this document. It is of tremendous importance, and it is essential that each affiliated organization should give precise and definite support to this policy. The members of each affiliated organization should be made acquainted with this subject and their cooperation enlisted. The Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense and the Council of National Defense should be urged to give formal consideration to the question of policy involved.

At your early convenience, I should like to be advised of any definitely cooperative steps or actions which your union may take in the premises.

Sincerely

/s/ JOHN L. LEWIS

THAT BOARDING HOUSE REACH

Labor and the Elections

In outlining the position of Labor's Non-Partisan League on the coming elections, John L. Lewis, in his capacity as League chairman, makes a number of important points:

(1) Labor's strength in politics, just as in collective bargaining, rests on its organized strength. Union strength is at the highest point it has ever reached, making labor a great political force. The League's job is to impress the will of labor and the common people on the politicians.

(2) Brutal warfare abroad and vicious hysteria at home are beclouding the issues confronting labor, and threatening the social gains it has made.

(3) Further social progress to bring a better life to the people depends on labor's efforts. But labor must have allies among other groups. On the basis of contacts established with youth, Negro, pension, farm and liberal organizations, Lewis notes that "many outstanding groups are ready to work with labor."

(4) The major policy of Labor's Non-Partisan League is to secure the election of Congressmen and Senators who will carry out labor's program. For no matter who is elected President, he cannot give labor what it needs, unless the members of Congress can be depended upon to support the welfare of the people through legislation.

(5) The League will continue to advance concrete legislative proposals to meet the people's needs. All candidates for office must be checked on their practical response to such proposals, and not accepted at their own evaluation of themselves. Voting records of incumbent Senators and Congressmen, which the League can supply, should be carefully studied.

In a word, labor has great political power. If it keeps its head, refuses to be confused by campaign ballyhoo, acts in an intelligent and organized fashion, applies the test of its own program to all candidates, it can make this power effective in electing a new Congress that will be more responsive to the people's will.

Flying Start

The three-to-one vote for the CIO at the big Vultee aircraft plant at Downey, Calif., gets the recently announced organizing drive off to a flying start. The Labor Board election results showed the CIO United Automobile Workers to be the choice of the workers by a vote of 1,439 to 512.

This victory is the fruit of long and hard preparatory organizing work, and was aided by the cooperation of other CIO unions in the area.

With other aircraft elections pending in Southern California, the Vultee success opens the way to more victories in the near future. And with a national campaign now launched in the industry, it will inspire all other aircraft workers throughout the country to become speedily organized in a powerful CIO industrial union which can better their wages and conditions and assure them of the protection to which they are entitled.

Thanks to CIO

Millions of industrial workers and their families who are enjoying well-earned vacations this year can thank the CIO for them.

A survey by an employer research agency, the Natl. Industrial Conference Board, covering 2,700 companies, shows that 46.4% of them had vacation plans for hourly paid employes.

In 1935, before the CIO got going, only 17.9% of them had such plans. In other words, the number of companies granting paid vacations increased 160% in four years since the CIO started organizing.

The very idea that industrial workers are as much entitled as anyone else to vacations, without forfeiting their wages got its first impetus from CIO demands.

In some cases, vacations were granted to forestall CIO organization. But in most cases, they are now written into and secured by CIO union contracts, and the CIO is constantly working to extend their benefits to more and more workers.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IF YOU park in the wrong place downtown, the law will catch up with you pretty promptly. If you steal a dollar or two, you'll probably be sent to jail.

After all, laws are laws and he who breaks them must expect to be punished. You don't expect the cop to smile indulgently and reward you with a ticket to the ball game, for being so enterprising as to find the one vacant place, in front of a fire plug.

You don't expect such things, that is to say, if you are a plain person without much money or pull.

But if you are the head of a big corporation, a big shot, and the law you want to break is a big-time law, affecting the welfare of millions of plain people, why then, by gad, it's different!

Then you not only expect but you demand the right to break the law with impunity. More than that, you expect your government to uphold you in this right and to reward you substantially, and in hard cash, for your enterprise.

If labor is so "unreasonable" as to ask the government at least not to regard a lawbreaker with its fattest plums, you holler to high heaven through a hundred papers that this would be a "blacklist." Your politicians get busy juggling the buck in all directions and trying to shush up the whole subject.

And the final impression left with the innocent public is that laws to protect the rights of labor and the common people are of the pie-crust kind—meant to be broken, and just waiting for the Big Jack Horners of business to stick in their thumbs and pull out nice fat government contract plums, and say "What a good boy am I!"

Amazing Story

If fifty fifth columnists had sat up fifty nights thinking how to smear American democracy, they could not have done a better job than has been done by the public awards granted to corporations that violate the Wagner Act.

It is an amazing and a discreditable story that is revealed in the carefully reasoned documents and letters released by Pres. John L. Lewis of the CIO on this subject.

For three years, he points out, the CIO has been trying to have Congress or the executive branch of government do something to end the public scandal of government coddling and encouragement of concerns that break the labor law.

Companies which refuse to engage in collective bargaining, and can pay the lowest wages as a result, are given an unfair competitive advantage in bidding for government business, as against companies which obey the law.

The remedy for this is a simple one. The government, which is supposed to enforce the laws enacted by Congress, should no more consider a bid that is based on lawbreaking than should a judge allow a convicted thief to buy courtroom fixtures with stolen money.

Yet the CIO has been rebuffed again and again, as the documents show, in all its attempts to obtain this simple measure of justice.

Urgent Now

The purpose of the Wagner labor relations act is to promote industrial peace and uninterrupted production by establishing orderly collective bargaining where the workers desire it.

The achievement of this purpose is all the more important at the present time for the success of the national defense program; and with the great extension of government contracts, the government has a clear duty to see that the law is observed by the contractors with whom it deals.

That is why the CIO has renewed its urgent demand that the President issue and executive order to this effect. This was done under the Natl. Industrial Recovery Act, it is pointed out, when the President issued an executive order excluding from government bidding all firms unwilling to comply with the code of their industry.

Throttled in House

The efforts of the CIO to get Congressional action on this subject are story by themselves.

Three times legislation to this end has passed the Senate. But each time it has been killed in the House by the Rules Committee and the majority party leaders.

The issue is so clear-cut that House leaders have apparently been afraid to let it come to open debate on the floor and have throttled it each time in committee.

The last time it was introduced was in the form of an amendment by Senator Barkley to one of the military bills The War and Navy Departments ganged up against it with the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers on the ground that "business appeasement" was essential to national defense. Lewis points out, and "Vice Pres. Garner and Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn organized a bloc in Congress to bring pressure on the conferees to defeat the Barkley amendment."

Because labor is concerned for national defense, because it believes in American democracy, because it considers the law should be impartially enforced on rich and poor alike, it is not going to let this issue drop until some action is taken to end the special privileges granted by government to violators of the labor act.

Ban War Orders To Wagner Act Flouters, Is Plea

declared its willingness and its desire to cooperate completely in making effective a program of national defense. Assuredly, if under this program, industry is to wax opulent, then labor as a partner of Government should at least be permitted to live and not be deprived of its rights by concerns which enjoy attractive and profitable Government contracts."

LEGISLATION KILLED

The CIO campaign to take the profit out of lawbreaking began three years ago, Lewis said, and secured passage of such legislation three times in the Senate, only to have it killed in the lower House by the Rules Committee and the majority leadership.

"It is high time to renew the effort for the acceptance of the simple formula that lawless corporations and individuals should not be privileged to act in the capacity of purveyors to our Government," he added.

The lengthy document sent to the CIO Board, which Lewis described as of "tremendous importance" contained four main sections:

1. Lewis' letter to Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman, urging him to work for a correct Government policy on contracts.

2. Draft of an executive order for President Roosevelt's signature, requiring compliance with the Wagner Act by all government contractors.

3. A supporting memorandum giving the legal basis for such an order.

4. Copies of six letters between Lewis and President Roosevelt, in which Lewis urged him to sign the order and in which Roosevelt replied with offers of "technical assistance" from the Labor Dept. in drafting "remedial legislation."

LETTER TO HILLMAN

The letter to Hillman, after pointing to the need for executive action and enclosing the draft order, legal memo and correspondence with the White House, concluded: "Allow me to urge upon you the very great importance of establishing the proper governmental policy at this time, and my own conviction that you and your associate Commissioners should at once move in support of such a policy."

Ample legal basis for such an order exists, Lewis pointed out in the supporting memo, not only in various precedents but in the basic principles of the Wagner Act. These principles, "to promote industrial peace and uninterrupted production, are reasonably and necessarily related to the power of the Federal Government to secure the performance of its contracts," he said.

THE LETTERS

The correspondence between Lewis and President Roosevelt began with a letter from Lewis of January 18, 1939, in which he told Roosevelt that numerous lawbreaking firms were getting U. S. contracts and in which he asked for an executive order to put a stop to it.

Roosevelt replied that he was "very much concerned" at Lewis' revelations, but declaring that the proposed order "drafted along the lines you suggest would be open to the gravest legal doubt." He suggested that Lewis seek "remedial legislation in Congress."

Lewis' next letter reminded the President that "remedial legislation" had been killed by the House Rules Committee, although the Senate had passed it, and urged again that the order be issued. In addition, he said, the Labor Dept. had refused to press for passage of the bill "because of its controversial nature."

The President, in reply, again was doubtful that the order would be legal, repeated his suggestion of "remedial legislation," and once again offered the "technical assistance" of the Labor Dept. in drafting it.

THE NAM TIEUP

In his third and final letter, Lewis charged that the Natl. Association of Manufacturers and Administration officials combined to block passage of an amendment to a military bill that had passed the Senate — making the third time such a measure had gone through—on the grounds that "business appeasement" was essential to defense.

The letter, most sharply worded of the series, said:

"However, the War and Navy Depts. of the Federal Administration took it upon themselves to write to the conferees vigorously against the enactment of the Barkley amendment.

"The only other opposition to this amendment came from the Natl. Association of Manufacturers which indicated that to adopt the Barkley amendment was in effect a blow at 'business appeasement.'

"In other words, the War and Navy Depts. and the NAM have determined that 'business appeasement' and the 'protection of national defense' must necessarily involve the destruction of labor unions and deprivation of the fundamental rights of the workers to organize into unions of their own choosing."

This experience, Lewis added, made it hard to see how "we can attempt to obtain through the Democratic Administration legislation that would prevent corporations which flout the law of the land from receiving the benefits of profitable government contracts."

Auto Union Membership Up 93% in Year, Delegates Told

By EDWARD LEVINSON

ST. LOUIS, July 29.—Sensational gains on all fronts for the United Automobile Workers, CIO, are reported to the fourth constitutional convention of the union which opens here today. President R. J. Thomas reports:

R. J. THOMAS

1. That paidup membership in May, 1940, was 294,428, the highest point since 1937 and a 93 per cent increase over the paidup membership of May, 1939.

2. That 327 additional companies, plants or garages have been brought under contract within the last year, making a total of 647 plants under contract, covering 412,352 workers.

3. That of 160 NLRB elections, the UAW-CIO won in plants employing 227,417, while the AFL dual group (mentioned in the report under "obituary") won in plants employing 8,803.

These were the highlights of a 105-page printed report prepared by Thomas for the convention delegates.

REVIEWS CAMPAIGNS

The report deals in detail with the great campaigns by which the International Union and the GM department, under Bro. Walter P. Reuther, and the Chrysler department, under Bro. Richard T. Frankensteen, rebuilt the membership and standing of the union in those giant corporations.

Dealing with other companies, the report analyzes the constantly improved type of agreements signed. Whereas a year ago the union spoke only for its members, today it has sole bargaining right for virtually every plant under contract, the report states.

Facing the tasks still ahead in a practical vein, the report outlines the progress and plans for the Ford organizing campaign, among unorganized campetitive shops, and in the aircraft and farm equipment industries.

Canadian auto workers' gains, despite the emergency of the war situation, are also detailed in the report.

The heavy tasks successfully completed by the auxiliary departments, including publication, publicity, legal, legislative, WPA-welfare, education, recreation and women's auxiliary, indicate the extent to which the union has emerged as an efficient, functioning organization.

WAR SITUATION NOTED

Pres. Thomas concludes his report with a solemn reference to the outbreak of war in Europe and with a pledge of the UAW-CIO for cooperation in the defense program. He warned, however, against efforts to whittle down or destroy labor and social legislation.

"We hold," says the report, "that military and naval defense and the well-being of our working-people must go hand in hand if our country is to be a unified force, able to withstand and defeat any threats to our existence as a democratic and sovereign nation."

Negotiate Pacts

New York, July 27.—The Furniture Workers Union Local 76-B is negotiating at present with employers of various trades in the industry where the agreements expire August 1 and September 1. To date the union, an affiliate of the United Furniture Workers, has succeeded in renewing contracts with six shops, and expects to sign many more during the next week or two.

ica. Under the guise of spurious ideals, the great gains made by labor are today threatened as never before."

Labor, he continued, now stands as a great political force in this nation and "our job, your job and mine, is to make that great force heard everywhere. Its words must be listened to by the politicians."

WILL STUDY RECORDS

"Practical realism in meeting the needs of the people" will be the criterion on which LNPL units will judge office seekers, Lewis went on, adding that "we must continuously check candidates" in those terms.

"Whether they are responsive to these needs can be directly tested only by their actions," he said. "This is the test we must use, and no other."

Coupled with the need for checking past activities of candidates, the message asserted, is the necessity for "advancing concrete proposals to the attention of all the people for legislative steps that will meet their needs. Labor's Non-Partisan League has constantly advanced programs that mean a better life for everyone. This is also a part of our policy in 1940."

Lewis' letter closed with a plea that labor "remain clear-headed" and do everything possible to bring the "vital issues" before the people.

imum rates for the various classifications, said it would eliminate cut-throat competition at the expense of labor.

The impartial chairmen's report, said the absence of classified minimum pay rates in the past "has not been conducive to the abolition of unfair cost competition among employers, nor has it contributed to the general goal of industry stabilization.

"Both workers and employers stand to gain by the establishment of minima for the various occupational groups."

Wages up 25% In W. Virginia Taxi Pact

Charleston, W. Va., July 27.—A closed shop contract providing for wage increases of 20 to 25 per cent, a shorter work week, seniority rights and other improved working conditions has been signed here between the Jordan Auto Cab and Transfer Service and the Transport Workers Union of America, CIO.

The Jordan Company is one of Charleston's largest taxicab and trucking firms. The contract with the CIO union for the company's hackies and truck drivers was signed after several days of negotiations instituted at the termination of a 15-hour strike last week.

Cab drivers who formerly received $2.50 will now get $3.00 per day and truck drivers' wages are increased, under the union contract, eight cents per hour. A general seven-day work week has been reduced to six. Formerly nonexistent, seniority rights and machinery for handling of employes' grievances is established under the contract.

Cleveland Plans Labor Day Parade

Cleveland, Ohio, July 27.—Organized workers of Cleveland are planning a gigantic Labor Day parade on Monday, September 2, to show their strength and unity, the Labor Day Committee of the CIO Council announced here today.

The parade and mass meeting which is scheduled to follow it will dramatize the gains made by all groups of the city's labor movement, the committee stated, and stress the three basic rights of wage earners—to organize into unions of their own choosing, to bargain collectively with their employers, and the right to freedom of speech, assembly, action and worship.

Georgia Textile Owners On Trial For Violence

Waycross, Ga., July 27—(FP)—The trial of 15 officials and employes of the Fitzgerald Cotton Mills, charged with conspiracy to deprive union workers of civil liberties guaranteed by the constitution and the Wagner Act, got under way here this week.

The six-count indictments, obtained last February by a federal grand jury, are similar to those in the federal prosecution of coal operators and peace officers in Harlan County, Kentucky.

"After employes had organized the union and informed the management of the organization, the defendants refused to consider honestly any sort of agreement," U. S. Atty. Thomas Dodd told the jury in his opening address.

SHUT DOWN MILL

"The defendants shut down the mill. Then they had printed and distributed during the shutdown forms of resignation from the union," he added.

It is charged that Witherspoon Dodge, organizer for the CIO Textile Workers Union, was kidnapped, beaten and chased out of town when he arrived to negotiate a union agreement in February, 1938, after the TWU had won an NLRB election.

Employes who joined or tried to join the TWU afterward were fired. The company, which employs 300 workers, even went to the extent of discontinuing the operations" for the purpose of inflicting economic pressure and starvation," the indictment charged.

Among the accused are James W. Cox, president and manager of the firm; John Henry Mayes, vice-president and superintendent; and J. T. Boyter, foreman. All 15 defendants, if convicted, face maximum sentences of 10 years in jail and $5,000 fines.

Seamen Hail CIO Stand On Politics

New York, July 27.—Wholehearted support for the CIO program "propounded more than six months ago by Pres. John L. Lewis and reiterated this week" was voted at the meeting of the National Maritime Union's national council here.

"The NMU declares further that it will only give support to those candidates who will commit themselves to a program calling for a return to the New Deal, preservation of all gains made by labor, preservation and extension of the Wage-Hour law and all legislation calculated to protect the rights of the American people and increase the standard of living," the council added.

Text of Letter Stating Labor League's Plans

Since the National Office of Labor's Non-Partisan League has received inquiries concerning national policies in coming elections, I want to take this opportunity briefly to put before you certain considerations.

First, I want to assure you of my profound feeling, which I know you share, that labor faces greater problems in the political field than it has ever faced before in its history. The part which you, as a worker in the ranks of Labor's Non-Partisan League, have already played in helping to build our organization is deeply appreciated by me and the other officers. I am confident that your great devotion to the cause of labor in political action will play a great part in helping all of us to find a solution to the crucial problems facing labor today.

Labor's Strength

Labor's strength in politics, just as in the process of collective bargaining to better the working conditions of working men and women, rests on its organized strength. Today we have achieved the most outstanding unionization of labor that our country has ever seen. Labor stands as a great political force among the people of our country. Our job, your job and mine, is to make that great force heard everywhere. Its words must be listened to by the politicians.

We in Labor's Non-Partisan League have consistently recognized the fact that, in helping to elect men to office, be that office high or low, we are working in a practical way with politicians. You and I know that politicians respond to the will of the people in proportion as that will is organized, coherent and vocal.

Gains in Jeopardy

You and I know that the great social gains which labor has made through its organization and through political action are in jeopardy. Brutal warfare abroad and vicious hysteria at home are beclouding the issues that confront the laboring people of America. Under the guise of spurious ideals, the great gains made by labor are today threatened as never before.

In addition to this fact, labor is still confronted with the pressing necessity for achieving additional programs that will mean a better life for the people of our country. I emphasize that this job of achieving further betterment for our people rests primarily with labor. At the same time, labor must have allies among other groups of our population. We have found recently that many outstanding groups are ready to work with labor in achieving these ends.

Key to Progress

Whether labor achieves its program depends squarely on the men and women whom we elect to the United States Congress and Senate. Regardless of who may be the next President of the United States, we are confronted with this fact: if the men and women who are elected to the halls of Congress cannot be depended upon to support the welfare of the people through legislation, no man in however high an office can or will give labor what it needs.

The greatest job confronting Labor's Non-Partisan League at this time is, therefore, the election of Congressmen and Senators who will cast their votes and exercise their office in behalf of the people of America. The program of Labor's Non-Partisan League has long been dedicated to this end. This purpose constitutes our major policy at the present time.

'Meet People's Needs'

Coupled with this, however, is the need for our advancing concrete proposals to the attention of all the people for legislative steps that will meet their needs. Labor's Non-Partisan League has constantly advanced programs that mean a better life for everyone. This is also a part of our policy in 1940.

We must continuously check candidates for whatever office in terms of their practical realism in meeting the needs of the people. Whether they are responsive to these needs can be directly tested only by their actions. This is the test we must use and no other. When a candidate asks our support, through which we will be instrumental in his election, we cannot accept his own evaluation of himself. We must test him in every situation that concerns us.

I urge that you carry forward the tremendously important work which you have been engaged in, as a worker in Labor's Non-Partisan League, by promoting the election of men to office who will meet these tests, and further I urge that you do everything possible to bring before the people of our country the vital issues that concern them. Labor must remain clear-headed. It must forever recognize that its onward, upward climb to achieving its rights depends upon its unity and strength.

Hectic Bargaining

I am glad to have the opportunity of addressing these few words to you. I only wish that in this hectic business of bargaining for the rights of labor, both in the industrial and political field, that I could speak with you personally on these matters at every turn. Both of us realize that this is impossible, because of the tremendous demands upon our time in carrying out our daily tasks. I shall hope, however, to communicate with you further on these matters. Let us go forward with the sole purpose of achieving for labor its rights through ever increasing strength in the industrial and political field.

Rabbit Food Plea Fails, Firm Lifts Pay

AMHERST, N. S., July 27.—A pay raise of 10% was won by more than 100 employes of Canadian Car & Foundry plant here after a brief strike.

When the strikers protested to the management against the low pay scale they were caustically told that people of Belgium only had "rabbits and porridge" to eat therefore they should not seek to improve their living standards.

The strikers replied the rapidly-increasing profits now being earned by the company did not justify their continued acceptance of subsistence wages.

Canadian Steel Union Wins Bonuses

Hamilton, Ont., July 27.—Intensified activity of SWOC in this Ontario steel city has netted wage dividends to all employes of the Steel Company of Canada.

The employes will receive nine days' bonus pay based on their average pay for the past six months. The wage dividend was increased from six days at the first of the year and is directly attributed to a recent demand by several hundred employes of the company's Canada works for a conciliation board.

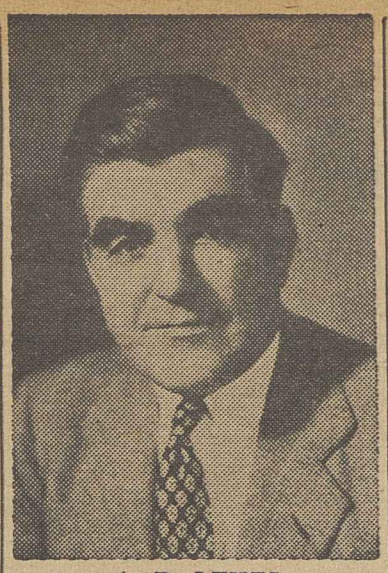
Stelco's profits were recently reported at a new high while production has also been sharply boosted.

Nova Scotia Sends Group To Parley

Halifax, N. S., July 27.—A large delegation from Nova Scotia CIO local unions will attend the annual convention of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor in Toronto September 9 when the national body will be re-organized as the Trades Congress of Canada.

The new organization will adopt its own constitution and by-laws and will have complete autonomy within the Dominion.

A total of 35 Canadian unions with many locals scattered across the Dominion will be represented by 400 delegates at the convention.



When formed the Trades Congress of Canada, which will have all CIO organizations in the Dominion affiliated, will be the outstanding labor body in Canada.

Silby Barrett, Canadian CIO chairman, is active in making arrangements for the convention which will witness the formal union of CIO organizations and other powerful labor groups in the new congress.

It is expected that United Mine Workers and the Steel Workers Organizing Committee local unions in Nova Scotia and other CIO groups in the province will be strongly represented at the Toronto gathering.

ANNUAL WAGE

Buffalo, July 27 — CIO Packinghouse Workers are getting an annual wage contract at the Danahy Packing Co. here. The agreement involves 150 workers.

School For Organizers Big Success

Washington, July 27.—Success of a four months' training course for "apprentice organizers" conducted by the Maryland-D.C. CIO Council here has led to plans for a fall term, according to Council Secretary Sidney Katz who directed the first experimental session.

The school enrolled about 50 members of local CIO unions, and was led on the project method combining practical experience with lectures and discussion groups. The course included pointers on leaflet writing and publicity, home visits to workers and speaking at meetings. At one point in the course the students took part in the General Motors election drive in nearby Baltimore, under the leadership of a United Auto Worker international organizer.

John Brophy, CIO director of Local Industrial Unions, spoke at the final meeting of the class on the general theory and practice of organizing the unorganized in basic industries.

GET PAY BOOST

New York, July 27.—Workers of the Juvenile Furniture Department of Local 76-B, United Furniture Workers, will receive an increase in pay September 1, in accordance with the agreement the union has with employers in this trade.

Construction Union Rounds Out First Year With Record of Gains

By CECIL OWEN

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Marked progress in carrying the message of industrial unionism to the workers in the construction industry, last stronghold of the crafts, has been made by the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee in its first year. It was on Aug. 1, 1939, that President John L. Lewis announced establishment of the UCWOC.

Under the guidance of Chairman A. D. Lewis and his fellow committee members, Philip Murray, R. J. Thomas, Sherman Dalrymple and James B. Carey, the UCWOC has forged steadily ahead until today it has more than 150 local unions in all parts of the nation.

Wage agreements on an industrial union basis have been signed with several hundred contractors in all types of construction, residential, commercial and heavy. Members of the UCWOC are at work in this construction season on many jobs from gas filling stations to large apartment houses and highway bridges.

BANNER STATES

Among the banner states for the UCWOC are New York, Pennsylvania, California, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Washington. Great headway has also been made in the national capital. The UCWOC has established local unions in about 30 states, the District of Columbia and Alaska.

Running over the states alphabetically, UCWOC officials point to dozens of building contracts in California and a 400-home residential project under the slogan "CIO Homes for CIO Members." California activities are directed by Fred Rausch, a veteran of the construction industry. He supervises eight big local unions in that state.

Connecticut has a militant group of UCWOC members led by Clifford S. Unger who have attracted state-wide and even national attention with their fight to put their men to work on equal terms on a USHA project at Bridgeport. This resulted in a ruling by the USHA at Washington granting preference to local labor as requested by the UCWOC.

Pensacola is the stronghold of the UCWOC in Florida and its members there are at work on many important defense projects. Progress is being made in Georgia, at Macon and elsewhere, despite attacks on union members by Klansmen.

Illinois ranks near the top as a UCWOC state with 14 locals in Chicago and the southern part of the state where William E. Kidd, UMWA official, has given a helping hand. Frank Barnhart, former UMWA officer, is in charge of the Chicago area.

MIDWEST LOCALS

Indiana's UCWOC locals are growing rapidly under Thomas Davis, who has been especially successful in obtaining work for UCWOC members on road projects and commercial buildings. In Iowa, the UCWOC was late getting started but with the aid of Frank Wilson, UMWA district president, is now forging ahead. It has two thriving locals.

In Maryland an aggressive drive is under way which is enlisting several hundred truckers into the UCWOC. Arthur G. Pilon, UCWOC representative, and Frank Bender, CIO Regional Director, are jointly directing the drive. UCWOC members are at work on roads, bridges, churches, schools, and other miscellaneous jobs in Baltimore and elsewhere in the state.

Massachusetts is the latest state to enter the UCWOC fold and the first of the upper New England states to show UCWOC progress.

The story in Michigan, where August Scholle, CIO Regional Director has been a tower of strength, is one of continued growth. With help of the UAW-CIO and other CIO unions in Detroit, Flint and other CIO centers, the UCWOC has won dozens of contracts covering maintenance, painting and repair work in industrial plants. James F. Boyne is the UCWOC representative who looks after the six UCWOC locals there.

MISSOURI RIVER JOB

On the Missouri River in Missouri several hundred UCWOC members are at work on a big three-year revetment job which will employ more than 1,000 men. This contract was negotiated by James T. Nash, CIO representative. New Jersey is a state in which the UCWOC has been active from the start and where it has many wage agreements to show for its efforts. Its members are at work on apartment houses, hauling jobs, commercial work and residential developments. A 400-house project for shipyard workers at Kearny is just getting under way. James Murphy and James McDade are the UCWOC field men.

New York leads the UCWOC parade with 18 big locals, mostly in New York and vicinity. Hundreds of UCWOC members are working on repair, electrical, residential, commercial and all manner of construction jobs. Louis E. Rode, veteran of the industry, is in charge of a large staff of organizers. In Buffalo, Julius Goodman, Jr., ex-newspaper man, is energetically building the UCWOC and has made the entire area UCWOC conscious. He has had the active co-operation of Hugh Thompson, CIO Regional Director. A UCWOC housing program is in progress at Buffalo.

ON THE GO IN OHIO

Paul Fuller, CIO Regional Director at Cincinnati, has made such gains for the UCWOC there that all craft union contracts have been cancelled. Numerous meetings are being held with large Ohio contractors and several important contracts have been signed. Elsewhere in the state, Akron, Youngstown and Toledo report substantial progress. UCWOC representatives include Clifford E. Miller, Akron; O. B. Allen, Cleveland, Jerry Girard, Youngstown, and Carl C. Schmidt, Toledo.

ON WEST COAST

Among other states where the UCWOC has established itself is Washington, especially Seattle. Dozens of Seattle contractors are under agreements with the UCWOC. The work there has been directed by Richard Francis, UMWA District President. In Oregon also, CIO Regional Director Dalrymple, has been able to report increasing strength of the UCWOC.

Rap Use Of Thugs In Detroit

Detroit, July 29.—Not all the goons in Detroit are in the employ of Henry Ford, the Mihigan Industrial Union Council today made clear in a call for support of striking members of the United Construction Workers at the Currier Lumber Co.

"If you think Ford is vicious, if you think old man Weir is vicious, you ought to see the tactics practiced by Currier," James F. Boyne, UCW representative, declared.

"Hired strike-breakers and thugs come out of the plant and slug our strikers, and one of them has threatened to take me and others for 'a ride.'"

Before the strike, Boyne charged, Currier employes were forced to work as long as 99 hours a week, while wages were as low as 35c an hour.

AID FROM COUNCIL

Gus Scholle, state CIO president, and John Gibson, council secretary, joined in the call to all Michigan unions to support the walkout.

Gibson said he had met with the company prior to the strike in the hope of working out a peaceful settlement.

"In response to our proposals," he said, "the company hired goons to kick union men around the plant and to kick them out of the plant."

WIN CONTRACT

Indianapolis, July 27 — J. D. Adams and Co., builders of heavy road machinery, once said they never would sign a contract with a union. Today 500 SWOC workers, out on strike for 56 days, are back with a signed agreement.

Union's Efforts Bring Home-Building Program

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Opening of the three "Greenbelt" communities to private development is a triumph for the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee which has advocated such a program before the Farm Security Administration for some time.

Concrete proposals submitted to Farm Security officials through the UCWOC's National Office were followed by public announcement that the three communities in Washington, D. C., Cincinnati, O., and Milwaukee, Wis., are to be completed by private builders.

Builders having wage agreements with the UCWOC played a large part in the preliminary negotiations and it is expected the development of these communities will provide employment for several hundred members of the UCWOC in each of the cities named.

ROOM FOR 3,000 FAMILIES

These communities were built by the government itself in the first Roosevelt Administration, but were left incomplete when Congress tightened up on the purse strings. While more than 800 families live in the Washington Greenbelt community, there is vacant land available to accommodate 3,000 families.

Since the government lacks funds with which to carry the projects further, Farm Security has now agreed to lease the land to builders under certain conditions one of which is that not less than 200 homes must be erected by any builder obtaining the contract.

The three towns were built as low-rental housing projects and as demonstrations of model suburban planning and development. Each community was originally designed to permit considerable future expansion, and the sewerage plants, water systems, shopping centers, streets and other facilities were built to accommodate this growth.

CIO Rubber Union Campaign Booms In Mid-West Area

CHICAGO, July 27.—Rubber union organization in and around the Chicago and Rock Island areas is going places, Charles E. Lanning, representative of District 4, United Rubber Workers, said here today, in reporting on the gains made in recent months.

"We have the first union label agreement in the industry," Lanning declared. This agreement is with the Judsen Rubber Company of Chicago, manufacturers of knee pads for coal miners, beach sandals and other rubber products.

"We appeal to every union man and woman using any of these articles, to ask for those bearing the label of the United Rubber Workers of America."

During the past few weeks, Lanning reported, "we have been busy signing up workers in several plants in the area.

"In Rock Island where the going has been tough, a number of them have joined."

Lanning said he would like the "CIO workers throughout the land to know that the rubber workers are doing their best to help bring our membership up to ten million in as short a time as possible."

Seamen Rap Insurance BillLoopholes

Washington, July 27.—Spokesmen for the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, led by President Joseph Curran, charged that a new bill ostensibly to promote compensation for sick or injured seamen was actually an attempt to deprive them of their right to sue and recover cash damages from shipowners.

The charge was made during testimony on HR 6881 before a subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee.

According to Curran and other NMU officials, "shipowner inspired" amendments put into the bill a few days before hearings were announced would also increase the hazards of marine work, since the seamen's right to sue has acted as a stimulus to development of safer working conditions on board ship.

The proposed bill, Curran said, would reduce weekly compensation to $8.00 to $10.00 and would abolish the seaman's right to sue now held under the Jones Act.

PAY INCREASE

Oakland, Calif., July 27—Wage increases and other gains were won for the workers of the California Corrugated Culvert Co. here in a Steel Workers Organizing Committee contract covering 125 employes. The contract was won despite loud protests from an AFL union that rushed in with jurisdictional claims at the last minute.

August Conventions

WASHINGTON, July 27 — Here is the list of CIO conventions that will be held during August:

August	5—Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers	Denver, Colo.
"	5—Inland Boatmen's Division of National Maritime Union	Pittsburgh, Pa.
"	23—Indiana State Industrial Council	Gary, Ind.
"	23—Iowa-Nebraska Council	Sioux City, Ia.
"	30—Minnesota State Council	Austin, Minn.
"	31—United Office & Professional Workers	Chicago, Ill.

KEEP UP VIGIL: Members of Local 77A, CIO Textile Workers Union, keep an eye on the gate of the American Lead Pencil Co. plant at Hoboken, N. J. Some 600 employes struck for a 25% wage boost and an increase in minimum pay from $13 to $18 a week.

MINERS' HOME: New headquarters of Butte, Mont. Local of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers is this $35,000 building, purchased early this month. Building used to be a swanky club.

Swanky Club Becomes Butte Miners' Home

BUTTE, Mont., July 29. — The best is none too good for Butte's union miners.

Acting on the principle that the miners should maintain their rightful place in the city's life, Local 1 of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers has purchased the big three-floor Silver Bow Club Building for $35,000.

Originally built for the so-called "elite" of Butte's mine-owning society, the building cost more than five times the amount paid by the union.

"The Butte Miners Union has, since its reorganization in 1933 gradually but surely assumed its rightful place in the community as the representative of the largest body of workers, that body of workers on whose shoulders rests the burden of supporting the entire community," declares Robert Brown, head of the Local's press committee.

CITY DEPENDS ON MINES

"Mining is the sole industry of Butte, and its geographical situation, high up in the Rockies, without natural resources other than the apparently limitless quantity of ore in the depths of its hills, does not very well permit the development of other industries.

"Hence, if there were no miners there would be no bankers, no merchants, no captains of industry and none of that very numerous profession, morticians. The man who digs the copper supports them all, and it is therefore fitting that he should occupy a position in the community commensurate with his importance.

"He has not arrived at his full stature in this respect, but he is making rapid progress."

Boss Sees Picket, Thinks It's 5 (Count 'Em) Columns

Washington, July 27. — Quick thinking by Shoe Workers Local 136 scotched the scheme of an anti-union employer who tried to discredit a union picket line in front of the Selis Shoe Repair Shop. The local started to picket when the employer broke his agreement with the union.

Shortly after two signs appeared in the window of the shop which read: "This man looks ilke an American, talks like an American, dresses like an American, but he is a fifth columnist, and another saying, "We do not employ Fifth Columnists."

The union immediately gave picket Jimmy Branigan a sign with an American Flag painted on the corner and the following words: "While Old Glory waves, we refuse to be slaves. Support us for a living wage!"

At the same time over 1,000 handbills were given to passers-by which stated the union's case. "Americans are against Fifth Columnists. A Fifth Columnist," and another saying, race prejudice and hatred. A fifth Columnist hates unions because he wants to undermine the American standard of living.

"A Fifth Columnist violates his contractual agreements, chisels on his employes, is undependable. Our union is pledged to fight these Fifth Columnists in our city, and we shall continue the fight.

"We ask all fair-thinking Americans to support us."

Whereupon both signs disappeared from the window.

Negotiate

Sydney, N. S., July 27.—Steel Workers Organizing Committee negotiators are at present engaged in conferences with the Dominion Steel Corporation following the recommendation of a federal arbitration board that a bonus of 15 cents per shift be paid its more than 3,000 workers. Philip Clowes, special SWOC representative, is assisting in negotiations.

2 More Fake Unions Land In Ashcan

Washington, July 27. — Two more company unions were added to a rapidly growing casualty list this week, their death warrant signed by the National Labor Relations Board. At Zanesville, O., the American Rolling Mills was ordered to abolish its Armco Employe Representation Plan, and the Indianapolis Power & Light Company's Employes' Protective Association was given its quietus.

The Power Co. was also ordered to stop interfering with the organizing activities of the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee and to reinstate two workers with back pay previously fired for "their interest in organization."

More Packing Workers Get WageLawAid

Washington, July 27. — More than 70,000 fruit and vegetable workers will come under the pay provisions of the Wage Hour law, according to a decision just handed down by Col. Philip B. Fleming, Wage-Hour administrator. At the same time, the decision allowed canneries to work their employes overtime without pay for 28 in place of the 14 weeks' previously allowed.

The Wage-Hour head also restricted the "area of production" definition made earlier, cutting down the number of plants exempt from the act because they are located near farms where produce is grown.

The decision followed testimony by CIO union officials of the Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, who presented a strong brief arguing for inclusion of the workers and restriction of the production area definition. They testified against permitting the 28 weeks' exemption.

DEFEND WAGNER ACT

New York, July 27 — Members of the AFL Cafeteria Employes Union here were urged to defend the Wagner Act from amendments as a first line front of democracy. The urging came in a message from Sam Kramberg, secretary-treasurer, in Cafeteria Call, the union's official publication.

Cheer Pres. Lewis' Warning Against War Hysteria

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 2.—The CIO United Automobile Workers of America, nearing the end of its convention here, today was formulating plans for whirlwind organizing campaigns at the Ford Motor Co. and in the nation's busy aircraft industry.

The delegates, assembled here from all parts of the United States and Canada, gave a tremendous ovation to CIO Pres. John L. Lewis, who addressed them on Tuesday. Recounting the pressure on the auto union from government and employer sources during the historic 1937 strikes, Lewis called upon the UAW to build its strength to the point where neither internal nor external forces may smash it.

He called upon the UAW to back the CIO campaign against U. S. purchasing orders for corporations which violate the Wagner Act, warned of the dangers to American democracy in the conscription bill, and demanded once again that the nation's leaders take positive steps to give jobs to the unemployed.

Later, the convention also heard addresses by CIO Vice-Presidents Philip Murray and Sidney Hillman, who have served as a two-man committee to lead the union out of the morass created by disruptionist leaders two years ago.

UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas and Sec. George Addes reported a 93% gain in dues-paying membership over last year. The union's contracts, they pointed out, now give protection to well over 400,000 workers.

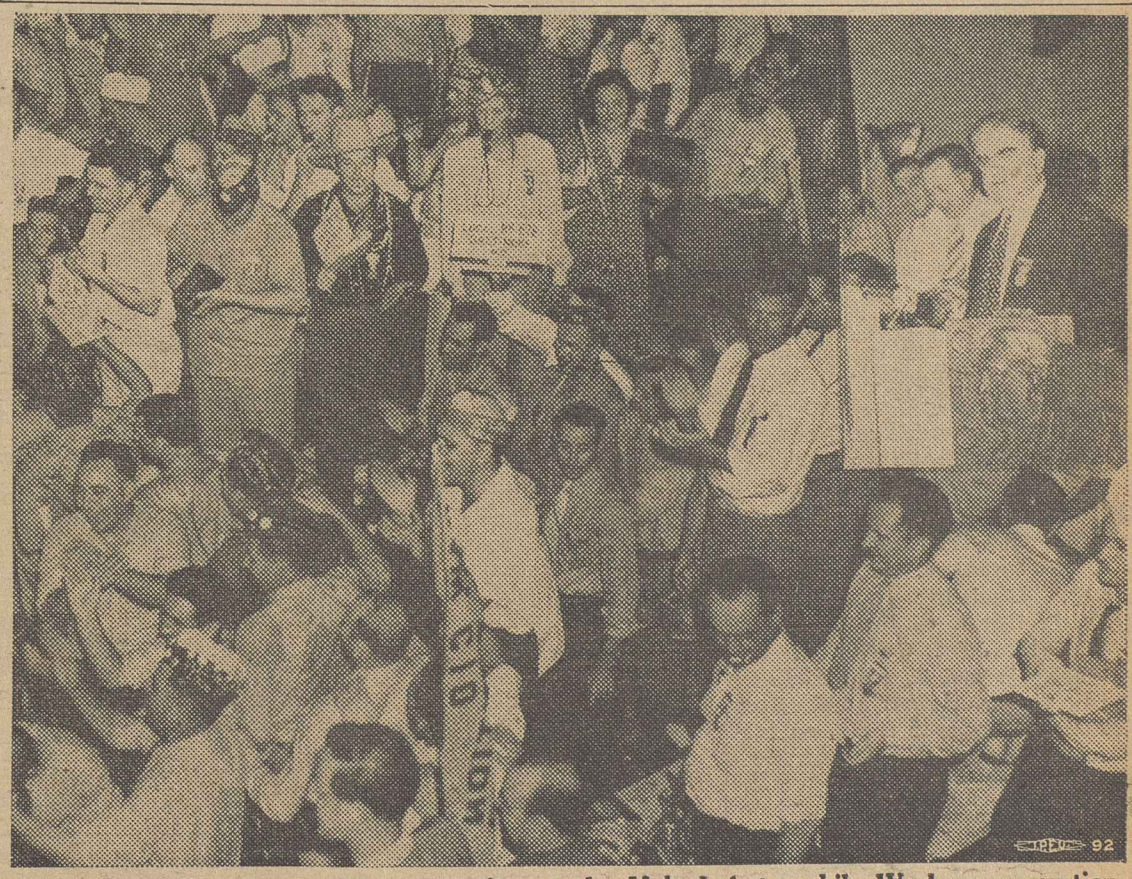
'Biggest' Labor Day Celebrations Planned By Unions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—CIO Labor Day celebrations will be "bigger and better than ever," scattered reports reaching national headquarters indicated today.

A main feature of all the festivities will be the speech which Pres. John L. Lewis will deliver over a nationwide radio hookup.

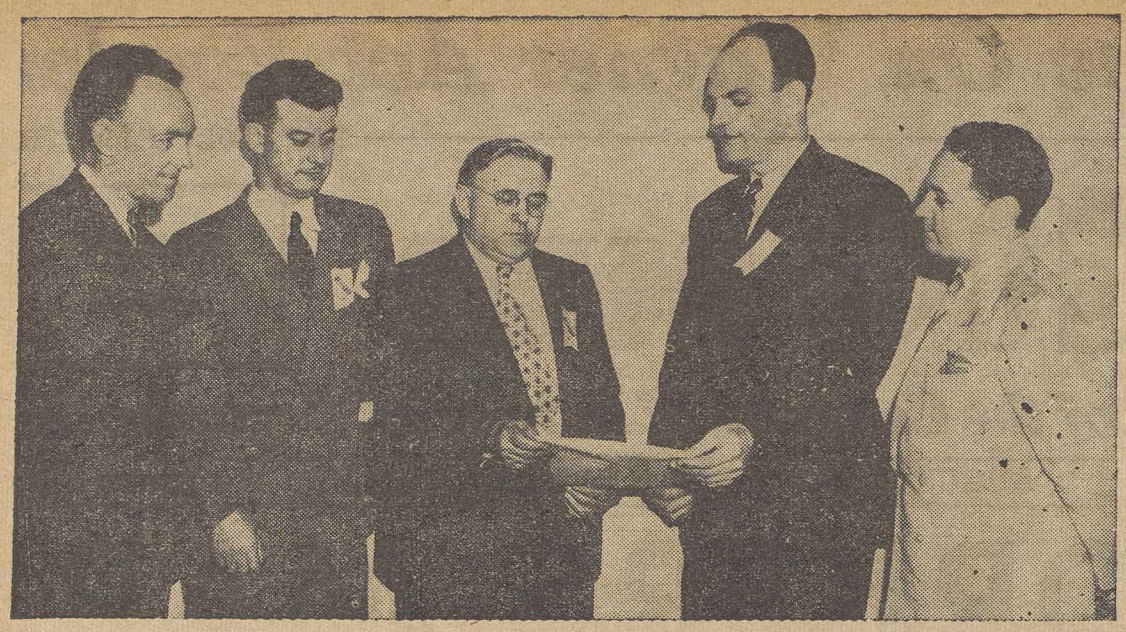
Details concerning his address will be made known soon.

MURRAY IN SOUTH



An estimated 100,000 southern workers will hear Vice-President Philip Murray on the holiday when he travels into the TVA country on Sept. 2. He will speak at Chickamauga Lake, a Tennessee Valley Authority development near Chattanooga. Edward Callaghan, a national leader of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, who heads the Tennessee city's celebration committee, said a huge parade is on schedule for the holiday.

Austin, Minnesota, whose Harmel Packing Co. is 100 per cent organized by the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, isn't going to be content with marking Labor Day alone. Plans call for a 3-day Labor Festival, with the State CIO convention serving as an added attraction.



'GREATEST EVER'

The northern end of the city's Main street will be marked off for the occasion, and Frank Ellis, PWOC leader, predicts that the parade, "which will naturally be one of the greatest ever held in Southern Minnesota, will draw entrants from far and near."

The Toledo, Ohio, CIO, famed for its big celebration, is planning a Jamboree, with beauty contests, athletic events and scores of prizes—chief among them, a trip to the New York World's Fair.

Coast Arbitrator Lauds Bridges, Raps Ouster Move

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 3.—Criticism of the bill to deport Harry Bridges, head of the west coast longshoremen's union, came today from Dean Wayne L. Morse of the University of Oregon law school, who serves as impartial arbitrator under the coastwise longshore agreement.

The statement was sharply critical of those who would oust the union leader from the country.

Bridges, "is more sincere in his convictions concerning democratic processes than many of his critics who seek to deport him," Morse wrote to Sen. William King of Utah, member of the senate special sub-committee studying the bill.

Morse said his opposition to the deportation bill stems from the fact that the "movement to deport Mr. Bridges is charged with emotionalism, hysteria and much misinformation."

Metal Miners Open Annual Parley

DENVER, Aug. 5.—Intent on meeting the problems created by the present war situation and laying the financial basis for completing the twice-approved organizational program, delegates to the 37th Convention of the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers met at the Albany Hotel here today.

An address by CIO President John L. Lewis on Tuesday afternoon is expected to be the high point of the convention program. Opening the week's events will be Labor Board Member Edwin S. Smith and CIO Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood, who are to address the delegates today. West Coast maritime leader Harry Bridges is billed to speak Wednesday.

To the 116 delegates of metal mining, smelting and fabricating locals of the union scattered all over North America, President Reid Robinson presented an annual report showing outstanding progress by the union during the past organizational year.

Dues-paying membership of the union increased 20 per cent during the year, President Robinson reported, and the IUMM&SW now represents over 70,000 workers through sole collective bargaining contracts.

MANY NEW PACTS

Coming out of its last meeting with 100 contracts covering employes of 100 companies and subsidiaries, the union goes into this convention with 153 contracts covering 123 companies and subsidiaries—a 53 per cent gain in the number of contracts in force.

PROTECT CIVIL RIGHTS

Commenting on the fact that the impact of the war abroad is the "biggest single factor confronting the delegates here assembled in every phase of our work," President Robinson's report to the convention deals extensively with the national defense situation and the position which labor must take with regard to defense.

Pritchett Again Seeks Visa to U. S.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 3—The long fight of Harold Pritchett, Canadian-born president of the CIO's International Woodworkers of America, for the right to obtain a visa and to apply for American citizenship has started all over again.

The AWA President who made his first attempt to obtain a visa to enter the country with his family in February, 1938, and was turned down on the basis of "secret" information that he was a Communist, recently announced his intention to apply again for a visa. His application will be presented to the American consul in Vancouver.

IN VANCOUVER

Pritchett was forced to return to Vancouver July 12, when his last 90-day visitor's permit expired. Since he was elected president of the Woodworkers in 1936, Pritchett has been forced to return to Canada periodically and re-enter each time on a visitor's temporary permit from the Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization.

The charges against him on which a visa has been refused have never been made known. Pritchett says they are based on false information given to the authorities by anti-labor elements who oppose him as the head of a powerful union which they would like to see destroyed.

He demands that an open public hearing be held on his case so that "charges and accusations emanating from anti-labor groups can be discredited and the continuous questioning of my integrity and undermining of my character can be stopped for all time."

Union Cancels Frisco Warehouse Pact As Firm Refuses Arbitration

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.—Employer stubborness today had caused invalidation of San Francisco's city-wide warehouse union contract.

Effective July 29 the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union invalidated the agreement, announcing that in the future it will deal individually with employers and will strike, if necessary, when agreements cannot be reached. The union's action was caused by refusal of the Lyons-Magnus Candy Co. to reinstate striking ILWU members after they had ended their walkout.

The city-wide master contract contained an arbitration provision, but Lyons-Magnus refused to arbitrate.

Serving advance notice on the Association of San Francisco Distributors, the union said that the organization was apparently "no longer interested in maintaining relationships" with the ILWU.

Lyons-Magnus says the distributors' association prevented reinstatement of the striking warehousemen, who were replaced during the strike by members of an AFL outfit.

New York CIO Set to Launch Campaign

New York, Aug. 3.—The newly formed CIO Council here is going to take the job of making New York a union town out of the slogan stage and put it into reality, Joe Curran, Natl. Maritime Union leader and head of the Council, said in his first interview after election.

The Council went on record at its first meeting against conscription, describing it as a weapon in the hands of anti-union employers who would be able to have active unionists drafted and as a denial of the means of livelihood to all workers affected.

"There's a potential union membership in New York City exceeding 2,000,000 and on the basis of present organization, both CIO and AFL, New York is far from being a union town," Curran said.. "Our first and constantly foremost job will be organizing the unorganized. That's the CIO policy. That's John L. Lewis' policy."

The Council already represents 400,000 organized workers in the city. Assisting Curran are Austin Hogan of the Transport Workers, John Cooney of the Wholesale and Retail Employes as vice-presidents and Saul Mills, Newspaper Guild, as secretary-treasurer.

To Form Council

Kent, Ohio, Aug. 3.—A call to form a CIO Industrial Union Council in Kent and Ravenna has been issued by John Soltis, local representative of the United Automobile Workers.

U. S. Merchant Ships Seen Undermanned

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—American ships are undermanned to the point where safety of passengers, crew and vessel is in danger, according to spokesmen for the Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, The disclosures were made at hearings of the U. S. Maritime Commission held in this city.

Even the newest ships in the merchant marine—the Commission's C2 and C3 boats—are undermanned, the NMU said. "American ships must be made safe ships—safe for passengers and crew," according to Frederick Myers, leader of the NMU delegation. "A short-handed vessel is a dangerous vessel. Safety at sea must be made a reality. And safety at sea means safe working conditions as well as seaworthy ships."

Myers laid the blame for undermanning at the door of "certain elements" among shipowners, who, he said, were "more interested in profits than in human life," and who have been allowed to set the pace for the industry.

SUBSIDIES

The NMU spokesman pointed to the huge subsidies given to American shipowners as an added reason why they should be required to maintain safe and decent working conditions.

"Unlimited working conditions and inhumane working conditions," Myers said, "seem to go hand-in-hand. The American people. . .have succeeded to a certain extent in curbing the subsidy racketeers. They should now join with the marine unions in forcing the operators to improve working conditions."

AFL's Propaganda Licks AFL Union!

DAYTON, Ohio, Aug. 3. — An AFL campaign among workers to vote for "no union" in a recent election at the huge GM Frigidaire plant was revealed today to have backfired against a federation-affiliated craft union.

An AFL patternmakers' local was seeking bargaining rights for 14 of the 8,000 employes. As a result of the AFL campaign, it lost by 8-6.

The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers polled 3,926 votes in the principal election for production workers, and lacked only 62 votes of getting the majority needed for certification.

Big Ohio Contractors Sign CIO Agreements

CINCINNATI, Aug. 3. — Signing of eight contracts with builders employing several hundred workmen was announced here by Paul Fuller, CIO regional director, on behalf of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

Six of the builders are Cincinnati firms, while one is at Portsmouth and the other at Dayton. All are general contractors except one who is a painting subcontractor.

Upward of 500 members of the UCWOC are covered by these wage agreements which are the result of several weeks negotiations by Fuller and UCWOC representatives. The Cincinnati builders are all active members of the Contractor's Guild.

The signing of these contracts is the latest of a series of advances by the UCWOC in this area. Virtually all craft union contracts were allowed to lapse by Cincinnati builders, who are turning toward the industrial union of the CIO.

Conscription Bill Viewed As Threat To Basic Rights

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The CIO is "in fundamental opposition" to the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill now before the Senate, Pres. John L. Lewis said in a letter sent this week to the Senate and House Military Affairs Committees.

The CIO regards the proposed draft of men as "a very definite departure from the basic principles of the Constitution of the U. S. and the Declaration of Independence," Lewis wrote, as a threat to millions of individuals and to basic civil rights throughout the nation.

Lewis' statement was made after a canvass of all CIO affiliates for their opinion on the bill, which, he said, showed agreement on the dangers to labor and to the nation involved in the bill. His letter was accompanied by an analysis of the Burke measure which called for registration of all men from 18 to 64, training for eight months and reserve duty for a further period — all at the proposed wage rate of $5.00 per month, later raised to $21.

The CIO has pledged its full support to national defense, Lewis pointed out, but it is "firmly of the opinion that national defense is not and must not be based on the destruction or curtailment of our basic democratic institutions."

DISLOCATIONS

Conscription as proposed in the Burke bill would "result in tremendous dislocations among the lives of millions of individuals in industry and in communities throughout our country," Lewis wrote. "Basic civil liberties, including freedom of speech and freedom of press, and freedom of individual initiative and enterprise, would be seriously threatened."

Lewis' statement urged that army and navy needs be filled through voluntary enlistment, pointing out that enough men

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 3.—The United Automobile Workers convention, meeting to celebrate peak strength and a year of triumphant progress, hailed John L. Lewis as its leader in the greatest ovation of welcome ever to occur at a labor meeting.

The CIO president's words were cheered to the echo as he lashed out at conscription; demanded enforcement of the Wagner Act on government contract work; warned against war hysteria and involvement; and criticized the major political parties for their failure to cope with the great domestic problems of unemployment and poverty.

"Some day in this country the people are going to lose confidence in the eixsting political parties to a degree they will form their own party," Lewis warned, as the delegates rose to their feet in a hurricane of applause.

The demostration which greeted the CIO leader when he entered the hall broke all labor records, according to veteran newsmen. The 600 delegates rose to a man, climbed on tables, paraded around the aisles with flags and banners, cheered, clapped and sang until hands were blistered and voices were hoarse.

Repeated attempts were made to halt the demonstration so that Lewis might start speaking. But each time the applause burst through all restraints, and it was 40 minutes before the delegates could be induced to resume their seats.

When Lewis concluded, the delegates rose in another tumultuous ovation and had to be warned from the platform to restrain their enthusiasm, as the hotel management complained they were rocking the plaster from the ceilings.
